VACCINATION A CRIME. With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions. Felix L. Oswald, M. D. "Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads smallpox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents." With illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 196 pages. 50c.

988.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

Your subscription is paid to No. ..... If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 427 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

A RED HEART IN A WHITE WORLD. A suggestive manual of Free Society; containing a method and a hope. By J. William Lloyd. Handsome illuminated paper cover in white, red and green; 30 pages. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Spooks, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. By E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition, $5; five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $2.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman March 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD: An Outline of Practical Co-Operative Individualism. By Henry Olerich. Regarded by many persons as a more interesting and consistent economic reform novel than Bellamy's "Looking Backward." Bound in red silk with gold title. Nearly 400 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, $1.

HISTORY OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. By C. L. James. An excellent history of the French Revolution, well written by one thoroughly familiar with his subject. Special care has been exercised to give the facts as they are, the author not having made himself the champion of any faction. Neatly printed from large type on good book paper, with a substantial binding. 342 pages, with an index and bibliographical epitome. Cloth, $1.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. John H. Kelso. Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff or Protection; War Punishments; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Do. 159 pages. Cloth binding, somewhat damaged, and reduced from $1.50 to 50 cents.

HILDA'S HOME: A Story of Woman's Emancipation. Rosa Graul. With Macaulay, Rosa Graul would say, "The cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty." Hence she has no fears that under Freedom the Home and the Family would cease to exist, or that woman will be less loving and lovable, or that man will be less manly and honorable. On the contrary, she maintains that only in the soil and atmosphere of freedom is it possible for true womanhood and manhood to live and flourish. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the evolution-freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, embellished with portrait of the author. In two editions, de luxe, and plain. Prices, $1.25 and $1.00.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old asceticism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.'" The new Hedonism says: "Be happy and you will be virtuous." In another place the writer says: In proportion as men have freed themselves from unnatural superstitions have they begun to perceive that the useless and impure things are ordinary and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproducing function." Paper covers; 30 large pages; twelve copies, 25c; single copy, 3c.

THE BIBLE. John E. Remsburg. Contains eleven chapters on the authenticity of the Bible, based on the best authorities of the time; thirteen on the credibility of the Bible, ten on the morality of the Bible, and an appendix in which Mr. Remsburg sets forth unanswerable arguments against the divine origin and in favor of the human origin of the Bible. Twenty-six pages of index enable the reader to instantly refer to any authority quoted or argument used. Mr. Remsburg is one of the most careful, accurate and painstaking writers, and his book is a compendium of the latest scholarship and rationalistic thought on the subject. The late Colonel Ingersoll began his famous lecture on the Bible by saying: "Some one ought to tell the truth about the Bible." This Mr. Remsburg has done—done it fully, and done it well. Large 12mo., 160 pages. Cloth, $1.25.

THE SLAVERY OF OUR TIMES. Count Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of the gifted author, and introduction by the translator, Aylmer Maude. Chapter titles: I. Goods Porters Who Work Thirty-Seven Hours. II. Society's Indifference While Men Perish. III. Justification of the Existing Position of Inferiors. IV. The Consumption of Commodity Such that Moral Laborers Must Enter the Factory System. V. Why Learned Economists Assert What Is False. VI. Bankruptcy of the Socialist Ideal. VII. Culture or Freedom? VIII. Slavery Exists Among us. IX. What Is Slavery? X. Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property. XI. Laws the Cause of Slavery. XII. The Essence of Legislation is Organized Violence. XIII. What Are Governments? Is It Possible to Live Without Governments? XIV. How Can Governments Be Abolished? XV. What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword. Well printed on heavy paper; substantially bound. 196 pages. 60c.

THE NEW LIFE.

Ida M. Brooks, editor. A monthly periodical devoted to a finer and nobler realization of life; 25 cents a year, 3 months for 25 cents; sample copy free. If you are tired of the old life, with its pain, heartache and emptiness, read The New Life, and you will come into and live the new life, which is joy, peace and beautiful supply of all good and desirable things. Address THE NEW LIFE PUB. CO., Box 186, Ovando, Idaho.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of 16s C. Cruddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We can not sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 20 cents each, two for 35 cents. Address Edwin C. Walker, 244 West 143d street, New York, N. Y.

FREE LITERATURE.

Your name will be sent to a great number of the finest papers published for sample copies if you send 10 cents to INTERMOUNTAIN SUB. AGENCY, Box 186, Ovando, Idaho.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VII., NO. 38. CHICAGO, ILL., OCT. 1, E. M. 302. [C. E. 1903.] WHOLE NO. 989.

Grant Allen—1848-1899.

Grant Allen's versatility was extraordinary. There was nothing he could not and did not write about, and whatever he wrote was always pointed and suggestive. This was, in part, due to the variety of his early experiences. Before he was 25 he knew Canada, England and the West Indies. He was educated in America, in Dieppe, in Birmingham, and at Oxford. He also had some experience in the Indian Statistical Department. But there is no doubt his most successful and satisfactory work was that of a popularizer of science. He fell early under the complete domination of the master minds of Darwin and Spencer, and he was never tired of bringing their teaching before popular readers. He was not a profound scientist, but he had a complete acquaintance with science, and he had a splendid gift of lucid interpretation and exposition. The "Darwinian St. Paul" some one dubbed him, and certainly his power of expounding and popularizing the master's teaching was very remarkable.

His papers on biology, philology, the evolution of species, and kindred subjects were entirely readable, even at times highly amusing. As a rule, when a scientist tries to be funny the result is "too deep for tears." This gift of Grant Allen's made him anything but popular in scientific circles. Those dreadfully serious pedants, whose solemnity raises doubts of the mastery of their special topics, professed to scorn his scientific journalism. They despised the star-gossip of Richard Proctor on similar grounds, preferring, presumably, the scholastic and unbearable simplicity of the lamented Dionysius Lardner, whose chaste volumes adorn booksellers' fourpenny boxes. Whether they felt that, having gained the facts by years of hard work, it is prodigality to give them away so easily, or whether it is the old Puritan spirit has found a new stronghold in modern science, may be an open question. Nothing appears to irritate some of the authors of ponderous monographs so much as having their life-work made intelligible to the masses. Grant Allen opened up a new universe to thousands with a charm all its own. Who that came fresh to the study of science could ever say an ungrateful word of the author of "Carving a Cocoanut," "The Aesthetic Analysis of an Egyptian Obelisk," "The Romance of a Wayside Weed," "The Daisy's Pedigree," and numerous other papers? He awoke a new interest, that led the reader through a course of Darwin, Herbert Spencer and many another disregarded writer.

By insidious reasoning and delightfully entrancing chapters he led so many of the outside public gradually to understand those esoteric mysteries that, expressed in the awful terminology of hand-books and chemical symbols, else had remained unknown forever. Now, thanks to Grant Allen, the ordinary magazine reader has a faint idea of the labors of the great prophets of our day; and, it may be, sees more clearly the tendency of those movements than those who with far more technical knowledge dissect the old faiths with a keen eye on Mrs. Grundy.

Grant Allen, be it remembered, was himself a scholar, but he carried his weight of learning gracefully. Though rather prejudiced against the classics, he produced a translation, with an accomplished scholar, and he produced a translation, with an anthropological introduction, of the most famous poem of Catullus. From the lofty region of thought and scholarship it is a sharp curve to turn to Grant Allen as the author of novels which have earned the applause of readers of circulating libraries. In these days of threadbare plots, when all the old devices, that were as brickery to a well-spun story, are worn to be mere skeletons of harsh construction, it is a pleasure to find Gaboriau, Ebers and Rider Haggard can be rivaled in their enthralling romances by facts from the laboratory and problems from the philosopher's research.

Theology has always met strange bed-fellows, and one is not surprised to find Grant Allen among the theologians. He was proud to believe that he was the first seriously to apply evolutionary theories to the human belief in Deity. In his preface to "The Evolution of the Idea of God," he says:

"Two main schools of religious thinking exist in our midst in the present day: the school of humanists and the school of animists. This work is to some extent an attempt to reconcile them. It contains, I believe, the first extended effort that has yet been made to trace the genesis of the belief in God from its earliest origin in the mind of primitive man up to its fullest development in advanced and etherealized Christian theology."

Grant Allen certainly made an honest attempt to explain the whole matter. The whole drift of his teaching was secularistic, and all his thinking was entirely untrammeled by any kind of religion. It was in a great measure owing to his inability to give full expression to his ideas that he fretted and chafed, and, occasionally, showed his contempt for English society. He despised Mrs. Grundy, though he feared to offend her. Science, pure and simple, did not pay; and novel writing, to which he turned, had to be carried on within narrow limits. The publishers were more afraid of Mrs. Grundy than he was. The last kind of work in which he exercised his versatile pen was art criticism and guide-book writing. His papers on "The Evolution of Italian Art" are as valuable as they are interesting, and in his series of books on "Historic Cities" he showed us what a guide-book should be.

Curiously enough, Grant Allen never liked fiction. Unlike Darwin, he never even read it, if he could help it. But, in spite of all this, he succeeded as a novelist. This is one of the most extraordinary things in his career. The truth was that Grant Allen could write anything, and wrote all things well. He even attempted poetry, and proved himself a master in the ballade, though he seldom worked in that fantastic field.

No religious ceremony was permitted at his funeral. It would have been an outrage on his life and teaching if any theological invocations had been used over his helpless body. His life was a battle of continuous protest against creeds and conventions. He lived free of such bonds, and he died free of them.

Below all the strife of opponents the quiet growth of appreciation, silent but real, gathers strength. For in the hearts of self-educated democracy to-day Grant Allen's lessons have sunk deep, and if graduates sneer and professors affect ignorance of his claims, it is something to have helped the people to grasp the teachings of science.

"And thou in this shall find thy monument,
When tyrants' crests and tombs of brass are spent."
—Mimnermus in London Freethinker.

"Are you married or unmarried?" asked the theatrical manager of an applicant for engagement. "Unmarried," replied she "I've been unmarried four times."—Detroit Free Press.

Socialism and Freedom.

Socialism does not interfere with the domestic and private relations of the people. Marriage or the sexual relation is not a part of its creed. Its purpose is to secure to all men alike, and to all women like all men, the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. To this end it proposes collective ownership of the earth and its resources, together with the means of transportation and distribution.

It will avoid the evils of corruption in public places by making the purchasing medium the certificate of labor performed and the selling price of any product the labor cost of production. The man or woman who labors can purchase, the one who does not cannot. Thus all men and women are free and equal so far as an opportunity is concerned.

While our postoffice system is in some important features Socialistic, yet it is related so closely to a corrupt, and necessarily corrupt system, which has the dollar for its standard of value in all its departments, that here, as elsewhere, there is great incentive to theft. Make the certificate of labor the one valuable thing and we will see an end of corruption in public places.

So, Socialism holds a very great promise for better, freer conditions for all the people. L. D. RATLIFF.

Editor of Lucifer: I note what you say concerning "A Message From Helen Wilmans" in the last issue of Lucifer, and, being a Socialist, I cannot resist the temptation to make a modest rejoinder to the concluding part of your article, in which you say:

"But then more 'jobs' would be in the gift of the reigning administration and our Socialistic friends could with pride point to our postal system as an illustration of the possibilities of Socialism."

It is difficult for me to see how either the censorship nuisance or any of the other postoffice scandals can have any legitimate bearing on the Socialist features of the department, when (as is too obvious for denial) that and all other departments of the government have degenerated into mere adjuncts to the Capitalistic system. And it cannot be denied that, when any principle or system becomes an adjunct or conserving condjutant to another principle or system, it loses its identity and becomes a part of that which it conserves; and this same law applies with equal force to public institutions, whether it be a department of the government or a chartered institution or corporation, most if not all of which have their origin and source in force or fraud, and, in a number of known instances, in both, and hence can have nothing in common with the ethics of Socialism, which is founded on the diametrically opposite principle of service rendered as a basis of compensation.

Official tyranny, corruption and "graft" are due in the main to the demoralizing influence of Capitalism, both by precept and example. For 5 per cent Capitalism will lie; for 10 per cent it will steal; for 25 per cent it will commit murder, and for 50 per cent it will commit every crime known to the criminal calendar, and in proof of this charge I submit the criminal record of the Standard Oil company.

On the other hand, I feel safe in making the prediction that, when Socialism has once fully supplanted Capitalism, as it inevitably must in the near future, all the official abuses which, under the fostering care of Capitalism, have become a stench in the nostrils of every decent person, will go with it. The demoralizing influence of Capitalism calls up in my mind an essay on "The Morals of Trade," by Herbert Spencer, which he closes with the significant statement that from all the evidence he could gather it is plain that success in business is incompatible with strict integrity. JOSEPH STEINER.

Editor of Lucifer: The idea of Socialism conveyed by Lucifer is very objectionable. When our good editor was in Michigan, every difficulty he met in his effort at co-operation, based on individual failings or otherwise, was dubbed "Socialism," and condemned. Now we have the fling that if the postoffice system shows further knavery and tyranny, the Socialist will point to it with pride as a splendid illustration of his doctrine. Why not proceed and say that if more thievery is revealed in the water service, jobbery in street contracts, etc., then the Socialist will grow wild with delight?

The Socialist observes that ownership involves the power to exact interest, profit and rent—and that common ownership would end these forms of extortion; that other evils must be dealt with in a proper way. I wonder how an Anarchist or Individualist would feel if he should happen, inadvertently, to deal with the doctrine on its merits and in accordance with the facts. He would swoon immediately, but the discipline, I think, would be good in the end. C. F. H.

Heredity Versus Environment.

Noticing an article on this subject by Mr. C. V. Cook, and in a later number an answer to it by Mrs. Frederique A. de Crane, I would beg to offer for your readers' consideration a few additional remarks. I did not read "Breeding Prize Animals," so am at a loss to know what instances may have been quoted therein, but at the risk of going again over the same road I will add my view.

"Given a healthy body and a normal brain," says Mr. Cook, "and the forces of environment will defy all the known laws of heredity, as far as mental characteristics are concerned."

It is idle to assert that environment has nothing to do except to develop certain latent characteristics of the young. Changes of great importance are brought about in the mental state of all by external influences and by internal discipline. But it is to be noted that these changes are mainly a change of direction, and never a constitutional change. For example: my parents were Baptists, exceedingly attentive to religious matters, while I am an agnostic. Environment has changed the direction of my religious thought, but it has not made me less religious. Exactly the same impulses made me an agnostic as those which made my father a Christian, and every peculiarity of my parents' natures I can find in my own, the only difference being in the degree of development and the manner of their exhibition.

So far as differences of conduct are observable in successive generations, it is also well to note that goodness or badness are not intrinsic qualities. A thing is good or bad as it is well or ill adapted to certain ends for which it is intended; and the same is true of individuals. A father may be an earnest, whole-souled philanthropist and reformer, and his son be an earnest, whole-souled gambler; and the different results may be measured by the adaptiveness of each to his vocation, and can by no means be accounted for by the difference of environment, save in the degree of opportunity offered for the development of inherited genius.

The forces of environment would have nothing to do with a healthy body and a normal brain, except to decide their sphere of usefulness. So far from defying the laws of heredity, environment emphasizes their influence. Where are you to get this healthy body or this normal brain? They are very scarce. The history of genius shows plainly that lack of opportunity and unfavorable environment have ever been the accompaniments of genius, the inherited qualities triumphing heroically over the most cruel disadvantages.

It is very well to keep in mind that differences in temperament are not always constitutional differences, but due to the influence of environment, and cannot be instanced as defying laws of heredity. W. J. HUTCHESON.

An Expiatory Monument.

Professor Doumergue, the historian of Calvin, acting for the Historical Society of Geneva, recently determined the exact locality in the suburb Champnel of that city, where Michael Servetus was burned at the stake for heresy. A tablet is to be placed there bearing the following inscription: "We, the revering and grateful sons of Calvin, our great reformer, condemning an error which was an error of the times, and the faithful adherents of the principle of freedom of conscience, according to the true teachings of the Reformation and of the Gospel, have here erected this memorial of atonement on the 27th of October, 1903. On the 27th of October, 1553, died at the stake in Champnel, Michael Servetus of Villanueva, in Arragonia, born on the 27th of September, 1511."

Open defiance of an unjust law may conceivably be a clearer proof of good citizenship than a slavish compliance with it.—The Agnostic Journal (London).

Our readers everywhere are kindly requested to send us names of persons who might be interested in Lucifer's work if they could see a sample copy.

Chesapeake Bay Region for a Colony.

Taking the occasion of a vacation to investigate Chesapeake Bay and the eastern shore of Maryland a-wheel, I started from Philadelphia, Pa., through Wilmington and Newark, Del., to Elkton, Md., on Elk River, forty-four miles thence down Elk Neck along lower road twelve miles to Elk Neck Road, Cecil County. I found a rolling country, good road, a view of Elk River most of the way, and attractive scenery; sandy loam soil, good farms, farm houses and barns, and a prosperous people. I stopped over night at a Mr. Ricketts', one mile east and on Elk River. He had summer boarders from Philadelphia. Mr. Ricketts showed me two English walnut trees in bearing, also a fig tree with a second crop of fruit on it. In season he fishes and salts and packs herring. Near by is a tomato cannery, which cans in season.

Next day I pushed on to Turkey Point, the extreme point of Elk Neck, where one has a grand view of five rivers—the Susquehanna, Northeast, Elk, Bohemia and Sassafras—and of Chesapeake Bay.

Elk Neck has knolls of 200, 300, and one of 311 feet above mean sea level; lots of oak, hickory, chestnut and pine timber. I found iron, but understand not in paying quantities; also kaolin, a five-foot vein on a hillside, two miles from river, which would be good for pottery ware or terra cotta. The land along the river is from twenty to eighty feet above mean sea level; very little swamp. I found no mosquitoes, being out on lawn until 10:30 p. m. enjoying a delightful night on Elk River. Boats pass from Baltimore to Philadelphia through Chesapeake and Delaware Canal. Baltimore to Elk Neck is forty miles. Was told they had no tramps, as it was too far from railroad. A 500-acre farm, with two sets of buildings on it, can be bought for $40 per acre; will sell 100 acres, more or less, for same price, with water front. An eighty-acre farm one and a half miles from river can be had for $1,300.

This region is my pick, as it is hilly and picturesque, and on Elk River side you are protected by hills from the north and west winds. It was a good peach country one time, but the soil has been drained and now they raise corn and wheat. Apples, cherries, peaches, plums, pears, apricots, and even figs can be raised; also strawberries galore, nuts, English walnuts, pecans, Japanese chestnuts. Tomatoes and peas could be canned. Captain Wilson of Rybold Wharf, Kent County side of Elk River, said it was a poor man's land, as he could fish and hunt ducks in season and wild berries and nuts in plenty, and the balance he could raise on the land. No oysters; water too fresh.

Crossed Elk River to Kent County side. On Town Point Neck a Frenchman is successfully raising grapes. Thence on to Fredericktown, crossing Sassafras River; to Georgetown; to Galena; to Chestertown, on Chester River—twenty-nine miles. The entire distance I found substantial houses and barns and fairly cultivated fields. All this was peach country, but corn and wheat were being raised to recoup the land. The country is gently undulating in elevations of twenty to sixty feet. Chester River region is considered a good farming region. Fish and oysters in season below Chestertown. Farms with river fronts can be bought for $35 to $40 per acre. One of 700 acres, with two sets of buildings on it and nearly surrounded by water (a good place for cultivating oysters and an excellent place for raising terrapin), can be bought for $35 per acre. A Single Taxer of Chestertown would buy the place and let a colony have one hundred or two hundred acres of it. It gives a fine view for twenty miles down the river to Chesapeake Bay; has good soil, and should bring more if properly cultivated. Farms are too large all through here. There should be five times the population.

South farther, in Caroline County, is a settlement of Dunkards. They are doing very well and are the envy of their less successful native neighbors. They co-operate in a store and warehouse, buying and selling as a corporation. They also run a cannery and dairy.

I should like to get the opinion of all interested in this region. OTTO C. HEUPLE

Who can compute what the world loses in the multitude of promising intellects combined with timid characters who dare not follow out any bold, vigorous, independent train of thought, lest it should land them in something which would admit of being considered irreligious or immoral?—J. S. Mill.

The Blundering State.

Some years ago the State met me in behalf of the Church, and commanded me to pay a certain sum towards the support of a clergyman whose preaching my father attended, but never I myself. "Pay," it said, "or be locked up in the gaol." I declined to pay. But, unfortunately, another man saw fit to pay it. I did not see why the schoolmaster should be taxed to support the priest, and not the priest the schoolmaster; for I was not the State's schoolmaster, but I supported myself by voluntary subscription. I did not see why the lyceum should not present its tax-bill, and have the State to back its demand, as well as the Church.

However, at the request of the selectmen, I condescended to make such statement as this in writing: "Know all men by these presents, that I, Henry Thoreau, do not wish to be regarded as a member of any incorporated society which I have not joined." This I gave to the town clerk; and he has it.

The State, having thus learned that I did not wish to be regarded as a member of that Church, has never made a like demand on me since; though it said that it must adhere to its original presumption that time. If I had known how to name them, I should then have signed off in detail from all the societies which I never signed on to; but I did not know where to find a complete list.

I have paid no poll-tax for six years. I was put into a gaol once on this account for one night; and as I stood considering the walls of solid stone, two or three feet thick, the door of wood and iron, a foot thick, and the iron grating which strained the light, I could not help being struck with the foolishness of that institution which treated me as if I were mere flesh and blood and bones, to be locked up.

I wondered that it should have concluded at length that this was the best use it could put me to, and had never thought to avail itself of my services in some way.

I saw that, if there was a wall of stone between me and my townsmen, there was a still more difficult one to climb or break through before they could get to be as free as I was. I did not for a moment feel confined, and the walls seemed a great waste of stone and mortar. I felt as if I alone of all my townsmen had paid my tax. They plainly did not know how to treat me, but behaved like persons who are underbred. In every threat and in every compliment there was a blunder; for they thought that my chief desire was to stand the other side of that stone wall. I could not but smile to see how industriously they locked the door on my meditations, which followed them out again without let or hindrance and they were really all that was dangerous. As they could not reach me, they had resolved to punish my body; just as boys, if they cannot come at some person against whom they have a spite, will abuse his dog.

I saw that the State was half-witted, that it was timid as a lone woman with her silver spoons, and that it did not know its friends from its foes, and I lost all my remaining respect for it, and pitied it.—From "On the Duty of Civil Disobedience," by H. D. Thoreau.

"The Message to Garcia."

Editor of Lucifer: I think you have a wrong idea of "The Message to Garcia." To be sure "the fellow by the name of Rowan" obeyed his orders, but he did what he had to do, and this was the point that I think Fra Elbertus was trying to bring out.

As far as Carson of the Missouri Pacific is concerned, I prophesy that he will sooner or later get a much better position than the one he "resigned."

Sometimes, indeed, taking responsibility is a bad thing. One nasty night on Long Island Sound the engineer of a steamer ran slower than ordered because he thought it was not safe to run as ordered. The captain based his calculations on the speed he had ordered, and when the proper time arrived for him to be opposite the mouth of the Connecticut River he headed for north and went "bang" into some rocks, instead of up the river as he had calculated. What the engineer had to do in this case was to run a certain speed, and he failed to do it. His intentions were good, but you know what they say hell is paved with.

The "fellow by the name of Rowan" in this case would have kept that speed even if the boat were sinking.

W. L. C.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 West 143d street, New York.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Sunny Kansas—Warring Kansas.

From Tuesday, Sept. 8, to Tuesday, Sept. 15, Eastern Kansas little deserved the title of "Sunny." So great was the downpour of rain that some of the streams lacked but little of reaching the highest point attained by them in May and June last, when thousands of people in Kansas lost their homes, nearly everything, in the unprecedented flood.

Since Sept. 15, the Sunflower State has been its typical self again. The weather has been favorable to the ripening of late-planted corn, of which there are many thousands of acres in this and adjoining states.

But while sunny Kansas has suffered greatly from the war of elements—from drouths and floods, from frost, hail and cyclones—it is believed by some that this pivotal Western state has suffered and still suffers more from the "temperance crusade," from the religio-politico-moralistic war over the question of statutory prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, than it has done from all the natural evils just mentioned put together.

That this statement will provoke a smile of incredulity, if not of contempt, on the faces of many readers, is to be looked for. In the heat of conflict it is not to be expected that men will listen calmly, dispassionately, to generalizations that antagonize their long-cherished prejudices.

* * *

Before saying more on this vexed and intensely vexing subject, I wish to confess frankly that I, too, have my prejudices. I, too, have my limitations when attempting to pass judgment upon a question so vast and so hopelessly involved as that of statutory regulation of what is popularly known as the "drink evil." But while making this confession I honestly believe that I can bring to this investigation qualifications for impartial judgment not possessed by many. Among these qualifications are the following:

First—I have no interest, pecuniary or otherwise, in the manufacture or sale of ardent spirits, and never had any such interest.

Second—I was brought up a "teetotaler"—a total abstainer from drinks that intoxicate, and have never been, and am not now, a habitual user of such drinks, whether distilled, malt or vinous.

Third—While I am not now personally interested or "mixed up" with the discussion or settlement of the liquor question, my opportunities for observing the effects of artificial regulation, statutory or municipal, have been exceptionally good and of long continuance.

* * *

The foregoing remarks have been prompted by finding my old neighbors at Valley Falls, Kan., fighting the old-time battle for and against the "saloon" with even greater bitterness than when, near a quarter of a century ago, I first set foot on Kansas soil—with this very material difference in the position of the opposing combatants, namely:

Then the "crusaders" were supplicants; they were pleading for the power to suppress the "saloon" and the "still" by statute law.

Now they have the statute on their side. Now they are able to say: "The making and selling of whiskey and beer are crimes in Kansas, just as murder and bank-robbery are crimes in Kansas."

* * *

Having much else to do this week, I will close these introductory remarks on a question that, like Banquo's ghost, "will not down" at the command of the priest, the lawyer, the judge or the politician, by quoting, as a text for a sermon that each can preach for him or herself, an event that seems to have occurred at Rosedale, Kan., a very few days after my late departure from that suburb of Kansas City:

"Kansas City, Kan., Sept. 22.—Mrs. Mary Shannon of 10 Water street, Rosedale, smashed the Elite saloon, owned by John Sprague, at the corner of Kansas City and Lafayette avenues, late Monday. Mrs. Shannon says that the owner of the saloon has been in the habit of selling her husband liquor. She has asked him not to, but her husband still got the liquor. Yesterday afternoon she went to the saloon in search of him and found him there. Mrs. Shannon seized a bottle which was sitting on the bar and dashed it through the mirror at the back of the bar. She then broke a row of glasses back of the bar. Mrs. Shannon then walked out to the street and, gathering up stones, smashed the front windows of the saloon. 'I will smash that place every time he sells my husband liquor,' said the woman. Mrs. Shannon is the wife of George Shannon, a miller employed at the Kimball & Fowler mill in Rosedale."

* * *

At this writing I am enjoying the hospitality and renewing the acquaintance of neighbors and friends at the capital of Kansas, at which place Lucifer was published from September, 1890, to April, 1896, at which time a forward movement was made, a removal from a city of the third or fourth class to the second city in size on the continent, and one of the chief centers of commerce, of wealth, and of intellectual progress on the planet Earth—Chicago.

M. HARMAN.

The continuation of this article was received too late for publication this week; will appear in our next issue. L. H.

ERRATUM.—Under "Notes by the Way," in last Lucifer, in speaking of "Modern Paradise," the word "houses" should have been "homes." M. H.

Does It Pay to Be a Radical?

Editor of Lucifer: The long argument of Mr. Crane in your last paper seems to me to be a rather poor estimate of the intelligence and integrity of freedom-loving men and women. The idea that such a large proportion of men who advocate sexual liberty are actuated by a desire for selfish gratification only I cannot believe to be true. Impostors there are, to be sure, as there are amongst the believers in monogamic marriage, but these are but the exceptions. The larger proportion of advocates of liberty, varietism, and so on, are, I believe, true to their convictions. They desire perfect freedom for themselves and are willing to concede it to others as a matter of course. Freedom implies a right to refuse or accept, as is most pleasing. A man would indeed be a fool if he expected a woman to accept the advances of all men who desired sexual commerce with her. She has the same liberty to refuse that a man has to ask; or, indeed, she has the same liberty to do the asking herself if she wishes to. I am aware that all this is not conventional, but it is true. It may not agree with the ethics of modern society, but it agrees with the everlasting principle of right.

D. H. HERSEY.

Editor of Lucifer: I have read Mr. Crane's able article in No. 968. It occurred to me that if I were a (1) forager, (2) terrorist, (3) impostor, (4) fool, or (5) noisy rebel, I would ask: What has Mr. Crane left for me? Please outline the course I am to pursue so as not to be a "foul barnacle." I do not doubt there is such a course, but want it defined.

I am surprised that Mr. Crane justifies a "foul barnacle," but he does justify barnacle No. 2 (impostor) when he says: "If the reward of hypocrisy is sufficient, then hypocrisy is justifiable."

C. F. H.

Subscribers receiving more than one copy of Lucifer will please pass the extra copy to some friend, with recommendation to subscribe for same, if only for a trial of three months. Non-subscribers receiving a copy, whether marked sample or not, will please regard the same as an invitation to subscribe.

Book Notes.

"Tolstoy and His Message" is a new work by Ernest Howard Crosby, in which is given an account of Tolstoy's boyhood and manhood, his great spiritual crisis, his answer to the riddle of life, the basis of his moral and social code, his teachings tested by Christian spirit, the Christian teaching in practice, and the Tolstoy of to-day. Mr. Crosby gives many interesting incidents in the life of Tolstoy, one of which is as follows:

"They tell a story of Leo Tolstoy which may or may not be true, but which at any rate is characteristic of the man, and brings into relief the peculiar dramatic quality of his mind. He was a student at the University of Kazan, and had only spent a few months at that great Russian seat of learning when he was invited to attend a ball at the house of a nobleman, who lived upon his estate near the city. It was a bitter cold winter night, and the snow lay heavy upon the ground, and young Tolstoy went out from town in a sleigh driven by a peasant-coachman, for there was no separate livveried class in Russia, and the farm-hand in summer might become a driver in winter. Tolstoy passed the night in feasting and dancing, enjoying himself as a youth of 18 would be likely to under the circumstances, and when he came out at an early hour of the morning, wrapped in furs, he was horrified to find his coachman half-frozen to death. It was with the greatest difficulty, and only after hours of chafing and rubbing, that the man was brought back to consciousness and his life finally saved.

"This scene remained graven upon the heart of the young student and he could not dismiss it from his thoughts. Why, thought he, should I, a young nobleman of 18, who have never been of use to anyone and perhaps never shall be—why should I be permitted to pass the night in this great house, elegantly furnished and comfortably warmed, and to consume in wine and delicacies the value of many days' labor, while this poor peasant, the representative of the class that builds and heats the houses and provides the food and drink, is shut out in the cold? He saw, with the true instinct of the seer, that it was no accidental event, but the picture in miniature of the civilization of the day, in which one class sowed and reaped and another enjoyed the harvest. Tolstoy took this lesson so to heart that he abandoned his university career and went down to his country estate, which the early death of his parents had already placed in his hands, with the intention of devoting his life to the serfs whose interests he found intrusted to him. It was thus a dramatic incident which formed the first turning point in Tolstoy's life, and we shall see that again and again he has been influenced by such sights when books or argument could never have moved him."

Funk & Wagnalls, New York, are the publishers of this book. It is bound in cloth, with gold lettering. There are only ninety-four pages, but the value of a book, as well as many other things, is not always to be judged by its size. The price is 50 cents, and it may be ordered through this office.

* * *

E. C. Reichwald has issued a small tract containing "Answers by the American Secular Union and Freethought Federation in Reply to Protests Against Our Literature, which was prepared for circulation to show the folly and illegality of Bible reading in the public schools." This is of interest to all, and of especial value to those who are fighting the use of the Bible in the public schools. More than 5,000 have been distributed recently. For copies, address Secretary American Secular Union, 141 South Water street, Chicago.

* * *

In a package of unsold books received from an agent there were included two copies each of "The Occult Forces of Sex" (25 cents), and "Anything More, My Lord?" (10 cents), both written by Lois Waisbrooker. These works have been "out of print" for some years, and we have received a number of orders which we were unable to fill. These copies are somewhat shop-worn, but are, I believe, the only ones for sale anywhere.

* * *

We have received a copy of "Dog Fennel in the Orient," written by C. C. Moore, editor of the Blue Grass Blade, and published by J. E. Hughes, Lexington, Ky. The book is a record of Mr. Moore's experiences on a recent journey with a party of Cook's tourists in the "Holy Land." There are 340 pages, bound in cloth, and the price is $1. It may be ordered of the publisher.

* * *

The publishing house of Watts & Co., London, is doing a great work in issuing cheap editions of scientific works. Among those already issued are Huxley's "Lectures and Essays" (a selection); "The Pioneers of Evolution," by Edward Clodd; "Modern Science and Modern Thought," by Samuel Laing; "Literature and Dogma: An Essay Toward a Better Apprehension of the Bible," by Matthew Arnold; "The Riddle of the Universe," by Ernst Haeckle; "Education, Intellectual, Moral and Physical," by Herbert Spencer; "The Evolution of the Idea of God," by Grant Allen; "Human Origins," by Samuel Laing, revised by Edward Clodd, and "The Service of Man," by Cotter Morrison. The price of these is 12 cents each, by mail 16 cents. They may be ordered through this office.

* * *

We still have, for free distribution, copies of "Facts Worth Knowing," presented to the public by the Brooklyn Philosophical Association. It contains eighty pages of facts concerning religion and the Bible, by well-known writers. Sent on receipt of 2 cents a copy to cover mailing expenses. L. H.

How to Raise Children.

The ungrateful and immoral hesitation of many working men to marry, thus curtailing the supply of future labor, is inexcusable. Any industrious man can afford to raise children, and with proper management they soon become a source of income, enabling the parents to subsist on lower wages, increasing the dividends of employers and thus enlarging the support of church and state, and the spread of the gospel of Christian civilization to the heathen in foreign lands.

The proper time for children to be born is in the latter part of spring, when the weather is mild. Soon after birth the infant should be put into a pen in which is a plentiful supply of loose dirt. An old barrel or box containing some straw will answer for shelter from sun or rain. At the top of the pen a tomato can containing milk should be placed and a tube hanging from this with a nipple to the end will supply the child with nourishment.

Now, by this judicious and inexpensive arrangement the mother can be at work soon after confinement. It costs no more to raise children than it does to raise pigs, and the former are more profitable, for when put at work (which can be done soon after they begin to walk) they become a source of steady income; whereas a pig brings a certain sum and then is of no further value. It is indeed a waste of material to feed a pig, when the same food will keep a child. Nutritious swill can be had for little or nothing, and this homely food, spiritualized, so to speak, in the form of working energy in the child, can be transformed into wages. No labor is so profitable as child labor; and when such profits enable the employer to contribute to the spread of the gospel of light in benighted heathendom, we see the blessings that flow from the proper use of swill, consecrated to the use of the Lord.

What working people need in order to marry and propagate children is not higher wages, but a spirit of humility and a recognition of the duty they owe to their employers. Let them bring up children in habits of self-denial and industry, and so make of them contented citizens, patriotically contributing to the wealth and enlargement of their country's empire, and the glory of its industrial magnates and rulers.—F. R. Hayes in Appeal to Reason.

Education and Woman's Sphere.

The reproduction of her species is not in all cases the highest service woman may render to her race. That is, of course, fundamental; but the woman who in her life is able to bestow mental and moral instruction upon thousands of children is doing as much good as though she gave birth to a dozen of them. The lowest order of animals are improved solely through breeding, but that is not the case with human beings. The great women of history have not blessed the world so much through their children as through services which were not of a domestic nature. Could the lives and merits of these women have become our prized possession only through their offspring, we might regard it as their duty to bear many children; but they had other methods of passing themselves down to posterity. They are preserved for us in history and literature. Their lives and thoughts are imperishably recorded; while their descendants, where they have any, are not distinguishable in the human mass. We are perhaps more blessed in the writings of George Eliot than we should have been in the numerous progeny had she left one.—The Truth Seeker.

Unquestionably, among monstrous beliefs one of the most monstrous is that while for a single handcraft such as shoemaking, a long apprenticeship is needful, the sole thing which needs no apprenticeship is making a nation's laws.—Herbert Spencer.

VARIOUS VOICES.

J. G. H., Sheridan, Wyo.: Inclosed find $1 for another year's subscription to Lucifer, and $1 to help to extend the vacation of the editor, as I think he needs the rest.

Mrs. E. B., Talent, Ore.: I am so glad that the good Father Moses is thinking of coming to the Coast. If he comes I will donate $5 toward expenses. I wish he could come to Oregon. It seems to me if he is strong enough to lecture that he could do well. If he sees fit to come through here I will meet him when he reaches this valley and will take the best of care of him. I never let a copy of Lucifer go to waste.

Flora M., Springfield, Mo.: I quite agree with Lillie White and Carrie Austin in their replies to R. B. Kerr. Of course he has a right to his opinion, as we have to ours. I am not a varietist, for I have a lover who is all the world to me, but I don't think it a sin to be a varietist, as some seem to think it is. I want to be a free woman and live my life in my own way, and I want to see others enjoy the same right. If they want one lover or a dozen, it is not my business. Inclosed find $1 on subscription. Hope Brother Harman will visit us if he comes this way.

E. H., Red Bluff, Cal.: In the stack of mail greeting my return to this place, nothing was so greedily singled out as the accumulated issues of Lucifer. I cannot hope to read all—do not care so much for the controversial letters as for the general matter. But after devoting half a day to reading I must again express my pleasure in your work and my sincere wish for the prosperity and ever-broadening influence of the good paper and its editor. I hope he will visit California, that I may see his face. I do not hesitate to give away Lucifer wherever I may hope to secure a reading for it. In some places it brings me a sort of opprobrium, but for that I care very little; it will stir up thought with some. I quite agree with the concluding paragraph of a recent letter signed Dora Forster: "The main difficulty in the way of freedom is surely not economic; it is mental." This is profoundly true, for once the human mind grasps this all the strength of human life will be given to bring it to pass. The heroic struggle of every true leader of human progress is but an example of this truth.

I don't know even one girl who is a reader of and sympathizer with Lucifer's thought and purpose, or whom I could imagine as such, but wish I did. I was happily married thirteen years ago, but have since remained single. I sometimes wonder, when I read Lucifer, whether there's a woman among its readers whom I would love, and she me, if we knew each other, and so could marry. I cannot marry the narrowly conventional girl without stultifying myself, nor could I make such a girl happy. I am too progressive or radical in my thoughts and ideals, and desire to maintain my soul's integrity and my sexual purity. I have no wish to be a crank nor a fanatic, nor to do anything foolish, nor needlessly to affront society, yet I wish I had some girl friends who, like a few of my men friends, have some real sympathy for and understanding of these higher sexual and social ideas. It is not pleasant to me to advertise thus, but it might meet the eyes of some sweet soul in much the same situation as my own: unable to meet a lover of the proper affinity with one's higher thought—and such a girl is not likely to advertise. If perchance it should be the means of my blessing some dear girl, and she me, there'd surely be no wrong. I am 42, but look and feel much younger; smooth of face, somewhat studious, cheerful, neat and orderly, of artistic tastes and a lover of classic music. If any girl (under 35) shall be sweet and brave enough to answer this, I shall respect the sanctity of her confidence and return her letter (and picture, if any) with my reply. I live in Cincinnati. Address "Cincinnati," care of Lillian Harman, and she will forward to me.

Unionism, with all its imperfections, is to-day the sole arm of defense for the workingman. It is the primary school in which he is learning his first sociological lessons. It is his single weapon against the aggressions of capital. It has wrought infinitely more good than evil, and deserves at least the discriminating support of all progressive thinkers.—James F. Morton in the Demonstrator.

Observations by Pentecost.

The most difficult virtue to acquire is to be willing to allow other people to live in their own way.

Some Liberals are illiberal.

Many people free themselves from Christian superstitions only to adopt other superstitions.

Rent, interest, profits and taxes are devices by which the products of toil are appropriated.

The Church and the State are side partners. Their separation in this or any other country is a fiction.

If there be a God, it is to his credit that he does nothing for us except to give us capacity and opportunity.

That which ends in pleasure, happiness, comfort, is right. That which ends in pain, misery, discomfort, is wrong.

Marriage as an institution is based on property rights.

Divorce should be as easy as marriage.

A woman who continues to live with a man who beats her, or is a drunkard, or fails to provide for her, should never complain.

A person who demands obedience, or fidelity, or gratitude has much to learn.

A person who depends upon being loved will suffer much.

A person who demands love will not get it.

Happiness comes from loving, not from being loved.

Herein is love: That you leave the loved one free.

Jealousy is a form of vanity inconsistent with love.

Love wishes the loved one to be happy, howsoever and with whomsoever.

Whoever expects the entire love of another will be disappointed.

Whoever is capable of loving at all is capable of loving more than one person at a time—Hugh O. Pentecost, in Truth Seeker.

The Authors of Genesis.

The author of Genesis, or rather authors, for there are two distinct narratives—the Elohistic and Jehovistic—evidently held the geocentric theory, which was universal until the time of Copernicus, and believed the earth to be the center and principal body of the universe, to which the sun and stars were quite subordinate. Had they been jurors on the trial of Galileo, they would have voted with the Inquisitors against the philosopher. They held also the theory, common to all the ancient world, that the vault of heaven was a crystal sphere, in which the celestial bodies revolved and which divided the waters of the earth from the waters stored above the firmament, which were let down as rain by opening its windows. They believed that light and darkness, day and night, had been created prior to and independently of the sun, which was only made on the fourth day. As regards the creation of animal and vegetable life, they evidently thought that all the existing forms had been created at a stroke, and had not the faintest idea of a successive development over immense geological periods.—Samuel Laing.

We do not take possession of our ideas, but are possessed by them. They master us and force us into the arena, where, like gladiators, we must fight for them.—Heine.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

Special offer: This valuable work sent free on receipt of 35 cents for a three weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light Bearer. Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

THE NEW LIFE.

Ida M. Brooks, editor. A monthly periodical devoted to a finer and nobler realization of life; 75 cents a year; 3 months for 25 cents; sample copy free. If you are tired of the old life, with its pain, heartache and emptiness, read The New Life, and you will come into and live the new life, which is for you; send fourfold supply of all good and desirable things. Address THE NEW LIFE PUB. CO., Box 198, Gordon, Idaho.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We can not sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 30 cents each; two for 50 cents. Address Edwin C. Walker, 244 West 143d street, New York, N. Y.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to cleanse that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 62, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

FREE LITERATURE.

Your name will be sent to a great number of the finest papers published for sample copies if you send 10 cents to INTERMOUNTAIN SUB. AGENCY, Box 186, Gordon, Idaho.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago.

SOCIALIST.

ECONOMICS OF SOCIALISM. Cloth, $1.26.

THE ADVENTURES OF JOHN M'CUE. By Socialist. 10c.

THE CLERICAL CAPITALIST. By the Rev. Father McGrady. 5c.

NOW AND THEN. A play in two acts. By Frederick Krafft. 10c.

BETWEEN CAESAR AND JESUS. By George D. Herron. Cloth, 75c.

THE PROLETARIAT. Adapted from the German of Karl Kautsky. 5c.

THE CAPITALIST CLASS. Adapted from the German of Karl Kautsky. 5c.

FERDINAND LASSALLE AS A SOCIAL REFORMER. By E. Bernstein. 5c.

THE COMMUNIST MANIFESTO. By Karl Marx and Frederick Engels. 10c.

THE ATTITUDE OF THE SOCIALISTS TOWARD TRADE UNIONS. N. I. Stone. 5c.

FRENCH AND GERMAN SOCIALISM IN MODERN TIMES. By Richard T. Ely. Cloth, 75c.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF SOCIALISM FROM UTOPIA TO SCIENCE. By Frederick Engels. 5c.

A DEBATE ON THE TACTICS OF THE S. T. AND L. A. TOWARD TRADE UNIONS. Between Daniel De Leon and Job Harriman. 5c.

RAILROADING IN THE UNITED STATES. The James Boys; also, As to Law and Order; The Eminent Gentleman and the Very Eminent Gentleman; The Dull Reasoners and His Bright Lantern. By Ben Hanford. "To the Not Yet Dead." 5c.

SHROUDS WITH POCKETS. A life sketch. By Henry E. Allen. A touching story, told in simple and yet striking language, and yet more than a story. Vivid flashes of light are thrown on the unspeakable horrors of capitalism. Illustrated with many portraits of Socialists and other reformers. 25c.

ANARCHIST.

NO TREASON.—No. II. By Lysander Spooner. 16 pages. 5c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A study of the industrial type. Dyer D. Lum. 10c.

WHAT IS ANARCHISM? An explanation by Stephen T. Byington. Five copies for 5c, 50 for 10c, 100 for 25c.

NO TREASON.—No. VI. Showing that the Constitution is of no authority. By Lysander Spooner. 13 pages. 25c.

A POLITICIAN IN SIGHT OF HAVEN. Being a protest against government of man by man. By Auberon Herbert. 10c.

CITIZENS' MONEY. A critical analysis in the light of Free Trade in Banking. By Alfred B. Westrup. Only a few left; reduced to 5c.

THE UNCONSTITUTIONALITY OF THE LAWS OF CONGRESS PROHIBITING PRIVATE MAILS. By Lysander Spooner. 24 pages. 10c.

THE BALLOT. By William Walstein Gordak. A short poem illustrating the absurdity of majority rule. An excellent leaflet for propagandaism. 100 copies, 50c.

FREE POLITICAL INSTITUTIONS: Their Nature, Essence and Maintenance. An abridgement and rearrangement of Lysander Spooner's "Trial by Jury." Edited by Victor Yarros. 47 pages. 25c.

AN ESSAY ON THE DUTY OF CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE. By Henry D. Thoreau. A reprint of this classic essay on the supremacy of the individual conscience. Antique paper; artistic covers, dark green on siliver. 10c.

THE ATTITUDE OF ANARCHISM TOWARD INDUSTRIAL COMBINATIONS. By Benj. R. Tucker. An address delivered in Central Music Hall, Chicago, on Sept. 14, 1899, before the Conference on Trusts held under the auspices of the Civic Federation. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. One of the most eloquent pleas for liberty ever written. Paine's "Age of Reason" and "Rights of Man" consolidated and improved. It stirs the pulse like a trumpet call. By Michael Bakounine. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 32 pages. 10c.

THE ANARCHISTS: A Picture of Civilization at the Close of the Nineteenth Century. A poet's prose contribution to the literature of egoistic Anarchism. The author traces his own mental development in London amid the exciting events of 1887—the manifestations of the unemployed, the rioting at Trafalgar square, and the executions at Chicago. The antagonism between Communism and Anarchism sharply brought out. By John Henry Mackay. Translated from the German by George Shumm. 215 pages, with portrait of the author. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 10c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Marxian. M. Harman. 5c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of Freethought and Free Love. Gilbert Northcote. 10c.

THE SOCIAL QUESTION. A discussion between Juliet H. Severance, M. D., and David Jones. 15 cents.

MORNING BETTER BABIES. Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 10c.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Vclept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wilde). 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marlette). Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Hester). 25c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Witchcraft (Lucinda B. Chandler's), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Inebriates of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an Allegory, B. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Hester). 25c.

MODERN PARADISE. The Model Home. Solution of the Social Problem. Future Greatness of Electricity. Proposed Experiment in Social Science. As Earthly Goes and How to Attain It. A Unique Power Plant. Wonderful System of Mirrors. Elegantly illustrated. Prof. Henry Gaertch. 25c.

KARESSA. Ethics or Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. 2c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. B. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

WOMAN AND HER RELATION TO THE CHURCH OR CANON LAW FOR WOMEN. Harriet M. Closs. A succinct statement of the position to which women were doomed by the Church Fathers and authorities. Every woman should possess a copy. 10c.

THE CURSE OF MATERNITY. From the French of Henry Fevre. Together with How to Escape the Curse (Jonathan Mayo Craze), Woman's "Duty" to Bear Children (E. C. Walker), True and False Morality (C. L. James), Love's Law (William Francis Barnard). 25 cents.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: A Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE, as viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME FAMPHLETS—Wedlock, Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Fowell and His Critics; Physiologicals; Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

THE ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY AND THE STATE. Frederick Engels. Chapter Titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans. 211 pages; bound in cloth. 50c. Postage, 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. One of the best short works on the subject. Daintily printed. A charming little gift book. "Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it." 5 cents.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided, and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.50.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES. Edwin C. Walker. Contents—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only"; Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen"; What Are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Dirty Politics in Vice Crusading; Is What Does Prostitution Conceal? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Reform; "Purifying" The Tenderloin; Action for Advanced Women. With Appendix: The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of It all. 10c.

THE MAJESTY OF SEX. Nancy McKay Gordon. This is the book written from the standpoint of experience. Therefore, it will satisfy in a vital way the cry of the hungry soul. It is practical and elucidative; personal and individual and ideal. It interprets how the creative forces of the body may be transmuted, transformed and directed. It teaches of celestial love on earth now. It shows how the truly wedded pair may make all things subservient to their needs. It goes right to the heart of the subject, its solemnity and right use. It does not deal in the theory of any other writer, but is a result of the indigenous style of the author. Read for this book and learn the secret of the gods. They move with divine recklessness—spontaneity. Beautifully bound; initial letter beginning each paragraph; artistic from every point of view. $1.

THE HOME CYCLOPEDIA OF MEDICAL, SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE. Contains a full, plain and easy-reading treatise on "Health and Disease with Recipes"; all the average reader can profitably learn of personal hygiene and common diseases (including special chapters for men and women); all right up to date, and fully illustrated with hundreds of photo-engravings and chromo-lithographs. Contains also the already popular "Plain Home Talk" about the relations of the sexes and social customs in all ages and all countries, with "original and startling" suggestions for social reformers newly revised, enlarged and well illustrated. All is "heart to heart" plain home talk from a clear-thinking, plain-speaking, liberal-minded medical author of over forty years' experience. Nearly 1,000,000 of this former books sold. A curious book for curious people, and a sensible book for every one. Answers 1,000 delicate questions one would like to ask one's regular physician and yet doesn't; want no. 1,200 pages; 400 illustrations (32 in colors); 36 recipes. Cloth bound, $2.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work. Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up to date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has 800 pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid, to any address, for $2.75.

THE WHOLESOME WOMAN. J. H. Greer, M. D. The latest and most complete work of its kind. Four books in one volume. Part I—SEX AND LIFE: The Principle of Life; The Dominant Power of Life; The Temple of the Soul. The Unfolding of Womanhood; The Fulfillment of the Law; The Fruits of Fulfillment; Home and Home-Making. Part II—TOKOLOGY: The Organs of Generation; Menstruation; The Marriage Relation; Conception and Prenatal Culture; Child Birth; The Hygiene of Motherhood; Nursing from Birth to Puberty; Disorders of Infancy and Childhood; Affections Peculiar to Women; What Determines the Sex of Offspring. Part III.—CHILD-CULTURE: The Foundation of Moral Uprightness; The Kindergarten (with diagrams); Manual Training. Part IV.—HEALTH AND HYGIENE: Long Life Not a Secret; "Breath is Life"; How, When and What to Eat; Sleep and the Bath; Clothing and Dress; Mental and Physical Culture; What to Do in Sickness; What Not to Do in Sickness; Care of the Eyes and Ears; Care of the Extremities; Poisons Used as Medicines; The Application of Heat and Cold; Unnecessary Surgical Operations; An Ounce of Prevention. The complete work is published in one handsome, large quarto volume of 616 pages, with photogravure frontispiece, portrait of the author, 16 full-page half-tone and numerous smaller explanatory illustrations. It is printed on an extra quality of paper from new electroplates, and each volume is accompanied by a separate supplement of 41 plates (printed in colors), illustrating Sex in Plant Life; the Human Sexual Organs and the Laws of Reproduction; the Development of the Human Embryo and Fetus, showing nourishment and growth, from day to day and month to month; the Plan of Fetal Circulation, etc. In extra cloth, with special emblematic cover design. $3.

A TALE OF THE STRASBURG GEESE. E. H. Kerr. Together with The Siege of the Strasburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (E. F. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola). 20c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What Is She? What Will She Be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Sadists and Pareiasaps; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 10c.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE. Edward Carpenter. This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author: The Sex Passion; Man, the Ungrown; Woman, the Serf; Woman in Freedom; Marriage, a Retrospect; Marriage, a Forecast; The Free Society; Some Remarks on the Early Star and Sex Worships. Notes on the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population. The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White, 5c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 10c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A. and Cecile Chevannes. 25c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

ON BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socialand. Albert Chevannes. 25c.

MONEY, BANKS, PANICS AND PROSPERITY. By W. H. Clagett. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chevannes. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chevannes. 25c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

RELIGIOUS, POLITICAL AND SOCIAL FREEDOM. A lecture by Juliet H. Severance, M. D. 10c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chevannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

GIORDANO BRUNO, His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

SOCIALISTIC, COMMUNISTIC, MUTUALISTIC AND FINANCIAL FRAGMENTS. By William B. Greene. $1.25.

AGE OF REASON; An Investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel portrait. 50c.

THE TEMPERANCE FOLLY; or, Who's the Worst? Lois Waisbrooker. Dedicated to the wrecks and so-called sinners of a false civilization. 10c.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward Fitzgerald's interpretation; with original introduction; latest version. Special cover. Paper, 25c.

ISOLA; or, The Disinherited. A drama in six acts. Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1. Postage, 5c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmeyer. 10c.

THE STORY OF ISAIN; or, The Evolution of a Mind. Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Scuaire Rose), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. $1. Postage, 5c.

SONGS OF A CHILD, AND OTHER POEMS. By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. $1.50. Postage, 10c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 31 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 416 pages, 50c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 3, 1896. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Heroes." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 97 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltaer and Voltaire. 25c.

VACCINATION A BLUNDER IN POISONS. C. F. Nichols. "Vaccination will undoubtedly rank as the greatest and most pernicious failure of the century; this conclusion is no longer a matter of opinion, but of science," said of this assertion. 25c.

VACCINATION A CRIME. With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions. Felix L. Oswald, M. D. "Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads smallpox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents." With illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 196 pages. 50c.

989.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

Your subscription is paid to No. ..... If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by removing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 472 pages. Cloth, Reduced to $1.

A RED HEART IN A WHITE WORLD. A suggestive manual of Free Society; containing a method and a hope. By J. William Lloyd. Handsome illuminated paper cover in white, red and green; 16 pages. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Spunnie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition, $1; five volumes, leather binding, $1.50; all in one volume, $2.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 25, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, March 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. An Outline of Practical Co-Operative Individualism. By Henry Olerich. Regarded by many persons as a more interesting and consistent economic reform novel than Bellamy's "Looking Backward." Bound in red silk with gold title. Nearly 400 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, $1.

HISTORY OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. By C. L. James. An excellent history of the French Revolution, well written by one thoroughly familiar with his subject. Special care has been provided to give the facts as they are, the author not having made himself the champion of any faction. Neatly printed from large type on good book paper, with a substantial binding. 343 pages, with an index and bibliographical epitome. Cloth, $1.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. John H. Kelso. Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff or Protection; War Punishments; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be. 128 pages. Cloth binding, somewhat damaged, and reduced from $1.50 to 60 cents.

HILDA'S HOME; A Story of Woman's Emancipation. Rose Graul. With Macaulay, Rose Graul would say, "The cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty." Hence she has no fears that under Freedom the Home and the Family would cease to exist, or that woman will be less loving and lovable, or that man will be less manly and honorable. On the contrary, she maintains that only in the soil and atmosphere of freedom is it possible for true womanhood and manhood to live and flourish. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. That Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. B. F. Walker. 5c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most genuine theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and freedom—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In two editions, de luxe, and plain. Prices, $1.25 and $2.00.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old asceticism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' " The new Hedonism says: "Be happy and you will be virtuous." In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from unnatural superstitions have they begun to perceive that the ancient and impure ideas are ordinary and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproducing function." Paper covers; 32 large pages. Twelve copies, 50c; single copy, 5c.

THE BIBLE. John E. Remsburg. Contains eleven chapters on the authenticity of the Bible, based on the best authorities of the time; thirteen on the credibility of the Bible, two on the morality of the Bible, and an appendix in which Mr. Remsburg sets forth unanswerable arguments against the divine origin and in favor of the human origin of the Bible. Twenty-six pages of index enable the reader to instantly refer to any authority quoted or argument used. Mr. Remsburg is one of the most careful, accurate and painstaking writers, and his book is a compendium of the latest ascertained and rationalistic thought on the subject. The late Colonel Ingersoll began his famous lecture on the Bible by saying: "Some one ought to tell the truth about the Bible." This Mr. Remsburg has done—done it fully, and done it well. Large 12mo., 300 pages. Cloth, $1.25.

THE SLAVERY OF OUR TIMES. Count Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of the gifted author, and introduction by the translator, Aylmer Maude. Chapter titles: I. Goods Porters Who Work Thirty-Seven Hours. II. Society's Indifference While Men Perish. III. Justification of the Existing Position of Servants. IV. The Assertion of Political Economy that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System. V. What Learned Economists Assert: What Is False. VI. Bankruptcy of the Socialist Ideal. VII. Culture or Freedom? VIII. Slavery Exists Among us. IX. What Is Slavery? X. Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Liberty. XI. Laws the Cause of Slavery. XII. The Enemies of Legislation is Organized Violence. XIII. What a Government? Is It Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV. How Can Governments Be Abolished? XV. What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword. Well Printed on heavy paper; substantially bound. 196 pages. 60c.

EAT SOME SAND!

About five years ago, Prof. William Windsor, LL. B., Ph. D., the world's most eminent Physiologist, discovered the Sand Cure for Indigestion and Constipation, and since that time more than a half million sufferers have tried it and found that it is Nature's Simple Remedy for restored health. It does not purge or gripe, but it cleans the body out.

"The Natural Life" is the title of Prof. Windsor's monthly magazine in which the Sand Cure is fully described and discussed. It is devoted to the teaching of Physiology ("the wise way of living"), Natural Diet, Health and Character Culture, Righteousness and Freedom. One Dollar per year.

PROFESSOR WINDSOR will send full directions for the Sand Cure to anyone sending 15 cents for a three months' trial subscription to The Natural Life. Address: THE WINDSOR PUBLISHING CO., Box 787, Boston, Mass.

Price 2 Cents

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VII., NO. 39. CHICAGO, ILL., OCT. 10, E. M. 303. [C. E. 1903.] WHOLE NO. 399

Sex Hysteria and Savagery.

Into crimes of violence the element of sex enters almost invariably. Often it is the dominating influence; more frequently it plays a minor but still important part; very rarely it is entirely absent. The passion of anger and the passion of sexual desire touch, each stimulating the other. Both heat the blood, both have to do with the primary impulses of self-preservation and -perpetuation, which, when undisciplined by reason and capacity for fellow-feeling, are thoughtless and reckless of all that is objective. Whether in the battles of the armies of nations, the formal or the impromptu duel, in ordinary assault or murder, or in the violence of the mob, sexual feeling is alert and it is gratified.

Rage and salacity acting together reproduce both direct and across. The man that tortures or kills gives himself erotic pleasure in so doing and passes on his mental and emotional agitation, his moral disorder and reversion, to impressionable and approving spectators, and to his children, both those old enough to be taught by example and the ones to come, if he should beget while the fever's effects still are in his blood. And those impressionable and approving spectators pass on the coalesced murder-lust and sex-lust to the absent and to the unborn.

So we see that sex is a much more pervasive factor in lynchings than even lynchers and their defenders or excusers claim, although in a greatly different sense. In another sense, too, sex has a role, but after the mob's work is done. So unhealthy are the common ideas concerning sex that usually reason is lost when the subject is broached. No dispassionate investigation of the phenomena of lynchings is possible while the minds of the would-be or might-be investigators are excited and biased by the consciously or unconsciously induced supposition that lynchings are caused only by assaults on women instead of by a large number of crimes and misdemeanors, or accusations merely. Every criticism of the lyncher and his vindictive barbarities is met by the one retort that we lose sight of the terrible sufferings of the victim of the ravisher. Never yet have I talked with or read the writings or reported speeches of a defender of lynchings when the impression has not been given that all the crimes, all the savageries of the mob are due to its hatred of rape or attempted rape. John Temple Graves of Georgia, in his sickening utterances at Chautauqua; Bishop Morrison, of Kentucky, in his address before the Methodist Conference at Helena, Mont.; "A Southern Woman," in the New York Herald, and hundreds and thousands of other apologists for the great crime, unite in denunciation of what they assume aloud and seem to expect us to assume is the cause of hangings and burnings and mutilations. Bishop Morrison says, as reported: "When negroes quit ravishing we will quit lynching, and not before," and he refers to "horrible crimes which invariably precede a lynching." There is no possible excuse for this bearing of false testimony unless it is to be found in an unbalanced condition of the mental forces, a monomania produced by morbid and long-continued contemplation of sexual and social questions from the viewpoint of archaic religions and conventional taboos.

Records of lynchings, records kept for years by some of the most careful newspapers in the country, show that less than one-third of the offenses that preceded lynchings were rapes or attempted rapes. Rape was not even the largest single item. That was murder. Every close reader of the news knows well that a multitude of offenses have been followed by lynchings, some of the most trivial acts among them, despite Bishop Morrison's assertion that "atrocious crimes" "invariably" are the creators of the murderous mobs. As a rule, the news dispatchers are residents of the communities where the events which are told of take place and are in sympathy with their surroundings. There is not one chance in a hundred that these senders of dispatches cover up or attempt to cover up sexual crimes, that they say a lynching was provoked by a murder or by arson or theft or insubordination when in fact it was caused by a sexual assault on a woman. All the temptations would be to misstate in the other direction, to accuse the victim of the gravest or most unpopular crime he could commit, just as public apologists for hanging and burning and mutilation do continually when speaking of lynchings in the aggregate. And it must not be forgotten that lynchings in this country antedate the emancipation of the negro, and the further fact must be borne in mind that negroes are far from being the only sufferers.

Referring again to the ever-heard talk about "the usual crime," it well may be noted here, by way of illustration, that the negro school teacher burned to death at Belleville, Ill., had shot the superintendent of schools instead of committing "the usual crime," and that the Evansville riots were caused by a street fight between a negro and a policeman, instead of by an assault on a woman. But such conspicuous contradictions of their pet theory will have no more effect upon the apologists for savagery than have the hundreds of possibly less startling confutations that preceded these. Even T. R. Wakeman and Prof. Lester F. Ward have not been able to escape the infection, for, while they are calm and humane in their discussions of the lynching horror, they tacitly accept the opinion that there is but one cause—"the usual crime."

The volume of denunciation of the savagery of our New American Indians is large enough, but most of it is ineffective because ill-placed. It usually takes the form of protests against the lynchers' disregard of law. Respect for recorded social regulations is very desirable when those regulations make for the protection of the peaceful man. On the whole, the regulations trampled on by the lynchers make for this protection, especially in contrast with the methods of the mob. This fact should be emphasized when treating of the mob problem. It is not emphasized. Instead, we have the expression of a merely fetichistic conception of the law, a worship of the law as law, regardless of its character, thus making confusion worse confounded. Lynching is wrong, is criminal, is disastrous because it does irrevocable deeds in hot blood, because it denies to its victims a fair trial—the opportunity to cross-examine, to produce witnesses, to retain counsel, to have time and place for orderly, calm investigation—because it multiplies a hundredfold the chances for the destruction of the innocent. Lynching is wrong, is demoralizing, is reactionary because in its spirit, its methods, its effects, it is away below, infinitely below, the level of the law, imperfect as is the law. Mobs act because the law is too deliberate, too civilized, too tender of those the mob hates. The mob acts because it wants more pain inflicted, wants to see it inflicted, wants to inflict it itself. When a negro was burning at the stake in Missouri it was proposed to end his agony by shooting him. "No," said a leader, "I would slacken the fire, if that would increase his misery." There spoke the mob spirit in the voice of Calvin's God. We are going back, back to the Apache and Hell. Much foolishness is talked about "speedy trials" as preventive of mob violence. The mobs have answered this, often, by seizing men sentenced by the courts to die in a few days and lynching them, sometimes adding torture. The mob wants its own hands bloody, its ears filled with shrieks of agony. The idea of revenge is first in the mind of the mob; the exemplary side of punishment has small place; the reformatory side has no place. The Delaware judge uttered some of the few rational words heard on this subject when he gave the reason for refusing to hold a special term to try the man later burned at the stake. A trial virtually under the guns of the mob could not be the "fair and impartial" trial contemplated by the law. Of course not. And the accused is entitled to a change of venue if there is reason to believe he cannot have a fair trial, if there is reason to believe his jurors may be intimidated by the violent feeling of the people.

But, say the apologists for the mob, you are thinking only of the accused, not of the victim. And you persist in assuming there is only one kind of victim. You wish to see only the bare one-third of the offenses that lead to lynching. Very well; from now on we will consider only the rape issue. It has not been forgotten. How, then, shall we protect women? By permitting the mob fever to rise higher and higher, by familiarizing a greater and greater number of men and women and children with scenes of horror, of mutilation, of slow and agonized death? You say the negro is very much lower than the Caucasian, that he is, racially, in comparative childhood. Do you not know that children, alike of larger and smaller growth, are imitative; that they can copy even if they cannot originate? As members of the superior race, would it not be the part of farseeing prudence, if not of justice and humanity, for us to set the example we want to have the negro follow, not the one we should be terrified if he did follow? Already I read that two young negroes mutilated a white man. Is the seed madly sown by the mob germinating so soon? It would not be astonishing. Are we going to hold in check and elevate a race which is on a lower plane of development by harking back to races still lower for weapons and methods to use in this protective and civilizing work? Shall we appropriate and use as our own the discarded torture tools of the savage and yet bring no savage reprisals on ourselves? Be assured that you cannot give women vital protection in that way.

The child is imitative. The child wants to do "in play" what he sees his elders do in earnest, and very soon he wants to do in earnest what he began by doing in play. Do Mr. Graves and Bishop Morrison and others really deceive themselves into thinking that women are any safer to-day or that the women of coming generations will be any safer because of the vile work of the mobs of this period? If the adults of the "higher race" cannot set an example of firmness, dignity and self-control in dealing with anti-social individuals, and show something of a scientific understanding of sexual needs and social and race laws, how can they expect the "subject race" and their own children to do better? If you, sir, a full-grown member of the superior race, are unable to restrain the madness of hate and revenge that surges in your blood, how, in the names of reason and conscience, can you expect the plantation negro and your adolescent son always to restrain another kind of madness that surges in their blood? You cannot by violence permanently protect the women of our race. Once rape was a recognized part of the marriage system and of the industrial system, and memories of that old time when the strong hand took and held are in our blood to-day, be we white or black or yellow. And not in the very old time only was rape legal—not many decades ago English courts still held for the "restitution of the marital rights" of husbands, and English wives were raped by law. Not many decades have passed since here in America the negro woman had no sexual rights which the white master was bound to consider. I should think white men would hesitate at least a minute before burning or hanging a yellow man, no matter what his offense.

Protect women by making it impossible for any youth to behold torture and murder. Protect women by ceasing to legalize lifelong rape, as South Carolina does when she refuses divorce for any cause. Protect women by ceasing to murder, in the false name of "honor," the man one prefers to you. Protect women by never again insisting on your "marital rights." You have no "marital rights." All that really is yours is the free gift of love. Protect women by according even to your wife that inviolability of person which you rightly insist the negro shall accord. Protect women by seeing that every person accused of crime has a full, fair and impartial trial. Protect women by ridding yourselves and them of the degrading superstition that it is indelicate for the victim of the ravisher to testify in court. This superstition—part of our ignorant fear and shame of sex—creates the mob atmosphere, wherein passion and fiendish cruelty run riot and often the innocent are sacrificed. It is this that is indelicate and disgraces women, this cowardly refusal of fair play to a suspected person. The disgrace of robbery rests not on the victim of the robber, but on the robber; the disgrace of rape rests not on the victim of the ravisher, but on the ravisher. Only in freedom from social ignorance and false modesty is woman's sure and lasting protection.

I have spoken of the mob always in the singular, as "it," because I cannot conceive of this hate-mad and often drunken or boyish rabble as free, initiating, and responsible individuals at that time.

EDWIN C. WALKER.

True and False Radicals.

I agree in the main with what L. H. wrote in criticism of my article on "Does It Pay to Be a Radical?" She knows I would not approve of a man forcing his wife and children to meet persons whom they do not like. It is unnecessary for me to make a defense to what some persons might think was an intimation that I had said or wrote such a thing.

She says, "We cannot read any one out of our ranks." I think differently. In my opinion we can and should read out of our ranks those who are "liberal" only on one side. They are our worst foes. If we advocate liberty, we must denounce those who pretend to be Liberals and demand liberty for themselves only. Those persons may think as they please, but they should not be recognized as Liberals by Liberals. We may not know all the reasons for their conduct, but we must judge them by their conduct just the same. There is nothing else to judge them by.

I did not say, as D. H. Hersey seems to intimate, that a "large proportion of men who advocate sexual freedom are imposters,'" for evidently that is what he means by "selfish gratification only." Self-gratification is the motive of all our voluntary actions. The man at whom my criticism was aimed is the one who gratifies his desires regardless of the happiness of others.

As to the number of "enemies in the camp," I cannot say. A woman who read the article of mine in No. 983 told me to-day that she wrote to six different men who had asked Aunt Elmina Slenker to secure them correspondents among the Liberal women of her acquaintance. "Every one of those six, except one," my friend said, "made sex association the invariable topic of their letters and four of them took especial delight in writing what are called 'smutty' stories. The very first letters of some of them were so offensive that I did not answer them. Only one of them discussed free womanhood in the manner in which it is discussed in Lucifer and did not descend to ribaldry. In his letters the sex relation was treated as something worthy of the highest respect, and he discussed it with as much civility of language as he would use in discussing any economic problem. The other five discouraged me very much and I must say gave me a very poor opinion of the generality of radical men. I was indeed glad to find one among the six who seemed to be what I think a radical man should be."

I do not believe, however, that five out of six men who call themselves radicals are the kind who wrote letters to this woman. It "just happened" that the ones who wrote to her, with the one exception, were of that kind. I would like to hear from other women readers of Lucifer. Let them tell what proportion of men calling themselves radicals they have found worthy of the name.

The logic of C. F. H. is beyond me. He says, in effect, "1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 are foul barnacles. How can I be 1, 2, 3, 4 or 5 without being a foul barnacle?" I confess I do not know how a foul barnacle cannot be a foul barnacle. What is the answer? He says, "I am surprised that Mr. Crane justifies a 'foul barnacle.'" Why, bless his misunderstanding thinking apparatus! a barnacle must be a barnacle, just as a spider must be a spider. But if I was an admirer of flies and could speak so they would understand me, I think I should warn them against spiders. Barnacles cannot exist without sustenance. The best way to rid the radical ship of them is to keep a careful watch on its hull and see that it is kept clean. Next. JONATHAN MAYO CRANE.

A fog hangs over the valley where dwell the multitude; reptiles and things unclean abound, and the multitude grope in darkness. There is no dawn, no horizon; and the clanking of the chains of the multitude is heard above the strife and turmoil.

Yonder at the mountain foot a thread of light streams from the window of the golden palace where dwell the lower gods.

The multitude want light and warmth and bread; they struggle and push and trample one another until they reach those gleams of light, but the windows are barred and they may not enter.

The mountain, perilous, cragged and brown, looms before them; up there they know all things are glorious; but the way is steep and rough, their chains oppressive, and only a few are brave enough to dare.

Weary and faint they reach the heights; along the stony path are drops of blood, but the thorns which tore their flesh have rent their chains asunder, their fetters lie broken by the wayside and they have reached the joyous light.

High up on the mountain top of vision, souls noble and grand soar high and ever higher into regions enchanting and unexplored; hearts pure and brave sing of freedom, joy and gladness. Far above the maddening strife, away from the lower gods, out of the fog, of the mist and the blackness of darkness, they are free; forever free.

Does it pay?

M. J. HOFFMAN.

I cannot understand how a man who has given this "radical subject" so much thought as Jonathan Mayo Crane can take the attitude he does in his recent article, "Does It Pay to Be a Radical?"

I am a radical and a free woman and have been for ten years. In all my experience and travels I have never found this rake and libertine among the radical men. But he is in existence and can be found at any time. He is the good, quiet, modest conservative. He does not even pose as a radical. You tell this conservative of a certain free woman and he will hound her to death; not one minute of peace does she receive from him. The radical may have the same desires, but he at least acts like a gentleman. The man who boasts of his conquests with women is the conservative.

Give me the radical, even though he may be a libertine, rather than the good, quiet, conservative, who has the two standards for man and woman, trying to get all he can and respecting only the virtuous woman.

MINERVA.

Does it pay to be a radical? Yes. But, as Brother Crane has so truly said, women are the ones upon whom the task must fall to eliminate as fast as possible from the radical camp the imposters, fools and foragers who bring such disrepute upon the name.

No article in Lucifer has so well covered the ground of the subject under discussion as Mr. Crane's excellent essay in last issue.

Many of us can give testimony in regard to experiences with the different classes of false radicals, and to those of us upon whom years have conferred a degree of wisdom, the ability to read these characters prevents annoyance. But Lillian strikes the keynote when she asks: "Is it better to educate our daughters radically or conservatively in order that they may maintain their individuality, independence and self-respect?" This has been the hardest problem of my life.

It is comparatively easy for one to choose for one's self which path to follow, for we agree with ourselves to take the consequences; but to consciously or unconsciously choose for our children is a more complex question. If mothers could secure and hold the unwavering confidence of their daughters and teach both by precept and example the ideas dear to free people the task would not be difficult. But so many counter-influences are at work. Not only the daily companionship of conservatives in school, society and business, but the literature and theaters hold up before the world the idea of a morality based on custom.

The nearest I can come to a solution is, to "live the life," and to recommend and furnish such literature to our growing daughters as shall instruct them in the tenets of our faith. And, further, to associate with and introduce to them those only whom we believe to be true, genuine radicals—men who would scorn to take advantage either of the ignorance of youth or the conscientious scruples of a false education.

By inculcating the principles of self-reliance, tolerance and kindness our daughters will be better prepared to meet the different classes of radicals, true and false, than we ourselves were, brought up usually to consider all radicals as monsters of vice.

Children who are taught to be just will be willing to accord to every person the right to do as they please, and it seems to me, in order to teach justice, that "Thou shalt" and "Thou shalt not" have no place in the parental vocabulary. Each child is entitled to his or her own experiences. We may point out dangers and errors, but have no right to command.

In the meantime, every discovered pseudo-radical should be given his rating and be known for what he is, thus saving the unwary unnecessary trouble.

MYRA PEPPER.

It seems to me that a better title for Mr. Crane's article in Lucifer of Sept. 24 would be "Does It Pay to Identify Yourself With So-called Radicals?" Personally I have found many among radicals that I could sympathize with and respect and vice versa. I can also say the same of conservatives, with the statement transposed.

The answer to the question of course would depend on the individual and his characteristics. Taking it for granted that the individual is radical, if he (or she) simply wished self-gratification of any nature, or must be actively engaged in some movement, he would be a hypocrite not to so identify himself. On the other hand, if he was an individual who could see the sham in radicalism as well as conservatism, and was willing to let events take their course, it would not pay him to stand sponsor for much that goes under the name of radicalism.

The other question—the sex question—I think depends almost entirely on the strength of character of the woman. As one thinks so is he. I should consider it a bad act (other things being equal) to seduce a woman into doing something which her training had all been against, and which in all probability she would regret and think had degraded her.

If radicals taught their children in such a way (and that possibly depends on the capacity of the child) that they could think for themselves, understand the consequences of their acts, and could accept the consequences and learn from them, then there would be no occasion for hedging them about with restrictions and "parental laws" to prevent their coming to harm. Then if they met with the hypocrites, after one or two experiences they would learn to detect them and govern themselves according.

JACK OLIVER.

Jonathan Mayo Crane asks in Lucifer the question, "Does it pay to be a radical?" The most fitting answer to the question, it seems to me, is this one: It depends upon the radical; upon the kind of radical he is.—Americus in Free Society.

Legislators, guides as blind as those they pretend to conduct, have virtually extinguished all the motives of affection which necessarily should be the binding tie to the forces of humanity. They have prevented all unanimity of foresight, all co-operation for succor, and spread timid care among the separated members of this great body. Their foolish constitutions have exposed mankind to serious risk of losing all.—Diderot.

Subscribers receiving more than one copy of Lucifer will please pass the extra copy to some friend, with recommendation to subscribe for same, if only for a trial of three months. Non-subscribers receiving a copy, whether marked sample or not, will please regard the same as an invitation to subscribe.

The Church cries now, "Whom God hath joined together let not man put asunder;" but when the people are really civilized the State will say, "Whom Nature hath put asunder let not man bind and menacle together."—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Our readers everywhere are kindly requested to send us names of persons who might be interested in Lucifer's work if they could see a sample copy.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 West 143d street, New York.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

The Postal Department and Lucifer.

We are required by the Postoffice Department at Washington to prove that we have enough paying subscribers to entitle us to second-class rates of postage. That is, if we were denied the second-class rate we would have to pay 1 cent postage on every copy of Lucifer mailed, instead of 1 cent a pound, which would mean an expenditure of 21 cents where one is sufficient at the present rate. We must show letters ordering the paper, and our cash receipts for a year, as evidence that our list is genuine. A considerable number of our subscribers are in arrears, and, while we consider them genuine subscribers, they will not be accepted as such unless there is evidence that they want the paper sent to them. We must request all whose subscriptions are in arrears to write to us if they want to continue to receive Lucifer. Of course we would be glad to receive the money due, but please write anyway, if only a card.

Do not delay. This is a matter of vital importance.

L. H.

More Evidences of War.

Since sending off the article entitled "Sunny Kansas—Warring Kansas," published in No. 989, showing a condition of war over the drink question in the Sunflower State, I have been looking through the columns of the same paper from which I clipped the item in regard to Mrs. Shannon's attack upon the saloon, and I find evidence in plenty that the regulation of the appetite for drink is only one of the causes that produce war in neighborhoods and war in the households of sunny Kansas. Among these evidences is the following:

"Larned, Kan., Sept. 22.—A verdict for $2,000 damages has been awarded by a jury in the case of Mrs. T. L. Sidebottom against L. C. Selig and wife. The trial of the case occupied two days and was sensational throughout. The evidence showed that Sidebottom deserted his wife while she was confined to a sick bed and went to live at the Selig home, and has since refused to return to his own home, although his wife has repeatedly begged him to do so, and still declares she loves him and wants him to come back to her."

This seems to be a case of "runaway husband." The wife wants to compel her unwilling husband to live with her, and, by law, gains heavy damages against her neighbors, the Seligs, for enticing away her chattel, or for "harboring" the fugitive.

The law is supposed to be the guardian of the family, the promoter of the purity of the home, etc., but what of the purity of the relation in which there is love on one side only? If Sidebottom does not love his wife well enough to live with her, would it not be "adultery" on his part to remain the husband of a woman he does not love?

And is not the fine of $2,000 inflicted on the Seligs very similar in nature to the punishment meted out by the old Fugitive Slave Law to those who assisted black slaves to liberty?

* * *

Another news item in the same paper reads as follows:

"Larned, Kan., Sept. 22.—Mrs. J. S. Bryson has filed suit for divorce from her husband, J. S. Bryson, proprietor of the Larned house, alleging extreme cruelty. The suit is the culmination of much trouble between the pair, which reached a crisis Sunday night, when Mrs. Bryson fired four shots from a revolver at her husband while he was trying to break down the door of her room at the hotel. None of the shots took effect, but they were sufficient to make Bryson desist in his attempts to enter the room. Mrs. Bryson says he had been on a protracted spree and had attempted to kill her several times. Judge Lobdell granted an injunction restraining Bryson from interfering with property while the divorce case is pending."

The comparatively small town of Larned, Kan., seems to be getting considerable notoriety because of its family broils, and because of the efforts of the paternal courts to hold people together who would rather live apart.

* * *

One more clipping from this single issue of the Topeka State Journal must suffice for this time, though several more might be selected to show that state regulation of demand and supply in the matter of gratification of the sexual appetite is a disastrous failure, just as state regulation of demand and supply in the matter of gratification of the drink appetite is a disastrous failure in sunny Kansas:

"Representative L. M. Linton of Smith County was in Topeka Monday afternoon and got Governor Bailey to offer a reward of $300 for the apprehension of Thomas Madison, who is accused of murdering three women in the northeastern part of Smith County last Tuesday night or early Wednesday morning. Madison is supposed to be somewhere in Nebraska. Mr. Linton says that the murdered women were excellent people, standing high among their neighbors. They were: Mrs. H. H. Payne, an elderly woman; Mrs. Eda Williamson, her daughter, aged about 35; and Miss Mattie Williamson, daughter of Mrs. Williamson, aged 12.

"Madison was a farm hand who worked for a neighbor. He was in love with Mrs. Williamson and insisted that she marry him upon her procuring a divorce from her husband, who had deserted her. She refused to do so. The three women were sleeping alone in Mrs. Payne's home, about five miles south of the Nebraska line, and it is supposed that Madison entered the house and killed them with a cultivator shovel and shank, which was found in the room. The body of Mrs. Williamson was dragged sixty-five yards and thrown over a barbwire fence."

In the absence of more definite information, some important features of this tragedy—not so very uncommon—are left to reasonable conjecture. The woman Madison loved had already made one venture in the matrimonial lottery and had drawn a blank, or worse than a blank. She drew a man whom she did not want, but from whom she could not get free without a more or less expensive legal process, and now the probability is that she was fearful of another failure if she should marry again according to law. She might have been willing, perhaps, to enter into a conditional union with Madison, one that would not be so much like the hangman's noose as was her first venture; that is, she might have been willing to take him "on probation," as the Methodist Church takes its new members. But Madison must have the woman bound to him for life—not for a limited or indeterminate period that could be ended in case she grew tired of him, or in case she should grow away from him and find a man she could love better than him.

When Mrs. Williamson refused to enter into "matrimonial bonds" with him—bonds which so often mean lifelong bondage, lifelong misery—Madison concluded, as thousands more have done, that life had nothing left for him worth having, and, believing that the mother and daughter of his beloved had persuaded her not to marry him, he decided they should all three die together, probably intending to take his own life also—as so many disappointed lovers have done in all past time, but whose courage failed them at the last moment. The lust for blood having been satisfied by the killing of the three women, his next thought was to save himself from the vengeance of "the law," the law which says, "Whosoever sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed." The result being that Madison is a "fugitive from justice," Governor Bailey having set a price on his head, as the state sets a price on wolf scalps.

Henceforth Madison, like Cain of old, will be a man of mark—all the marks that any one can remember will be published so that he may be arrested and punished. Cain's mark, however, was put upon his as protection—"lest any one finding him should kill him." How do the clergy explain this seeming contradiction?

But whether the "bloodhounds" that are now on his track—the four-footed hounds who scent the trail at the command of the two-footed hounds who follow the scent because it means three hundred "pieces of silver" for their wallets if they catch the fugitive—whether Madison is caught and punished or not will make no difference to the innocent victims, the three "excellent people" murdered by what? or by whom?

Was it by the "cultivator shovel" found in their room?

Was it by the hand that wielded the shovel?

Was it by the passion-crazed brain that directed the hand that wielded the shovel that beat out the brains of the three victims?

* * *

I maintain that he or she who sees no deeper into the causes of this triple murder than the passion-crazed mind of the farm-hand Madison, is a very superficial reader or thinker.

I maintain that the main cause or causes of this triple murder is neither more nor less than our combined with state-and-church-enforced ignorance of what sex means, as the most powerful force, the underlying force in human life—associative human life.

STATE REGULATION OF SEX APPETITE,

I maintain that the men who make the laws, and the men and women who enforce the laws denying to woman the absolute control of her own person; denying her the right to choose her sex-mate, not for once only, but for every day and night of her life, are the men and the women who should be held responsible for this worse than brutal tragedy.

* * *

But wherefore this protest?

What good will it do?

So long as reformers try to reform the world by striking at effects without trying to remove the underlying causes, murders, rapes, crimes and vices of all kinds will continue, much the same as now.

Do the "powers that be" desire such continuance, so that they may have a plausible excuse for drawing their salaries?

If so, we need not wonder that it is next to impossible to get an invasive law off the statute book, when once enacted, such as the Comstock postal law and the prohibitory liquor law. The more laws the better for the class that lives by governing and robbing other people.

M. HARMAN.

"Who Is the Enemy; Anthony Comstock or You?" is the title of a new work by E. C. Walker. It is, as its title indicates, an examination of the censorship of literature and art exercised by Anthony Comstock and others. It is a handsomely printed pamphlet, in style a companion to "Vice: Its Friends and Its Foes," and "Our Worship of Primitive Social Guesses." The price is 15 cents. It may be ordered through this office.

A Batch of Correspondence.

October 1—a month out from Chicago—finds me still in the Sunflower State; still in its capital city, Topeka. I find so much to detain me here that it is difficult to fix a date for another start on my westward journey. Letters of invitation by the score to visit the Pacific Coast have met me here, forwarded mainly from Las Vegas, N. M., at which point I had requested correspondents to address me. Believing that many of these letters contain matters of interest to Lucifer's readers, I venture to reproduce a few extracts, asking pardon for the liberty I take, and hoping also that none will consider her or himself slighted because I have not promptly acknowledged receipt of their letters. To do this would be too great a tax on my time and strength. Therefore, in this public way, I desire to return sincerest thanks to all whose letters have contained offers of hospitality and of general co-operation—if my trip should be extended to the Pacific Coast.

A good lady friend, and old subscriber, whose home must be heavenly since it is located in the "City of the Angels," writes:

"I hope you will come to Los Angeles, and if you do, consider my house your home as long as you see fit to stay.—C. E. A."

From Richmond, Cal., D. P. W. writes encouragingly as follows:

"Would be glad if you could come to San Francisco. Am an employe of the Santa Fe, as engineer; will pay your expenses from San Francisco to this place and return to San Francisco. Will take $5 worth of books from you. Have some plans I wish to discuss with you. Am off duty from 15th to 20th of each month. Another reason why you should come is to collect what I owe you, as I could not stand you off if I should meet you in person. Am going to the city to-morrow and will see what people I can."

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

In a later letter the same writer makes a suggestion or two that strike me as worth putting into practice:

"If I knew the addresses of your subscribers in Oakland and San Francisco, while I was off duty I could have called on them and think some arrangements could have been made in the way of co-operative help—getting subscriptions, selling books, etc. I think if there is no objection a private list of names should be printed and sent to those who wish to make acquaintance of radical people—your subscribers. If you would ask all who approve this plan to send you their names it would be an important help to the movement. Of course this list of names would not be made public and would be sent only to those who wish it, and for the purposes just named. If you had the list of Free Society, Tucker's Liberty and other radical papers, it would help you and not hurt them, but I believe would help them. The more radical people can come together the more support you all will get and the stronger the general movement will grow."

Other correspondents have made the same or similar suggestions, as, for instance, J. P. B., writing from Ontario, Cal.:

"I think your life, so full of attainment, would not be so well rounded out as it should be without the accomplishment of your wish to see California. Los Angeles is about forty-eight miles west of this place. You know it is becoming noted as a city full of progressive and forceful individualities, and it would be strange indeed if there are not many such who would feel honored by your handshake and the opportunity of helping to make your visit to the Golden State pleasant and profitable. To do it justice you should spend some months traveling over its vastness and seeing its many wonders, and possibly giving you by change of climate a new lease of life. So I think you had better make up your mind and take action soon as possible. I think it would be well if your subscribers in Los Angeles and San Francisco and other points would get together, either by meeting or correspondence, and put their heads together and see what can be done conjointly. The benefit would be reciprocal, I am sure, to individuals and to the state we are generally proud of. The novel features of California in the winter and spring months, say January, February, March and April, make it the best time for such a project, and visiting the southern end of the state first and then the more northerly last would be best. In San Diego there is the least rainfall and the temperature most comfortable, I believe, in the early part of the year. One needs to spend a year in the state to know what it is thoroughly. You could do us and yourself lots of good in that time. Financial assurance is necessary, however; hence my desire for a general interest and co-operation of your subscribers in California. Put me down as one, my venerable brother."

* * *

P. E. Oakley, San Diego, seems to think there is more "marital unhappiness" in California than elsewhere:

"In my judgment California would be your best state—where there is so much marital unhappiness. San Francisco, Oakland, Los Angeles, then Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, ought to furnish many subscribers. All forms of free and progressive thought are represented here by able men in lectures and course lessons. But Lucifer is little known. It would take some time and you would have to hasten slowly. But I think it would pay you to come to the Coast. Last October, when passing through Chicago, I called to see you, but you were out of town. However, I had a very pleasant call upon the gifted and gracious Mrs. Lillian."

* * *

An invitation to be driven over the "Switzerland of America" seems too good to resist:

"I should be glad to have the privilege of showing you over this part of the country and pointing out some of the glorious beauties that lie all around, for I think our little county is the loveliest spot in the world, 'the Switzerland of America.' I have a horse and buggy that can take us anywhere we want to go; and I will give you my word of honor that I can show you more beauty to the square inch than any natural scenery you ever saw. We have a serene lake, and our county is a very pepper-box for mineral springs, around which are built magnificent hotels for the resort of city people. Come if you can; my facilities are at your disposal, as free as this glorious climate that we breathe. —T. F. Lee, Lakeport, Cal."

"THE HAPPIEST MAN IN THE WORLD."

J. C. W., writing from the "City of the Angels," says:

"Glad to hear you are on the rail, headed this way—not the rail so many bigots would like to ride you on! As to business, you would find people here much the same as everywhere else. I can promise you two new names and a warm welcome to our home. It is predicted we shall have a hundred and fifty thousand tourists here this winter. Hope you will be one of them. As for me, I am the happiest man in the world—barring the fact that some are more intelligent than I am, and therefore more capable of enjoyment. But so far as I am capable I am so happy that a heaven better than this would be wasted on me, for I have not the capacity to enjoy more. Of course, this must be qualified by the statement that the sorrow I receive by entering into the sorrows of others is as great as I am capable of. I do not know what the great whole plan is. At best I can see only a very small part.

'Is it true, O Christ in heaven, that the highest suffer most?
That the strongest wander farthest and most hopelessly are lost?
That the mark of rank in nature is capacity for pain?
That the sadness of the singer makes the sweetness of the strain?'

"Last Sunday I visited a charitable home where about sixty boys are cared for, trying to keep them from drifting to the 'reform school,' which is only a stepping-stone to the prison.

* * * I have always held in contempt the sorrow that had only life enough in it to just breathe. My sorrow last Sunday just breathed. To-day I must go and carry clothing to a little boy; a box of candy large enough for all, and money enough to feed them all for two days. This to satisfy myself. This is what I must pay to be the happiest man in the world. I have also the hope of building a cottage there that shall house two dozen boys; this I must defer for at least a year, but I feel I shall accomplish it, for it is along the line of my selfishness, and I see even less successful men than I am accomplish such things along the lines of their selfishness."

Readers who do not know the writer of the above might think, perhaps, that he is a shallow philosopher, a philanthropist who would remove surface evils and do nothing to cure the underlying causes, the causes that make "reform schools" and charitable homes for boys necessary; but I have the satisfaction, from personal acquaintance, of knowing that J. C. W. sees the need of work that will go to the root of the tree of evil—the vagabondage, the pilfering, the truancy, etc., among the boys of towns and cities such as Los Angeles, and that he is happiest when working to remove these underlying causes, these compelling causes of juvenile depravity.

FROM AN OLD-TIMER.

One more only for this issue from my budget of California letters. A veteran thinker and worker, one who has read and paid for Lucifer almost from its first issue, writes from East Oakland, Cal., in this very brotherly fashion:

"Dear old companion of my thought: Glad to hear you are pointed this way. We want to see you; we want to feel you and your influence on the human side, and we want to hear you. Yes, we want to keep you, too, as long as we can. 'Old Hacker's Pleasure Boat, which I came across first in the way of Freethinking, The Word and Lucifer have been my inspiration since the days of '47, when I was along the New England Coast, in the Coast Survey Civil Service—in the days when church influence pervaded all classes. But we are no longer lonesome, and though most of us old stagers may not live to see it we have the joy of knowing, by the progress made in the past few years, that the hour of victory is 'near at hand.' God—or the devil, all one and the same to me—bless you for the great work you have done, and bless also those true hearts who have stood by you in the fierce battles with ignorance that have been fought till victory is in sight.

"I believe you have never been in California. It is new and good ground for your propaganda, as I earnestly believe, and the results cannot fail to be valuable and lasting. The success of your meetings depends largely upon good, sufficient and timely advertising, a foreknowledge of who you are and when you will be here. I am a good deal of a cripple, but will do what I can to get you started. Had a fall from my wheel a few days ago.

"You do not need to hurry. Usually there is nothing gained by haste in such affairs. Come and stay with me till you have prospected the ground and laid your plans. As soon as I get word that you will come I will try to wake the solar plexus of as many people of the Bay towns as I can.

"If I were able to travel I would like to go with you all over the state. It would pan out big, I feel sure, and would lay the track for still greater success as often as you could repeat the visits. It is my candid opinion that you will realize here, in a few weeks, several times the amount stated as needed to induce you to come to California. Come, come! You cannot come too soon or stay too long. The comrades here will take steps to prepare for your coming.—D. M. E."

* * *

To print all the letters received from California within the past two or three weeks would fill more than two entire issues of Lucifer.

Next week will probably print a few more extracts from the same budget. Again thanking all who have written, and all who meant to write but did not find time, I once more request all letters intended for me personally to be sent in care of Solomon Harman, Las Vegas, New Mexico. M. HARMAN.

Hopes and Fears for Sex Reform.

Continuing the discussion on sex reform, in reply to Mr. Rowell (in No. 987), I find his doubts so vaguely expressed that I can only guess at them. In his first letter, the economic side of the sex question was the greatest difficulty raised; he now shifts his ground, and, modestly remarking that he knows the whole of economics from top to bottom, he now dismisses the economic crux as even less important than I think it. He believes that in a settlement of two hundred men and women, each being highly endowed mentally as well as financially, sex oppression and deprivation could nevertheless not be abolished. But why live exclusively in a small colony? Two hundred is a very small number out of which to choose ones most intimate friends. In what proportion are those, of all whom we have met, who have had the power to inspire us to that work of art, a lasting friendship? We need to make the acquaintance of many hundreds in order to make friends with a few.

What are the conditions of sex slavery? They are: (1) the wish on one side to enslave, and (2) passive submission on the other side; to which is added (3) the seal of society on such slavery acting so powerfully that there is no escape. I knew a lady who possessed the gift of depicting the loveliest faces, human and angelic, in fresco painting; but her husband took up nearly all her time employing her to draw the skeletons of extinct fishes for his works on paleontology. She ought to have been free to follow her inspirations wherever they led her; he should have obtained the services of a more ordinary draughtsman for his diagrams. The art of sex is a parallel case. Sex slavery cannot exist where educated minds have produced an ideal which makes such slavery abhorrent.

What are the conditions of sex starvation? They are produced by a false ideal which makes sex expression a disgrace and abstention from it a virtue, outside of marriage, and which makes marriage a prison, whether the couple within that prison are sexually adapted or not. Again, an educated society could not tolerate these things. Nearly all now live each in a separate cell, to which we may invite one single companion as soon as we can obtain a golden key. Under conditions of a sane society, the arts of friendship-making and love-making will be valued and encouraged as much as they are now dishonored, and no one who needs it will fail to make good his claim to some love exchange.

Mr. Rowell's comparison of sex love to a cake, gone when once eaten, is a false one. The sentiment and joys of sex are a perennial flower and fruit.

Mr. Rowell says that he is a varietist in practice and for a long period, after ample experiment. I suppose he is so in theory as well as in practice, though I have noticed that this by no means follows for certain. I presume that he does eliminate both sexual slavery and sexual starvation from his life and from the lives of his nearest and dearest. If he can do so in the present unfortunate conditions of society, and if an increasing number of men and women are doing so too, why should not this ideal be grasped and followed by all in a more thoughtful and therefore happier age to come? DORA FORSTER.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister! For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

Special offer: This valuable work sent free on receipt of 25 cents for a fifteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light Bearer. Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

THE NEW LIFE.

Ida M. Brooks, editor. A monthly periodical devoted to a finer and nobler realisation of life; 75 cents a year; 3 months for 25 cents; sample copy free. If you are tired of the old life, with its pain, heartache and emptiness, read The New Life, and you will come into and live the new life, which is full of peace and bountiful supply of all good and desirable things. Address THE NEW LIFE PUB. CO., Box 186, Ovodien, Idaho.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We can not sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 30 cents and two for 50 cents. Address Edwin C. Walker, 244 West 143d street, New York, N. Y.

A PRIVATE MATERNITE HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to cloases that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 62, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

FREE LITERATURE.

Your name will be sent to a great number of the finest papers published for sample copies if you send 10 cents to INTERMOUNTAIN SUB. AGENCY, Box 186, Ovodien, Idaho.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago.

SOCIALIST.

ECONOMICS OF SOCIALISM. Cloth, $1.25.

THE ADVENTURES OF JOHN M'CUE. By Socialist. 10c.

THE CLERICAL CAPITALIST. By the Rev. Father McGrady. 5c.

NOW AND THEN. A play in two acts. By Frederick Krafft. 10c.

BETWEEN CAESAR AND JESUS. By George D. Herron. Cloth, 75c.

THE PROLETARIAT. Adapted from the German of Karl Kautsky. 5c.

THE CAPITALIST CLASS. Adapted from the German of Karl Kautsky. 5c.

FERDINAND LASSALLE AS A SOCIAL REFORMER. By E. Bernstein. $1.

THE COMMUNIST MANIFESTO. By Karl Marx and Frederick Engels. 10c.

THE ATTITUDE OF THE SOCIALISTS TOWARD TRADE UNIONS. N. I. Stone. 5c.

FRENCH AND GERMAN SOCIALISM IN MODERN TIMES. By Richard T. Ely. Cloth, 75c.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF SOCIALISM FROM UTOPIA TO SCIENCE. By Frederick Engels. 5c.

A DEBATE ON THE TACTICS OF THE S. T. AND L. A. TOWARD TRADE UNIONS. Between Daniel De Leon and Job Harriman. 5c.

RAILROADING IN THE UNITED STATES. The James Boys; also, As to Law and Order; The Eminent Gentleman and the Very Eminent Gentleman; The Dull Brakeman and His Bright Lantern. By Ben Hanford. "To the Not Yet Dead." 5c.

SHROUDS WITH POCKETS. A life sketch. By Henry E. Allen. A touching story, told in simple and yet striking language, and yet more than a story. Vivid flashes of light are thrown on the unspeakable horrors of capitalism. Illustrated with many portraits of Socialists and other reformers. 25c.

ANARCHIST.

NO TREASON.—No. II. By Lysander Spooner. 16 pages. 15c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A study of the industrial type. Dyer D. Lum. 10c.

WHAT IS ANARCHISM? An explanation by Stephen T. Byington. Five copies for 25c, 50 for 75c, 100 for 25c.

NO TREASON.—No. VI. Showing that the Constitution is of no authority. By Lysander Spooner. 13 pages. 25c.

A POLITICIAN IN SIGHT OF HAVEN. Being a protest against government of man by man. By Auberon Herbert. 10c.

CITIZENS' MONEY. A critical analysis in the light of Free Trade in Banking. By Alfred B. Westrup. Only a few left; reduced to 5c.

THE UNCONSTITUTIONALITY OF THE LAWS OF CONGRESS PROHIBITING PRIVATE MAILS. By Lysander Spooner, 24 pages. 10c.

THE BALLOT. By William Walstein Gordak. A short poem illustrating the absurdity of majority rule. An excellent leaflet for propagandaism. 100 copies, 10c.

FREE POLITICAL INSTITUTIONS: Their Nature, Essence and Maintenance. An abridgement and rearrangement of Lysander Spooner's "Trial by Jury." Edited by Victor Yarros. 47 pages. 25c.

AN ESSAY ON THE DUTY OF CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE. By Henry D. Thoreau. A reprint of this classic essay on the supremacy of the individual conscience. Antique paper; artistic covers, dark green on olivine. 10c.

THE ATTITUDE OF ANARCHISM TOWARD INDUSTRIAL COMBINATIONS. By Benj. R. Tucker. An address delivered in Central Music Hall, Chicago, on Sept. 14, 1899, before the Conference on Trusts held under the auspices of the Civic Federation. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. One of the most eloquent pleas for liberty ever written. Paine's "Age of Reason" and "Rights of Man" consolidated and improved. It sifts the pulse like a trumpet call. By Michael Bakounine. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 32 pages. 25c.

THE ANARCHISTS: A Picture of Civilization at the Close of the Nineteenth Century. A poet's prose contribution to the literature of egoistic Anarchism. The author traces his own mental development in London amid the exciting events of 1887—the manifestations of the unemployed, the rioting at Trafalgar square, and the executions at Chicago. The antagonism between Communism and Anarchism sharply brought out. By John Henry Mackay. Translated from the German by George Shumm. 125 pages, with portrait of the author. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of Freethought and Free Love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

THE SOCIAL QUESTION. A discussion between Juliet H. Severance, M. D., and David Jones. 15 cents.

BORNING BETTER BABIES. Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 10c.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes, 10c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together, woon That Great Fraud, Ycleept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wood). 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Witchcraft (Lucinda B. Chandler's), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory), E. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

MODERN PARADISE. The Model Home. Solution of the Social Problem. Future Greatness of Electricity. Proposed Experiment in Social Science. An Earthly Eden and How to Attain It. A Unique Power Plant. Wonderful System of Education. Elegantly illustrated. Prof. Henry Olerich. 25c.

KARRESS. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. E. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (Ch. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

WOMAN AND HER RELATION TO THE CHURCH OR CANON LAW FOR WOMEN. Harriet M. Closs. A succinct statement of the position to which women were doomed by the Church Fathers and authorities. Every woman should possess a copy. 10c.

THE CURSE OF MATERNITY. From the French of Henry Ferre. Together with How to Escape the Curse (Jonathan Mayo Crane), Woman's "Duty" to Bear Children (E. C. Walker), True and False Morality (G. L. James), Love's Law (William Francis Barnard). 25 cents.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: A Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 61 large pages. 10c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE, as viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Grest. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock, Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and His Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

THE ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY AND THE STATE. By Frederick Engels. Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans. 211 pages; bound in cloth. 40c. Postage, 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. One of the best short works on the subject. Daintily printed. A charming little gift book. "Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it." 25 cents.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided, and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.25.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES. Edwin C. Walker. Contents—Brotherhood of Men; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only"; Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen"; What Are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; Is What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" The Tenements; Action for Advanced Women. With appendix: The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of it all. 15c.

THE MAJESTY OF SEX. Nancy McKay Gordon. This is the book written from the standpoint of experience. Therefore, it will satisfy in a vital way the cry of the hungry soul. It is practical and stimulative; personal and real; individual and ideal. It instructs how the creative forces of the body may be transmuted, transformed and directed. It teaches of celestial love on earth now. It shows how the truly wedded pair may make all things subservient to their needs. It goes right to the heart of the subject, its universality and right use. It does not deal in the theory of any other writer, but is written in the unique style of the author. Send for this book and learn the secret of the gods. They move with divine recklessness—egotistacally. Beautifully bound; initial letter beginning each paragraph; artistic from every point of view. $2.

THE HOME CYCLOPEDIA OF MEDICAL, SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE. Contains a full, plain and easy-reading treatise on "Health and Disease, with Recipes"; all the average reader can profitably learn of personal hygiene and common diseases (including special, separate chapters for men and women); all right up to date, and fully illustrated with hundreds of photo-engravings and chromo-lithographs. Contains also the already popular "Plain Home Talk" about the relations of the sexes and social customs in all ages and all countries, with "original and startling" suggestions for social reforms; newly revised, enlarged and well illustrated. All is "heart to heart" plain home talk from a clear-thinking, plain-speaking, liberal-minded medical author of over forty years' experience. Nearly 1,000,000 of his former books sold. A curious book for curious people, and a sensible book for every one. Answers 1,000 delicate questions one would like to ask one's regular physician and yet doesn't want to. 1,248 pages; 400 illustrations (30 in colors); 250 recipes. Cloth bound, $2.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work. Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up to date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has 800 pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid, to any address, for $2.75.

THE WHOLESOME WOMAN. J. H. Greer, M. D. The latest and most complete work of its kind. Four books in one volume. Part I—SEX AND LIFE: The Principle of Life; The Dominant Power of Life; The Temple of the Soul; Principle of Life: The Dominant Power of Life; The Temple of the Soul; The Unfolding of Womanhood; The Fulfillment of the Law; The Fruits of Fulfillment; Home and Home-Making. Part II—TOKOLOGY: The Organs Functioned; Menstruation; The Marriage Relation; Conception and Prevention; Pregnancy; Labor; The Hygiene of Infancy; Development from Fetal Culture; Child Birth; The Nursing Period; Management from Birth to Puberty; Disorders of Infancy and Childhood; Affections Peculiar to Women; What Determines the Sex of Offspring. Part III.—CHILD-CULTURE: The Foundation of Moral Uprightness; The Kindergarten (with diagrams); Manual Training. Part IV.—HEALTH AND HYGIENE: Long Life Not a Mystery; "Breath is Life"; How, When and What to Eat; Sleep and the Secret; "Breath is Life"; How, When and What to Eat; Sleep and the Secret; Clothing and Dress; Mental and Physical Culture; What to Do in Sickness; What Not to Do in Sickness; Care of the Eyes and Ears; Care of the Extremities; Poisons Used as Medicines; The Application of Heat and Cold; Unnecessary Surgical Operations; An Ounce of Prevention. The complete work is published in one handsome, large quarto volume of 510 pages, with photogravure frontispiece, portrait of the author, 16 full-page half-tone and numerous smaller explanatory illustrations. It is printed on an extra quality of paper from new electroplates, and each volume is accompanied by a separate supplement of 41 plates (printed in colors), illustrating Sex in Plant Life; the Human Sexual Organs and the Laws of Reproduction; the Development of the Human Embryo and Fetus, showing nourishment and growth of the human embryo and fetus, showing nourishment and growth from day to day and month to month; the Plan of Fetal Circulation, etc. In extra cloth, with special emblematic cover design, $3.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strasburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola). 25c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What is She? What Will She Do? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 10c.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE. Edward Carpenter. This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author: The Sex Passion; Man, the Ungrown; Woman, the Serf; Woman in Freedom; Marriage, a Retrospect; Marriage, a Forecast; The Free Bodies; Some Remarks on the Early Rise and Sex Worships. Notes on the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population. The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A. and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socialand. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MONEY, BANKS, PANICS AND PROSPERITY. By W. H. Clagett. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetatism. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MAGNETATISM, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

RELIGIOUS, POLITICAL AND SOCIAL FREEDOM. A lecture by Juliet H Severance, M. D. 10c.

LIEBIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

GIORDANO BRUNO, His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

SOCIALISTIC, COMMUNISTIC, MUTUALISTIC AND FINANCIAL FRAGMENTS. By William B. Greene, M.M.

AGE OF REASON; An Investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel portrait. 50c.

THE TEMPERANCE FOLLY; or, Who's the Worst? Lois Waisbrooker. Dedicated to the wrecks and so-called sinners of a false civilization. 10c.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward Fitzgerald's interpretation; with original introduction; latest version. Special cover. Paper, 25c.

ISOLA; or, The Disinherited. A drama in six acts. Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1. Postage, 7c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Gen. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. G. Clemens and David Overmeyer. 25c.

THE STORY OF IJAIN; or, The Evolution of a Mind. Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Stuart Rose), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. $1. Postage, 8c.

SONGS OF A CHILD, AND OTHER POEMS. By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. $1.50. Postage, 12c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 81 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Lawrence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 626 pages. 50c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 97 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltaire and Voltaire. 25c.

VACCINATION A BLUNDER IN POISONS. C. F. Nichols. "Vaccination will undoubtedly rank as the greatest and most pernicious failure of the century; this conclusion is no longer a matter of opinion, but of science," said Alfred Russell Wallace, and in this booklet the facts are arrayed in support of this assertion. 25c.

VACCINATION A CRIME. With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions. Felix L. Oswald, M. D. "Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads smallpox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents." With illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 196 pages. 50c.

990.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are inclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

Your subscription is paid to No. ..... If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Fahnestock. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 472 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

A RED HEART IN A WHITE WORLD. A suggestive manual of Free Society; containing a method and a hope. By J. William Lloyd. Handsome illuminated paper cover in white, red and green; 50 pages. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Spunky, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition, $1; five volumes, plainer binding, $1.25; all in one volume, $2.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman March 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD: An Outline of Practical Co-Operative Individualism. By Henry Overton. Regarded by many persons as a most interesting and consistent economic reform novel that follows Bellamy's "Looking Backward." Bound in red silk with gold title. Nearly 400 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, $1.

HISTORY OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. By C. L. James. An excellent history of the French Revolution, well written by one thoroughly familiar with his subject. Special care has been exercised to give the facts as they are, the author not having made himself the champion of any faction. Neatly printed from large type on good book paper, with a substantial binding. 345 pages, with an index and bibliographical supplement. Cloth, $1.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. John H. Kaler. Contents: Definitions and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff or Protection; War Punishments; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be. 42 pages. Cloth binding, somewhat damaged, and reduced from $1.50 to 40 cents.

HILDA'S HOME: A Story of Woman's Emancipation. Rose Graul. With Macaulay, Rose Graul would say, "The cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty." Hence she has no fears that under Freedom the Home and the Family would cease to exist, or that woman will be less loving and lovable, or that man will be less manly and honorable. On the contrary, she maintains that only in the soil and atmosphere of freedom is it possible for true womanhood and manhood to live and flourish. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In two editions, de luxe, and plain. Prices, $1.25 and $1.00.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old asceticism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' " The new Hedonism says: "Be happy and you will be virtuous." In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstition have they begun to perceive that the noblest things are selfish and sensual; that the pure and beautiful and subduing thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproducing function." Paper covers; 32 large pages, twelve copies, 50c; single copy, 5c.

THE BIBLE. John E. Remsburg. Contains eleven chapters on the authenticity of the Bible, based on the best authorities of the time; thirteen on the credibility of the Bible, ten on the morality of the Bible, and an appendix in which Mr. Remsburg sets forth unanswerable arguments against the divine origin and in favor of the human origin of the Bible. Twenty-six page of index enable the reader to instantly refer to any authority quoted or argument used. Mr. Remsburg is one of the most careful, accurate and painstaking writers, and his book is a compendium of the latest scholastic and rationalistic thought on the subject. The late Colonel Ingersoll began his famous lecture on the Bible by saying: "Some one ought to tell the truth about the Bible." This Mr. Remsburg has done—done it fully, and done it well. Large 12mo., 300 pages. Cloth, $1.25.

THE SLAVERY OF OUR TIMES. Count Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of the gifted author, and introduction by the translator, Aylmer Maude. Chapter titles: I. Goods Porters Who Work Thirty-Seven Hours. II. Society's Severe White Men Perish. III. Justification of the Existing Position of Affairs. IV. The Assertion of Economic Science that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System. V. Why Learned Economists Assert What Is False. VI. Bankruptcy of the Socialist Ideal. VII. Chimes at Frosty Village. VIII. Slavery Exists Among Us. IX. What Is Slavery? X. Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property. XI. Laws the Cause of Slavery. XII. The Chief Cause of Legislation is Organized Violence. XIII. What Are Governments? Is It Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV. How Can Governments Be Abolished? XV. What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword. Well printed on heavy paper; substantially bound. 196 pages. 50c.

HAT SOME SAND!

About five years ago, Prof. William Windsor, Ll. S. Ph. D., the world's most eminent Phrenologist, discovered the Sand Cure for Indigestion and Constipation, and since that time more than a half million sufferers have tried it and found that it is Nature's Simple Remedy for restored health. It does not purge or gripe, but it cleans the body out.

"The Natural Life" is the title of Prof. Windsor's monthly magazine in which the Sand Cure is fully described and discussed. It is devoted to the teaching of Vitosophy ("the wise way of living"), Natural Dietetics, Health and Character Culture, Righteousness and Fear of God. One Dollar per year.

PROFESSOR WINDSOR will send full directions for the Sand Cure to anyone sending 25 cents for a three months' trial subscription to The Natural Life. Address THE WINDSOR PUBLISHING CO., Back Bay Postoffice, Boston, Mass.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VII., NO. 40. CHICAGO, ILL., OCT. 17, E. M. 302. [C. E. 1903.] WHOLE NO. 991

REACTIONARY PROGRESSIVES IN ENGLAND.

There are many signs in England that reaction is ceasing and we are once more turning towards the light. The reaction in England culminated in the Boer war; progress seems to have recommenced with the cessation of hostilities. To distant observers it may hereafter appear that the Tories have fallen from popular esteem through their tariff programme; it is truer to say that Protection is the pen with which the forces of reaction are signing their own death warrant—they are doomed anyway.

Progress is never a danger, but there are numerous so-called "progressives" who are as bad as the grossest reactionary. England is half-full to-day of men and women who are helping at once to destroy Tory reaction and substitute another form of reaction which they believe to be progress. In a world like ours, where compromise is so cheap and the masses prefer to take their progress in small doses, there is every encouragement to the loud-mouthed demagogue who takes advantage of present discontent to offer an imitation instead of a substitute, to recommend a change instead of a reform, to make things different instead of better. In this category must be placed the ten thousand Passive Resisters, the Nonconformists whose "consciences" allow them to inflict "undenominational [i. e., Protestant Christian] religion" on the children of Atheists, Jews, Catholics and Unitarians in the public schools, while they refuse to pay taxes for children to be taught Episcopalianism in the same schools. It is to the honor of Nonconformists as fighters for their creed that ten thousand of them have been put to the inconvenience of a sale of their furniture, but it is a pitiful display of want of logic that their struggle should be for so limited and mean an ideal. The Nonconformists are the great enemies of educational progress; at the present time they bar the way to secular education, and but for their pettifogging compromise with the Episcopalians in 1870, England would now be rejoicing in an educated population whose school days had been free from religious training.

* * *

Recent revelations of the British War Department show that our army is almost incapable of standing against an enemy whom it cannot overwhelm by sheer numbers and persistency. Yet in the midst of it all the "Nonconformist conscience" is clamoring for England to go to war against Turkey in defense of "our fellow Christians" in Macedonia.

A few years ago, when the Armenian atrocities were being perpetrated and English Liberals were agitating for similar interference, I put the question to Judge Phillimore, who presided at a big public "atrocity" meeting: "Are you interested in these victims solely because they are Christians?" Judge Phillimore, who is as truthful as he is fanatical, frankly answered my question in the affirmative. It is the "Pious Editor's Creed" again.

These "Liberals" are a real danger. If they had their way England would be plunged into a war with Turkey, with sanguinary possibilities which none can foresee, or as an alternative, Turkish tyranny would give way to Russian oppression. Dire is the strait to which a people is reduced when the only choice is between Russian and Turkish rule—Siberia versus annihilation; unless you happen to be a Jew, in which event your chances of extermination are more than slightly in favor of Turkey as a place of residence.

Would we have genuine radicals sit still while Turkish fiendishness or Russian atrocities make the face of Europe a hell upon earth? Yes and no! As a government, neither Great Britain nor America can fail to do much more harm than good by active interference. If any reformer feels that he or she can afford more time or money than need be devoted to the cause of progress at home, by all means assist the rebel cause by giving personal service or money (or both, as Byron did for the Greek revolutionists) wherever these are most needed.

Even so excellent an Individualist as Auberon Herbert writes in a London daily paper (Sept. 29, 1903), eloquently pleading for official interference by the governments of England, Russia and Austria. Mr. Herbert specifically refers to Germany as certain to object, but he calculates that the forces in favor of interference would be able to overawe any forces on the other side. It is much more probable that the Christian powers would soon be cutting each other's throats, and in any event the stories authentically told of the allied armies' atrocities in China should warn humanitarians like Mr. Herbert against a remedy which looks as if it were somewhat worse than the disease.

* * *

The London Daily News has found time, in the intervals of its onslaught against clericalism, protection and the House of Lords, to demand the prosecution of the publishers of a recent novel. "Six Chapters of a Man's Life," published simultaneously in London and New York by Messrs. Walter Scott, the publishers of Havelock Ellis' "Contemporary Science Series," is the novel described by Chadband of the Daily News as "an abomination," "an infamous book," "this foulness," "rotten fruit," "this foul story of a bestial debauch," "this drama of the sewer," "this literature of lust," "a grave menace to public morals," "an outrage upon public decency." The climax of this string of abusive epithets is reached by the Daily News adding, "We regret to say it is by a woman."

What is all this pother about? Is the novel an incentive to vivisection or war? Does the author propound a gospel of rape and murder? No; the main plot of an unpretentious story is that a woman whose inherited fortune depends on her remaining unmarried decides to live with the man she loves, and to avoid suspicion she adopts masculine clothing. That is all. The details are very inartistically filled in, and there is little to recommend the work except some particularly galling attacks on orthodox cant which must have made the Daily News wince.

"I hate icoonoclasts and puritans and people like that old fool Wesley." . . . . "Fancy destroying a statue simply because it was nude! That is the spirit I dislike." . . . . "To listen to them is so irritating, when they talk of religion and moral law, when one recognizes none. It seems such nonsense. Just as if life were not hard enough and dreary enough without inventing tiresome restrictions and rules for oneself. So long as one acts honorably and steers clear of hurting any one else, what can it matter what one does?"

This is the philosophy of the heroine of the book. "If the Public Prosecutor takes no action," says the Daily News, "it is to be hoped that some private person or body will set the law in motion against this abomination." And the Daily News pretends to believe that it thinks itself progressive.

London, England. GEORGE BERNONOUGH.

Has any race of men ever fairly tried even the humblest experiment of freedom to find it fail?—Herbert Spencer.

ANALYSIS OF THE SEXUAL IMPULSE.

It is the intention of Dr. Havelock Ellis to publish a series of five volumes on studies of psychology of sex, and of these five volumes three have already appeared. In my former reviews I dwelt at some length upon the question of the great value of these works of Dr. Ellis, and how fortunate we were to have them published in the United States. The one now in hand in no particular falls behind its predecessors. In fact, upon reading it, the evidence is clear that its author in preparing it has instilled into its pages much that has been derived through all his former researches; the increased amount of data upon hand and the results of his success and experiences with the first two volumes of the series. The distinct and very great scientific value of these works has always been recognized in America, and, apart from England, throughout the civilized world. It will be remembered that through an order of a London court the first edition of the first volume was destroyed in England as being unfit to publish. In passing, I may say that this case was known as the Bedborough case, and very recently (June 23, 1903), at the home of Edwin C. Walker of New York city, I listened with unusual interest to a first-hand account of this famous affair from the lips of one who was deeply concerned in the matter. I refer to the narrative given us upon that occasion by Mr. George Bedborough of London.

The matter treated in the volume here falls under three different heads. Less than a third the space is devoted to an "Analysis of the Sexual Impulse"; half the remainder to the very important theme of "Love and Pain," and the balance to a chapter on "The Sexual Impulse in Women," followed by an appendix on "The Sexual Instinct in Savages," "The Development of the Sexual Instinct," closing with an index of authors quoted and an index of subjects. A brief preface of about two pages introduces the subject-matter of the work, in which Dr. Ellis states that in the "present volume of studies" he deals with some of the most essential problems of sexual psychology. The "Analysis of the Sexual Impulse" is fundamental. Unless we comprehend the exact process which is being worked out beneath the shifting and multiplied phenomena presented to us, we can never hope to grasp in their true relations any of the normal or abnormal manifestations of this instinct. In investigating this field he claims no originality for the conception of the process, as many works upon it, especially in Germany, have already appeared. As Dr. Ellis' reviewer, however, I may say here that he has thrown light upon this subject that it has, in so far as my knowledge carries me, never before been favored with, or received from the pen of any previous writer. Under the caption of "Love and Pain," he discusses the unhappily termed subjects of "Sadism" and "Masochism," including two groups of sexual perverts most extreme in their nature, and perhaps most widely known. "I have not considered them," he says, "from the medico-legal standpoint, because that has already been done by other writers whose works are accessible. I have preferred to show how these aberrations may be explained; how they may be linked on to normal and fundamental aspects of the sexual impulse; and, indeed, in their elementary forms, may themselves be regarded as normal. In some degree, they are present in every case, at some point of sexual development; their threads are subtly woven in and out of the whole psychological process of sex. I have made no attempt to reduce their complexity to a simplicity; that would be fallacious." His excellent chapter on "The Sexual Impulse in Women" takes up the subject in a way that it is not usually treated. Most writers, heretofore, have considered that the only differences to be sought in the sexual impulse in man and in woman are quantitative differences. Dr. Ellis has considered these differences more from the view-point of their being qualitative in their character and nature, and in this work has indicated such of them as appear to possess any significance. He further presents us with quite a number of very interesting and important cases, represented by the course of its development their sexual instincts may play all both men and women, going to show what normal sex development really is. This is a very much neglected, and, at the same time, a very little understood field in sexual psychology. The majority of investigators and authors in sexology are content to devote themselves to studies of the abnormal in sex development, and, as a consequence, are very apt to confuse the phenomena they present with much that, as a matter of fact, pertains to a perfect normal development, as varied, both in duration and degree, as the latter may be. So far as the present writer has investigated this subject, it appears to him that the borderland between what may be considered a normal sexual development on the one hand and a pathological one on the other is, in the light of our present knowledge, very vague and very broad. It may be considered much in the same light as the line of demarcation standing between sanity and insanity. Moreover, the same class of cases seem to be the ones in question, and it is to be noted here that in selecting his subjects for a study of normal sexual development, Dr. Ellis derived most of his cases from the representatives of the more highly cultured planes of society. And that is exactly what we meet with in our investigations—the most remarkable cases of insanity and of sexual development are to be found among what may be termed exalted natures—highly-cultured, well-connected, nervous, high-strung people of the best or the better classes. They, as a rule, are the unhappiest when unhappy, and the most happy when happy. In sorts of pranks with their keenly sensible and frequently morbidly refined or extremely emotional natures. We still stand in need of an enormous amount of information on this subject, accurately and scientifically culled from reliable cases in all parts of the world. Dr. Ellis has shown us the path, and future investigators will surely undertake to do this. And another vast field is still open to us, which, as far as I am aware, has received but slight attention at the hands of any one. I refer to the study of the decline of the sexual impulse in men and women. It is the reverse of the kindling of the fire, it is death or dying out, that gradually, or the reverse, comes on during the declining years of life. It has its own sequence of phenomena, and from every point of view they are quite as important as the development or the awakening of the normal sex impulse.

The study of the relationships of love and pain is one surrounded, owing to its great perplexity, with peculiar difficulties. The field involved is one of great extent, yet our author has covered it with more or less thoroughness, unraveling for us many of the curious, and sometimes the apparently confused, phenomena it has to offer. In his investigations here, he again resorts to the only safe and philosophic method of research. He digs far down into the lower form of life for his data; he carries his investigations up through the higher classes of the vertebrata, and, keeping ever before him similar facts and phenomena, he searches out at last their applicability to man's own nature, and what we meet with among our own kind. As he says, very truly, concerning these facts when correctly classified, and orderly arranged and compared, it is found that "they all have a like source and they all converge to a like result."

It would be impossible within the limits of a brief review such as is here offered, to pretend to invite attention to even a small part of the great body of facts that Dr. Ellis has marshaled, and, to a large extent, classified for us, in this admirable little volume of less than three hundred pages octavo. It furnishes food for serious thought for the laborers in a dozen different fields of scientific investigation. It strikes at the very root of questions that are questions of the utmost vital importance to us at the present day. It carries reliable information calculated to assist in the solution of the most difficult problems that the physician, the jurist, the Socialist, and the biologist are now engaged upon. Indeed, no one interested in the highly important science of sexology in its broadest acceptation cannot only not afford to dispense with this volume from the shelves of his library, but its distinguished author has rendered it necessary for him to place there, from the very nature and unusual value of the information it contains, the entire series, of which, when completed, it forms a part.—R. W. Shufeldt, M. D., in Pacific Coast Journal.

ORIGIN OF RELIGIOUS FORMULAS.

The formulas used in public worship by all established religions are founded upon ideas and customs which originated in the most ancient barbaric periods in Asia and Northern Africa. And the people of this century assume a reverend and solemn expression as they repeat the kneelings, gestures, ceremonies and prayers invented thousands of years ago on the banks of the Nile or the Ganges by the miserable, undeveloped human beings of the stone and bronze ages to manifest in some material way their conceptions of the universe, its origin and its laws—all conceptions of the rankest heathenism.—Max Nordau.

WHERE IS THE PROOF?

Some time last February Mr. Moses Harman, editor of Lucifer, Chicago, in a criticism of Colonel Ingersoll, said that the Colonel was once asked why he did not speak for "the workers, for the ill-paid toilers, the wage slaves in field, factory, mine and mill," and that he replied: "The average wage worker deserves all the ill-treatment he gets; for the most part the wage earners are willing slaves, ignorant and stupid, not worth saving."

The Truth Seeker at the time declared that it did not believe any such dialogue ever took place. Only a person unacquainted with what Colonel Ingersoll had said on the subject of labor would ask him why he did not speak for the workers, and no one not seeking for a pretext to defame him would quote the answer above given as his sentiments.

Colonel Ingersoll spoke for the workers of the world as no man ever spoke before. There is a whole gospel of labor in what he said in behalf of workers "in field, factory, mine and mill." Men conspicuous in labor circles were his intimate friends and among his sincerest mourners. The same mail that brought to his widow letters of condolence from Andrew Carnegie and Railway President Callaway brought letters from men in the humblest occupations. Unfortunates without the money to pay for a postage stamp walked miles to take a last look at his coffined face. A New York merchant dining at a western hotel on the day after Colonel Ingersoll's death, commenting on the sadness of the waiter who served him, received the reply, "I have lost my best friend." Said the merchant, "So have I." The waiter rejoined, "Mine was Colonel Ingersoll," and the merchant said, "So was mine."

Colonel Ingersoll struck at what he believed was the root of evil, religious superstition. He believed that the worst enemy of the poor man was the Church, and he attacked that institution as much for this reason as for any other. The Church both robs and deceives the ignorant poor. There was a vital truth in his assertion that Catholicism had reduced Ireland to exile, Spain to a guitar and Italy to a hand-organ.

Ingersoll never said that the average worker deserves all the ill-treatment he gets. No man of sensibility ever said it. Mr. Harman has not brought one witness to prove that Ingersoll entertained those sentiments. He quotes T. P. Quinn to the effect that Ingersoll said to him: "Quinn, the workingman may be worth living and dying for a couple of million years from now, but the dirty s—t a—s are not worth it to-day." Quinn admits that this was said in the way of advice against his own (Quinn's) rashness. But is what a man might say in an emergency to deter another from a rash act which might make him a defendant in a murder trial, to be advertised as expressing his settled convictions on any subject upon which the remark might have a bearing?

We do not believe and probably never shall believe that Ingersoll spoke as quoted by Mr. Quinn. He was not in favor of martyrdom, which he declared proved only the sincerity of the martyr, and not the righteousness of the cause for which he suffered. Moreover, Mr. Quinn knows, and Mr. Quinn will testify, that the sentiments conveyed in the words are belied not only by everything that Ingersoll said, not only by his utterances, but by his acts in the very case that is alleged to have called them out. And Mr. Harman knows and will admit that all the testimony he has been able to elicit from men associated in the labor cause is destructive of his fundamental proposition that Ingersoll held that "the average wage worker deserves all the ill-treatment he gets." He has not published a line and cannot get the testimony of any truthful person to the extent of a line that Ingersoll ever spoke or wrote those words. Mr. Harman has devoted column after column, page after page, of his paper to inconsequent digressions about hero worship, the meaning of Freethought, and the incompetence of the editor of the Truth Seeker, but he has given us nothing outside the product of his own mind tending to demonstrate that Colonel Ingersoll not only ignored the wrongs of the poor, but held them to be deserving of the hardness of their lot. Mr. Harman can have but one grievance against us, and it is this, that we have refused to accept his unsupported assertion that Ingersoll said, "The average wage worker deserves all the ill-treatment he gets."

Mr. Harman censures us for not producing all that he has written with a fancied relation to the subject. We would rather bear his censure than invoke that of our readers for inflicting upon them so much that is irrelevant to the subject, or to any other subject in which they are interested. If he will advance proof of the correctness of his original charge concerning the enmity of Ingersoll toward "the workers, the ill-paid toilers, the wage slaves in field, factory, mine, and mill," we will reprint it. We think we have done him a kindness, rather than otherwise, in not publishing all the letters of his friends which place him in the wrong.—Truth Seeker, New York, Sept. 12, 1903.

SHE IS MINE!

"She is mine. * * * I own her, body and soul." It is the same old story of masculine sex-tyranny which has been repeating itself over and over again through all the ages; and if the author of "The One Woman" thinks he can pass the character of Frank Gordon (Lucifer, Aug. 20 and Sept. 3) as a fair specimen of the "opium fruit" borne so soon on the "Socialist poppy plant," he must question very seriously either the ability of the Church to teach or its adherents to learn; for the words quoted from Gordon at the head of this article are the very essence of what the Church, on the whole, has been teaching all along. In Deuteronomy xxi., 10-15, we find women were taken as wives according to the desire of the man and discarded in like manner. So we find the sex relation has varied "according to the feelings and wants of individuals," by Bible authority; of course, masculine individuals are meant.

Did not the sex relations vary according to the "feelings and wants" of Solomon to the extent of 700 wives and 300 concubines? And was not Solomon one of "the anointed of God," instead of being an Atheist? Was he not a ruler of a kingdom, rather than a Socialist? Did not David's sex relations vary according to his feelings and wants when he had Bathsheba brought to his presence, and afterwards plotted the death of Uriah, Bathsheba's husband, when he found she was with child as a result of King David's sex feelings and wants? Was not this same David "the beloved of God," "the sweet psalmist of Israel"? Was he not a king instead of a Socialist?

Was it not through this same double-dealing in sex relations that a direct ancestor of Christ was born? Were any of the noted characters referred to by Mr. Dixon, Caesar, Anthony, Alexander, Frederick the Great, Conde or Parnell, Socialists? Not one! Mr. Dixon himself acknowledges the play has been going on "now and then for the past four thousand years." Is it fair, just, manly, is it the act of a Christian, to attribute to a modern movement what the author himself acknowledges has been going on four thousand years?

In the face of this old phase of the question, I can see only two possible purposes in his story—either to advocate the same old hypocrisy, to have the men continue "to tell a tiny little polite lie," while he still holds the woman to the strictest monogamy, or to convince woman of her inferiority by classing her with "savages and children, inferior and immature forms of evolution." It is a wonder the race has reached so high a plane as it has when the long night of woman's slavery is considered, and I verily believe what is troubling the conscience of the Church most is that it sees in Socialism a possible dawn of woman's freedom.

As it will be to church women Mr. Dixon's book will most strongly appeal, it is well enough for him to know even church women are emerging from that period when it was said of woman—

"A woman, a dog, a walnut tree,
The more you beat 'em the better they be."

BETTIE M. ROBERTS.

THE MATHEMATICS OF IT.

She had fifteen million dollars
Placed in bonds and shares and rents;
He had fifteen million dollars,
So they merged their sentiments.
Now they've raised a son who's valued
At exactly thirty cents.

—New York Commercial Advertiser.

We all dread a bodily paralysis, and make use of every contrivance to avoid it, but none of us are troubled about a paralysis of the mind.—Epictetus.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 509 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 West 143d street, New York.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Nearly five hundred of Lucifer's subscribers, many of them among the very best of its friends, will not receive this issue of Lucifer, nor any other until their subscriptions are paid in advance. This is not because we are not willing to trust them, but because the postal authorities say we shall not. We may give credit for or give away anything which we may happen to possess, from a toothpick to a farm, but we cannot give credit for or give away copies of Lucifer. What do you think of that?

L. H.

ORGANIZED FREETHOUGHT ON TRIAL.

On another page will be found a clipping from the editorial pages of the Truth Seeker (New York), Sept. 12, entitled "Where Is the Proof?" which seems intended as a reply to what I said about "Mirrors, Old and New," in our issue of Sept. 3, current volume.

R. W. Emerson said, "A simple, manly character need never make an apology."

While I have no apology to make for inserting in Lucifer the aforesaid editorial, I think it best to make a little explanation for the benefit mainly of new readers of Lucifer, who have not seen the discussion upon the life and work of Robert G. Ingersoll.

Room is given for this article, first, because I am interested in what the man says who does not agree with me, more, even, than in what is said by one who does agree with me; and, judging others by myself, I think the readers of Lucifer are likewise interested in hearing what can be said on the other side of a question that to me seems very important, very essential to the success and usefulness of the American Freethought movement, namely, the place that should be assigned to the world-famous agnostic orator and champion of independent thinking, Robert G. Ingersoll.

It will be asked, perhaps, "Why not economize Lucifer's very limited space, for better use, by epitomizing or summarizing what the editor of the Truth Seeker says, then dispose of him in a few brief paragraphs, instead of giving column after column to what most people will consider an endless and fruitless personal controversy?"

To this plausible objection I answer: This is not a personal controversy. The personal element therein is its smallest part. Presumably not a great many people are specially interested in what the man Eugene Macdonald's opinion of Ingersoll may be, but all Freethinkers are, or should be, much interested in what organized Freethought stands for. It is not simply the man Macdonald to whom I am giving space in Lucifer, but the accredited representative and head official of the oldest and best-known of the Freethought organizations in America, also the editor of what is claimed to be the largest Freethought paper in the world.

The Truth Seeker does not claim to be an individualistic journal—not one in which each writer speaks for himself alone. "We, the editor," speaks for all. When it is said, "The Truth Seeker says so and so," it means that Eugene Macdonald says so and so, and therefore when I give space in Lucifer to the editor of the Truth Seeker I am giving space to the condensed wisdom of the organization known as the National Secular Union and Freethought Federation, and also am giving a hearing to the patrons of the largest Freethought journal in the world.

Moreover, as I see it, if I should summarize or epitomize the Truth Seeker's editorial I would lay myself open to the inference, the suspicion, that I do not dare to let the said editor speak for himself in Lucifer—that the only way in which I can effectually answer is by first fixing him up in a way to suit myself, then "make the feathers fly!"

I know full well that I have abundant precedent for so doing. I know that nearly all the political and religious organs are conducted on that plan, the plan of building up "a man of straw" and then showing their readers how easy it is to demolish your and their enemy.

In the second place, I insert the Truth Seeker editorial because I want to learn, and want our readers to have a chance to learn, all that can be known in regard to Robert Ingersoll. I want to give a fair hearing to every one who had better opportunities of knowing the man as he was than I myself had. Am glad to have fresh evidence that Ingersoll had made many personal friends among the poor as well as the rich. Much that Macdonald says in this editorial corroborates and indorses the opinion I had formed of the worth and work of this truly great man. "Ingersoll struck at what he believed was the root of evil, religious superstition." This is in accord with what I have always maintained. I have always excused him for not entering more fully into the economic, industrial and marital reforms because to do so might have seriously interfered with what he regarded as his life-work. In 1886 Ingersoll said to T. P. Quinn and a few others (see page 133 of this volume of Lucifer, No. 968):

"My life-work is to destroy the power of the priests, and if I can drive a dagger to the heart of that old whore, the Church, I'll have made my contribution to the liberties of men."

This explains why, in the language of Mr. Quinn, Ingersoll "studiously avoided mixing up in the economic struggle." It also explains why he said, at Central Music Hall, Chicago: "I know the remedy for this general distress, but I won't tell you—I don't propose to be a martyr."

Instead of "seeking for a pretext to defame Ingersoll," I have gladly inserted in Lucifer nearly everything I have ever read in his favor as friend of the workingman. But we must be just as well as generous. "We must live in the truth." The worst enemy, perhaps, to the name and fame of any man is an over-zealous friend. When Macdonald says, "Ingersoll spoke for the workers of the world as no man ever spoke before," he puts himself on a level with the man-worshipers of the East, who said of the Nazarene, "He spake as never man spake."

A much better friend—because a discriminating friend—of the memory of Ingersoll, Clarence Darrow, than whom no one knows better of what he speaks, says in part (see Lucifer, No. 975):

"For a long time I have thought that many of Ingersoll's devoted disciples never seemed to be able to form a correct judgment of his work. No man of his generation did more for the cause of religious freedom and the general principles of justice and liberty, but when it came to the question of economic or political justice Ingersoll fell very short. Of course, in discussing this question, one must assume a certain point of view. From the standpoint of the ultra-conservative, this charge cannot be made, but from the standpoint of the liberal and progressive people of the world, who are working for greater justice and opportunity to the poor, certainly Ingersoll's work and attitude were very discouraging."

Then, after giving what seems to me a judicially fair and very clear statement of the inconsistencies and self-contradictions of Ingersoll's public record, Mr. Darrow closes in these words:

"Colonel Ingersoll's writings are filled with brilliant pleas for justice for the common people, for the working man, but they are such pleas as have ever been made by all kinds of people, regardless of their real conviction or any sentiments that they actually have. The fact remains that through all his life, in whatever political situation, he did give his powers and his influence to the Republican party; that, however often they changed their policy, or however different from any opinion that he held in the absence of political compaigns, he could still ever be relied upon to fill engagements and make speeches for the support of his party. Many admirers of Ingersoll have always felt sorrow and humiliation that a man of his brilliancy and breadth of view did not take up the pressing questions that were so important during the later quarter of his life and could not emancipate himself from a political party which the vast majority of progressive people believe to be the foe of liberal and humane ideas."

"Ingersoll never said that the average worker deserves all the ill-treatment he gets," says Macdonald. Whether these are Ingersoll's words or not I certainly cannot say. I did not presume to quote exact words. I said, "in substance," not in words, and am quite willing to stand by my record when properly quoted. I stated what I fully believed at the time to be the truth, and am quite willing to leave the question as to whether the letters of my friends have "placed me in the wrong" or not to disinterested judges.

In addition to what I have quoted from Darrow and to what Macdonald himself has quoted from Quinn—whose reputation for veracity is quite as good, I feel sure, as that of his accuser—I will venture here to repeat part of the testimony of George A. Schilling, another personal friend and admirer of Ingersoll:

"But while the foregoing shows that Mr. Ingersoll's conduct in relation to the executed and imprisoned Anarchists should satisfy the most fastidious radical, he never claimed to be made up of the metal that forms the martyr. The first time I met him at the Grand Pacific he said to me: 'Schilling, I wouldn't give my life or the life of my wife or the life of either of my children to make an Eden of this d— world.' When I remonstrated and reminded him of the many blessings we of this age enjoy because of the sacrifices that the heroic souls of the past had made, he said: 'Oh, Schilling, don't for a moment think that I don't fully appreciate all they did, but I insist that this ungrateful world isn't worth it. The wonder to me is that this earth didn't shrivel into a crisp when they killed poor Bruno.'"

Please remember the point in dispute. I did not claim that Ingersoll said, in words, that the "workers were not worth saving." I gave what I believed to be the substance of many utterances similar to the above. But if Ingersoll never uttered words like these—so persistently repeated by Macdonald against me—he was different from many agnostic Freethinkers I have heard talk in regard to the workers. Often and often I have heard these men say, in substance, that not only the workers but all of us "get what we deserve." If we get hard treatment it is because we "deserve nothing better."

* * *

Another point should never be lost sight of when considering the weight of Macdonald's argument, and that is the animus or evident object of the article in the February Lucifer, from which he misquotes a few lines. The heading of that article was "Marriage the Church's Stronghold," nearly half of which article consisted of quotations from Ingersoll's Lecture, "What Is Religion?"—the whole trend and purpose of which quotations and comments being commendatory and eulogistic of Ingersoll in his later and riper years. To show how little of truth there is in the editorial entitled, "Where Is the Proof?" I purpose to print in next Lucifer the entire article from which Macdonald misquotes a few lines, and upon which he founds his oft-repeated charges against me.

As to my "censuring" the Truth Seeker for not printing all that I have written on the subject of what Freethought means, I simply deny the charge and challenge the proof. I asked that the letters of Quinn, Schilling and Darrow be printed in the Truth Seeker and the Freethought Magazine, and I certainly did expect that, for fairness and reciprocity's sake, the Truth Seeker editor would give me as much space as I had given to him. If, however, he felt that his readers did not want fair play; if he knew that they were not interested in a calmly dispassionate discussion of the basic principles of Freethought, then he was wise, commercially wise, in adopting the policy of the Tory journals, the political and religious organs already referred to, namely, to allow nothing to appear in their columns from other journals until sifted through the brains of their own editorial corps.

* * *

This article is long, but certainly none too long considering the importance of the subject. If Freethought has ceased to be a forward movement; if its recognized leaders stand for reaction, for repression, for the Tory methods of church-state bigotry and intolerance, then, surely it is time we all should know it.

THE UNPRINTABLE WORDS.

Among all the discouraging signs of the times, however, I gladly note, in the last pronunciamento of the head of the National Secular Union, one hopeful change. He now prints in the Truth Seeker the epithet which for a number of issues he called "unprintable," and which he persistently accused me of asking him to print, calling it a "pile of filth," etc. Now he prints this pile of filth just as Free Society and Lucifer printed it—not in full, but by initials and dashes. Thus he apparently abandons the Comstockian code of statute morals which recognizes some words as too "vile" to be printed, published or mailed. If this change of front should be permanent, the friends of logical Freethought have reason to congratulate the editor of the Truth Seeker and president of the National Secular Union, etc., on his conversion to the doctrine that all words are alike good, and that there is no "obscenity" except in the mind of him or her who perceives it as such, and that hence there can be no obscenity outside of the unclean mind.

For this week I close with two brief axiomatic sentences, which our readers will please take for what they are worth:

Organization has ever been the death of progress.

The greatest calamity that can befall any forward movement is the canonization or deification of its leaders.

M. HARMAN.

* * *

Unexpectedly I have been detained at Topeka. Mail can still be sent to me at Las Vegas, N. M., from which point it will be forwarded to me, if present calculations fail. M. H.

IT IS ALMOST SETTLED.

The social problem is almost a thing of the past. On Oct. 4, Cardinal Gibbons, after a careful diagnosis, prescribed an infallible specific and it now requires only the sanction of Teddy the Wise to render divorces in the United States as scarce as cases of yellow fever in Havana—maybe.

Seriously, the Cardinal's ideas would be ridiculous if they were not so idiotic. He thinks that the nation needs law, several large volumes bound in regulation sheep, on the subject. Of course, all marital troubles spring from the lack of legal statutes forbidding them and prescribing proper penalties in case they do occur. Lack of love, lack of harmony, ignorance of the laws of sex nature, physical or mental unfitness for the conjugal relation, and many other things need not be considered if the proper legislation can be secured. Law is his serum, but to be effectual it must be followed by the tonic of religious training.

I wonder how much religious training it took to enable the Cardinal to understand the problems of algebra or the theorems of geometry. Did his religious training assist him any in grasping the mysteries of sepals and petals, of calyx and corolla, of leaf, fruit and flower? I think not, and neither will it help any in the solution of the divorce problem.

What is wanted is a thorough education on all sex matters, and an awakening from the hypnotism induced by unnumbered centuries of priestcraft and conventionality. If the civilized world could lose at least half its alleged modesty and gain good, hard common sense in its stead, it would be immeasurably better off than it is now.

As long as men and women are utterly ignorant of the laws of sex, as long as each knows nothing of what the soul of the other demands for its happiness, there will be very little happiness in the association of the sexes no matter what plan is followed.

I wish every woman and every man who reads this would write out just what she or he requires from the opposite sex for happiness. I mean treatment, manners, language, habits, etc. How does each want the other to express their love? What treatment would each require from the other to shut out all thoughts of divorce if they are legally married? Your names need not be signed to the articles when published, but give the world your ideas through Lucifer, and some benefit may be derived.

It would be just as sensible to attempt to stop the ravages of cyclones and earthquakes by legal enactment or religious dogma as to attempt the solution of the divorce problem in that way, Cardinal Gibbons to the contrary notwithstanding.

JOHN WISE.

Absolution is a most happy invention, well calculated to reassure certain timorous rogues who might be inclined to feel remorse for their shortcomings did not the Mother Church thus take the trouble to set them entirely at their ease on that score. —Voltaire.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Otto Wettstein, Rochelle, Ill.: Please extend number on my subscription to No. 1,100. No. 990 is full of good things and Lucifer emphatically deserves success.

H. A., Somerset, Ind.: Find enclosed $1, which place to my credit on Lucifer. Sometimes I neglect paying for Lucifer just on time, but it is never too late to do good.

Wanted—A free woman to help do housework and bake, at wages by the week or share of the profits in baking. Henry C. Hanson, 165 North Ohio street, Aurora, Ill.

F. M. F., Kansas City, Mo.: I am interested in progressive thinking along all lines, and believe I will be interested in your paper. Inclosed find 25 cents, for which please send me "The Prodigal Daughter" and Lucifer for thirteen weeks.

David McKinney, Antlers, I. T.: Kindly state in Lucifer, for the benefit of those who have written to me in regard to settlement in the Indian Territory, that all who have not received replies shall have them soon. Illness has prevented prompt replies.

L. K., Michigan: As I am very much interested in Lucifer's principles I inclose $1 for one year's subscription. It is a sad commentary on the intelligence of this age that such a paper has not a larger circulation. I hope that you may live long to publish it.

St. Louis readers of Lucifer who are willing to assist in establishing some kind of an information bureau for the convenience of all liberals and radicals who will visit the World's Fair are requested to correspond with Carl Nold, 1638 Kansas avenue, East St. Louis, Ill.

Belle Gager, New York: I candidly state that Lucifer is the brightest and most helpful paper in print. I read it and then send it to some one, and send out my best efforts for its success. Long may it wave. Inclosed you will find some addresses; they may reach the brains and pockets of some one.

Walter Breen, Omaha, Neb.: In all matters of the house the woman is the dominant partner, and no gentleman would be guilty of bringing any one to his house who was not agreeable to his wife. That fact being so, it does not obligate him to tell his wife that he thinks her action illiberal and narrow; on the contrary, the best plan is to realize that liberal ideas are at best a slow growth with women in general, and if she will appreciate the Truth Seeker or Freethought Magazine the husband of such a woman should be glad that she is traveling a part of the road with him, and not expect too much. Outside of the home let him meet and enjoy the society of any and all radicals that he pleases, and in this way he cannot incur the displeasure of any wife. Let social radicals realize that there is little to be gained by "rushing" evolution, and that a change at the heart is the best and surest place to change the way of thinking of both men and women. Women are not all orthodox, and if you respect her feelings and opinions, no matter what they are, the right-minded woman will respect in time the ideas of a kind and reasonable husband on matters she does not agree with.

Lillie White, Lake Charles, La.: Among the many things for which we owe thanks to Lucifer, the page called "Various Voices" is not the least. It is the home corner, where we "take our knitting" and drop in for a social chat and friendly gossip about ourselves and each other. We were glad to hear a friendly word from Mr. Jameson. Mr. White's health has not improved in the "Sunny South." He has been an invalid for over three years, not able to do a day's work, and for about eight months has been quite helpless. He has not been outside the house in that time, and is just able to get from his bed to his chair. For many weeks he was not able to lie down. He suffers a good deal, but is patient and hopeful and confident he will get well some time. I came here from Chicago three years ago, and with a sick man and a sick boy, no money and in a strange land, the outlook was not bright. But we have rubbed along some way, and since I bethought me to hunt up my spelling-book, brush up my three R's and teach the same to the rising generation of swamp cadiants, we have managed to keep off starvation. My boy is a man now, and we work together first rate. I have in mind a lot to write anent the subject of breeding babies, but don't get time, so you are saved. I also want to write to some of the various founders (or would-be founders) of co-operative homes. Some time I should like to join one.

Edward Stern, 4244 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.: A couple of months ago there was published an article full of contemptible personalities, reflecting upon my wife and self. I made reply, which has thus far failed to see light, which reply is free from contemptible personalities.

[It is not an unusual thing for the writer of a rejected article to feel aggrieved. Naturally he thinks it well worth publication, or he would not write it. But the editor could not, if he would, print all the communications received. I do not agree with Mr. Stern that his article was free from personalities, but as the statement to which he refers was permitted to be made in No. 984, I will give space to his defense, which is as follows:

"The 'monogamic woman brandishing a sharp stick' is rather far-fetched. Naturally I am monogamic, likewise my wife, and doubtless our children will inherit the same desirable tendency. Viewing us phrenologically, Alfred Russell Wallace would explain that my wife and self have the faculty of conjugality normally developed, hence we could not be driven into sexual commerce with others. The 'sharp stick' is therefore not required to restrain that which would be a repulsive act. A good phrenologist would probably mark the conjugality faculty of many of Lucifer's freedom-loving contributors. 'Cultivate or you will tend to fall into promiscuous and bestial sexual commerce with different men or women.'"

Perhaps the "freedom-loving contributors" of Lucifer will not be able to agree with Mr. Stern that his article is free from "contemptible personalities." They will remember, it is to be hoped, however, that such an assertion cannot make them be the degenerates he says they are, so can do them no harm. It is unfortunate that Mr. Stern did not take a similar view of Mr. Wight's remarks. Lucifer's space can be put to better use, I trust, than the discussion of the personal relations of Mr. Stern or any other contributor.

Mr. Stern also wishes to say that he will send Mr. Fink's work on "Primitive Love and Love Stories," which was referred to by Myra Pepper a few weeks ago, to any reader of Lucifer who will send him $1.25. The work is encyclopedic in character, he says, and is listed by the publishers, Charles Scribner's Sons, at $2. It will, he believes, put to rout Mr. Kerr and others who do not agree with him.—L. H.]

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in houses and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

Special offer: This valuable work sent free on receipt of 35 cents for a fifteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light Bearer. Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Among the Moki Indians of Arizona the men weave dresses and the women build houses. Little children fearlessly handle live rattle-snakes. Religious rites antedate Columbus' time. These and other interesting facts about our brothers to red may be found in a profusely illustrated book of 224 pages, "Indians of the South-West," written by Geo. A. Dorsey, Curator of Anthropology, Field Columbian Museum, and published by the Santa Fe. If interested in Indians and their handicraft, buy a copy; only costs 50 cents; easily worth a dollar. Write to-day to W. J. Black, G. P. A., T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 77 Jackson Blvd., Chicago, and enclose coin or stamps.

THE NEW LIFE.

Ida M. Brooks, editor. A monthly periodical devoted to a finer and nobler realization of life; 75 cents a year, 3 months for 25 cents; sample copy free. If you are tired of the old life, with its pain, heartache and emptiness, send The New Life, and you will come into and live the new life, which is joy, peace and bountiful supply of all good and desirable things. Address THE NEW LIFE PUB. CO., Box 196, Gredno, Idaho.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We can not sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 30 cents each, two for 50 cents. Address Edwin C. Walker, 246 West 145th street, New York, N. Y.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 62, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

FREE LITERATURE.

Your name will be sent to a great number of the finest papers published for sample copies if you send 10 cents to INTERMOUNTAIN SUB. AGENCY, Box 196, Gredno, Idaho.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

SOCIALIST.

ECONOMICS OF SOCIALISM. Cloth, $1.25.

THE ADVENTURES OF JOHN M'CUE. By Socialist. 10c.

THE CLERICAL CAPITALIST. By the Rev. Father McGrady. 5c.

NOW AND THEN. A play in two acts. By Frederick Krafft. 10c.

BETWEEN CAESAR AND JESUS. By George D. Herron. Cloth, 75c.

THE PROLETARIAT. Adapted from the German of Karl Kautsky. 5c.

THE CAPITALIST CLASS. Adapted from the German of Karl Kautsky. 5c.

FERDINAND LASSALLE AS A SOCIAL REFORMER. By E. Bernstein. $1.

THE COMMUNIST MANIFESTO. By Karl Marx and Frederick Engels. 10c.

THE ATTITUDE OF THE SOCIALISTS TOWARD TRADE UNIONS. S. I. Stone. 5c.

FRENCH AND GERMAN SOCIALISM IN MODERN TIMES. By Richard T. Ely. Cloth, 50c.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF SOCIALISM FROM UTOPIA TO SCIENCE. By Frederick Engels. 5c.

A DEBATE ON THE TACTICS OF THE S. T. AND L. A. TOWARD TRADE UNIONS. Between Daniel De Leon and Job Harriman. 5c.

RAILROADING IN THE UNITED STATES. The James Boys; also, As to Law and Order; The Eminent Gentleman and the Very Eminent Gentleman; The Dull Brakeman and His Bright Landers. By Jim Hanford. "To the Not Yet Dead." 5c.

SHROUDS WITH POCKETS. A life sketch. By Henry H. Allen. A touching story, told in simple and yet striking language, and yet more than a story. Vivid flashes of light are thrown on the unspeakable horrors of capitalism. Illustrated with many portraits of Socialists and other reformers. 25c.

ANARCHIST.

NO TREASON.—No. II. By Lysander Spooner. 16 pages. 5c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A study of the industrial type. Dyer D. Lum. 10c.

WHAT IS ANARCHISM? An explanation by Stephen T. Byington. Five copies for 5c, 10 for 10c, 100 for 25c.

NO TREASON.—No. VI. Showing that the Constitution is of no authority. By Lysander Spooner. 19 pages. 5c.

A POLITICIAN IN SIGHT OF HAVEN. Being a protest against government of man by man. By Auberon Herbert. 10c.

CITIZENS' MONEY. A critical analysis in the light of Free Trade in Banking. By Alfred B. Westrup. Only a few left; reduced to 5c.

THE UNCONSTITUTIONALITY OF THE LAWS OF CONGRESS PROHIBITING PRIVATE MAILS. By Lysander Spooner. 24 pages. 10c.

THE BALLOT. By William Walstein Gordak. A short poem illustrating the absurdity of majority rule. An excellent leaflet for propogandaism. 100 copies, 25c.

FREE POLITICAL INSTITUTIONS: Their Nature, Essence and Maintenance. An abridgement and rearrangement of Lysander Spooner's "Trial by Jury." Edited by Victor Yarros. 67 pages. 25c.

AN ESSAY ON THE DUTY OF CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE. By Henry D. Thoreau. A reprint of the classic essay on the supremacy of the individual conscience. Antique paper; artistic covers, dark green on olivine. 10c.

THE ATTITUDE OF ANARCHISM TOWARD INDUSTRIAL COMBINATIONS. By Benj. R. Tucker. An address delivered in Central Music Hall, Chicago, on Sept. 14, 1889, before the Conference on Trusts held under the auspices of the Civic Federation. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. One of the most eloquent pleas for liberty ever written. Nature's "Nay to Heaven" and "Rights of Man" consolidated and improved. It stirs the pulse like a trumpet call. By Michael Bakounine. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 82 pages. 15c.

THE ANARCHISTS: A Picture of Civilization at the Close of the Nineteenth Century. A poet's prose contribution to the literature of egoistic Anarchism. The author traces his own mental development in London amid the exciting events of 1887—the manifestations of the unemployed, the clashing of Trafalgar square and the executions at Chicago. The antagonism between Commonweal and Anarchism sharply brought out. By John Henry Mackay. Translated from the German by George Shumm. 215 pages, with portrait of the author. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

BURIED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of Freethought and Free Love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

THE SOCIAL QUESTION. A discussion between Juliet H. Severance, M. D., and David Jones. 35 cents.

SORNING BETTER BABIES. Though regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yetzirah Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winse). 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marlette), Reminiscences of Hoffin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler's), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is! Will the Coming Women Marry? 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (S. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Overman: His (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

MODERN PARADISE. The Model Home. Solution of the Social Problem. Future Greatness of Humanity. Proposed Experiment in Social Science. An Earthly Eden and How to Attain It. A Unique Power Plant. Wonderful System of Education. Elegantly illustrated. Prof. Henry Olerich. 25c.

KARESZA, Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. S. E. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (R. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

WOMAN AND HER RELATION TO THE CHURCH OR CANON LAW FOR WOMEN. Harriet M. Chess. A succinct statement of the position to which women were doomed by the Church Fathers and authorities. Every woman should possess a copy. 10c.

THE CURSE OF MATERNITY. From the French of Henry Fevre. Together with How to Escape the Curse (Jonathan Mayo Crane), Woman's "Duty" to Bear Children (E. C. Walker), True and False Morality (O. L. James), Love's Law (William Francis Barnard). 25 cents.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW! A Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 41 large pages. 10c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE, as viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 15c to 10c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock, Behind the Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Fowell and His Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

THE ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY AND THE STATE. Frederick Engels. Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans. 213 pages; bound in cloth. 60c. Postage, 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. One of the best short works on the subject. Daintily printed. A charming little gift book. "Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it." 25 cents.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided, and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.50.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES. Edwin C. Walker. Contents—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only"; Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen"; What Are the Effects of Rents and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics as Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" The Tenements; Action for Advanced Women. With appendix: The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of it all. 25c.

THE MAJESTY OF SEX. Nancy McKay Gordon. This is the book written from the standpoint of experience. Therefore, it will satisfy in a vital way the cry of the hungry soul. It is practical and charitable; personal and real; individual and ideal. It instructs how the creative forces of the body may be transmuted, transformed and directed. It teaches of celestial love on earth now. It shows how the truly wedded pair may make all things subservient to their needs. It goes right to the heart of the subject, its universality and right use. It does not deal in the theory of any other writer, but is written in the unique style of the author. Send for this book and learn the secret of the gods. They move with divine freedom—superconsciously. Beautifully bound; initial letter beginning each paragraph; artistic from every point of view. $2.

THE HOME CYCLOPEDIA OF MEDICAL, SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE. Contains a full, plain and easy-reading treatise on "Health and Disease, with Recipes"; all the average reader can profitably learn of personal hygiene and common diseases (including special, separate chapters for men and women); all right up to date, and fully illustrated with hundreds of photo-engravings and chromo-lithographs. Contains also the already popular "Plain Home Talk" about the relations of the sexes and social customs in all ages and all countries, with "original and startling" suggestions for social reformers; newly revised, enlarged and well illustrated. All is "heart to heart" plain home talk from a clear-thinking, plain-speaking, liberal-minded medical author of over forty years' experience. Nearly 1,000 of the former books sold. A rousing book for curious people, and a sensible book for every one. Answers 1,000 delicate questions one would like to ask one's regular physician and yet doesn't want to. 1,249 pages; 400 illustrations (80 in colors); 350 recipes. Cloth bound, $5.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work. Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up to date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 15 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. The book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has 800 pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid, to any address, for $2.75.

THE WHOLESOME WOMAN. J. H. Greer, M. D. The latest and most complete work of its kind. Four books in one volume. Part I—SEX AND LIFE: The Principle of Life; The Dominant Power of Life; The Temple of the Soul; The Unfolding of Womanhood; The Fulfillment of the Law; The Fruits of Fulfillment; Home and Home-Making. Part II—TOKOLOGY: The Organs of Generation; Menstruation; The Marriage Relation; Conception and Prenatal Culture; Child Birth; The Hygiene of Infancy; Development from Birth to Puberty; Disorders of Infancy and Childhood; Afflictions Peculiar to Women; What Determines the Sex of Offspring. Part III.—CHILD-CULTURE: The Foundation of Moral Uprightness; The Kindergarten (with diagrams); Manual Training. Part IV.—HEALTH AND HYGIENE: Long Life Not a Mental

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola). 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. H. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman; What Is She? What Will She Be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 10c.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE. Edward Carpenter. This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author: The Sex Passion; Man, the Ungrown; Woman, the Serf; Woman in Freedom; Marriage, a Retrospect; Marriage, a Forecast; The Free Society; Some Remarks on the Early Star and Sex Worships. Notes on the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population. The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. H. C. Walker. 10c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Durfing. 10c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A. and Cecile Chavannes. 50c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socialand. Albert Chavannes. 15c.

MONEY, BANKS, PANICS AND PROSPERITY. By W. H. Clagett. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

RELIGIOUS, POLITICAL AND SOCIAL FREEDOM. A lecture by Juliet H. Severance, M. D. 10c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. G. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

SOCIALISTIC, COMMUNISTIC, MUTUALISTIC AND FINANCIAL FRAGMENTS. By William B. Greene. $1.25.

AGE OF REASON; An Investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel portrait. 50c.

THE TEMPERANCE FOLLY; or, Who's the Worst? Lois Waisbrooker. Dedicated to the wrecks and so-called sinners of a false civilization. 10c.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 405 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward Fitzgerald's Interpretation; with original introduction; latest version. Special cover. Paper, 25c.

ISOLA; or, The Disinherited. A drama in six acts. Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1. Postage, 7c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 20c to 10c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the Indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemons and David Overmeyer. 20c.

THE STORY OF IJAIN; or, The Evolution of a Mind. Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Stuart Rose), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. $1. Postage, 8c.

SONGS OF A CHILD, AND OTHER POEMS. By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. $1.50. Postage, 12c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Ilind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 81 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 426 pages. 50c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper. 15c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 3, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Life Tales of Dying Heroes." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 37 Freethinkers, including Brunn, Buckle, Byron, Carlile, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltaey and Voltaire. 25c.

VACCINATION A BLUNDER IN POISONS. C. F. Nichols. "Vaccination will undoubtedly rank as the greatest and most pernicious failure of the century; this conclusion is no longer a matter of opinion, but of science," said Alfred Russell Wallace, and in this booklet the facts are arrayed in support of this assertion. 25c.

VACCINATION A CRIME. With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions. Felix L. Oswald, M. D. "Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads smallpox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents." With Illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 106 pages. 50c.

991.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date. Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are inclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

Your subscription is paid to No. ..... If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 475 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

A RED HEART IN A WHITE WORLD. A suggestive manual of Free Society; containing a method and a hope. By L. William Lloyd. Handsome illuminated paper cover in white, red and green; 50 pages. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Spunk, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote, Jun. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition, $5; five volumes, plainer binding, $3.75; all in one volume, $2.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman March 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

A CUTLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD! An Outline of Practical Co-Operative Individualism. By Henry Olerich. Regarded by many persons as a more interesting and consistent economic reform novel than Bellamy's "Looking Backward." Bound in red silk with gold title. Nearly 400 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, $1.

HISTORY OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. By C. L. James. An excellent history of the French Revolution, well written by one thoroughly familiar with his subject. Special care has been exercised to give the facts as they are, the author not having made himself the champion of any party. Neatly printed from large type on good book paper, with a substantial binding. 342 pages, with an index and bibliographical epitome. Cloth, $1.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. John H. Kelso. Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff or Protection; War Punishments; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Do. 63 pages. Cloth binding, somewhat damaged, and reduced from $1.50 to 50 cents.

HILDA'S HOME; A Story of Woman's Emancipation. Rosa Graul. With Macaulay, Rosa Graul would say, "The cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty." Hence she has no fears that under Freedom the Home and the Family would cease to exist, or that woman will be less loving and lovable, or that man will be less manly and honorable. On the contrary, she maintains that only in the soil and atmosphere of freedom is it possible for true womanhood and manhood to live and flourish. 458 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, he logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspirational treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most glowing theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and to overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, ruleless, with portrait of the author. In two editions, de luxe, and plain. Prices, $1.25 and $1.00.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old asceticism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.'" The new Hedonism says: "Be happy and you will be virtuous." In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from ecclesiastical superstitions have they begun to perceive that the ancient and impure things are ordure and anathema; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproducing function." Paper covers; 32 large pages. Twelve copies, 50c; single copy, 5c.

THE BIBLE. John E. Remsburg. Contains eleven chapters on the authenticity of the Bible, based on the best authorities of the time; thirteen on the credibility of the Bible, ten on the morality of the Bible, and an appendix in which Mr. Remsburg sets forth unanswerable arguments against the divine origin and in favor of the human origin of the Bible. Twenty-six pages of index enable the reader to instantly refer to any authority quoted or argument used. Mr. Remsburg is one of the most careful, accurate and painstaking writers, and his book is a compendium of the latest scholarship and rationalistic thought on the subject. The late Colonel Ingersoll began the famous lecture on the Bible by saying: "Some one ought to find the truth about the Bible." This Mr. Remsburg has done—done it fully, and done it well. Large type, 500 pages. Cloth, $1.25.

THE SLAVERY OF OUR TIMES. Count Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of the gifted author, and introduction by the translator, Aylmer Maude. Chapter titles: I. Gods Porters Who Work Thirty-Seven Hours. II. Society's Subservience While Men Perish. III. Justification of the Existing Position of Servants. IV. The Assertion of Economic Science that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System. V. Why Learned Economists Assert What Is False. VI. Bankruptcy of the Socialist Ideal. VII. Culture or Freedom? VIII. Slavery Hardens us. IX. What Is Slavery? X. Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property. XI. Laws the Cause of Slavery. XII. The Source of Legislation is Organized Violence. XIII. What Are Governments? Is Punishment Just Without Governments? XIV. How Can Governments Be Abolished? XV. What Shall Each Man Do? An Afterword. With Frontis on heavy paper; substantially bound. 188 pages. 50c.

EAT SOME SAND!

About five years ago, Prof. William Windsor, LL. D., Ph. D., the world's most eminent Physiologist, discovered the Sand Cure for indigestion and Constipation, and since that time more than a half million sufferers have tried it and found that it is Nature's Simple Remedy for restored health. It does not purge or gripe, but by cleaning the body out it

"The Natural Life" is the title of Prof. Windsor's monthly magazine in which the Sand Cure is fully described and discussed. It is devoted to the teaching of Vitosophy, "the wise way of living"—Natural Diet, Health and Character Culture, Righteousness and Freedom. One Dollar per year.

PROFESSOR WINDSOR will send full directions for the Sand Cure to anyone sending 25 cents for a three months' trial subscription to The Natural Life. Address THE WINDSOR PUBLISHING CO., Back Bay Postoffice, Boston, Mass.

Price 2 Cents

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VII., NO. 41. CHICAGO, ILL., OCT. 22, E. M. 303. [C. E. 1903.] WHOLE NO. 992

How to Be Born Well.

In Lucifer, No. 987, W. H. Addis says: "I have seen large, strong, vigorous and rugged men who came of undersized parents, and I have seen puny, weakly and small persons born of large, healthy parents."

So have I, but it never occurred to me that there was the slightest difficulty in explaining such facts by the ordinary laws of heredity. It must, for instance, be a very common thing for a man with a tall father and a short mother to marry a woman with a tall father and short mother. In a considerable percentage of these cases it must happen that both the man and the woman have inherited the shortness of their mothers and not the tallness of their fathers. In many such cases, however, some or all of the children will inherit the tallness of the grandfathers rather than the shortness of the parents and grandmothers. The law that "like begets like" does not mean that children are in all cases just like their immediate parents.

It is the evident intention of Mr. Addis to throw doubts upon the value of the principles of scientific breeding. Perhaps the best answer I can give him is to quote the following passage from the Encyclopædia Britannica article on "Breeds and Breeding":

"The main fact of inheritance is so obvious that it is apt to be forgotten. Mr. Darwin remarks: 'It is hardly possible, within a moderate compass, to impress on those who have not attended to the subject the full conviction of the force of inheritance, which is slowly acquired by rearing animals, by studying the various treatises which have been published on the various domestic animals, and by conversing with breeders.' Certain peculiarities have appeared only once or twice in the history of the world, but have reappeared in children or grandchildren of the individuals so characterized. Thus Lambert, 'the porcupine man,' whose skin was covered with warty projections, which were periodically moulted, had all his six children and two grandsons similarly affected. The most striking cases of inheritance have, as in this instance, been observed in man; but the very existence of the numerous breeds of domestic animals is clear evidence of the possibility of the transmission of every kind of peculiarity. For instance, it is believed that the varieties of the domestic pigeon amount to at least 150, and these races differ from each other in many ways, and all breed true to their kind. . . . . The terrible strength of inheritance exhibited by disease is a fact which is only too well established in the case of man; and in the maladies of domestic animals the same law holds good. It appears that nearly all the diseases to which the horse is subject are hereditary—for instance, contracted feet, curbs, splints, spavin, founder and weakness of the fore legs; roaring, or broken and thick wind; melanosis, specific ophthalmia, and blindness, and even such habits as crib-biting and jibbing, are all plainly hereditary. The fact that any, even the most complex combinations of qualities, are capable of hereditary transmission, is, perhaps, more forcibly brought home by considering the monetary aspect of the art of breeding, than by the fullest collection of special instances. As Mr. Herbert Spencer remarks: 'Excluding those inductions that have been so fully verified as to rank with exact science, there are no inductions so trustworthy as those which have undergone the mercantile test. When we have thousands of men whose profit or loss depends on the truth of the inferences they draw from simple and perpetually repeated observations; and when we find that the inferences arrived at and handed down from generation to generation of these deeply interested observers has become an unshakable conviction, we may accept it without hesitation. In breeding of animals we have such a class, led by such experiences and entertaining such a conviction—the conviction that minor peculiarities are inherited as well as major peculiarities. Hence the immense prices paid for successful racers, bulls of superior form, sheep that have certain desired peculiarities.' Not only are slight and gradual changes inherited, but in some cases sudden and well-marked variations are strongly transmitted. The case of the Niata cattle is now well known; a similar case is recorded of a rabbit born with only one ear, from which a breed was formed which steadily produced one-eared rabbits."

Some of the most striking examples of heredity have been derived from the study of insanity. For instance, Lombroso tells us, in "The Man of Genius," that "all the descendants of a Hamburg noble, whom history registers as a great soldier, were struck by insanity at the age of forty. At Connecticut Asylum eleven members of the same family have arrived in succession."

"The conclusion is that all cut and dried theories of stirpiculture are useless," says Mr. Addis. On this point Mr. Addis differs to a most astonishing degree from all the breeders, all the gardeners and all the biologists in the world. No geometer is surer of the fact that the three angles of a triangle are equal to two right angles, than all breeders, gardeners and biologists are of the fact that there is a cut and dried theory of stirpiculture which possesses inestimable practical and pecuniary value.

What, then, is this cut and dried theory of stirpiculture which all specialists hold? It is the theory that "like begets like," and consequently that any quality whatsoever, physical, mental or moral, can be artificially produced by simply selecting for parenthood those who possess it in a conspicuous degree and rejecting those who are deficient in it, and repeating this process from generation to generation. This result can, of course, be brought about most rapidly by conscious and methodical selection and rejection, but even unconscious selection will bring it about, though more slowly. For example, under a state of freedom, any quality generally admired, like health, beauty, strength, generosity or vivacity, would be gradually disseminated by unconscious selection, because it would give an advantage to its possessor in obtaining lovers, and would consequently increase his chance of leaving numerous offspring. I have already pointed out, however, that unconscious selection might also favor some qualities which are no longer good, though once immensely valuable, such as the fighting and hunting instincts, and that to get rid of these conscious selection will probably be required.

In No. 988 George H. Coursen, Jr., says: "Does the theory of evolution, now so generally accepted, allow free men or free women to interfere with natural selection, or the survival of the fittest, among men any more than the course of the planets?"

It does. Natural selection has not in any way prevented the modification of domestic animals and plants by artificial selection, and it would not prevent the modification of human beings in the same way. Huxley somewhere makes the fine remark that man has by selection changed the devourer of the flock into the faithful guardian of the flock. We only need to apply the same methods to man to get equally wonderful results.

I am glad to say that the discoverer of natural selection was among those who have seen the possibilities of human improvement by artificial selection. In the closing chapter of the "Descent of Man," Charles Darwin says:

"Man scans with scrupulous care the character and pedigree of his horses, cattle and dogs before he matches them; but when he comes to his own marriage he rarely, or never, takes any such care. . . . . Yet he might by selection do something, not only for the bodily constitution and frame of his offspring, but for their intellectual and moral qualities."

R. B. KERR.

Marriage the Church's Stronghold.

Robert G. Ingersoll—name loved and honored by libertarians everywhere—when asked why he did not speak for the workers, for the ill-paid toilers, the wage-slaves, in field, factory, mine and mill, his answer was substantially this:

"First—The average wage-worker deserves all the bad treatment he gets. For the most part the wage-earners are willing slaves, ignorant and stupid, not worth saving.

"Second—To enter the field of economic reform would seriously interfere with the main purpose of my life, which is the overthrow of religious superstition. If I can drive a dagger to the heart of that old harlot, the Church, I shall have contributed my share to the world's redemption."

At the time of making this answer Colonel Ingersoll seems to have believed that the only way to destroy theologic superstition is by direct attack; by logical argument; by the keen shafts of sarcasm and ridicule; by the arguments drawn from physical science and plain common sense.

That these modes of attack and these weapons have their value, their place, in the warfare against church superstition will doubtless be admitted by all, but that they are the only or the best methods and weapons is an open question. If we are to judge by his last public lecture, even this master of ridicule and of logical argument saw the need of something else before the close of his extraordinary career as an iconoclast.

In his last public lecture, his address before the Free Religious Association of Boston, answering his own question as to "What Is Religion?" Robert G. Ingersoll, the world-renowned Agnostic and champion of Freethought, seemed to reconstruct his line of assault upon the strongholds of theologic superstition. One of those who heard this address, delivered while in full possession of the ripened powers of this intellectual giant, tells us he prefaced his new departure in words like these:

"I am now about to say what I have long wanted to say, but have not said. It is this:" [Then proceeding he gave utterance to language that cannot be construed to mean other than the most pronounced blasphemy against the main support of the power of the Church—canon-law marriage]: "For thousands of years men and women have been trying to reform the world. They have created gods and devils, heavens and hells; they have written sacred books, performed miracles, built cathedrals and dungeons; they have crowned and uncrowned kings and queens; they have tortured and imprisoned, flayed alive and burned; they have preached and prayed; they have tried promises and threats; they have coaxed and persuaded; they have preached and taught, and in countless ways have endeavored to make people honest, temperate, industrious and virtuous; they have built hospitals and asylums, universities and schools, and seem to have done their very best to make mankind better and happier, and yet they have not succeeded.

"Why have the reformers failed? I will tell them why. Ignorance, poverty and vice are populating the world. The gutter is a nursery. People unable even to support themselves fill the tenements, the huts and hovels with children. They depend on the Lord, on luck and charity. They are not intelligent enough to think about consequences or to feel responsibility. At the same time they do not want children, because a child is a curse, a curse to them and to itself. The babe is not welcome, because it is a burden. These unwelcome children fill the jails and prisons, the asylums and hospitals, and they crowd the scaffolds. A few are rescued by chance or charity, but the great majority are failures. They become vicious, ferocious. They live by fraud and violence, and bequeath their vices to their children. Against this inundation of vice the forces of reform are helpless, and charity itself becomes an unconscious promoter of crime.

"Why should men and women have children that they cannot take care of—children that are burdens and curses? Why? Because they have more passion than intelligence, more passion than conscience, more passion than reason. You cannot reform these people with tracts and talk. You cannot reform these people with preach and creed. Passion is, and always has been, deaf. These weapons of reform are substantially useless. Criminals, tramps, beggars and failures are increasing every day. The prisons, jails, poorhouses and asylums are crowded. Religion is helpless. Law can punish, but it can neither reform criminals nor prevent crime. The tide of vice is rising. The war that is now being waged against the forces of evil is as hopeless as the battle of the fireflies against the darkness of night.

"There is but one hope. Ignorance, poverty and vice must stop populating the world. This cannot be done by moral suasion. This cannot be done by talk or example. This cannot be done by religion or by law, by priest or hangman. This cannot be done by force, physical or moral. To accomplish this there is but one way. Science must make woman the owner, the mistress of herself. Science, the only possible savior of mankind, must put it in the power of woman to decide for herself whether she will or will not become a mother. This is the solution of the whole question. This frees woman. The babes that are then born will be welcome. They will be clasped by glad hands to happy breasts. They will fill homes with light and joy."

In part Colonel Ingersoll has answered his own question, but only in part. In answer to the question, "Why should men and women have children they cannot take care of?" he says, "Because they have more passion than intelligence, more passion than conscience, more passion than reason."

But is it not true that conscience itself, the religious conscience, the conscience developed from early childhood onward, the conscience built up by the teachings of priest and parson, of parent and Sunday school teacher, the conscience directly based upon "God's Holy Word," the "divine law" that says to women, "Wives submit yourselves to your own husbands as unto the Lord," "The head of the woman is the man," etc., etc.—is it not true that this religious conscience in the mind of woman is the chief factor in bringing children into the world that their parents cannot provide for?

Yes, it is very true, no doubt, that man's redundant passion is responsible for much of the evil pointed out by Colonel Ingersoll, but it should be remembered that it is within the marriage pale, the marriage code which is supposed to have the divine sanction, that woman submits to unwelcome and unwise motherhood, not outside of marriage—with rare exceptions.

But if man's ungoverned passion is mainly responsible for overproduction as to number of children, how is it as to quality? Is it not the lack of passion, especially on the part of the mother, more than anything else that is responsible for the poor quality of offspring?

In her "Poems of Passion," Ella Wheeler Wilcox is a better philosopher than is Robert G. Ingersoll. Also in her prose writings, when she says, "Every great genius was born of a great passion, and the reason there are so few great geniuses is that there are so few great passions."

But if the great Agnostic orator has failed in his diagnosis of the evils caused by unwise and irresponsible parenthood, he has made amends in his proposed remedy. This remedy is, "Science must make woman the owner, the mistress of herself; . . . must put it in the power of woman to decide for herself whether she will or will not become a mother."

Here we have, potentially, if not fully expressed, the union of Liberty, Love and Wisdom, and this trinity incarnated in woman gives the remedy for redundant and invasive passion on the part of man. If woman is "mistress of herself," and if she is wise—that is, instructed by "science"—and if influenced by desire to do the best possible for her unborn child (it may safely be assumed that all sane and normally developed women would so desire, since motherhood is conceded to be woman's strongest passion) then all children would be "welcome," and "ignorance, poverty and vice would cease to populate the world."

A priest of the Order of Jesus—a Jesuit—wrote a book entitled "Mistakes of Ingersoll." It is now in order that a supplement to that book be written, showing that the greatest of all the mistakes of Ingersoll is his demand that woman should be mistress of herself. When a generation of human beings shall be born of really free mothers the occupation of the priest will be gone, because no longer needed. Children born of really free, self-reliant, intelligent, self-responsible mothers will not need to be born again, will not need a "go-between" in shape of priest to tell them what to do to be saved. They will know enough to be their own saviors, their own priests, their own rulers or kings.—M. Harman, in Lucifer No. 956.

"He abused me, he beat me, he defeated me, he robbed me." In those who harbor such thoughts hatred will never cease, for hatred ceases not by hatred at any time; hatred ceases by love, this is an old rule.—Buddha.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

Special offer: This valuable work sent free on receipt of 25 cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light Bearer. Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

A Glimpse of an Active Career.

John Turner, chief organizer of the National Shop Assistants' Union of England and a member of the Executive Committee of the London Trades Council, is making a lecture tour of the United States. His first address will be at a mass meeting in Murray Hill Lyceum, New York, Friday evening, Oct. 23, on "Trades Unionism and the General Strike." The news of Mr. Turner's return to the United States will be quite pleasing to those who heard him during his visit here in 1896.

Mr. Turner is just under forty years of age and has been identified with various radical and revolutionary movements for twenty-two years, joining the National Secular Society of London before he was eighteen. At that time Charles Bradlaugh was at the height of his popularity and was fighting to take his seat in the House of Commons. Three years later Mr. Turner joined the Socialist League, a revolutionary Socialist organization with William Morris as its most active and militant personality, and in 1886 was a member of the Executive Board and financial secretary of the organization. From 1884 to 1892 was probably the most energetic period of the revolutionary Socialist movement in England, and during that time no one was more active or energetic than Turner.

The Chicago affair of 1886-7 made him an Anarchist, and during all these dark years no one has been more convinced of the justice of his cause or the ultimate triumph of those principles than John Turner, and few have been more active in spreading these ideas than he. He took an active part in the agitation for the pardon of the Chicago men in 1887, speaking at as many as eighteen meetings in one week.

In 1889 he was a delegate to the International Socialist Workers' Congress, held in Paris, where the now famous resolution calling on the workers of the world to throw down their tools on the first of May and demonstrate their solidarity was brought forth by a delegate from the Knights of Labor, and was carried.

That year he set to work to organize into a trade union the shop assistants (retail clerks) of London. Several attempts had been made previously by others, but in vain; for, as is generally known in the labor world, the shop assistants are so steeped in middle-class prejudices that they are the most difficult of all men and women to organize. However, several of his colleagues having requested him to make the attempt, he decided to do so, and issued a call just after the historic dock strike. The result of the call was the formation of the United Shop Assistants' Union, with himself as president, a post he held nine years, until 1898, when an amalgamation took place with the National Union of Shop Assistants, Warehousemen and Clerks, of which he is now chief organizer. During his first two years as organizer he brought into the union nearly 4,000 members. He was selected by his union to represent it at the International Congress of Shop Assistants held in Brussels last month.

He was connected with the Commonweal, the organ of the Socialist League, and in the early nineties, when Nicol and Mowbray were arrested for incitement to murder for protesting against the condemnation of Charles Calles, Battola and Deakin, Turner stepped in and wrote the leading article for the next issue of the paper, which had been confiscated, together with all the matter set up for that week. The paper was brought out only a day late, notwithstanding the police had the office under observation all the time and another raid was hourly expected.

He participated in the riots at Trafalgar Square on "Bloody Sunday," and was an active participant in the great dock strike.

His connection with the Journal Freedom has been of many years' standing, and he is regarded as one of the ablest of the English Anarchists and one of the best-informed men in the labor movement.

In 1896 he made his first visit to America and undertook a lecturing tour under the auspices of the Anarchists. His tour lasted seven months, and embraced New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, Buffalo, Cleveland, Pittsburg, Indianapolis, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, Omaha, Denver and a score of smaller places. He delivered over a hundred lectures, the majority of which were before trade unions, Single Tax and Freethought societies. He was very cordially received by the great majority of the labor men he came in contact with, and addressed most of the central labor unions in the cities mentioned above. President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor took the chair at his meeting in Indianapolis and gave him a letter of introduction to the trade unionists of the country.

Of late years his duties as organizer of the shop assistants have taken him somewhat from the Anarchist movement, but in spite of his many duties he can always be relied upon to speak or write for the cause whenever he can steal a moment's time.

When George Bedborough, the editor of the Adult, was prosecuted in 1898 Turner was on the defense committee and took an active part in raising funds to defend him. E. G.

Incompetence of Government.

In a letter to a Singletaxer who is also in sympathy with public ownership of public utilities, Mr. Charles Francis Adams used the following language:

"The fact is, when it comes to handling private business, any and every government is, in my opinion, utterly incompetent, whether it is a water system, schools, railroads, telegraphs, post-offices, or what not. Every time private enterprise would do it four times as well at about half the cost. Please don't talk to me of doing business through governmental machinery. It is one colossal exhibition of waste, extravagance and incompetence."

Mr. Adams is courageous enough to include education, which many pretended Individualists "concede" to the State. But isn't everything he says applicable to the administration of justice, to police activity, to the army and navy? Is it reasonable to suppose that an organization which cannot economically and efficiently conduct a very simple business—the operation of a street car system, or the distribution of letters and packages—is competent to enforce justice and protect rights? The fact is that there is more, not less, waste and corruption in the business that governments have always monopolized than in those which they have but recently acquired. The cause which produces the incompetence and waste in the directions mentioned by Mr. Adams is fully operative in all other directions. Politicians are like other men; it is the principle, the condition under which they work that is fatal to honesty and efficiency. And is not that principle or condition coextensive with the sphere of government? Mr. Adams ought to be an Anarchist.—Liberty (New York).

Depravity Due to Ignorance

It is surely a sign of amazing progress when our W. C. T. U. women demand that the subject of sex should be taught in our public schools. In the St. Paul Dispatch, Sept. 22, I find this:

"Mrs. W. J. Allen, chairman of the Purity League in Milwaukee, said that the Woman's Christian Temperance Union wanted the subject of sex taught in the public schools, beginning with the kindergarten and continuing up through the grades. Much of the immorality in the schools, as in the world, is due to ignorance. Parents should tell their boys and girls about their origin, and not use a senseless subterfuge when asked by curious little folks about things about which older and perhaps more vulgar boys and girls have told them."

Now, this very claim has been one of Lucifer's most important ones. Most, if not all of the vice, crime and depravity of the world are due to ignorance, and it is a most hopeful sign when the women of the W. C. T. U. demand education sexwise for the rising generation. Flora W. Fox.

The Bible.

As a literary monument the Bible is of much later origin than the Vedas. As a work of literary value it is surpassed by everything written in the last two thousand years by authors even of the second rank. And to compare it seriously with the productions of Homer, Dante, Sophocles, Shakspeare or Goethe would require a fanaticized mind that had entirely lost its power of judgment. Its conception of the universe is childish and its morality revolting. And yet men, cultivated and capable of forming a just estimate, pretend to revere this ancient work. They refuse to allow it to be criticised and discussed like any other production of the human intellect. They found societies and place enormous sums at their disposal to print millions of copies of it, which they distribute all over the world; and they pretend to be edified and inspired when they read it.—Max Nordau.

Of all the actions of a man's life, his marriage does least concern other people; yet of all actions of our life, it is the most meddled with by other people.—John Seldon.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 West 143d street, New York.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

By Their Fruits.

Two very excellent maxims have come down to us from the dim and distant past—not the words of "plenary inspiration," but simply the dictates of common sense and common experience. They read thus:

"Judge not, that ye be not judged."

"By their fruits ye shall know them."

As I see it, these maxims are not mutually destructive. The first means that we should not sit in judgment upon and condemn the motives of others. No one is clairvoyant enough to see the springs of action; and no one can see back far enough to correctly judge of a long line of causes that led up to the commission of any particular act. And yet, for self-protection, we are obliged to sit in judgment upon the acts themselves, and we are compelled to infer from these acts the general character of the person who commits them.

* * *

Under the head, "From the Far West," in this issue, in the first letter quoted the writer says: "Some of them [the Freethought people] are under the impression that your treatment of Ingersoll is not consistent." But few of the Freethinkers of San Francisco read Lucifer. Hence they are wholly dependent upon the Truth Seeker of New York, the Freethought Magazine of Chicago and the Torch of Reason, Kansas City, for what they know of my treatment of Ingersoll; and now, as the editors of these papers have persistently refused to let their readers see what it is that my friends and myself have said in the Ingersoll symposium, I ask all who claim to be Freethinkers to read what I said in the article, reproduced elsewhere in this issue, that gave rise to the discussion. This article was entitled "Marriage the Church's Stronghold," and was written, as any unprejudiced mind can see, not to defame the name and memory of Robert G. Ingersoll, but to give him honor for what he had said and done in the work of human emancipation.

The opening lines, so persistently misquoted against me, were inserted as giving the substance of what I had long understood as Ingersoll's attitude, at one time in his life, toward the average workingman, and which attitude I honestly believed was quite consistent with his political career, for most of his life. But while the truth should always be told when passing upon the life-work of all men, it will easily be seen that I passed over, very lightly and very quickly, this phase of his work and devoted nearly the whole of my article to a phase with which I was, and am, in hearty accord.

"Let justice be done though the heavens fall."

"By their fruits ye shall know them."

As Garrison said, so say I:

"I will not equivocate; I will not excuse; I will not retreat a single inch, and I will be heard." M. HARMAN.

The trouble with most people is, they bow to what is called authority; they have a certain reverence for the old because it is old. They think a man is better for being dead, especially if he has been dead a long time.—Ingersoll.

He who knows most grieves most for wasted time.—Dante.

Replies to Criticisms.

On page 299, current volume, No. 589, W. L. C. thinks I have "a wrong idea of the 'Message to Garcia,' in my comments on the case of Carson and the Missouri Pacific Railroad." Am always glad to be corrected when I make mistakes. Not having read this famous message I was careful to say that I hoped the common interpretation of Fra Elbertus' intent is not the correct one.

Will say in regard to the case of Carson, who was reported "shelved" by the railway management for saving the bridge over the Kaw at the time of the great flood, that I have since been informed by the agent of the Missouri Pacific at Valley Falls that the report of Carson's retirement is without foundation. He is still in the employ of the same company, having been transferred to Little Rock at his own request.

The case of the engineer on the "sound steamer" referred to by W. L. C. is by no means parallel to that of the man who saved the bridge. There was no emergency demanding immediate action when the engineer, without consulting the captain, changed the speed of the vessel, with disastrous results. My critic's logic is faulty, as I see it.

"THE IDEA OF SOCIALISM."

On page 298, same number just cited, is found a protest by C. F. H. against Lucifer's idea of Socialism, reference being made to my experience last summer in Michigan, wherein I am charged with laying all my troubles at the door of Socialism. If our good friend will read again what was said at the time he will see that I discriminated. I did not then, and do not now, denounce all forms of Socialism. I claim to be a Socialist myself, quite as much as an Individualist. Rockefeller, Morgan, Mark Hanna, Roosevelt—all the monopolistic bosses of the country—are both Individualists and Socialists, but their Individualism and Socialism are not to my liking. I did not write the introduction to the "Message from Mrs. Williams," and therefore am not responsible for the "fling" in reference to the "knavery of the postoffice" as giving fresh illustration of the "possibilities of Socialism." I certainly do not think that the villainies authorized or condoned by our monopolistic and tyrannical postoffice system should be charged against the Socialism advocated by George D. Herron, Eugene V. Debs, Clarence S. Darrow and many others I might name. Lucifer's platform is broad and free; each writer (including editors) is responsible for his or her own utterances; no more, no less.

NOT A "PRIEST" NOR A "SMART ALEC!"

"It is to be hoped that Moses Harman is not contemplating taking orders as a Catholic priest. He is, however, as he frequently reminds us, old enough to be the father of quite a flock."

This paragraph is clipped from the editorial columns of Free Society, Chicago, dated Sept. 20, and signed "Jr."—elsewhere written out as "Abe Isaak, Jr."

To my thinking, the first and chief qualification for editorship is truthfulness (including justice). The second is courtesy (including fairness). As I see it, both these qualifications have been disregarded by the writer of the above paragraph. Instead of frequently reminding my readers that I am old enough to be the father of quite a flock I have mentioned, within the space of a few months or years, that I am old enough to be the father of two of my critics, who seemed by their manner to think they knew much more of the matter under discussion than I did, and whose treatment of me bordered on the parental. In thus saying I stated the simple truth, and have no apology to make; but if the two critics alluded to constitute "quite a flock," then perhaps my present critic is in the right, and I will be compelled to take my place at the foot of the class and learn from him what words and numbers really mean.

As often said before in these columns, age does not always bring wisdom, but if we have to cross a pathless desert or precipitous mountain we would probably prefer as guide one who knows the dangers by close observation and experience, rather than one who has only heard what these dangers are, but who, by his assumption of superior knowledge, constantly reminds one of the good old Greek word, "sophomore!" M. H.

Our duty is to enter on the consideration of every subject with a sincere desire to learn the truth, and to renounce whatever error we may have imbibed.—William Emery Channing.

Oh, the ignominy of being a popular preacher!—F. W. Robertson.

From the Far West.

A few more extracts characteristic of the letters I am receiving from the Pacific Coast will probably be read with interest by some at least of the Light Bearer household.

From San Francisco C. V. Cook writes:

"Have consulted every friend that I could reach personally and already know of twelve or thirteen who would subscribe for Lucifer if you were here. I think if you are able to work that you might take a fairly large number of subscriptions. On the street, too, you should be able to take in a few dollars each evening on pamphlets or trial subscriptions. Remember San Francisco is a great place to discuss questions on the street. It would be unfortunate for you to come so far west and yet miss coming to California. The climate is invigorating and you would feel like working, and upon this would depend your success in business. The Social Science Club is not now in active order, but nearly all are co-operating with the Educational Lecture Association, that is, the Freethought and Science Society. If you would be able to address us on the Freethought phase of some question I feel sure I would be able to arrange with the Freethought people for a lecture. Some of them are under the impression that your treatment of Ingersoll is not quite consistent. But if the Freethinkers object the Social Science Club will try to get you a good hall. I would like to hear something of 'Ingersoll on the Sex Question.' His last lecture makes a fine opening. I have three copies of Olerich's 'Cityless and Countryless World' (cloth), that I would contribute to you. A lecture or two on the street would dispose of them easily. Every one seems willing to help by subscription to Lucifer, and if you meet our free people you will find most are glad to help if they can see that you are reaching those who need it. How much you would need for your support I am no judge, but this is the lay of the land as I see it. If you do decide to come, announce it through Lucifer, so we may get our heads together."

I, too, feel much interest in everything that Ingersoll said on the sex question, also on the labor question, and if any of our friends know wherein we have failed to correctly reproduce the great orator in regard to these questions I will thank them to let me know. The Freethinkers spoken of by Brother Cook have probably read the Truth Seeker's statement of the case only. If the Truth Seeker's method be the true Freethought method, then I am no Freethinker, and will have to begin at the beginning and learn my lesson all over again.

* * *

A good lady friend and subscriber living in the metropolis of the West Coast writes in part:

"I would certainly advise you to come to our big city. At present there are a number from the East giving lectures on 'soul culture,' etc., and drawing large houses, but of your teachings I really never heard until a personal friend showed me Lucifer a couple of years ago. I have not dared to circulate it among my friends. If there is anything I can do in the way of inquiry, will be pleased to do what I can, for I feel grateful to you for what Lucifer has done for me. O. M."

* * *

From Santa Ana, Cal., D. Edson Smith writes:

"While there are fourteen or more churches in this town of upwards of 6,000, there is a large Liberal element here. At one time we had a large and active Liberal club. Samuel P. Putnam used to have fair audiences at this place. He always stopped with me when here. Lois Waisbrooker lived here a long while and sowed Liberal seed. But there has been no one here to 'round up' the Liberals for a long time. If you come to the great city of Los Angeles I would think it advisable to come down here, thirty-four miles. If you decide to come, let me know in season. I will meet you at the depot and keep you while you stay."

* * *

M. A. B., writing from San Jose Cal., thinks it very doubtful whether I could do anything in his city because—

"There is so much prejudice against anything pertaining to the sex question. Very few have the courage to advocate that reform publicly, especially when it is likely to endanger their bread and butter. Few people have the heroism that you, your daughter and a few other pioneers in your line of reform possess. I honor such people and am sorry I cannot be of more service to you."

NO LUCIFERS ON SALE.

Another old-time reader of Lucifer and liberal patron of its book list writes from the Gate City of the West:

"You should certainly extend your trip to the metropolis of the Pacific Coast and see with your own eyes what is going on here, whether it pays you financially or not. It may be your last opportunity. Am sure if you go back to Chicago without coming to California, being now so far on the way, you would always regret it. The cost of living in San Francisco need not be great, and I for one would be pleased to help to defray your expenses if you accept my offer. You can rest assured that you will find represented here every kind of advanced thought, although but to a limited degree, perhaps, in your line. I have never seen any Lucifers on sale at the stores that keep newspapers of advanced kinds. Should you decide to come to California I would be pleased to hear from you before you reach San Francisco, so that I could wait for you at the railroad station and look after your comfort. C. R."

Will some good friend take it upon him or herself to see that Lucifer and its pamphlet literature are kept on sale at the principal book stores and news stands in San Francisco? Also at Los Angeles, San Diego and other towns? If I am to make the tour of the Coast cities, this would be one of the best ways to advertise my coming and to make the trip a success in all ways.

LUCIFER A FRIEND AND COMPANION.

A gold hunter in the mountains, writing from Red Bluff, Cal., sends this greeting:

"Lucifer and its fraternity are new to me. I find here the expression of what has been the development of years of thought, but thought which I have held alone. I do not know a single person who thinks with me. In this way Lucifer has been a friend and companion. Should you visit Sacramento or San Francisco, both good centers, I shall endeavor to go there and hear you, should you speak. Trusting I may have the pleasure of meeting you. Yours sincerely, E. HAYDEN."

* * *

One more letter, a fair sample of many others I should like to reproduce, in part at least, did space permit, must suffice for this time. Writing from San Francisco a friend sends encouragement in these words:

"Am pleased to be of service to you. A Liberal society has been formed and will have the first meeting this evening. I enclose programme of lectures. Will do all I can to assist you with introductions to people whom I know. Cannot see any good reason why you should not be successful in taking many subscriptions to your Lucifer, and sell many books. I am president of the People's Spiritual Society, and know many Liberal people, to whom I will introduce you, and will ask others to do the same. Hoping your health is improving and that you will visit California in the near future. Yours fraternally, J. H. L."

* * *

Once more thanking all who have written in answer to inquiries—all who have offered to assist in any way to make my proposed visit to the Coast a success, I again request all letters for me personally to be sent to Las Vegas, N. M., care of Solomon Harman. M. HARMAN.

Anarchistic Methods of Noncomformists.

Passive resistance is being resorted to in England by people who would indignantly repudiate the imputation of Anarchistic policy—the Nonconformists, who violently object to the new education act on the ground that it practically reimposes the old church rate and forces men to pay for denominational teaching opposed to their own religious convictions. It is not necessary to examine here the provisions of the reactionary act. The point is that, having failed to prevent its adoption by parliament, thousands of otherwise "law-abiding" citizens are passively resisting its enforcement by refusing to pay the school tax. And this course has the approval of prominent divines, lord mayors and other influential personages. The plea of these resistants is that their conscience does not permit them to obey this particular law. They believe in government, in majority rule, in the omnipotence of parliament, but they draw the line at the school act. It would be interesting to know what they think of passive resistance on the part of those whose conscience—or reason—revolts against most of the acts of their government! The appeal to conscience, to individual judgment, is fatal to the whole business of governmentalism. The Nonconformists are Anarchists with respect to the school law, and they are building more wisely than they know. Illogical and inconsistent as they are, more strength to their elbows!—Liberty (New York).

Perhaps one of the noble lessons Darwin left to the world is this—which to him amounted to a profound, almost religious conviction—that every fact in nature, no matter how insignificant, every stripe of color, every tint of flowers, the length of an orchid's nectary, unusual height in a plant, all the infinite variety of apparently insignificant things, is full of significance. For him it was a historical record, the revelation of a cause, the lurking place of a principle.—Frank Cramer's "The Method of Darwin."

What Our "Delinquent Subscribers" Say.

E. Z. Ernst, Olathe, Kan.: Be sure to put me down for a regular subscriber. Will send money soon. Lucifer must go on.

Delos Dunton, Carpentersville, Ill.: I inclose $2 on subscription to Lucifer, and hope others will come to your aid in your work.

C. L. Swartz, Wellesley, Mass.: I am a subscriber to Lucifer, and desire to continue to be, even if I have to pay one cent postage on each copy.

Edw. Hayes, Brooklyn, N. Y.: Inclosed is $1 to renew subscription. I don't know if it's due, but you deserve all we can do for the good and noble work you are engaged in.

E. A. Wray, Chicago: Please continue sending Lucifer to me. I have learned to like your paper and do not wish to do without it. I will call soon and pay my subscription.

J. E. Phelps, West Sutton, Mass.: Inclosed find $1 to renew my subscription to Lucifer, which expired a short time ago. I hope the Postoffice Department will not cause you trouble. Our best wishes are with you.

Dr. M. Rowe, Illinois: I see that my subscription is behind. Please don't stop my paper, as I will catch up soon. A great many periodicals come to our house, but none, in my opinion, of such importance as Lucifer. The world needs it.

J. L. Buxton, Milford, Mass.: I think I am way behind on subscription to Lucifer. It is unfair to let the paying for such a good paper go so long, for there is hardly one paper that does not have an article worth more than the year's subscription.

F. E. Miller, Michigan: I am still under the disagreeable necessity of acknowledging myself in arrears on subscription, and feel grateful to you for kindness in sending Lucifer. I hope to make amends soon, and should very much regret to have my Lucifer discontinued.

Frederique de Crane, Iowa: By no means discontinue my paper, as I can hardly do without it. My husband is out of work, but I will pay as soon as possible. I most heartily hope that all your subscribers will send in their names and that the list may be swelled with many new ones.

John A. Lloyd, Indiana: I had about decided I would have to discontinue taking Lucifer, but when I saw the last number I concluded to pay you for two years' subscription. Have been bedfast for the last eight months and always will be, so will have to cut off all unnecessary expenses.

E. E. Coleman, Indiana: In response to your recent request to Lucifer to delinquent subscribers, I write to inform you that I am still a subscriber to Lucifer and expect to be for a long time, as it is my favorite of the eight or ten periodicals I get. I will forward a dollar on my subscription in a few weeks.

G. J. Lambrigger, Nebraska: Here is $1 for one year's renewal to your valuable paper. I take some twelve or thirteen publications, some of the most radical Freethought and Socialist papers published, but if I had to confine myself to but one paper Lucifer would be the one. Never stop sending me the paper till I say so. Am sorry to be caught in arrears.

Bettie M. Roberts, Miller, Mo.: I shall be very glad if you will continue sending Lucifer to me. I have paid on subscription several times, and expect to continue paying for Lucifer, although I am in arrears a few months at present. I cannot understand how it can be the business of the postal authorities whether your subscribers want the paper and pay for it or not. That is your business and that of the subscribers. Yes, tell Uncle Sam that I want Lucifer and expect to pay for it.

The mischief of past legislation justifies the belief that as the presence of legislation is diminished, and the human mind less hampered, the progress will continue with accelerated speed.—Buckle.

A woman said to me: "I have no friends." But how could it be otherwise when her life was fenced about with formalities?—Elizabeth Gibson.

Religion.

Naturally, it might be supposed that nothing good could come out of unmixed error, but, as a matter of fact, all races and peoples have ever regarded their religion as the most valuable of all their possessions. Yet this applies only to each people's own religion, and is never the estimate by one people of the religion of another. At the risk of repetition, let us bring forward an illustration of this most important qualification. If a convention of all the religions on the globe were to be called, each sect being represented by one delegate, and the question were to be voted upon, in the case of each religion separately, Is this religion true? or, Is this religion beneficial to man? the result would inevitably be that only one affirmative vote would be cast in each case, and that would be the vote of the delegate of the particular religion upon which the vote was taken; and if the action of this convention regarding the feasibility of preserving or abolishing religions could be conclusive, it would be found that all the religions of the world would be overwhelmingly voted down and abolished, and this by the action of avowed religionists alone.—Professor Lester Ward.

Thomas Jefferson's Religion.

Say nothing of my religion; it is known to myself and my God alone. Its evidence before the world is to be sought in my life: if that has been honest and dutiful to society, the religion which has regulated it cannot be a bad one. It is a singular anxiety which some people have that we should all think alike. Would the world be more beautiful were all our faces alike, were our tempers, our talents, our tastes, our forms, our wishes, aversions and pursuits cast exactly in the same mold? If no variety existed in the animal, vegetable, or mineral creation, but all were strictly uniform, catholic and orthodox, what a world of physical and moral monotony it would be! These are the absurdities into which those run who usurp the throne of God and dictate to him what he should have done.—Thomas Jefferson, in a letter to Charles Thomson.

A gentleman residing in the beautiful city of Seattle is desirous of knowing if there is a lady reader of Lucifer, refined, neat and musical, who would like to co-operate with some gentleman of the West in the effort to secure or create a home-made heaven? If so, she is sincerely requested to respond to this brief message, giving necessary information to the undersigned, who is a believer in absolute equality of the sexes; that heaven is not a locality, but a creatable condition, attained when our goodness is guided by enlightenment. Born poor in 1861, have passed through years of poverty and felt its bitter and unjust sting, but am now worth about $10,000; am 5 feet 8 inches tall; weigh 130 pounds. Being naturally musical and artistic, am very sensitive to all forms of this world's discord, but as truly appreciative of the harmonies of life. Realizing as I do, that religious, political and social superstitions are holding our race in mental and physical bondage; knowing well how few there are who are entirely free from their all-blighting effects, I feel that an unusual effort on the part of these few is necessary in order to demonstrate their superior position. Being temperate and considerate myself, am fully aware that any woman to appreciate elevating principles must first possess them herself. This message I therefore mission to stir the heart of a congenial soul to a full realization of its true import. She will then be fully advised of all necessary particulars, of which she feels concerned, by addressing J. T. Parker, Fremont Station, Seattle, Wash.—Adv.

Among the Mokt Indians of Arizona the men weave dresses and the women build houses. Little children fearlessly handle live rattle-snakes. Religious rites antedate Columbus' time. These and other interesting facts about our brothers in red may be found in a profusely illustrated book of 224 pages, "Indians of the South-West," written by Gen. A. Dorsey, Curator of Anthropology, Field Columbian Museum, and published by the Santa Fe. If interested in Indians and their handicraft, buy a copy; only costs 50 cents; easily worth a dollar. Write to-day to W. J. Black, G. P. A., A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 77 Jackson Blvd., Chicago, and enclose coin or stamps.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Legislation. We can not sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 30 cents each, two for 50 cents. Address Edwin C. Walker, 244 West 143d street, New York, N. Y.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-in Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to cases that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 62, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

SOCIALIST.

ECONOMICS OF SOCIALISM. Cloth, $1.25.

THE ADVENTURES OF JOHN M'CUE. By Socialist. 10c.

THE CLERICAL CAPITALIST. By the Rev. Father McGrady. 5c.

NOW AND THEN. A play in two acts. By Frederick Krafft. 10c.

BETWEEN CAESAR AND JESUS. By George D. Herron. Cloth, 75c.

THE PROLETARIAT. Adapted from the German of Karl Kautsky. 5c.

THE CAPITALIST CLASS. Adapted from the German of Karl Kautsky. 5c.

FERDINAND LASSALLE AS A SOCIAL REFORMER. By E. Bernstein. $1.

THE COMMUNIST MANIFESTO. By Karl Marx and Frederick Engels. 10c.

THE ATTITUDE OF THE SOCIALISTS TOWARD TRADE UNIONS. N. I. Stone. 5c.

FRENCH AND GERMAN SOCIALISM IN MODERN TIMES. By Richard T. Ely. Cloth, 75c.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF SOCIALISM FROM UTOPIA TO SCIENCE. By Frederick Engels. 5c.

A DEBATE ON THE TACTICS OF THE S. T. AND L. A. TOWARD TRADE UNIONS. Between Daniel De Leon and Bob Hartman. 5c.

RAILROADING IN THE UNITED STATES. The James Boys; also, As to Law and Order; The Eminent Gentleman and the Very Eminent Gentleman; The Dead Broke Brakeman and His Bright Leaders. By Ben Hanford. "To the Not Yet Dead." 5c.

SHROUDS WITH POCKETS. A life sketch. By Henry E. Allen. A touching story, told in simple and yet striking language, and yet more than a story. Vivid flashes of light are thrown on the unspeakable horrors of capitalism. Illustrated with many portraits of Socialists and other reformers. 25c.

ANARCHIST.

NO TREASON.—No. II. By Lysander Spooner. 16 pages. 10c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A study of the industrial type. Dyer D. Lum. 10c.

WHAT IS ANARCHISM? An explanation by Stephen T. Byington. Five copies for 2c, 50 for 10c, 150 for 25c.

NO TREASON.—No. VI. Showing that the Constitution is of no authority. By Lysander Spooner. 13 pages. 10c.

A POLITICIAN IN SIGHT OF HAVEN. Being a protest against government of men by men. By Ambrose Herbert. 10c.

CITIZENS' MONEY. A critical analysis in the light of Free Trade in Banking. By Alfred B. Westrup. Only a few left; reduced to 5c.

THE UNCONSTITUTIONALITY OF THE LAWS OF CONGRESS PROHIBITING PRIVATE MAILS. By Lysander Spooner. 24 pages. 10c.

THE BALLOT. By William Walstein Gordak. A short poem illustrating the assembly of majority rule. An excellent leaflet for propagandaism. 100 copies, 10c.

FREE POLITICAL INSTITUTIONS: Their Nature, Essence and Maintenance. An abridgement and rearrangement of Lysander Spooner's "Trial by Jury." Edited by Victor Yarros. 40 pages. 25c.

AN ESSAY ON THE DUTY OF CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE. By Henry D. Thoreau. A reprint of this classic essay on the supremacy of the individual conscience. Antique paper; artistic covers, dark green on olivine. 10c.

THE ATTITUDE OF ANARCHISM TOWARD INDUSTRIAL COMBINATIONS. By Benj. R. Tucker. An address delivered in Central Music Hall, Chicago, on Sept. 14, 1898, before the Conference on Trusts held under the auspices of the Civic Federation. 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. One of the most eloquent pleas for liberty ever written. Paine's "Age of Reason" and "Rights of Man" consolidated and improved. It stirs the pulse like a trumpet call. By Michael Bakounine. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 32 pages. 10c.

THE ANARCHISTS: A Picture of Civilization at the Close of the Nineteenth Century. A powerful prose contribution to the literature of egoistic Anarchism. A story of the inner mental development in London amid the exciting events of 1887—the manifestations of the unemployed, the rioting at Trafalgar square, the "Bloody Sunday" in Chicago. The antagonism between Communism and Anarchism sharply brought out. By John Henry Mackay. Translated from the German by George Stumm. 318 pages, with portrait of the author. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of Freethought and Free Love. Orr[illegible] Northrute. 10c.

THE SOCIAL QUESTION. A discussion between Juliet H. Severance, M. D., and David Jones. 15 cents.

BORNING BETTER BABIES. Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 10c.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY, in four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together, with That Great Fraud, Telepathy Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (Georgs Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winter). 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marvista). Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren). and The Secret and Love to Freedom (Oscar Retter). 25c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler's), Life's Gifts (Olive Logan), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Subsidize, and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Subsidize, and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Subsidize, and Marry? 25c.

FRIENDLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Evolution (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Kiss (an allegory), E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Retter). 25c.

MODERN PARADISE, The Model Home, Solution of the Social Problem. Future Greatness of Electricity. Proposed Experiment in Social Science. An Earthly Paradise. Eden and How to Attain It. A Unique Power Plant. Wonderful System of Education. Elegantly illustrated. Prof. Henry Olcott. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. E. B. Foote. Together with What Are Women Here For? (M. H. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

WOMAN AND HER RELATION TO THE CHURCH OR CANON LAW FOR WOMEN. Harriet M. Closs. A succinct statement of the position to which women were doomed by the Church Fathers and authorities. Every woman should possess a copy. 10c.

THE CURSE OF MATERNITY. From the French of Henry Fevre. Together with How to Escape the Curse (Jonathan Mayo Crane), Woman's "Duty" to Bear Children (S. C. Walker), True and False Morality (C. L. James), Love's Law (William Francis Barnard). 25 cents.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: A Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 41 large pages. 10c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE, as viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS.—Wedlock, Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and His Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

THE ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY AND THE STATE. Frederick Engels. Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans. 217 pages; bound in cloth. 50c. Postage, 5c.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. One of the best short works on the subject. Daintily printed. A charming little gift book. "Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it." 25 cents.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided, and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.50.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES. Edwin C. Walker. Contents—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only"; Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen"; What Are the Efforts of Saints and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" The Tenements; Action for Advanced Women. With appendix: The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of it all. 10c.

THE MAJESTY OF SEX. Nancy McKay Gordon. This is the book written from the standpoint of experience. Therefore, it will satisfy in a vital way the cry of the hungry soul. It is practical and elucidative; personal and real; individual and ideal. It instructs how the creative forces of the body may be transmuted, transformed and directed. It teaches of celestial love on earth now. It shows how the truly wedded pair may make all things subservient to their ideals. It goes right to the heart of the subject, in an unerring and right way. It does not deal in the theory of any other writer, but is written in the unique style of the author. Send for this book and learn the secrets of the gods. They come with divine reckonings—Apollonian dignity. Beautifully bound; initial letter beginning each paragraph; artistic from every point of view. $2.

THE HOME CYCLOPEDIA OF MEDICAL, SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE. Contains a full, plain and easy-reading treatise on "Health and Disease, with Recipes"; all the average reader can profitably learn of personal hygiene and common diseases (including special, separate chapters for men and women); all right up to date, and fully illustrated with hundreds of photo-engravings and chromo-lithographs. Contains also the already popular "Plain Home Talk" about the relations of the sexes and social customs in all ages and all countries, with "original and startling" suggestions for social reforms, newly revised, enlarged and well illustrated. All is "heart to heart" plain home talk from a clear-thinking, plain-speaking, liberal-minded medical author of over forty years' experience. Nearly 1,000,000 of his former books sold. A curious book for curious people, and a scientific book for students. Answers 1,500 delicate questions one would like to ask one's regular physician and yet doesn't want to. 1,248 pages; 400 illustrations (60 in colors); 26c oneloth. Cloth bound, $2.

PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work. Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up to date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has 800 pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid, to any address, for $3.75.

THE WHOLESOME WOMAN. J. H. Greer, M. D. The latest and most complete work of its kind. Four books in one volume. Part I.—SEX AND LIFE: The Principle of Life; The Dominant Power of Life; The Temple of the Soul; The Unfolding of Womanhood; The Fulfillment of the Law; The Fruits of Fulfillment; Home and Home-Making. Part II.—TOKOLOGY: The Organs of Generation; Menstruation; The Marriage Relation; Conception and Prenatal Culture; Child Birth; The Hygiene of Infancy; Development from Birth to Fourteen Years; Disorders of Infancy and Childhood; Afflictions Peculiar to Women; What Determines the Sex of Offspring. Part III.—CHILD-CULTURE: The Foundation of Moral Uprightness; The Kindergarten (with diagrams); Manual Training. Part IV.—HEALTH AND HYGIENE: Long Life Not a Secret; "Breath is Life"; How, When and What to Eat; Sleep and the Bath; Clothing and Dress; Mental and Physical Culture; What to Do in Sickness; What Not to Do in Sickness; Care of the Eyes and Ears; Care of the Extremities; Poisons Used as Medicines; The Application of Heat and Cold; Unnecessary Surgical Operations; An Ounce of Prevention. The complete work is published in one handsome, large quarto volume of 830 pages, with photogravure frontispiece, portrait of the author in full-page half-tone and numerous smaller explanatory illustrations. It is printed on an extra quality of paper from new electroplates, and each volume is accompanied by a separate supplement of 41 plates (printed in colors), illustrating Sex in Plant Life; the Human Sexual Organs and the Laws of Reproduction; the Development of the Human Embryo and Fetus, showing nourishment and growth from day to day and month to month; the Plan of Fetal Circulation, etc. In extra cloth, with special emblematic cover design. $3.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. S. E. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (S. E. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola). 25c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Women; What Is She? What Will She Be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 10c.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE. Edward Carpenter. This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author: The Sex Passion; Man, the Ungrown; Woman, the Serf; Woman in Freedom; Marriage, a Retrospect; Marriage, a Forecast; The Free Society; Some Remarks on the Early Star and Sex Worships. Notes on the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population. The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A. and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socieland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MONEY, BANKS, PANICS AND PROSPERITY. By W. H. Clagett. 15c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull, 5c.

RELIGIOUS, POLITICAL AND SOCIAL FREEDOM. A lecture by Juliet H. Severance, M. D. 10c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

SOCIALISTIC, COMMUNISTIC, MUTUALISTIC AND FINANCIAL FRAGMENTS. By William B. Greene. $1.25.

AGE OF REASON; An Investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel portrait, 50c.

THE TEMPERANCE FOLLY; or, Who's the Worst? Lois Waisbrooker. Dedicated to the wrecks and so-called sinners of a false civilization, 10c.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward Fitzgerald's interpretation; with original introduction; latest version. Special cover. Paper, 10c.

ISOLA; or, The Disinherited. A drama in six acts. Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1. Postage, 5c.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 10c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemons and David Overmeyer. 20c.

THE STORY OF ILAIN; or, The Evolution of a Mind. Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Stuart Ross), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. $1. Postage, 5c.

SONGS OF A CHILD, AND OTHER POEMS. By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. $1.50. Postage, 10c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 31 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 638 pages. 50c

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 87 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltaire and Voltaire. 25c.

VACCINATION A BLUNDER IN POISONS. C. F. Nichols. "Vaccination will undoubtedly rank as the greatest and most pernicious failure of the century; this vaccination is no longer a matter of opinion, but of science," said Alfred Russell Wallace, and in this booklet the facts are arrayed in support of this assertion. 25c.

VACCINATION A CRIME. With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions. Felix L. Oswald, M. D. "Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads smallpox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents." With illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 196 pages. 10c.

992.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

Your subscription is paid to No. ..... If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 472 pages. Cloth, reduced to $1.

A RED HEART IN A WHITE WORLD. A suggestive manual of Free Ethics; containing a method and a hope. By J. William Lloyd. Handsome illuminated paper cover in white, red and green; 30 pages. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Spouts, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition, $1; five volumes, plainer binding, $1.50; all in one volume, $2.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman. March 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD: An Outline of Practical Co-Operative Individualism. By Henry Sherlock. Regarded by many persons as a more interesting and considered economic reform novel than Bellamy's "Looking Backward." Bound in red silk with gold title. Nearly 60 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, $1.

HISTORY OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. By C. L. James. An excellent history of the French Revolution, well written by one thoroughly familiar with his subject. Special care has been exercised to give the facts as they are, the author not having made himself the champion of any faction. Neatly printed from large type on good book paper, with a substantial binding. 240 pages, with an index and bibliographical epitome. Cloth, $1.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. John H. Kales. Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; The Nation; Tariff or Protection; War Parliaments; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be. 69 pages. Cloth binding, somewhat damaged, and reduced from $1.50 to 50 cents.

HILDA'S HOME; A Story of Woman's Emancipation. Rosa Graul. With Macaulay, Rosa Graul would say, "The cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty." Hence she has no fears that under Freedom the Home and the Family would cease to exist, or that woman will be less loving and lovable, or that man will be less manly and honorable. On the contrary, she maintains that only in the soil and atmosphere of freedom is it possible for true womanhood and manhood to live and flourish. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only subservient to some form of religionism. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life: a religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubericated with portrait of the author. In two editions, de luxe, and plain. Prices, $1.50 and $1.00.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old asceticism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.'" The new Hedonism says: "Be happy and you will be virtuous." In another place the writer says: In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions they have begun to perceive that the ancient and impure things are ordinary and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproducing function." Paper covers; 30 large pages; twelve copies, 50c; single copy, 5c.

THE BIBLE. John E. Remsburg. Contains eleven chapters on the authenticity of the Bible, based on the best authorities of the time; thirteen on the credibility of the Bible, ten on the morality of the Bible, and an appendix in which Mr. Remsburg sets forth unanswerable arguments against the divine origin and in favor of the human origin of the Bible. Twenty-six pages of index enable the reader to instantly refer to any authority quoted or argument used. Mr. Remsburg is one of the most careful, accurate and painstaking writers, and his book is a compendium of the latest scholarship and rationalistic thought on the subject. The late Colonel Ingersoll began his famous lecture on the Bible by saying: "Some one ought to tell the truth about the Bible." This Mr. Remsburg has done—done it fully, and done it well. Large 12mo., 300 pages. Cloth, $1.25.

THE SLAVERY OF OUR TIMES. Count Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of the gifted author, and introduction by the translator, Aylmer Maude. Chapter titles: I. Goods Factors Who Work Thirty-Seven Hours. II. Society's Indifference While Men Perish. III. Justification of the Existing Position of Affairs. IV. The Assertion of Economic Science That Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System. V. Why Learned Economists Assert What Is False. VI. Bankruptcy of the Socialist Ideal. VII. Culture or Freedom? VIII. Slavery Exists Among us. IX. What Is Slavery? X. Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property. XI. Laws the Cause of Slavery. XII. The Essence of Legislation is Organized Violence. XIII. What Are Governments? Is It Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV. How Can Governments Be Abolished? XV. What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword. Well Printed on heavy paper; substantially bound. 186 pages. 60c.

EAT SOME SAND!

About five years ago, Prof. William Windsor, LL. B., Ph. D., the world's most eminent Physiologist, discovered the Sand Cure for Indigestion and Constipation, and since that time more than a half million sufferers have tried it and found that it is Nature's Simple Remedy for restored health. It does not purge or gripe, but it cleans the body out.

"The Natural Life" is the title of Prof. Windsor's monthly magazine in which the Sand Cure is fully described and discussed. It is devoted to the teaching of Vitosophy ("the wise way of living"). Natural Diet, Health and Character Culture, Righteousness and Freedom. One Dollar per year.

PROFESSOR WINDSOR will send full directions for the Sand Cure to anyone sending 25 cents for a three months' trial subscription to The Natural Life. Address THE WINDSOR PUBLISHING CO., Back Bay Postoffice, Boston, Mass.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VII., NO. 42. CHICAGO, ILL., OCT. 29, E. M. 503. (C. E. 1903.) WHOLE NO. 993

REVOLUTION.

Truth is shining, earth's awaking;
Freedom rising, chains are breaking;
Tyrants on their thrones are quaking,
For their reign is nearly done.
Knowledge coming, error leaving;
Pen and press their past retrieving,
Swiftly fly their shuttles, weaving
All the nations into one.

Priests and creeds are retrocoding,
Men the guide within are heeding;
Everyone his garden weeding;
Headlong, bigotry is hurled.
Love unsniping, hate is dying;
Men rejoicing, knaves are sighing;
Deadly curses fast are flying
From a renovated world.

—William Denton.

The Woman Question.

However woman's position in society may change, however her outlook and ideals may develop, so long as the race exists she cannot escape from motherhood. So long as the race exists the question of the birth supply must ultimately come back to her for its answer. Without her understanding, without her conscious and intelligent co-operation with the forces and tendencies that make for progress in the evolution of society, there can be no solution of the vexed questions of the day. . . .

In dealing with woman's relation to society I shall take the subject outside of all consideration of religion or morality. Religion has had a prominent place in the past history of woman's position and it still exerts a great influence. It is a factor which will have to be met in the accomplishment of any racial reform, but it is a matter for the individual to deal with and need not concern us here. This is equally true of morality, which has ever been a variable quantity dependent upon time and place. The morality of one particular age or race is not that of another. Every civilization has its own code. In the last analysis morality must find its basis in science, and its purpose in the progressive well-being of society. Whatever, then, conduces to the improvement of the birth condition and the education of the young is of the highest morality, even should it be found in a complete overturning of all previous codes and ideals.

* * *

In our age and race a study of birth conditions must be a study of marriage. That is the only recognized and legitimate source of offspring. Marriage—that is, the established relation of men and women—has been in all races and all ages founded on economic considerations. Early group-marriage sprung out of the necessity of a weak species to unite themselves for purposes of defense and sustenance. Marriage by capture followed when the race grew less nomadic and established itself in localities, and marriage by purchase arose when the race had become in some degree industrial and woman had acquired a certain economic value as a worker—a slave. In this gradual way marriage as we know it to-day has been developed, and since the beginnings of industry it has been essentially a property institution. Modern marriage has been clothed with a spurious sanctity, it has been enhaloed with incense of sentiment and romance, but underneath all the fair show it remains an institution of property right in wife and children. Our present marriage systems is part and parcel of our economic system, and those of us who contemplate a revolution in economics must recognize the fact that such a change must be accompanied by a change in the marriage institution, a revolution in the established relation of the sexes. Those of us who have thought out the matter along revolutionary lines must see that the new system must have for its object the betterment of the race through enlightened reproduction. . . .

Marriage, I have said, is a property institution, but in its development as such there has grown up within and around it a feeling, an attitude of mind, a belief that amounts to a superstition, a superstition promoted and fortified by religion and boasting "divine" authority. This is as deadly as any of the old theological beliefs from which we are freeing ourselves, and it is much harder to eradicate, for it permeates the whole attitude of men and women toward each other. It is the very essence of our "Christian marriage," and it reaches its fullest development in prostitution, that inevitable companion of legal marriage.

* * *

This superstition may be briefly stated thus: Men have sexual needs which women must supply, but since this service of women in behalf of men entails some risk and sacrifice on their part, they must be given economic compensation.

Do not be in haste to deny that this is the essence of marriage. Look closely and you will find it wherever you find civilized man. Furthermore, men, instead of taking the humble position of beggars or suitors for this service, have arrogated to themselves the right to demand it. This has bred in women the necessary cunning to secure their reward, and has made of marriage a disgraceful barter, in which the woman shrewdly withholds the required service until she has the reward inalienably secured to her. If she is foolish enough to surrender herself without these precautions she runs great risk of losing her recompense. She will not be cheated again, but will drive a sharper bargain with the next purchaser.

All women may not understand this, few women would admit it, but they all know and act upon it. Every girl learns early in life to use her charms as an allurement with which to beguile men into saying the things she likes to hear and doing the things she wants done. How many women will own to the possession of passionate needs and desires? Where will you find frank equality between women and men?

Love itself, love in its affectional and intellectual aspect, has succumbed to the same perversion, and you will find whole realms of philosophy tainted with this lie. Love, we are told, is conflict, strategy, deceit. We are told this, and we believe it and we act upon it. The woman prides herself upon restraining and ignoring her own nature and using her attractions as a snare. She plays upon the passions of men for her own ends. Men pride themselves upon being quite too clever to be played with, and take great glory to themselves for outwitting women, taking them off their guard and compelling their submission. And there are those who call this love!

And the children—oh, the pity of it! the shame of it!—the children are mere accidents in this perversion of instincts, this bargaining between lust and avarice.

"Oh! oh!" will cry the virtuous ladies. "Such talk is shocking!"

True, it is shocking. It is meant to be shocking. Your

"Christian marriage" is shocking. Your woman's "virtue" is shocking. Your whole system of sexual morals and economics is the materialization of an abominable lie.

As soon as you see it in its nakedness, stripped of its trappings, you yourselves are ashamed of it, and you want it hidden again under this glamour of romance and religion with which you conceal its enormity.

Here, then, is my arraignment of marriage—modern marriage, with its concomitant divorce courts, its unspeakable but inevitable prostitution, with its impossible and unnatural ideas of virtue and its hypocritical disregard of them; this thing of shreds and patches, permeated by an atmosphere of falsehood and concealment. This is the full flower of our present economic system. This is the best we have been able to do in making birth conditions and growth conditions for our young.

"We are here to get better births and a better result from those births." We cannot do this through marriage. What is to be done about it?

Here, then, is the question. I put it to you women, I put it to you men, to all women and to all men. It is the baby question, it is the woman question, it is the social question. It is peremptory, it is insistent, it will not be ignored, it must be answered, and you men and women must together find the answer. —From "The Woman Question," by Adeline Champney.

Does It Pay to Be a Radical?

I believe Mr. Crane can understand my question if he will study it some more, for he is naturally bright. I have known others to comprehend what I "had wrote or said," to use one of Mr. Crane's advanced grammatical forms, but they did not have to defend hypocrisy and other questionable doctrines. As a preacher of total depravity, Mr. Crane has John Calvin faded to an attenuated shadow. There is no hope for reform for the "excrescences" and "barnacles" he describes, yet the line between them and the true radical is so uncertain that he cannot define it when asked to do so. Confessing ignorance, I ask: What has the free woman to fear from the impostor barnacle that she does not fear from the true radical? What is a "nefarious design"? Mr. Crane is a plagiarist. I am sure I saw this expression thirty years ago in "The Terror of Yanoo, or, His Forty Victims," by D. Deadeye Sleuth. It is orthodox enough to be even older. What warning is there in it that wide-awake people need?

To make the radical cause stand for hypocrisy as a fixed policy "when the result is sufficient" is certainly a nefarious design. I will ask Mr. Crane once more, and hope he is done with dodging: Do you justify the impostor in the deceits you described when he thinks the reward is sufficient? If not, then modify your maxim.—Anonymous letter sent to J. M. Crane.

I have received an anonymous letter, signed with a picture of skull and cross-bones and postmarked Chicago, in which the writer, presumably referring to two recent articles of mine in Lucifer, complains that I "defend hypocrisy and other questionable doctrines." I admit the accusation; so that settles that.

Then he goes on to say: "As a preacher of total depravity, Mr. Crane has John Calvin faded to an attenuated shadow." I know of no basis for that accusation. I do not believe in total depravity, not even in the total depravity of a writer of anonymous letters who signs them with skulls and cross-bones.

He proceeds: "There is no hope for the excrescences and barnacles he describes, yet the line between them and the true radical is so uncertain that he cannot define it when asked to do so." I think I drew the line between them fairly well in Lucifer No. 988.

Going on, the writer says: "Confessing ignorance, I ask: What was the free woman to fear from the impostor barnacle that she does not have to fear from the true radical?"

Before attempting to answer that question I will mention the fact that my article on "Does It Pay to Be a Radical?" was written to point out the reasons why conservative women have wrong opinions of radicals. Of course, free women are more likely to detect impostors than conservative women would be, and I think neither a free nor a conservative woman has anything to fear from a true radical.

"What is a 'nefarious design'?" he asks, but he seems to have looked into the dictionary after asking, for he adds: "To make the radical cause stand for hypocrisy as a fixed policy, 'when the result [I wrote "reward," not result] is sufficient,' is certainly a nefarious design."

I am not certain whether he is using the phrase "stand for" in the usual slang way, which would mean to make the radical cause a defender of or a tolerator of hypocrisy; or if he means it in the good English sense, which would mean to make the radical cause merely another name for hypocrisy. I certainly made neither assertion.

Then he concludes: "I will ask Mr. Crane once more, and hope he is done with dodging: Do you justify the impostor in the deceits you have described, when he thinks the reward is sufficient? If not, then modify your maxim."

I thought I made it perfectly clear that I do not blame impostors when the reward is sufficient to make them impostors, and if they did not think the reward sufficient they would not be impostors. In other words, I do not blame impostors any more for being impostors than I blame a wolf for being a wolf. But if I were a raiser of sheep I think I should take precautions to prevent wolves from killing them. When I pointed out the difference between true radicals and impostors I was simply discriminating between wolves and shepherd dogs, as it were.

I think words would be wasted in trying to defend hypocrisy for a reader of Lucifer who writes anonymous letters and signs them with skulls and cross-bones. I do not even blame him, for the reward, doubtless, is sufficient. Selah!

JONATHAN MAYO CRANE.

Jonathan Mayo Crane—Comrade: I take the liberty of writing you a private letter in response to your query in Lucifer asking women to give the proportion among men calling themselves radicals they have found worthy of the name.

My experience dates back to some fifteen years ago, and among the hundreds of men calling themselves radicals whom I have either corresponded with or met personally, there are but two of the correspondents and three I know personally who fall to come up to my definition of a true radical.

These two correspondents are both educated men—one a professional man, the other a business man—and they persist in writing upon sex questions in a way offensive to any refined woman. I say persist, not that I continue to write to them, but I know of others they have written to, and the letters are quite similar to the ones I received.

Of the three I met who deserve to be "read out of the ranks," one is so certain that every radical woman exists but for the one purpose of sex intercourse that he is highly offended when he finds one who does not respond to his advances. The second has a fashion of treating his new acquaintances to flowers, theater tickets, rides, etc., and then telling his next acquaintance—who is, perhaps, with him at the theater—"I spent five, ten (or such like) dollars on Miss or Mrs. So and So, and then she refused my advances." He ought to learn that putting a radical woman under financial obligations to him doesn't necessarily mean that she repays him in the way he expects. Right here is a good place to say a word against the practice of indiscriminate giving on the part of men. It is a very commendable thing to wish to afford another person pleasure, but it should be done freely or not at all, with no expectation of reward, sexual or otherwise. At least, one would suppose when a man asks a woman to take a ride or accompany him to the theater, he gets as much pleasure from her company as she does from his. This sort of radical has not outgrown the idea that sex is a sort of merchandise.

The third and last one I feel called upon to denounce is a man whose conversation is always on the one theme—sex. He is gentlemanly in his deportment, would never cause any woman a moment's inconvenience or trouble but he simply breaks every rule of good conversation by everlastingly talking on one subject.

Now, I consider none of these five men bad, yet if a woman friend of mine should ask me regarding them I should feel it my duty to warn her as to their decided peculiarities and save her the trouble of having to offend them perhaps later.

The faults in radicals are not all on the side of the men by any means. There are women who call themselves radicals, and yet when among conservative people they denounce radicalism. I am glad to say I know but one of this type. One need not parade one's ideas among people one knows will disagree with them, but one should either keep still or speak one's true sentiments when occasion warrants.

Thank you for having brought the subject up for discussion. It's the only way we have of learning what others think.

MYRA PEPPER.

Chicago is now the storm center of agitation for a weeding-out campaign among reformers. The disturbance arises naturally and is in harmony with experience. There never was organized any sort of reform movement but soon or late the better element concerned in it had the deplorable fact forced on their attention that the cause had drawn to its standard a bunch of adherents who were a damage to it.

Such harmful persons very early attached themselves to the Christian Church and moved the Apostle Paul to voice the wish that they were cut off just under the ears. But that was long ago. Not to linger in the too distant past, we may note that the American revolutionary cause developed a set of men, such as Paine and his kind, who had to be turned down when the patricians took hold of the country and filled the offices. The men were well enough as tree-planters, but the fruits were plainly designed by Providence for the elect, who gathered them.

Afterwards the anti-slavery cause in America was hampered by a set of people called Abolitionists, who, according to the opinion of the best thinkers in the party, put the whole movement on the bum. Such were Garrison and the other extremists, who held that the way to get rid of slavery was to destroy the institution. It is needless to say that they were read out of the anti-slavery party with the awful circumstances of excommunication. I wish I could recall the names of the persons who were foremost in causing their expulsion, but unfortunately nothing has been heard of them since and their names have not been preserved in the common speech.

At Chicago the work of differentiation—the separating of the woolly from the too woolly—has been started in one division of the reformers by Mr. Jonathan Mayo Crane, a contributor to Lucifer, and in another by Mr. H. L. Green, editor of the Free Thought Magazine. Mr. Crane is a social reformer; Mr. Green is a free religionist, and each finds himself rubbing elbows with individuals whose conduct and motives he cannot applaud.

Mr. Crane is almost persuaded that it does not pay to be a radical, because there are to be found in the radical camp the following mischievous characters, owing to whose presence the course of free love does not run smooth:

"1. The sexual tramp or forager, who sees nothing in radicalism but an easy means of gratifying his one predominating desire.

"2. The terrorist, who imagines he can kill the upas-tree of injustice by lopping off its topmost branches.

"3. The impostor, generally a mere rake or libertine.

"4. The fool, who imagines that a free woman should not repel the advances of any man.

"5. The noisy rebel, who delights in saying or doing things that show his or her disregard of or contempt for conventional society."

Sympathy is at once felt for the high-minded man who, when the persons above characterized claim the proud title of radical, would gladly be known as something else; and his desire is all the more understandable from the fact that the opponents of any party invariably select its parasites to hold up as its representatives. Still it is not practicable for one to dissociate himself altogether from the vile. Suppose you get out of the radical camp, where do you find yourself? You are in the conservative camp, where the company is just as bad; or in the orthodox, where it is worse. The sexual tramp, the terrorist, the impostor, the fool and the noisy rebel are still with you. You can't lose them, and if you keep running to escape identification with the undesirable you will finally be asking yourself whether it pays to be a vertebrate animal.

One would like to feel that all radicals are high-minded and act from sane and conscientious motives. In approaching one of the fair sex the professed social radical should be able to say without intent to deceive: "I am doing this thing on principle, and not for the purpose of gratifying any desire which predominates at the moment. I am proceeding about this business as a radical." He should be generous enough to admit that the woman with no strings on her is not under obligation to meet the advances of every man, and he should respect her right to repel them so long as she makes an exception in his case.

I abhor the rebel who to show his disregard of conventions delights in doing things. He ought to be doing time. The one who says things is no better. He should keep quiet and let me do the talking. True, he often expresses my views, or at least the logic of the position I have taken, but his holding the mirror up to my mind and exposing it naked causes me embarrassment. Dang him for proving to me that I haven't the courage of my convictions! . . .

It is vain to hope that the fools in all reforms will ever learn sense, but we must not let them put us on the run. I trust Mr. Crane will take counsel of his liver, that seat of courage in our species, and conclude that if radicalism is sound it will pay him to be a radical.

The complaint of Mr. Green produces more agony in my mind than do the troubles of Mr. Crane, as it is based on the conduct of Freethinkers, and I profess to be a Freethinker myself, while I have never qualified as a social radical.

Mr. Green differentiates two classes of Freethinkers, and against one class prefers the following charges:

1. They dislike and oppose the Church "for the reason that the Church teaches a better morality than they like to live up to."
2. They "glory in destroying the Church."
3. They "hate the Church."
4. They "rejoice if a clergyman goes wrong and brings disgrace upon the Church."

Of the Freethinkers transgressing as above Mr. Green affirms that they are "a damage to the Freethought cause and do us more harm than good—they bring disgrace to the cause, and should not be recognized as Freethinkers." Those are the bad Freethinkers. The virtues of the good ones shine by contrast, thus:

1. They oppose the Church "for the reason that the morality taught by the Church is too low for them."
2. They "pride themselves in advancing a higher civilization and making the world better."
3. They "aim only to rid the Church of its errors and false teachings."
4. They are "greatly pleased if a clergyman steps up higher and in place of preaching superstition preaches the Religion of Humanity."

Any Freethinker who realizes that he belongs to the first class will make haste to get into the second under penalty of losing his tag. As for myself, I am not conscious of belonging wholly to either. It is tough to find oneself left out or divided, but that is my fix. While disliking and opposing the Church, I must strenuously deny that I do so on account of the lofty morality which it teaches. No morality is too good for me, or higher than I like to practice. And I would not say either that my dislike and opposition are based on the grounds of its low moral teaching. I am against its religion. Teaching morality is a serious offense on the part of the Church, but its crime is inculcating supernaturalism. If any gentleman has left the Church to escape its high morals, he must have done so under a misapprehension, as he may be as immoral while a believer as he can if he turns unbeliever.

I ask to be let in on No. 2 of the first class, and to "glory" with the rest so ticketed in "destroying the Church." Any person not wishing to see the Church destroyed should join and support it. But I also desire to be accounted one of those who "pride themselves in advancing a higher civilization." Such pride is not inconsistent with glorying in destroying the graft which is the Church. "Ecrasez l'infame," remarked Voltaire; crush the monster. I think he was right, and so was Ingersoll when he said that the only way to reform the Catholic Church is to destroy it; and considering that the Protestant Church is Catholic so far as it is churchy, no reason appears for making an exception in its favor. . . .

There is nothing in the wrong-going of a minister to rejoice the emancipated heart. (See Class 1, No. 2.) A clerical fall does not connote a decline of faith. . . . I am in Mr. Green's communion so far as to be greatly pleased if a clergyman "steps up higher and in place of superstition preaches the religion of humanity." We must in the future depend upon ministers who turn state's evidence to supply the Freethought platform. I once hoped the Liberal University might turn out our kind of preachers, but am afraid not much dependence can be placed on that source. Mr. Wakeman's web of cosmological sociology does not appear to be catching the fly student. So I am glad

CONTINUED ON PAGE 333.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 509 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 West 143d street, New York.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Westward Bound.

Las Vegas, N. M.

Leaving Topeka and the many friends whose co-operative help I had been the recipient of for near four weeks, on board a Santa Fe "tourist" train, I passed through a lovely country, made doubly interesting by one of the loveliest autumn days, Monday afternoon, October 19. Kansas corn, the chief agricultural product, is now safe from frost, and will yield a fair average, so we are told by the later estimates, notwithstanding reports of killing frosts in September. Nothing attracts the eye of the tourist through Southern and Western Kansas more than do the dark-green fields of alfalfa clover, contrasting so strongly at this season with the somber brown of the cornfields and the long stretches of dead prairie grass.

At Hutchinson, 168 miles out from Topeka and 692 miles from Chicago, occurred the first serious detention—an "engine off the track," at or near the "round house"—giving rise to an uncomfortable reflection as to what might have been the consequences had the monster iron horse taken it into his head to leave the track when the train was at full speed and while passing over high embankments.

So much time was lost in getting the engine to its place again that it was full 9 o'clock before we were once more speeding onward towards the next important stopping place, La Junta—pronounced La Hunta—in Colorado, the junction of the main line with the Denver branch. La Junta is a town of some five thousand people, situated near the valley of the Arkansas River, a shipping point of much importance for cattle and horses, also for cantaloupes and sugar beets, which latter industry has lately become a remunerative one wherever irrigation in Eastern Colorado is practicable.

From Hutchinson to La Junta, a stretch of some 237 miles, the direction is nearly west, but from this point the road takes a nearly southwestern course to Albuquerque, N. M., a distance of 147 miles.

Soon after leaving La Junta the twin mountains called Spanish Peaks came into view, on the western horizon, white with snow, shiny bright in the morning sun, and distant some thirty or forty miles from the nearest point on the road.

The immense plains are the home of the "prairie dog," an animal about the size of the common gray squirrel, but shaped more like the dog family. As the train thunders past the little fellow stands erect on his hind feet, on his hillock, showing a whitish brown chest and abdomen, apparently wondering what business the iron horse has to come whistling and puffing through his domain without first getting permission from the original settlers. Like his old-time neighbors—the buffaloes and the Indians—the prairie dog is fast finding out that he has no rights the white man feels himself bound to respect.

When passing the Raton range of mountains it takes two and sometimes three engines to get one train through the tunnel—elevation 7,608 feet above sea level. At this point it is said many people suffer from the effects of the change in the density of the air, but I felt no inconvenience from this source. My attention was taken up wholly by the picturesquely beautiful scenery on all sides, snow-capped ridges lying to the south of us now, as well as to the northwest.

At 4 o'clock p. m., Tuesday, nearly four hours behind time, the "tourist" train pulled into the station at Las Vegas, N. M., the point on the way to San Francisco I had been looking forward to for more than a month past. This little city is the commercial metropolis of Northern New Mexico, 6,382 feet above sea level, finely situated for climate, altitude, purity of atmosphere, etc., as a health resort and also as a pleasure resort for those who have money and leisure to spend in pursuit of the sensuous pleasures of mortal life. At the depot I was met by my old-time friend and relative, Solomon Harman, who holds a responsible position in the service of the Santa Fe Railroad Company, with whom I am now stopping at "The Central," a finely located and well-appointed medium-priced hotel, whose landlord tries hard to make his guests feel that next to one's own home a well-ordered hotel is the place to live for solid comfort.

Have met a few of the independent thinkers of Las Vegas, who are trying to arrange for a meeting Sunday evening, provided a suitable hall can be obtained.

M. HARMAN.

The article on the first page of this issue was taken from "The Woman Question," an address delivered before the Boston Social Science Club by Adeline Champney. It is published in a neat little pamphlet by the Comrade Co-Operative Company, New York, and is to be had for 5 cents by ordering of the publishers or of this office.

John Turner Arrested.

The following dispatch is taken from the Chicago Record-Herald of Saturday, Oct. 24. Comment is perhaps unnecessary. The reader is intelligent enough to make his own:

"New York, Oct. 23.—Armed with a warrant sworn out by Secretary Cortelyou of the Department of Commerce and Labor, a party of immigration inspectors, secret service operators and policemen under command of Acting Captain Daly of the East Thirty-fifth street police station, invaded Murray Hill Lyceum in East Thirty-fourth street to-night and arrested John Turner, an Englishman, whom they accused of promoting Anarchy.

"There were more than 500 alleged Anarchists, including Emma Goldman and Johan Most, in the hall at the time. Turner, who is the organizer of the Shop Assistants' Union of England, had just concluded a lecture on 'Trade Unionism and the General Strike' at the Murray Hill Lyceum when the officers entered. Turner went quietly, while the audience, at first disposed to resist, remained seated when Emma Goldman urged that no demonstration be made. The arrest was made under the provisions of the alien labor law relating to 'inciting and promoting Anarchy.' For five weeks, so the authorities say, Turner has been traveling over the country preaching Anarchy, but so far they have been unable to lay hands on him. A collection of Anarchist literature was also confiscated by the authorities during their raid. Among it were copies of a circular announcing that Turner would lecture on Oct. 27, Nov. 1, 8, 9 and 15.

"Turner was taken to Ellis Island and will be arraigned before a United States commissioner to-morrow. He will be deported. This is the first case under the new law."

Will You "Love" and Not "Obey"?

It is getting to be quite the thing, even among church people, to omit the word "obey" from the marriage ceremony. The brides in such case declare they are willing to promise they "will love, honor and cherish," but they will not promise to obey. It is the opinion of many married people that it is easier to "obey" than to love. Indeed, a promise to love is a risky affair, and in many if not in most cases impossible of fulfillment, whereas it is quite possible to obey. People cannot "love" to order, or revere, or honor, but in a pinch they can obey. It is the old story of straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel.—Pittsburg Kansan.

Censorship by Injunction.

When "government by injunction" came into vogue in the United States, under the fostering care of federal judges, predictions were made that it would yet be extended so as to operate as a press censorship. The idea was hooted, but now the step has been taken. A judge in Cincinnati has just granted an injunction which forbids the publication by a labor paper of a list of "unfair" business places. If an injunction can be used for that purpose, it can be used for any other object of press censorship; and every newspaper is thus placed at the mercy of any autocrat of the bench.—The Public (Chicago).

Had nature as many laws as the State, even God himself could not rule it.—Ludwig Boerne.

Does It Pay to Be a Radical?

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 330.

when a minister preaches the religion of humanity in lieu of superstition. Only, to have my full approval, he must give his doctrine the right name and not steal the thunder of Freethought and shove it on his confiding hearers as an echo from Sinai.

Mr. Crane's segregation of radicals cannot be very effective as regards the main body of them, for the worst thing threatened is his individual desertion of a cause that enlists such a variety of skates. But Mr. Green starts his wedge in the very center of disruptive possibilities, and there is going to be a total cleavage when he drives her home. To one side will fall those repudiated Freethinkers who are ethically subnormal as tested by the morality of the Church—those who hate the Church and glory in its destruction, and who do not grieve and refuse to be comforted when a preacher proves by his conduct the insufficiency of his moral code. On the other side from these people who bring disgrace upon the cause will be found such as reflect credit upon it—to wit: the morally superior, who seek not the destruction of the Church, but only to rid it of certain errors or mistakes which that otherwise admirable institution has inadvertently permitted itself to entertain. These will assert their exclusive claim to the name of Freethinkers, and the other fellows will have to do their thinking hereafter through a different quill. . . .

The separation of the genuine from the bogus Freethinkers being now complete, and the latter left without a label, Mr. Green becomes prophetic. This is his vision:

"Hereafter we are not to be judged by our opinions but by the character of our lives. We shall never gain the public approbation until we shall be able to prove that Freethought will give the world a higher morality than Christianity, that Freethinkers make better citizens, better business men, better husbands, and better wives than Christians. We shall hereafter be judged by the same rule that Christians are, by our deeds and not by our creeds. The sooner we learn this lesson the better it will be for us."

That has a good, old fashioned sound. Somebody long since put the same sophism in fewer words: "For modes of faith let graceless zealots fight; his can't be wrong whose life is in the right." But the character of one's life is no guarantee whatever of the correctness of his opinions, and it cannot exempt his faith from judgment. Mr. Green does not mean to be taken literally or to have it inferred that he practices as he writes about not judging men by their opinions. Probably he knows nothing about the life of Mr. Jonathan Mayo Crane, but he knows his opinions and judges and condemns him thereby. He cut Lucifer off his exchange list because he could not abide its opinions; and to look over his category of excommunicated Freethinkers one would conclude that it is mainly because of a difference of opinion that he relegates them to the woods.

No scientific truth was ever got at by making a man's life a test of the soundness of his intellectual convictions. The declaration, therefore, that we shall hereafter be judged by our deeds and not by our creeds is fallacious. We shall be judged by both. By our deeds the world will judge our morality. By our creeds they will judge our capacity for absorbing superstition. Possibly they will sometime gauge a man's intelligence by his belief. . . .

A duty laid upon us under the new departure is that of proving that Freethinkers make better citizens, better business men, better husbands, and better wives than Christians. That ought to be easily done, provided President Roosevelt is not appointed judge in the competition. Mr. Roosevelt's ideal of a good citizen is one who is anxious to fight; of a husband, one who is anxious to raise a large number of children; and of a wife, the woman who, like the spouse of that martyr in Queen Mary's reign, Mr. John Rogers, could follow her husband to the stake, or draw a pension as a war widow, "with nine small children and one at her breast." Freethinkers might fail in this examination, many of them being men of peace, and also averse to burdening the fruitful sex with all the young ones they will bear. Yet if they except to Mr. Roosevelt as referee, how can they consistently permit anybody to decide for them whether their morality is higher or lower than the Christian article, unless it be themselves? But they are in the minority, and any higher morality they might introduce would be as much out of fashion, and hence as eloquently denounced, as though it were distinctly lower. The one way to "gain the public approbation" (if that is what we are looking for instead of the cold truth) is to practice approved Christian morality more rigidly than it is adhered to by the Christian. But how that would convince a rational public of the superior value of Freethought as a promoter of "higher" morality than the Church teaches is not at once perceived.

I aim to lead a life devoid of crime, but whether or not I succeed in doing so I trust that nobody will ever quote my personal merits or demerits as affecting any proposition I may here happen to have advanced. My shining virtues, which attract an embarrassing amount of attention in the community where I reside, do not logically tend to prove the Christian religion false; and if my austere life should convince another that the convictions I hold are sound I could only feel that I had made a convert by false pretenses. When Freethinkers get down to making doubters of Christianity by the practice of the approved Christian morals, it may become incumbent on some of us to head off the unreasoned influx by getting into jail.

The man of corrupt life is a moral imbecile, but may have valuable ideas. My conviction that the Christian religion, being a humbug, is necessarily mischievous, and that Freethought is the one road to truth and sound basis of conduct, is so firm that if all true Freethinkers were to abandon orthodox morality my confidence would not be shaken in the least. When urged to the practice of a higher than Christian morality in order that we may gain the approbation of the Christian public, we may be sure that our advisers are not recommending that we shall depart the breadth of a skivver from any line of morality that orthodox Christians approve.

I propose to offer at an early date a few suggestions as to what might prove to be superior in one domain of ethics to the accepted system, with a view to providing Mr. Green with a defined and specific purpose in the place of his generalities about higher morals. Meanwhile the efforts of himself and Mr. Crane to weed out their respective camps will be philosophically observed.—G. E. M., in Truth Seeker (New York).

Instruction in Sexual Matters.

The maxim that the "blood of martyrs is the seed of the Church" holds good in other matters than religion. When Anthony Comstock, in his self-righteous zeal on behalf of public morality, persecuted the late Ida C. Craddock in one place after another on account of her writings on sexual matters, until, finally, he drove her to self-destruction, he gave an impetus to the whole question that will work directly against his views. Miss Craddock's booklet, "The Wedding Night," which is under the ban, had met with a qualified approval from not a few physicians and clergy. While, perhaps, we could not agree with all that the writer says—and this might apply to writings on any subject—there is much in what she says that is good, and nothing that could be called vicious. We believe that the authoress was impelled by the highest motives in writing and circulating the pamphlet; and so far as we have been able to learn, no evidence has been produced that any one's morals have been injured by its perusal.

We think that physicians are increasingly realizing that for the laity to become better informed on sexual matters will contribute to the solution of some of the most vexed social problems; and it is a pity that a misguided monitor of public morals should be able to secure the assistance of a prejudiced judge in an attempt to check the movement. As a matter of fact, this incident comes closer still to the medical profession. These subjects are sometimes discussed quite freely in the medical press; and who can guarantee that a copy containing such discussion may not fall into the hands of somebody outside of the profession? Or, again, any physician might write a letter containing the substance of any of the indicted paragraphs in "The Wedding Night," in answer to a patient's inquiry. The question therefore arises: What are our legal rights in the matter? We doubt if the laws governing the practice of medicine have anything to say upon such a topic. If Anthony Comstock is going to exercise a censorship over our literature and correspondence, he will meet with some opposition. And if he spares us, what right had he to single out for his attentions somebody else whose motives were exactly those of the physician, the imparting to those who seek it of advice on sexual matters?—Eugene H. Porter, A. M., M. D., editor, in the North American.

Men should keep their eyes wide open before marriage and half shut afterward.—Mme. Scuderi.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Mrs. C. Danzig, Herkimer, Kan.: I inclose $1 to pay for another year, and hope others will do the same. Am glad the editor is receiving such a cordial welcome.

C. B. Hoffman, Room 134, Board of Trade Building, Kansas City, Mo.: Please send Lucifer to me here instead of to Enterprise. I should be pleased to have friends in Kansas City or visiting here call on me.

Mrs. A. E. B., Chapman, Kan.: I greatly admire your straightforward, plain talk on the sex question, and feel that woman's slavery is the slavery of all humankind and the cause of untold misery and degradation. I am heartily in favor of radical reformation all along the line, for I am one who has suffered and so been made to see.

W. W. M., New Haven, Conn.: I am renewing my subscription herewith, though I know it has not yet expired, for I do not want it to expire. Having read Lucifer for fifteen or sixteen years, I feel I cannot do without it so long as I am alive and the paper continues to be published. My best wishes to encourage you in the work you are accomplishing.

G. W. C., California: I have saved a dollar for you. I see in last Lucifer that you will stop it to those who are not paid in advance. I wish that we could spare you more, but we have been unfortunate and are short of money in our old age and decrepitude. Wife is 82, I am 84; we have to do washing to keep up expenses, so we are tired most of the time. We don't own a home, so have to pay rent. We have 140 hens, but have to buy feed for them, so the profit on them is small. I am getting deaf, blind, dizzy and clumsy. I can see to read some yet, but can't remember it as well as I used to.

[The name of the writer of the foregoing letter is not given, as the letter was not given for publication; but it is a name familiar to many of Lucifer's readers. He has been a subscriber to Lucifer almost from the first of its existence. He and his wife had a comfortable home of their own some years ago, but went to California to take part in an enterprise, and through this move lost everything they had. Since then the struggle for existence has been very hard. Their subscription is now paid in advance, but so far as I am aware there is no postal regulation regarding the use to be made by us of this hard-earned dollar.—L. H.]

Kunegos: I have been, as your books will show, a reader of Lucifer for about ten years, and during that time have written little or nothing for its pages. The writers of the different articles appearing in Lucifer have all been earnest, and most of them honest in the expression of their views on the all-important subject of sex and cogent question. I want to especially commend the article by Dora Forster in No. 990, as being among the best I have ever seen on the merits of the question. She truly says: "Sex slavery cannot exist where educated minds have produced an ideal which makes such slavery abhorrent," and, of course, it logically follows that where no such lofty ideals exist there will be not only sex slavery, but slavery in all its varied forms, just as we have it among us at the present day. This ideal to which Dora refers is a wonderful thing. In it lies the fate of humanity for good or for ill. With a lofty ideal a man is safe from harm by evil, no matter where he may be. Such an individual sees no evil, and surely a man is safe from that which to him has no existence. He, as he looks abroad in the world, discovers only good. He clearly understands that the so-called evils that he meets on the journey of life are only the results of ignorance, seeking in a wrong direction for the good. We are all after the good, or what we in our mistaken judgments esteem as good. No man goes wrong because he wants to go wrong. He is not instigated by the devil, for the very good reason that, outside of the false and counterfeit ideals of men, the devil has no existence. In other words, evils and devils have no existence outside of the vain and ignorant imaginations of men. Hence the cultivation of a pure and lofty ideal becomes the most important business of every man, woman and child upon earth, and the time is coming when everything that interferes with the promotion and improvement of this ideal will be cast out of decent society as detrimental to the best interests of humanity.

Innocence Versus Ignorance.

Innocence and ignorance are generally regarded as synonymous. A wise writer, who in his own nature united the innocence of the child with the wisdom of the philosopher, speaks of the two kinds of innocence. That condition of childhood which has no knowledge of evil he calls the innocence of ignorance; whilst the purity of a maturer state, when the possessor has passed through the fires of experience, he describes as the innocence of wisdom. To those who hold that innocence flies before the fall of knowledge—that its very existence depends on a state of ignorance, this will appear absurd. This notion has so perverted modern minds, that not only is innocence supposed to consist in an oblivion to evil, but even natural facts, which are related to what we somewhat exclusively call moral questions, are carefully concealed from the young, lest their innocence should thereby be sullied. The training of most children largely consists of a studied hiding from them of some of the most interesting facts of their existence. Their natural curiosity regarding their origin and first appearance as human beings is baffled at every turn, and the most ridiculous falsehoods are invented to keep them in ignorance. A child's curiosity is often aroused by the arrival of a new baby, when straightway mothers, nurses and friends fabricate absurd stories about doctors with babies in bags, of bushes on which babies grow.

Even intelligent parents, who in other matters encourage the curiosity which leads a child to ask questions about everything it sees, will, when confronted with inquiries on this subject, give evasive and ambiguous replies. In this way the deception is kept up for several years, the parents priding themselves on their children's innocence. Yet they are fully aware that the knowledge withheld must come at no very distant period. They know perfectly well that, in spite of all the deception that was practiced upon themselves, some portion of the truth became known to them, and that their own children must inevitably discover something of their physical nature and origin. Where, then, is the wisdom of hiding what must be revealed, or of telling children silly lies to keep them from discovering, in any but a clandestine way, some of the most wonderful and interesting phenomena of nature? This foolish policy arises from a misunderstanding of the true nature of innocence, from confounding it with ignorance. Parents fondly think that in keeping the minds of their children dark they are preserving the purity of their hearts and habits. But only noxious and unwholesome things grow in the dark, and it is impossible to calculate how many young souls have been polluted through ignorance. The pure, young mind, looking out into the world through inexperienced eyes, begins to wonder and inquire. He brings his wonderings and questionings to the source of all his wisdom—his father and his mother. He is put off with fairy tales, which satisfy him for a time, but do not accord with the growing revelation which comes with his growth of mind and body.

A boy's confidence in his parents having been impaired by past deception, and perhaps by harsh refusals to impart the desired information, he turns to others. His school-fellows have been perplexed, misled and repulsed in the same way, and with them he finds sympathy and a perfect readiness to impart all the real or fancied knowledge they possess. Happy the boy or girl who at this time meets only pure and innocent minds with which to commune on forbidden themes. Could parents insure only such companions for their children their methods would not then be so disastrous. But, alas! coarse and common minds are ever the readiest to impart their corrupted knowledge, and the fountain of wisdom is poisoned at its source. The knowledge which, received from a pure and understanding mind, elevates and instructs, when associated with impurity is destructive of "innocence born of ignorance."

The wise parents, instead of weaving pretty fancies as answers to the child's questionings, teaches the wonderful way in which all creatures enter into their earthly existence. It is easy to explain, even to young children, how the births of flowers and trees, birds, beasts and human beings are similar, and a new wonder and beauty will be added to all forms of life. The young mind receives such information with wonder and delight, and, given in such a way, the knowledge so earnestly coveted by every child brings only pure and noble impressions, instead of the coarse and degraded ideas too often introduced by ill-trained school-fellows or gossiping servants. Instead of concealment and mistrust, a beautiful confidence will be induced between parent and child, which will more effectually shield the child's innocence than all the cunning fables the heart of man can devise. The innocence of ignorance will, it is true, be lost, but a nobler and more robust innocence, founded upon true knowledge, will take its place, will grow with its growth and be a sure protection in the hour of temptation.—Emily E. White, in the Herald of Health (London).

"WHO IS THE ENEMY?"

Dr. R. W. Shufeldt, biologist, author of several scientific works and of more than seven hundred articles on medicine, travel, science, sexual problems and other subjects, writes to E. C. Walker: "I thank you very much indeed for the copy you sent me of your valuable pamphlet, 'Who Is the Enemy—Anthony Comstock or You?' I have read it from cover to cover with the utmost satisfaction and unqualified approval. It is one of the best and strongest things you have put out, and I am with you solid in both the letter and spirit of it. I prize the copy most highly." Ask for table of contents and specimen pages of "Who Is the Enemy?" or send 20 cents to this office for the pamphlet.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

Special offer: This valuable work sent free on receipt of 25 cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light Bearer. Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Any one wishing to attend medical college in Chicago and whose means are small may obtain a scholarship at a greatly reduced price by addressing H., care of 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

The Liberal Mail-Order Jeweler, now permanent at No. 130 N. Kensington Av., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 20 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the jeweler's line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Theism in the Cradle," free.

THE MAJESTY OF SEX.

This is the very latest WORD on the subject. This book will satisfy in a vital way the cry of the hungry soul. If you follow its teachings your body will become transformed and transmuted. You will be happy, your body will become transformed and transmuted. You will be happy and healthy. You will prosper and be contented. It does not deal in theory alone, but goes straight to the heart of the subject. It teaches the ART of LIVING. Most of us know how to half-way live, but to live WELL and PROSPER is an ART. Learn how by sending $2.00 for the book. Circulars free. Address NANCY M'KAY GORDON, 55 E. 30th St., Chicago, Ill.

Among the Moki Indians of Arizona the men weave dresses and the women build houses. Little children fearlessly handle live rattle-snakes. Religious rites antedate Columbus' time. These and other interesting facts about our brothers in red may be found in a profusely illustrated book of 224 pages, "Indians of the South-West," written by Geo. A. Dorsey, Curator of Anthropology, Field Columbian Museum, and published by the Santa Fe. If interested in Indians and their handicraft, send 25 cents, only coin, to cover postage, and a dollar. Write to-day to buy a copy; only costs 50 cents; sadly worth a dollar. Address P. S. Eustis, G. P. A., A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 72 Jackson Blvd., Chicago, and enclose coin or stamps.

THE NEW LIFE.

Ida M. Brooks, editor. A weekly periodical devoted to a finer and nobler realization of life; 25 cents a year, 3 months for 25 cents; sample copy free. If you are tired of the old life, with its pain, heartache and emptiness, read The New Life, and you will come into and live the new life, which is joy, peace and bountiful supply of all good and desirable things. Address THE NEW LIFE PUB. CO., Box 156, Ocoldon, Idaho.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We can not sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 25 cents each, or two for 50 cents. Address Edwin C. Walker, 244 West 143d street, New York, N. Y.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to cheese that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 62, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

EAT SOME SAND!

About five years ago, Prof. William Windsor, LL. B., Ph. D., the world's most eminent Physiologist, discovered the Sand Cure for Indigestion and Constipation, and since that time more than a half million sufferers have tried it and found that it is Nature's Simple Remedy, by restored health. It does not purge or gripe, but it cleans the body out.

"The Natural Life" is the title of Prof. Windsor's monthly magazine in which the Sand Cure is fully described and discussed. It is devoted to the teaching of Vitosophy ("the wise way of living"), Natural Diet, Health and Character Culture, Righteousness and Free-dom. One Dollar per year.

PROFESSOR WINDSOR will send full directions for the Sand Cure to anyone sending 25 cents for a three months' trial subscription to The Natural Life. Address THE WINDSOR PUBLISHING CO., Back Bay Post-office, Boston, Mass.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.
LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.
INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.
RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of Freethought and Free Love. Oxford Northents. 10c.
THE SOCIAL QUESTION. A discussion between Juliet H. Severance, M. D., and David Jayne. 15 cents.
SOBERING BETTER BABIES. Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.
SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; Illustrated. 50c.
KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.
STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 50c.
THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Telepi Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winsor). 25c.
A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. H. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (H. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola). 25c.
THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Bebel's Intention (Marietta), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Ratter). 10c.
THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. E. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harris), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.
PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, E. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Ratter). 10c.
WOMAN AND HER RELATION TO THE CHURCH OR CANON LAW FOR WOMEN. Harriet M. Closs. A succinct statement of the position to which women were doomed by the Church Fathers and authorities. Every woman should possess a copy. 10c.
THE CURSE OF MATERNITY. From the French of Henry Fevre. Together with How to Escape the Curse (Jonathan Mayo Crane), Woman's "Duty" to Her Children (E. C. Walker), True and False Morality (C. L. James), Love's Law (William Francis Barnard). 25 cents.
MODERN PARADISE. The Model Home, Solution of the Social Problem. Future Greatness of Electricity. Proposed Experiment in Social Science. An Earthly Eden and How to Attain It. A Unique Power Plant. Wonderful System of Education. Elegantly Illustrated. Prof. Henry Olcott. 50c.
WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: A Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us come to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the enfolding arms of babes." Paper covers; 41 large pages. 10c.
THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE, as viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.
DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock, Sexual Science Series (Heredity); A B C of Temperaments; Powell and His Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Causes Critics; Physiological Marriage; Fatal Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.
MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. One of the best short works on the subject. Daintily printed. A charming little gift book. "Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; it is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; it is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; it is in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it." 25 cents.
TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after consulting full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after consulting full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after consulting

THE ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY AND THE STATE. Frederick Engels. Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans. 217 pages; bound in cloth. 60c. Postage, 5c.

THE HOME CYCLOPEDIA OF MEDICAL, SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE. Contains a full, plain and easy-reading treatise on "Health and Disease, with Recipes"; all the average reader can profitably learn of personal hygiene and common diseases (including special, separate chapters for men and women); all right up to date, and fully illustrated with hundreds of photo-engravings and chromo-lithographs. Contains also the already popular "Plain Home Talk" about the relations of the sexes and social customs in all ages and all countries, with "original and startling" suggestions for social reforms; newly revised, enlarged and well illustrated. All in "heart to heart" plain home talk from a clear-thinking, plain-speaking, liberal-minded medical author of over forty years' experience. Nearly 1,000,000 of his former books sold. A curious book for curious people, and a sensible book for every one. Answers 1,000 delicate questions one would like to ask one's regular physician and yet doesn't want to. 1,248 pages; 400 illustrations ($3 in orders); 2lbs recipes. Cloth bound, $2.

THE WHOLESOME WOMAN. J. H. Greer, M. D. The latest and most complete work of its kind. Four books in one volume. Part I—SEX AND LIFE: The Principle of Life; The Dominant Power of Life; The Temple of the Soul; The Unfolding of Womanhood; The Fulfillment of the Law; The Fruits of Fulfillment; Home and Home-Making. Part II—TOKOLOGY: The Organs of Generation; Menstruation; The Marriage Relation; Conception and Prenatal Culture; Child Birth; The Hygiene of Infancy; Development from Birth to Puberty; Disorders of Infancy and Childhood; Affections Peculiar to Women; What Determines the Sex of Offspring. Part III.—CHILD-CULTURE: The Foundation of Moral Uprightness; The Kindergarten (with diagrams); Manual Training. Part IV.—HEALTH AND HYGIENE: Long Life Not a Secret; "Breath is Life"; How, When and What to Eat; Sleep and the Bath; Clothing and Dress; Mental and Physical Culture; What to Do in Sickness; What Not to Do in Sickness; Care of the Eyes and Ears; Care of the Extremities; Poisons Used as Medicines; The Application of Heat and Cold; Unnecessary Surgical Operations; An Ounce of Prevention. The complete work re-published in one handsome, large quarto volume of 512 pages, with photogravure frontispiece, portrait of the author 16 full-page half-tone and numerous smaller explanatory illustrations. It is printed on an extra quality of paper from new electroplates, and each volume is accompanied by a separate supplement of 41 plates (printed in colors), illustrating Sex in Plant Life; the Human Sexual Organs and the Laws of Reproduction; the Development of the Human Embryo and Fetus, showing nourishment and growth from day to day and month to month; the Plan of Fetal Circulation, etc. In extra cloth, with special emblematic cover design, $2.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White, 5c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 10c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth, 75c.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A. and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 10c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MONEY, BANKS, PANICS AND PROSPERITY. By W. H. Clagett. 10c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHISM. A study of the industrial type. Dyer D. Lum. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 10c.

MAGNETATION, and its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Geo. W. M. Trussell. 5c.

RELIGIOUS, POLITICAL AND SOCIAL FREEDOM. A lecture by Juliet H Severance, M. D. 10c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a 'self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 175 pages. 25c.

GIORDANO BRUNO, His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

SOCIALISTIC, COMMUNISTIC, MUTUALISTIC AND FINANCIAL FRAGMENTS. By William B. Greene. $1.25.

AGE OF REASON, An Investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel portrait. 50c.

THE TEMPERANCE FOLLY; or, Who's the Worst? Lois Waisbrooker. Dedicated to the wrecks and so-called sinners of a false civilization. 10c.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A Leak (Fox) Undershill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 612 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmeyer, Jun.

THE STORY OF ILIAN; or, The Evolution of a Mind. Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Isabella" (W. Stuart Rose), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. $1. Postage, 8c.

SONGS OF A CHILD, AND OTHER POEMS. By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. $1.50. Postage, 12c.

A RED HEART IN A WHITE WORLD. A suggestive manual of Free Society; containing a method and a hope. By J. William Lloyd. Handsome illuminated paper cover in white, red and green; 50 pages. 10c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Advent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

AN ESSAY ON THE DUTY OF CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE. By Henry D. Thoreau. A reprint of this classic essay on the supremacy of the individual conscience. Antique papers; artistic covers, dark green on olivine. 10c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 31 portraits of delegates, including Beal, R. Tucker, Lawrence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 424 pages, 50c

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Spunele, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line" presentation edition, $5; five volumes, plainer binding, $1.50; all in one volume, $2.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 3, 1890. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

993.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

Your subscription is paid to No. ——. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward Fitzgerald's Interpretation, with original introduction; latest version. Special cover, Paper, 5c.

1601A; or, The Disinterred. A drama in six acts. Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Unique frontispiece. Cloth, $1. Postage, 5c.

GOD AND THE STATE. One of the most eloquent pleas for liberty ever written. Bakunin's "Age of Reason" and "Rights of Man" consolidated and improved. It stirs the pulse like a trumpet call. By Michael Bakounine. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 42 pages. 10c.

HIRCULUS WITH POCKETS. A life sketch. By Henry E. Allen. A touching story, told in simple and yet striking language, and yet more than a story. Vivid flashes of light are thrown on the unspeakable horrors of capitalism. Illustrated with many portraits of Socialists and other reformers. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 97 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Congreve, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hogg, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltaire and Voltaire. 25c.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us yet wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 20, 1890, with portrait of Walt Whitman, containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman March 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A BLUNDER IN POISONS. C. F. Nichols. "Vaccination will undoubtedly rank as the greatest and most pernicious failure of the century; this conclusion is no longer a matter of opinion, but of science," said Alfred Russell Wallace, and in this booklet the facts are arrayed in support of this assertion. 20c.

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD; An Outline of Practical Co-Operative Individualism. By Henry Olerich. England ruled by many persons as a more interesting and consistent economic reform mixed than Bellamy's "Looking Backward." Bound in red silk with gold title. Nearly 400 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, $1.

VACCINATION A CRIME. With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions. Felix L. Oswald, M. D. "Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads smallpox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents." With illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 105 pages. 10c.

HISTORY OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. By C. L. James. An excellent history of the French Revolution, well written by one thoroughly familiar with his subject. Special care has been exercised to give the facts as they are, the author not having made himself the champion of any faction. Neatly printed from large type on good book paper, with a substantial binding. 345 pages, with six fine and typographical epitomes. Cloth, $1.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. John H. Kelso. Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff or Protection; War Fundamental; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be. 159 pages. Cloth binding, somewhat damaged, and reduced from $1.50 to 50 cents.

HILDA'S HOME; A Story of Woman's Emancipation. Rose Graul. With Macaulay, Rose Graul would say, "The cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty." Hence she has no fears that under Freedom the Home and the Family would cease to exist, or that women will be less loving and lovable, or that man will be less manly and honorable. On the contrary, she maintains that only in the soil and atmosphere of freedom is it possible for true womanhood and manhood to live and flourish. 416 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fearing that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he resorts to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspirational treatise that, with insight and emotion, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, strong enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous liberty, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, embellished with portrait of the author. In two editions, de luxe, and plain. Prices, $1.25 and $1.00.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old asceticism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new Hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions they have begun to perceive that the ancient and impure things are ordinary and excellent; that the pure and beautiful are ennobling things in the fit and worthy exercise of the reproducing function." Paper cover; 30 large pages. White copies, 10c; single copy, 5c.

THE BIBLE. John E. Remsburg. Contains eleven chapters on the authenticity of the Bible, based on the internal and external evidence of the Bible. Thirteen on the credibility of the Bible, ten on the morality of the Bible, and an appendix in which Mr. Remsburg sets forth unanswerable arguments against the divine origin and in favor of the human origin of the Bible. Twenty-six pages of index enable the reader to find instantly any authority quoted or argument used. Mr. Remsburg is one of the most careful, accurate and painstaking writers, and his book is a compendium of the latest scholarship and rationalistic thought on the subject. The late Colonel Ingersoll says of his famous lecture on the Bible by saying: "Some one ought to tell the truth about the Bible." This Mr. Remsburg has done—done it fully, and done it well. Large octavo, 300 pages. Cloth, $1.25.

THE SLAVERY OF OUR TIMES. Count Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of the gifted author, and introduction by the translator, Aylmer Maude. Chapter titles: I. Goods Factors Who Work Thirty-Seven Hours. II. Society's Interference With Men Foolish. III. Justification of the Existing Position of Slaves. IV. The Assertion of Economic Science that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System. V. Why Learned Economists Assert What is False. VI. Bankruptcy of the Socialist Ideal. VII. Culture or Freedom? VIII. Slavery Exists Among us. IX. What is Slavery? X. Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property. XI. Laws the Cause of Slavery. XII. The Essence of Legislation is Organized Violence. XIII. What Are Governments? Is it Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV. How Can Governments Be Abolished? XV. What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword. Well printed on heavy paper; substantially bound. 186 pages. 50c.

FREE LITERATURE.

Your name will be sent to a great number of the finest papers published for sample copies if you send 25 cents to INTERMOUNTAIN SUB. AGENCY, Box 186, Grafton, Idaho.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES. VOL. VII., NO. 43. CHICAGO, ILL., NOV. 5, E. M. 393. [C. E. 1903.] WHOLE NO. 994

IT KNOWS NOT ITS POWER.

The people is a beast of muddy brain,
That knows not its own strength, and therefore stands
Loaded with wood and iron; the powerless hands
Of a mere child guide it with bit and rein;
One kick would be enough to break the chain.
But the beast fears and what the child demands
It does, nor its own terror understands,
Confused and stupefied by bugbears vain—
Most wonderful! With its own hands
It tries and gags itself, gives itself life and war
For pence doled out by kings from its own store,
Its own are all things between earth and heaven;
But this it knows not, and if one arise
To tell this truth, it kills him unforgiven.
—Campanella (an Italian monk). A. D. 1600.

Survival of the Fear of Sex.

The Censor has the support of the body of the people because, third, and particularly, the fact of sex is held to be a blunder of God or nature, one or the other, as your sexphobist's viewpoint is that of the Theist and Christian, or the Rationalist. Not so many years ago a brilliant Liberal, then still somewhat under the influence of ascetic antinaturalism of the dominent religion, lamented in a periodical of which he was editor that the continuance of the race depended upon a relation so indelicate and shameful as sexual association. I have reason to hope that he is now nearer to the apex of the moral wedge.

The religious belief was that this world is merely a temporary stopping-place in which we prepare for heaven or hell. Whatever distracts our attention from our future home, one or the other place named, is bad for our souls. If we are happy here we are likely to forget God and go to hell. If we are miserable here we are likely to be reminded of God and go to heaven. That is the gist of the old doctrine. The fear of sex is about the only survival of it that is doing business amongst us. It was held that not even ambition, wealth and fame were so apt to turn men's thoughts from God and his saints and from the devil and his never-dying worms as were sexual joy and domestic happiness. If a Christian had these and was moderately comfortable otherwise he would play fast and loose with the plan of salvation and find himself blacklisted when the whistle blew for the eternal assignment. No one not in a degree familiar with the beliefs that prevailed during the Dark Ages, and before, can realize the depth of degradation and suffering to which the common people descended under the influence of their conviction that poverty and misery were passports to heaven, and wealth and happiness were sentences to hell. Of course the church that assideously taught this doctrine and the princes that accepted it were content to see the people practice it, for did not all good Christians believe in the doctrine of vicit, for did not all good Christians believe in the doctrine of vicarious atonement? Woman was held to be the cause of the "fall" of Adam, and, consequently, the mother of sin and hell, and the perils and pains of motherhood were supposed to have been put upon her as punishments for being "first in the transgression."

The story, recalled by Lecky, if I am not mistaken, of the priest who would not carry his mother across a river lest she, a woman, should contaminate his person and endanger his soul, graphically pictures the thought and feeling of the early and mid-die Christian ages. How that thought and feeling have survived, have come down into these later Christian ages, perhaps cannot better be demonstrated than by this excerpt from the decision of Judge Phillips of the United States Circuit Court, in the cause of "the United States vs. Harman" [45 F. R., 422]:

"There is in the popular conception and heart such a thing as modesty. It was born in the garden of Eden. After Adam and Eve ate of the fruit of the tree of knowledge they passed from that condition of perfectibility which some people nowadays aspire to, and, their eyes being opened, they discerned that there was both good and evil; 'and they knew that they were naked; and they sewed fig-leaves together and made themselves aprons.' [You will perceive that Judge Phillips typifies the 'evil' in the world by nakedness and the 'good' in the world by clothes, which might lead us to suppose that he is one of the tailors of Tooley street. But he proceeds.] From that day to this civilized man has carried with him the sense of shame, the feeling that there were some things on which the eye, the mind, should not look; and where men and women become so depraved by the use, or so insensate from perverted education, that they will not veil their eyes or hold their tongues, the government should perform the office for them in protection of the social compact and the body politic."

Here we have a judge on the federal bench handing down an opinion in a case involving the liberty and perhaps the life of an old man whose only fault was that he had printed in his paper a serious protest against a grievous crime committed under cover of marriage—we have this judge appealing for authority to lock the wheels of the press and imprison an honest man—we have him appealing, like an anointed priest, for this authority to a legend of the primitive ages, a legend long ago exploded by science; we have him appealing to an alleged explanation which every student of the customs and habits of savage and barbarian peoples knows to be utterly without foundation in fact. We have the thigh-bone of some dead cave-dweller used in a vile attempt to bludgeon a civilized scholar into silence. We have this federal judge making this appeal in the name of the myths, the fictions of the "social compact" and the "body politic." And, stranger still, in all our tens of millions of men and women in this "land of the free," we have only here and there a single person or a tiny group that sees the monstrous evil of this burlesque of justice, that endeavors to throw light into the dark places of popular prejudices and legal iniquities, to cut the bonds that bind living men and women to the rotting corpses of ancient creeds and cults.—From "Who Is the Enemy?" by E. C. Walker.

Rulers Are Not Originators.

No great political improvement, no great reform, either legislative or executive, has ever been originated in any country by its rulers. The first suggestors of such steps have invariably been bold and able thinkers, who discern the abuse, denounce it, and point out how it is to be remedied. But long after this is done even the most enlightened governments continue the abuse and reject the remedy. At length, if circumstances are favorable, the pressure from without becomes so strong that the government is obliged to give way; and, the reform being accomplished, the people are expected to admire the wisdom of their rulers, by whom all this has been done.—Thomas Henry Buckle.

As the proletarian has nothing to lose, his "nothing" is not in need of government protection. On the contrary, he can only gain when state protection is taken away from the favored.—Max Stirner.

The Canadian Strike Commission's Report.

It will be remembered that about a year ago the United Brotherhood of Railway Employes, through its executive officer, Mr. Estes, began a movement for the organization of all employes of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The theory of Mr. Estes is that railway "trade" unions are a failure, and that one "industrial" union will be a success. All employes of the Canadian Pacific Railway were urged or invited to affiliate with the United Brotherhood instead of the other railway brotherhoods. The invitation was not accepted by the members of the railway trade unions, except that members of the trackmen, freight handlers, blacksmiths, etc., were more or less affected. The men employed as clerks, not being organized, welcomed the opportunity to better their condition.

During the early part of the present year the United Brotherhood declared a strike on the Canadian Pacific Railway, because of the discharge of its members. An appeal was made to other labor unions for assistance, by the enforcement of boycotts and sympathetic strikes. The members of the railway brotherhoods having contracts with the company could not and did not render such assistance, but the Western Federation of Miners, and other labor unions affiliated with the American Labor Union, responded favorably.

Because of the sympathetic strikes and boycotts among coal miners, longshoremen, and others, the strike took on a serious aspect, so far as the company was concerned. The Canadian Government appointed a "Royal Commission" to "inquire into and concerning the said disputes" and to take "evidence on oath' and "to report to our Minister of Labor of Canada the result of your investigation, together with the evidence taken before you, and any opinion you may see fit to express thereon."

The commission's report has been published, and a few quotations from it, together with comments thereon from the November issue of the Locomotive Firemen's Magazine, will be of interest:

* * *

Blacklisting.—Notwithstanding that great attention is paid to the effort made by the strikers to boycott their former employers, and notwithstanding that the counsel for the strikers charged that the former employers were blacklisting the strikers, the commission says that "time did not admit of full investigation into this matter." It appears to a casual reader of the report that it would have been fairer to both employer and employe if the commission had devoted at least some time to this matter, inasmuch as many days of time, and many columns of its report, were devoted to investigation of the boycotts by strikers.

* * *

Violation of Contracts.—The commission says:

"The testimony shows that it is necessary to penalize the wanton violation of contracts as well as the sympathetic strike. We would, therefore, suggest that the courts be clothed with power to disincorporate any incorporated union and to declare illegal any unincorporated organization which is shown to have violated any contract without color of right, or to have gone out on sympathetic strike."

Just why labor unions should be "penalized" for the violation of contracts, and no punishment of corporations or other employers for the same offense, is not made clear by the commission's report.

* * *

Interference of Foreign Officials.—The commission is incensed because the executive officials of "international" unions, which officials being citizens of the United States are therefore "foreigners," have acted in executive capacity in the prosecution of strikes. Just as the master class and the public press that cater to that class denounced the officials of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers during the Grand Trunk strike of many years ago, just as the officials of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers were denounced as "foreigners" during the strike of Canadian telegraphers, just as the officials of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trackmen were denounced as "foreigners" during their late strike, so does the Royal Commission now denounce the officials of the recent striking organizations as "foreigners." Evidently the master class believe that if Canadian workingmen can be deprived by law of "foreign" assistance which comes from the workers of the United States through "international" labor unions, it will be less difficult to whip them into submission. The following is from the report of the commission:

"As has already been said, it should not be tolerated that Canadian industries should be subject to the dictation of foreigners who knew no law, so far as such industries are concerned, but their own desires, and whose business and avowed object it is to keep up unceasing friction between the employe and employed, and who are not trade unionists, but Socialistic agitators of the most bigoted and ignorant type. We therefore think that it is necessary for Parliament to interfere in the direction of making it an offense, punishable, in minor cases, on summary conviction before a county judge or police or stipendiary magistrate, by fine or imprisonment, and in grave cases, on conviction by indictment, by imprisonment only, for any person not a British subject, and who has not been residing in the province for at least one year, to procure or incite any employe or employes in Canada to quit the employment without the consent of the employer; or for any person within Canada to exhibit or publish, or in any way communicate to any employe or employes the contents of any order, request, suggestion or recommendation (or any document purporting to be a copy thereof), by any person or persons ordinarily resident without Canada, that he or they quit the employment as aforesaid, whether such order, request, suggestion or recommendation, or copy thereof is signed, or purports to be signed by such person or persons on his or their own behalf, or on behalf of any other person, or of any association of persons, whether incorporated or not."

* * *

Labor Leaders.—The commission renders a valuable service to all labor unions when it exposes the manner in which railway companies buy the honor of representatives of labor unions, and how these companies secure the admission of secret agents to membership in labor unions.

It is probably a fact that on every railway system or division in America railway corporations have paid spies in the local lodges of different railway brotherhoods. Information comes from Chicago that some time ago a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, who had lost his position on one of the leading roads running out of that city because of defective eyesight, and who was employed in a stationary plant, was offered a position by a detective agency. Notwithstanding his defective vision he was to have a position as locomotive fireman provided for him, for the performance of which service he was to receive the regular fireman's wages. In addition to this income he was to receive a salary from the detective agency for his services in betraying the secret, or private business, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen. The member in question pretended to agree to the scheme, and asked that he be placed to work on the road which formerly employed him. This request was refused by the detective agency because, as was said, "we have a man there already." He was instructed to call again—and here is where the detective agency was too shrewd for the member. When the member left the agency he went to a prominent member of the Brotherhood, told him of the plot, and asked advice. The agency "shadowed" the member, and realized that he would not do for them. When the member returned to the agency he was informed that he "was not wanted."

The proceedings of the Wabash injunction case show that the company had two members of the Brotherhood of Trainmen at their meetings who were paid spies, and who made affidavit to the court as to what was said by prominent members of that Brotherhood at the meeting. It is safe to remember that at any meeting of any labor union there may be spies present, and the following is the advice of the Royal Commission:

"If workmen are not careful in the selection of their leaders, if they do not choose straightforward and fair-minded men as the officers of their organizations, the case for recognition is hopeless.' That the workmen should be careful in the selection of their leaders is also shown by the fact that in at least two or three instances their purchasability was proved beyond doubt. The man who was the chief organizer for Canada of the United Brotherhood of Railway Employes is shown to have betrayed the secrets of the union to the employers for hire, at the very time that he was being paid by the union for bringing in new members and while he was administering the oath which binds to secrecy. The evidence is also clear that paid hirelings of the railway company worked their way into the union, took a leading part in its deliberations, initiated new members, and duly reported all that took place to their master."

How are members of labor unions to select honest men, either for members or "labor leaders"? Will the commission give them a clue as to evidence of a man's integrity? It is a notorious fact that in the United States legislative representatives, in town councils, state legislatures, and in Congress, will sell out to corporations who will "pay the price," and from some of the antics against labor unions by legislative representatives in Canada one is almost persuaded that the "boodle" microbe has infected that country. The fact of the matter is: as long as the public, as voiced by the Royal Commission, does not punish bribe-givers there will always be bribe-takers. If we would enact laws that send men to prison for giving bribes and for accepting bribes there would be less bribery, and men who now pose as leading members of society, stanch pillars of the church, and high functionaries in the business world, would be found "doing time on the rock pile."

* * *

Union Labels and Boycott.—"We see no reason why incorporated unions should not be given the right to use the union label on the products of their manufacture." This is, indeed, considerate! Who has questioned that right? The commission does not say. Continuing:

"There is no reason why a union should not be allowed to advertise its products by means of the label, and in this way bespeak the patronage of the public. On the other hand, the publication of the 'unfair' and 'scab' list is wrong in principle. Why should any person or union be allowed to publish or placard any other person or body of men as 'unfair' or as 'scab'? Such action tends manifestly to a breach of the peace and argues a contemptuous indifference to, and a high-handed attack upon, the rights of others. There is no reason why the unions cannot confine themselves to the publication of 'fair' instead of 'unfair' or 'scab' lists—a 'white' list, and not a 'black' list. We think, therefore, that the use of the union label should be recognized by law, and that it should be allowed to incorporated bodies, but that it should be made a specific offense to use or publish the epithets 'scab' or 'unfair' in connection with the name of any person or organization."

Boycotts are condemned by the commission, and it says that they are also "condemned by the best type of labor leaders." Of whom this "best type" consists is not divulged. The union label is but a "boycott" on all nonunion goods. When a man refuses to purchase a suit of overalls because it does not bear the union label, he is, in fact, boycotting all nonunion manufacturers of overalls.

* * *

Incendiary and Scurrilous Literature.—The commission says:

"Another reason for parliamentary condemnation of these organizations is that it might serve to stop the distribution of their incendiary and scurrilous literature. As examples of the kind of matter which is periodically put forth in the journals of these bodies we may quote the following extracts."

The report then quotes from the official publications of the labor unions referred to, and also quotes what correspondents have said in those publications. That much of the matter is "incendiary and scurrilous" will not be questioned, but how is a government to suppress "free speech and a free press"? If a labor union is to be suppressed or punished for circulating literature that criticises the master class, or makes false statements about the masters, are corporations and employers to be suppressed or punished that commit the same offenses against the servant class? If not, will the commission please explain why not? The "literature" that railway officials filed with Judge Adams, whichliterature was the sole cause of the issuance of the notorious injunction, was indeed "scurrilous," and no less untruthful than that published in the commission's report, and for the suppression of which the commission suggests "parliamentary condemnation." Another suggestion may be cited: If a labor organization can be suppressed for circulating "incendiary and scurrilous literature," why could not the same law be used by the political party in power against the opposition political organization when the latter makes public shady affairs that the "government" desires hushed up? The trouble with those who start out to legislate objectionable labor unions out of existence is that they do not remember that laws aimed at your enemy may hit yours friends.

* * *

The Objectionable Labor Unions.—The three labor unions against which the commission's report is mainly directed are the Western Federation of Miners, the Brotherhood of Railway Employes, and the American Labor Union, all of which are the avowed enemies of the American Federation of Labor and its constituent unions, and also of the railway brotherhoods; in fact, the United Brotherhood of Railway Employes was organized for the express purpose of supplanting the older railway brotherhoods.

Members of the railway brotherhoods do not approve of the principles of the Brotherhood of Railway Employes, and they condemn their methods—but that is a matter between them and us, and we ask no legislative assistance in its fight against us. If the railway employes of the United States and Canada, of their own free will, decide in favor of the United Brotherhood of Railway Employes and against the other railway brotherhoods, those employes should have the liberty of exercising their desires, without interference of the Government. Members of the railway brotherhoods are too chivalrous to applaud legislative injustice even to an avowed enemy—and they are too wise to permit the master class to use them in its war on all labor unions! Even though labor unions of the different schools war between each other over questions of union policy, even though some resort to disreputable methods to destroy the older unions, the latter are too wise to desert their class in a class war!

It is true that the Royal Commission takes occasion to toss bouquets at the feet of the older railway brotherhoods, which compliments are appreciated because they are deserved, but a casual reader of the report is led to doubt the sincerity of these compliments, for when these same brotherhoods have indulged in strikes in the past they have been accused by the master class of nearly all the offenses that the Royal Commission now accuses Canadian strikers who are members of opposition labor unions.

* * *

Political Labor Unions.—The commission especially condemns the three labor unions mentioned because they have officially indorsed the Socialist party and because they advocate the government ownership of all industries. The writer, personally, does not believe that Socialists' theories can be successfully operated so long as the human race is actuated by a dog-eat-dog policy, and he believes that with the government ownership of any industry the working people become semi-soldier or semi-slave, losing much of the independence of free citizenship; but because he is possessed with these beliefs is no reason that he should approve legislation that will deny to others the right to advocate such theories. When the Royal Commission suggests the suppression of labor unions for political reasons it is sowing seed that may ripen fruit poisonous to Canadian freedom! If a Republican, Conservative, Democratic or Liberal government may enact legislation which forbids members of labor unions indorsing the theories of Socialism, should not a Socialist government have the privilege to suppress any organization that indorses other political theories? Some years ago the glass workers in the United States indorsed the Republican party, and advocated a protective tariff. While other labor unions prohibited the official indorsement of any political party, no man in the United States had the audacity to suggest that the Glass Workers' Union should be suppressed by legislation for political reasons. Let us hope that no "Royal Commission" and no "government" will ever have the power to dictate the political action of the working people; but the Canadian Royal Commission says that "with regard to these organizations we think they ought to be specially declared illegal."

Mr. Crane Summed Up.

That my reply to Mr. Crane was unsigned, was purely an oversight. The skull was no doubt placed there by some meddling mail agent, as a warning not to mail unpopular doctrines.

It has been supposed that people could be guided by principles. Mr. Crane's teaching is that we cannot. He says he defends the hypocrite, but also that he would not have the radical cause 'stand for" hypocrisy. As a cause is known by what its adherents say, this distinction is too fine. He warns women against a certain class, yet says that class is not bad but only looking for the natural reward of hypocrisy. Truth and lies are both good, and the only course open is to ask Mr. Crane what to avoid.

One would think that a class having "nefarious designs" on women, and who cannot change any more that a spider can help being a spider, is a fair example of total depravity, but Mr. Crane repudiates the doctrine.

I ask a question, and he begins, "Before attempting to answer," etc., thus raising a smoke and failing to answer at all.

C. F. H.

By no process can coercion be made equitable. The freest form of government is only the least objectionable form. The rule of the many by the few, we call tyranny. The rule of the few by the many (democracy) is tyranny also, only of a less intense kind.—Herbert Spencer.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 West 143d street, New York.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire let us hear from you if you want to continue to receive Lucifer.

Notes by the Way.

Albuquerque, N. M., Oct. 29, 1902.

I found many things at Las Vegas that were new and interesting to this traveler. The hot springs and the Montezuma Hotel, six miles up in the mountains, were among the places visited, and which have made an impression on memory's page not soon to be forgotten. The hotel is closed for the season, and report says it will not be reopened for the general public; that it has been sold by the Santa Fe Company to the United States Government to be used as a sanitarium for invalid soldiers. The building of this hotel as an advertisement for business for the road is regarded as a gigantic folly. It is believed to have cost more than a million dollars, and that it never has paid running expenses, to say nothing of its original cost.

As a health resort, however, the city itself is undoubtedly a decided success. The air is so pure, the climate so equable, the nights always cool and the days nearly always clear and sunny, the water so excellent, the sight of the neighboring mountains such a perennial inspiration, it would be strange if the sick did not get well, provided always that their lungs or other vital organs are not so nearly destroyed before coming here that recovery is impossible.

* * *

After a pleasant and fairly profitable sojourn of one week I again boarded the tourist train, and after a run of 136 miles through the New Mexican mountains I found myself at the ancient and very picturesquely located city called Albuquerque. Arriving at about 7 o'clock p. m., I was very agreeably surprised to be met and greeted by an old friend named Bullard, an Englishman whose acquaintance I had made while living in Topeka, ten or twelve years ago. Notwithstanding the fact that he was holding a good position in the employ of the Santa Fe Company Mr. Bullard was a regular attendant at the meetings of Topeka's most radical club, and when that club gave a public reception to Lucifer's editor on his release from the Kansas penitentiary in February, 1893, he was one of the principal speakers, and because of the publicity given by the State Journal, Topeka, to this meeting, and especially to Mr. Bullard's address, he was sharply reprimanded by one of the officers of the company. Am glad to be able to report that there was at least one man in the employ of this great corporation that could not be intimidated by such attempts to control his opinions and the public expression of those opinions.

The train that is to carry this letter is now standing on the track, so I must close for the present, with kindly greetings for all the readers and friends who may care to follow me in thought while on my trip to the far Pacific Coast. Letters for my special attention may now be addressed in care of C. V. Cook, Parrott Building, San Francisco, Cal.

M. HARMAN.

Letter From Philip G. Peabody.

The following letter was written by one who has not only paid his own subscription but has helped us in our work materially in other ways. I wish to say in explanation of the letters to which he refers that they were not written for publication, but that I gave them publicity as an indication that many of those who are technically not subscribers according to postal rulings in our case really want the paper and are among its most earnest friends. I will add that there are very few who "repeatedly promise" to pay, and in almost every instance where a subscriber does promise the promise is fulfilled. If only one dollar were needed it might be easy to pay promptly, but I realize that with many of Lucifer's readers so many dollars are called for that it is practically impossible to pay all when due. I should be very sorry, too, to know that any one went without sufficient nourishment in order to send money to us. We certainly need all the money we can get in order to publish our paper, but there have been instances in which the money sent to us involved so much sacrifice on the part of the sender that we have sent it back and sent the paper without pay. But in many instances the neglect to pay subscriptions is the result of inattention. The subscriber simply does not notice the number on the wrapper, so does not compare it with the number of the paper to learn if his subscription is due. We hope our friends will pay attention to this in future, so that we will not have to notify them of expiration of subscription.

Mr. Peabody's words seem rather severe; but we allow him to express his opinion. L. H.

* * *

Editor of Lucifer: I feel like saying "there are none so stupid as those who have a motive for not understanding." Surely Lucifer's readers who are overflowing with praise for its management must know not only that it takes money to run a paper, but that to print such a paper as Lucifer, on such a subject, is a matter of peculiar difficulty, and that, at best, it must largely be a labor of unpaid love. Under these circumstances it is inconceivable to me how they can have the impudence to keep writing to Lucifer, time after time, paying for it in praises, and always insisting that it be sent, "will pay soon, but cannot get along without Lucifer." I say seriously that an honest man would rather go on one full meal a day than refuse to pay for such a paper, when due. But the impudence of such people has no limit.

Recently the postoffice people have threatened to suppress Lucifer, unless subscriptions are paid; this has fully appeared and an appeal has been made, based on it. Yet even now I am amazed to see the same old "sponging" letters sent, instead of money.

I am glad that those who do not pay their trifling subscription can no longer get their papers; and this, not from the act of Lucifer's publisher, who has always been far too lax and generous; but by act of the postoffice authorities. While it is meddlesome and all wrong, it in this case works admirably: it will show who the friends of Lucifer are.

PHILIP G. PEABODY.

P. S.—Such letters as are on page 326, col. 1, make me profoundly indignant, in view of the statement which elicited them. What humbuggery to keep whining for the paper to be sent when you have been told that it cannot be. P. G. P.

The Death of H. L. Green.

On Friday morning, Oct. 30, H. L. Green, editor of the Freethought Magazine, and his wife, were found in their bed room, fully dressed, and dead. An open gas jet revealed the cause of their death. It is not known whether their deaths were accidental or self-inflicted. Both were old, both had been ill and weak for a considerable time, and both were known to be discouraged and expecting death soon. Their only son died about a year ago, and it seems that they never recovered from his loss. Of late months Mr. Green has had able volunteer assistance in the publication of his magazine, and it is to be hoped that the magazine will continue to be published and will be rejuvenated, growing stronger in good work as the years go by. It is a rather curious coincidence that Mr. Green's death should have occurred in the same manner as that of S. P. Putnam a few years ago, the similarity even extending to the doubt as to whether the deaths were the result of their own desires. L. H.

John Turner and the Anti-Anarchist Law.

A test case of the anti-Anarchist law will probably be made in the case of John Turner, who was arrested while filling an engagement to speak at the Murray Hill Lyceum, New York, on Oct. 23. The subject was "Trade Unionism and the General Strike." No charge was made in the news dispatches that he discussed Anarchism, and I am informed by eye and ear witnesses that he stuck to his subject and that the meeting was altogether orderly and quiet. Mr. Turner is chief organizer of the Shop Assistants' Union of England and a member of the London Trades Council. He is also a Communist-Anarchist, and it is because of this latter fact that he was arrested and threatened with deportation. A writ of habeas corpus was procured by Pentecost and Campbell from Federal Judge Lacombe, and the constitutionality of the law and the arbitrary proceedings under it are to be tested. A correspondent in New York writes:

"When Turner was arrested and was to be deported I remembered that he had told me that he took out his first papers as an American citizen when he was here before. That was before the anti-Anarchist law was passed. I told Pentecost about it and he has got out a writ of habeas corpus and will try to prevent the deporting of Turner. I hope he will be successful, but you know the law is only for the puritans and the 'unco guid,' so Turner may get short shrift."

Thus it is easy to perceive, from this and from many other instances, that our republic is rapidly drifting into bureaucracy. The board of inquiry which decided that Turner should be deported was not judicial, and if Turner had not possessed influential friends he would have been at once deported without trial. L. H.

A Question of Heredity.

A. G. S., alias Red Page Stephens, in the Bulletin, says "that is so" to one Margaret Illsland, who asserts that "without her motherhood woman has nothing of importance to contribute to the work of human elevation." Motherhod, far from being a contribution to the elevation of humanity, has in itself no moral quality whatever. Its ethical value is determined by circumstances over which it has no control. Under certain conditions it may as readily make for degradation as for elevation. How much does the slum woman, spawning criminals and idiots, contribute to the uplifting of the race? Or the society woman, bearing a decadent progeny, with the atavistic taint of sensuousness vitiating their blood? Motherhood, before it can elevate, must itself be elevated, and that means work for women in the fields of political and social and educational activity. Then the motherhood that is worthy must be mated with an equal fatherhood, and there's room for a heap of improvement in that direction before anything approaching a decent standard is attained.

"Only by fecundity woman becomes useful to the race," says A. G. S. "The race," "the race!"—why always "the race"? If we are all to immolate ourselves on the altar of the Future, and the race for which we sacrifice must in turn be victims to another Future, and so on ad infinitum, there will never be a Present worth living, and the race had better be comfortably dead than offer itself as a perpetual oblation to itself. "That dead than offer itself as a perpetual oblation to itself. "That she may be racially useful," continues Stephens, "she must be secluded in a harem or its modern equivalent of the home, and kept off the grass of cerebral excitement." To the healthy mind there is something revolting in the conception of woman as a human queen ant—the helpless, brainless incubator of the race, valued only as a hatching apparatus. Why should we not retort, "Only by his fatherhood can man contribute anything of importance to the work of human elevation. That he may be racially useful he must be fenced in a paddock like a stud hog, and kept off the Red Pages of egotistical inebriation."—Rosalind, in The Worker (Australia).

The Right of Sovereignty.

The only real "sovereignty," or right of "sovereignty," in this or any other country, is that right of sovereignty which each and every human being has over his or her person and property, so long as he or she obeys the one law of justice towards the person and property of every other human being. This is the only natural right of sovereignty that was ever known among men. All other so-called rights of sovereignty are simply the usurpations of impostors, conspirators, robbers, tyrants and murderers.—Lysander Spooner.

Defensive Co-operation Is Urgent.

With a well-organized and active agitation already at work in the land against radicals, and with the present party in power frankly threatening to "run out all Anarchists, Socialists, and Freelovers," the need for defensive co-operation becomes more pressing each day. Engrossed in our petty differences of opinion, we have neglected to prepare for this general danger. Now, with the season of national elections, hurrahs and red fire at hand, we have to face organized assault.

The plan of attack is simple, magnificently so. Under cover of a grand patriotic hurrah, on pretense of protecting the government, radicalism in all its branches is to be legislated against in most furious fashion. The ghost of half-crazy, deceived Czolgosz is to be led forth, amid campaign enthusiasm, to delude people into the idea that we Free People—particularly those who are Anarchists—are common enemies. The recent fake "Anarchistic" attempts on Roosevelt will be held up as evidence against us. And under the influence of a presidential election it is easy to predicate success.

But, like all such attempts, there are points where the plan fails to be as effective as required. The expectation is that no effective resistance can be made. Unfortunately for the archists, the progress of science puts into our hands means for both effective and successful resistance. The prevalent patriotism of the masses, too, is a weapon for our hands, if wisely utilized. But to utilize the means of defense at our command, while not a pecuniarily costly action, demands organization, courage, and brains.

To put it flatly, those radicals who want to save themselves and those they love must get together and take measures for mutual aid in self-defense. And those who volunteer to undertake active part must realize that half-measures are as bad as nonresistance.

Let no one misunderstand me. I do not propose that any one be protected in assassination, rape, or any like act. But I do call for a firm resistance to all archistic invasion of our rights as human beings. LOIS PARTRIDGE.

It Is Best to Live in the Present.

Making men live in three worlds at once—past, present and future—has been the chief harm organized religion has done. To drag your past behind you, and look forward to sweet rest in heaven, is to spread the present very thin.

The man who lives in the present, forgetful of the past and indifferent to the future, is the man of wisdom.

The best preparation for to-morrow's work is to do your work as well as you can to-day.

The best preparation for a life to come is to live now and here.

Live right up to your highest and best! If you have made mistakes in the past, reparation lies not in regrets, but in thankfulness that you now know better.

It is true that we are punished by our own sins and not for them; it is also true that we are blessed and benefited by our sins. Having tasted the bitterness of error, we can avoid it. If we have withheld the kind word and the look of sympathy in the past, we can to-day give doubly, and thus, in degree, redeem the past. And we best redeem the past by forgetting it and losing ourselves in useful work.

It is a great privilege to live.—The Philistine.

Man and Nature.

Man vainly ascribes his misfortune to obscure and imaginary agents; in vain he seeks for mysterious and remote causes of his ills. In the general order of the universe, his condition is doubtless subject to inconveniences, and his existence overruled by superior powers; but those powers are neither the decrees of a blind fatality nor the caprices of whimsical and fantastic beings; like the world, of which he forms a part, man is governed by natural laws, regular in their course, consistent in their effects, immutable in their essence; and those laws, the common source of good and evil, are not written among the distant stars, or hidden in mysterious codes; inherent in the nature of terrestrial beings, interwoven with their existence, they are at all times, and in all places, present to man; they act upon his senses, they warn his understanding, and dispense to every action its reward or punishment. Let man, then, study these laws.—Volney.

VARIOUS VOICES.

We are always glad to receive calls from friends visiting the city. Take the Lake street elevated, stop at Ashland avenue, walk one block east, then one north. Or take Fulton street electric car west and stop at St. John's place, alighting in front of our house. The Lake street electric and Paulina street cars also pass within a block of us.

Miss K. B., Attica, O.: Inclosed find $1, which apply for renewal of your valuable paper, which I cannot do without as long as it is to be had and I have the money to pay for it.

J. W. Grigsby, Dallas, Tex.: In looking over some of my old papers I found two copies of Lucifer two years old. I was a subscriber at that time; have taken it "off and on" for many years, in fact ever since I first knew the brave little paper as the Valley Falls Liberal. Owing to various causes I have lost sight of it at intervals, only to renew my acquaintance with it again and again with greater interest than ever before. I now find myself hungering for a sight of its old, familiar face.

H. Armitage, Fairbank, Ariz.: I have been a subscriber to Lucifer for two years and a half, and my subscription is paid nearly a year in advance, so my name should not have been cut off. You don't know how I have missed your bright little paper. I would rather pay double than miss the most advanced paper published. I look on the writers as personal friends. Referring to Mr. Crane's article "Does It Pay to Be a Radical?" I wish to say that I think it does. We should remember that this is a campaign of education and the men he speaks of are the product of the present hypocritical system and would not exist under a freer system and better environment. But if we must be assured that everything is going to pay before we are willing to attempt any reform, we will all follow the bellwether, even though he lead us to perdition.

H. E. S., Baker City, Ore.: Wish you would study Socialism more thoroughly, as I see you (L. H.) have wrong ideas regarding it. We will get liberty ten times quicker under Socialism than we could under Anarchism. Man—all nature—has organization, and a head. To get clothed, fed, housed, taught, healed, etc., in the best possible manner with the least labor is a common-sense business science we ought to work for—the total abolition of poverty, also. Then when people are all economically independent liberty lovers can soon gain their attention and will have a majority. There must be organization, and if not ruled by the whole people it will become tyrannical like the postoffice is now—a branch of public service not controlled by the public. You may know more ten to one than I, but I cannot believe that you have correct ideas of Socialism.

O. H. P., Great Falls, Mont.: Yours of the 26th at hand, and in reply will say that while it must seem a very small matter I cannot afford to take your bright little paper any longer—at least for the present. The recent closing of the mines and smelters here and at Butte and Anaconda has produced a regular panic in this state. Collections are impossible to make, we are asking our creditors for extensions of time, and cutting off expenses wherever possible, even to the buying of many magazines and papers that ordinarily we would not think we could do without. If the shut-down lasts a year, as is thought probable by many, half the population of the state will leave—where wages are higher than anywhere else in the country and labor ordinarily fully employed, will be found only empty houses and stores. So I inclose 50 cents, which will cover all arrears, and you can send me a receipt in full at your convenience.

L. G. Landenberger, St. Louis, Mo.: I thank you for publishing my article "One Man and One Woman." I should like to reply to just one point in your comments. When I spoke of one man and one woman constituting an ideal marriage, you say that it is my ideal. I beg to say that it is not my ideal, but the Scripture ideal, for if left to my own desires I would likely have a very different ideal. You may reply that it is because I accept the Scriptures as a revelation from God that I have such an ideal. I do indeed. But I also believe that the truest and best instincts of man and woman are in perfect accord with Scripture, as I pointed out. Furthermore we have a witness who is hard to gainsay. I refer to Swedenborg. His statements are not the rantings of a madman or a fanatic. Every well-read person knows that he was one of the greatest scientists and philosophers the world ever saw. His affirmations concerning his intromission into the spiritual world, which lasted for twenty-seven years, are made in the frankest fashion. He was those who were in the highest states of heavenly bliss and the cause of it was the interior union of one man and woman. One may think lightly of his "things heard and seen," but I believe and feel sure that the relation between man and woman which he sets forth has in favor of it everything that is noble and true, good and pure. Revelation teaches it, the nature of man and woman proclaims it, reason declares it, and the experiences of the best men and women confirm it.

W. E. T., Little Rock, Ark.: Am sorry I overlooked the fact that my subscription was in arrears, and inclose $1 for renewal. Why, of course I want the paper. It has more good common sense (which is uncommon) than any other paper published. I was not aware that postoffice rules prohibited mailing papers to those in arrears. I would like to see a copy of this ruling, or law if it be.

[In the extracts from postal laws and regulations, edition of 1902, printed in the application for entry of publications at the second-class rate, I do not find any statement that the publisher must not send to subscribers who were not paid in advance. But I was informed that such was the case when I submitted our list to the officials at the Chicago postoffice. I was told that I had no right to send copies to the five hundred lapsed subscribers in any way—neither as subscribers, as gratis subscriptions, nor as sample copies. There is just one exception, I understood that if we could show recent orders from these subscribers—that is, statements from them that they would pay for their papers—we might have the privilege of sending to them on credit. As I did not wish to risk having the edition thrown out of the mails, as might have been done under this ruling, I immediately cut off the names of all in arrears, and also cut down the number of copies printed in order to comply with these regulations. Heretofore in our experience as publishers we have been accorded the right to send out as many sample copies as we had subscribers. Now we are told that we can print only twice the number of our paid-in-advance subscribers. This means that the copies which we keep for files, for bound volumes, to supply calls for back numbers, the copies which we send gratis, and those which may be used for any other than to supply paid-in-advance subscribers, must all be taken from the supply which we have heretofore been enabled to use as sample copies. When it is remembered that it is through the circulation of sample copies that nearly all of our subscribers are obtained, it will be easy to realize how seriously this ruling may cripple Lucifer's work unless means are taken otherwise to make up the loss in this direction. What such means shall be will probably be discussed later.—L. H.]

Sloven or Slouch.

There are many varieties of this species, but there is one distinguishing feature which is characteristic of them all: a disregard for the feelings of others. A sloven can never become a member of any well-regulated colony, as it is his class that has broken up more co-operative societies than anything else. People of this class flatter themselves that an easy, indifferent way of shunning their duties on others prevents their actions being seen in their real light, but nevertheless their fellows study them.

Some of the above class will be most careful of their personal appearance on the streets and when calling on their friends away from home. But in their homes we see them as they really are. Look at their bedrooms after they have changed their clothes, or even if they have been there but a quarter of an hour, and the disorder is a sight to behold. One shoe will be pitched in one corner and one in another; torn up fragments of letters and pieces of newspapers will be thrown on the carpet; articles of apparel will be on the chairs and tables, but never hung up in the closet, and so the slouch fastens on others the work he will not do himself, knowing instinctively that the individual whose life is well trained and ordered cannot exist in an atmosphere of confusion.

Women folk see this side of him, and at his office men see another form of this unmanly vice. He will treat his office as he treats his room or home; letters come in and he will leave the answering of them to others; orders come which others must enter and get out; work he should do to-day he postpones until to-morrow, and so he drifts through life. If such a creature is by himself his business shrinks and shrinks. His business partners and associates look forward to the day when they can cut loose from him. Of course, such as he smoke, and often gamble, and as years wear away in his worthless life he will add another vice or two to the list. An inheritance, or a pension from an active brother, will very often be the means of keeping off the inevitable day that he must "go to work." The habits of the sloven once fastened on him are hard to change; the policy of "drift" is so easy and pleasant that the thought of bravely striving to lead a new life and turn over a new leaf is a deed of seldom occurrence, and the sloven dies, as a rule, just as he has lived, and when he finally ends his useless life a nameless mound is very often the only mark of such a piece of human drift wood.

WALTER BREEN.

A cheap edition of "Plain Talk in Psalm and Parable," by Ernest Crosby, has been imported from England by the Comrade Co-Operative Company, New York, and may be ordered through this office. It is beautifully printed on good paper and is altogether a handsome book. The American edition sells for $1.50.

"WHO IS THE ENEMY?"

Dr. R. W. Shufeldt, biologist, author of several scientific works and of more than seven hundred articles on medicine, travel, science, sexual problems and other subjects, writes to E. C. Walker: "I thank you very much indeed for the copy you sent me of your valuable pamphlet, 'Who Is the Enemy—Anthony Comstock or You?' I have read it from cover to cover with the utmost satisfaction and unqualified approval. It is one of the best and strongest things you have put out, and I am with you solid in both the letter and spirit of it. I prize the copy most highly." Ask for table of contents and specimen pages of "Who Is the Enemy?" or send 20 cents to this office for the pamphlet.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

Special offer: This valuable work sent free on receipt of 25 cents for a thirteen weeks' trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light Bearer. Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Any one wishing to attend medical college in Chicago and whose means are small may obtain a scholarship at a greatly reduced price by addressing H., care of 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

The Liberal Mail Order Jeweler, now permanent at No. 130 N. Kensington Av., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 20 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Theism in the Crucible," free.

THE MAJESTY OF SEX.

This is the very latest WORD on the subject. This book will satisfy in a vital way the cry of the hungry soul. If you follow its teachings your body will become transformed and transcended. You will be happy, your body will become transformed and transcended. It does not deal in and healthy. You will prosper and be contented. It does not deal in theory alone, but goes straight to the heart of the subject. It teaches the ART of LIVING. Most of us know how to half-way live, but to live WELL and PROSPER is an ART. Learn how by sending $2.00 for the book. Circulars free. Address NANCY McKAY GORDON, 55 E. 30th St., Chicago, Ill.

Among the Moki Indians of Arizona the men weave dresses and the women build houses. Little children fearlessly handle live rattle-snakes. Religious rites antedate Columbus' time. These and other interesting facts about our brothers in red may be found in a profusely illustrated book of 224 pages, "Indians of the South-West," written by Geo. A. Dorsey, Curator of Anthropology, Field Columbian Museum, and published by the Santa Fe. If interested in Indians and their handicraft, send 25 cents to pay postage and mailing and you will be glad you did. Address W. J. Black, G. P. A., A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 17 Jackson Blvd., Chicago, 434 enclose coin or stamps.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of 50s G. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We can not sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Comstock Tyro style. 20 cents each, two for 30 cents. Address Edwin C. Walker, 244 West 143d street, New York, N. Y.

FREE LITERATURE.

Your name will be sent to a great number of the finest papers published for sample copies if you send 10 cents to INTERMOUNTAIN SUB. AGENCY, Box 198, Ovadise, Idaho.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

BEYOND THE TOMB. A discussion of Freethought and Free Love. Universal Brotherhood. 10c.

THE SOCIAL QUESTION. A discussion between Juliet H. Severance, M. D., and David Jones. 15 cents.

BORNING BETTER BABIES. Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 10c.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

KARESZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. E.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together, with That Great Fraud, Xetopt Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winer). 25c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. S. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (G. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (S. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola). 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Law in Freedom (Oscar Hetter). 25c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. S. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (S. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

FRIENDLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, S. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Hetter). 25c.

WOMAN AND HER RELATION TO THE CHURCH OR CANON LAW FOR WOMEN. Harriet M. Chess. A succinct statement of the position to which women were doomed by the Church Fathers and authorities. Every woman should possess a copy. 10c.

THE CURSE OF MATERNITY. From the French of Henry Fevre. Together with How to Escape the Curse (Jonathan Mayo Crane), Woman's "Duty" to Bear Children (E. C. Walker), Type and False Morality (G. L. James), Love's Law (William Francis Barnard). 25 cents.

MODERN PARADISES. The Model Home. Solution of the Social Problem. Future Governors of Electricity. Present Experiment in Social Science. An Earthly Eden and How to Attain It. A Unique Power Plant. Wonderful System of Education. All gaily illustrated. Prof. Henry Olerich. 50c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: A Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE, as viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock, Bad Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powers and How Obtained; Phrenology; Phrenological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. One of the best short works on the subject. Daintily printed. A charming little gift book. "Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it." 25 cents.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided, and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUARDS. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Constitutionists; Love and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men of Race-Life, and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman; and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman; and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; What Is She? What Will She Be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Sins; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Sins; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Sins; Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 10c.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES. Edwin C. Walker. Contents—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only"; Individual Rights; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Prostitution and Vice, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spelling of the Heathen"; What Are the Efforts of the Crusaders; The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics of Rabbi and Crusader; The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics of Rabbi and Crusader; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Its Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" The Tenements; Action for Advanced Women. With Appendix: The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of It all. 10c.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE. Edward Carpenter. This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author: The Sex Passion; Man, the Ungrown; Thought followed by the author: The Sex Passion; Man, the Ungrown; Thought followed by the author: The Sex Passion; Man, the Ungrown; Woman, the Serf; Woman in Freedom; Marriage, a Retrospect; Marriage, a Forecast; The Free Society; Some Remarks on the Early Star and Sex Worship. Notes on the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Prevention Checks to Population. The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work. Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up to date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisons or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take one—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has 500 pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid, to any address, for $2.75.

THE ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY AND THE STATE. Frederick Engels. Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans. 217 pages; bound in cloth, etc. Postage, 5c.

THE HOME CYCLOPEDIA OF MEDICAL, SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE. Contains a full, plain and easy-reading treatise on "Health and Disease, with Recipes"; all the average reader can profitably learn of personal hygiene and common diseases (including special, separate chapters for men and women); all right up to date, and fully illustrated with hundreds of photo-engravings and chromo-lithographs. Contains also the already popular "Plain Home Talk" about the relations of the sexes and social customs in all ages and all countries, with "original and startling" suggestions for social reforms; newly revised, enlarged and well illustrated. All is "heart to heart" plain home talk from a clear-thinking, plain-speaking, liberal-minded medical author of over forty years' experience. Nearly 1,000,000 of his former books sold. A curious book for curious people, and a sensible book for every one. Answers 1,000 delicate questions one would like to ask one's regular physician and yet doesn't want to. 1,248 pages, 60 illustrations (20 in colors); 20c recipes. Cloth bound, $2.

THE WHOLESOME WOMAN. J. H. Greer, M. D. The latest and most complete work of its kind. Four books in one volume. Part I—SEX AND LIFE; The Principle of Life; The Dominant Power of Life; The Temple of the Soul; The Unfolding of Womanhood; The Fulfillment of the Law; The Fruits of Fulfillment; Home and Home-Making. Part II—BIOLOGY: The Organs of Generation; Menstruation; The Marriage Relation; Conception and Prenatal Culture; Child Birth; The Hygiene of Infancy; Development from Birth to Puberty; Disorders of Infancy and Childhood; Afflictions Peculiar to Women; What Determines the Sex of Offspring. Part III.—CHILD-CULTURE: The Foundation of Moral Uprightness; The Kindergarten (with diagrams); Manual Training. Part IV.—HEALTH AND HYGIENE: Long Life Not a Secret; "Breath is Life"; How, When and What to Eat; Sleep and the Bath; Clothing and Dress; Mental and Physical Culture; What to Do in Sickness; What Not to Do in Sickness; Care of the Eyes and Ears; Care of the Extremities; Poisons Used as Medicines; The Application of Heat and Cold; Unnecessary Surgical Operations; An Ounce of Prevention. The complete work is published in one handsome, large quarto volume of 510 pages, with photogravure frontispiece, portrait of the author 16 full-page half-tone and numerous smaller explanatory illustrations. It is printed on an extra quality of paper from new electroplates, and each volume is accompanied by a separate supplement of 41 plates (printed in colors), illustrating Sex in Plant Life; the Human Sexual Organs and the Laws of Reproduction; the Development of the Human Embryo and Fetus, showing nourishment and growth from day to day and month to month; the Plan of Fetal Circulation, etc. In extra cloth, with special emblematic cover design, $2.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. R. G. Walker. 10c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Dreiling. 15c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. W. and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socialand. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MONEY, BANKS, PANICS AND PROSPERITY. By W. H. Clagett. 15c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A study of the industrial type. Dyer D. Lum. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

RELIGIOUS, POLITICAL AND SOCIAL FREEDOM. A lecture by Juliet H. Severance, M. D. 10c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Egerton. 178 pages. 25c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

SOCIALISTIC, COMMUNISTIC, MUTUALISTIC AND FINANCIAL FRAGMENTS. By William B. Greene. $1.25.

AGE OF REASON; An Investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel portrait. 50c.

THE TEMPERANCE FOLLY; or, Who's the Worst? Lois Waisbrooker. Dedicated to the wrecks and so-called sinners of a false civilization. 10c.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 405 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 453 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Phillip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmeyer. 25c.

THE STORY OF ILIAN; or, The Evolution of a Mind. Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Stuart Rose), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. $1. Postage, 8c.

SONGS OF A CHILD, AND OTHER POEMS. By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II., together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. $1.50. Postage, 12c.

A RED HEART IN A WHITE WORLD. A suggestive manual of Free Society; containing a method and a hope. By J. William Lloyd. Handsome illuminated paper cover in white, red and green; 50 pages, 10c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

AN ESSAY ON THE DUTY OF CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE. By Henry D. Thoreau. A reprint of this classic essay on the supremacy of the individual conscience. Antique paper; artistic covers, dark green on yellow. 10c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 31 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 426 pages. 50c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Degtor, and Specsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line" presentation edition, $1; five volumes, plainer binding, $0.50; all in one volume, $2.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 3, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

994.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are inclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

Your subscription is paid to No. ..... If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward Fitzgerald's interpretation; with original introduction; latest version. Special cover. Paper, 10c.

IBOLA; or, The Disinherited. A drama in six acts. Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Original Frontispiece. Cloth, $1. Postage, 7c.

GOD AND THE STATE. One of the most eloquent pleas for liberty ever written. Paine's "Age of Reason" and "Rights of Man" consolidated and improved. It stirs the pulse like a trumpet call. By Michael Bakounine. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 81 pages. 15c.

SHEOLDS WITH POCKETS. A life sketch. By Henry K. Allen. A touching story, told in simple and yet striking language, and yet more than a story. Vivid flashes of light are thrown on the inexpressible horrors of capitalism. Illustrated with many portraits of Socialists and other reformers. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Heroes." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 37 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltaire and Voltaire. 25c.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman March 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A BLUNDER IN POISONS. C. F. Nichols. "Vaccination will undoubtedly rank as the greatest and most pernicious failure of the century; this conclusion is no longer a matter of opinion, but of science," said Alfred Russell Wallace, and in this booklet the facts are arrayed in support of this assertion. 25c.

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. An Outline of Practical Co-Operative Individualism. By Henry Olerich. Regarded by many persons as a most interesting and original economic reform novel that follows Bellamy's "Looking Backward." Bound in red silk with gold title. Nearly 400 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, $1.

VACCINATION A CRIME. With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions. Felix L. Oswald, M. D. "Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads smallpox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents." With illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 196 pages. 50c.

HISTORY OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. By C. L. James. An excellent history of the French Revolution, well written by one thoroughly familiar with his subject. Special care has been exercised to give the facts as they are, the author not having made himself the champion of any faction. Neatly printed from large type on good book paper, with a substantial binding. 335 pages, with an index and bibliographical epitome. Cloth, $1.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED; John S. Kelso. Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff or Free Trade; War or Pacifism; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be. 128 pages. Cloth binding, somewhat damaged, and reduced from $1.50 to 50 cents.

HILDA'S HOME; A Story of Woman's Emancipation. Rosa Grant. With Macaulay, Rosa Grant would say, "The cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty." Hence she has no fears that under Freedom the Home and the Family would cease to exist, or that woman will be less loving and lovable, or that men will be less manly and honorable. On the contrary, she maintains that only in the soil and atmosphere of Freedom is it possible for true womanhood and manhood to live and flourish. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fearing that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelievers or disguised religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. R. G. Walker. 5c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and wisdom, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life and of growth and the evolution—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, embellished with portrait of the author. In two editions, de luxe, and plain. Prices, $1.25 and $0.60.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old asceticism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.'" The new Hedonism says: "Be happy and you will be virtuous." In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from ordinary superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are ordinary and asceticism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproducing function." Paper cover; 20 large pages. Twelve copy lots, 50c; single copy, 5c.

THE BIBLE. John E. Remsburg. Contains eleven chapters on the authenticity of the Bible, based on the best authorities of the time; thirteen on the credibility of the Bible, two on the morality of the Bible, and an appendix in which Mr. Remsburg sets forth unanswerable arguments against the divine origin and in favor of the human origin of the Bible. Twenty-six pages of index enable the reader to instantly refer to any authority quoted or argument used. Mr. Remsburg is one of the most careful, accurate and painstaking of writers, and his book is a compendium of the latest scholarship and rationalistic thought on the subject. The late Colonel Ingersoll began his famous lecture on the Bible by saying: "Some one ought to tell the truth about the Bible." This Mr. Remsburg has done—done it fully, and done it well. Large 12mo., 366 pages. Cloth, $1.25.

THE SLAVERY OF OUR TIMES. Count Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of the gifted author, and introduction by the translator, Aylmer Maude. Chapter titles: I. Good's Fortune Who Work Thirty-seven Hours. II. Hadley's Experience While Men Perish. III. Justification of the Existing Position of Laborers. IV. The Assertion of Economic Science that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System. V. Why Learned Economists Assert What Is False. VI. Bankruptcy of the Socialistic Ideal. VII. Culture, or Freedom? VIII. Slavery Exists Among us. IX. What Is Slavery? X. Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property. XI. Laws the Cause of Slavery. XII. The Destruction of Legislation is Organized Violence. XIII. What Are Governments? Is It Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV. How Can Governments Be Abolished? XV. What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword. Well Printed on heavy paper; substantially bound. 196 pages. 25c.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Expertly adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. E. WOOD, M. D., Suite 61, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VII., No. 44. CHICAGO, ILL., NOV. 12, E. M. 302. [C. E. 1902.] WHOLE NO. 995

THE AIM OF LIFE.

We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths;
In feelings, not in figures on a dial.
We should count time by heart-throbs. He most lives
Who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best.
And he whose heart beats quickest, lives the longest;
Lives in one hour more than in years do some Whose fat blood sleeps as it slips along their veins.
—Philip J. Bailey.

The Fight for Free Speech.

The cause of free speech is the cause of man. A gagged mouth is worse than a shackled body. Truth is born of open discussion. The days of the Inquisition were the dark days of the human race. A beneficial censorship is a contradiction in terms. Every censor is, consciously or unconsciously, an enemy of humanity. The paltry excuses for restriction of free discussion sometimes to be heard from pulpits or read in newspaper columns always have their genesis in corrupt motives or in gross ignorance. No honest man needs to fear the open discussion of any question. When all sides are given a full hearing there can be no fear of the defeat of the truth. Conscious error likes to creep into dark holes and shuns the bright light of day. The whine that the opposition should be suppressed comes from cowards who have no real faith in the convincing power of that in which they pretend to believe. The persecutor brands himself in the eyes of the coming age. He may triumph for the moment, but his memory is doomed unless worthier advocates succeed in purifying it from the stain. Comstock is the greatest enemy of purity in the United States, as Philip II. of Spain was in reality the deadliest foe of Christianity, and as those who suppress the utterance of Anarchist opinions are the worst traitors to the government they profess to adore. The crowned madman of Germany has done more to bring monarchy into disrepute than the entire radical press of Europe, and his lese majeste laws have only succeeded in bringing him into richly deserved contempt.

In all ages the truest lovers of mankind have toiled to imbue their fellows with the spirit of open-mindedness. The cause of free speech numbers the most glorious martyrs in history. Socrates, whose name we hold in reverence to-day, was murdered by the Athenian people for seeking to lead them to think for themselves. Bruno in death and Galileo in imprisonment paid the penalty of loving truth more than public opinion. Roger Bacon upheld the cause of scientific research against unnumbered persecutions. Milton perceived that no error was so fatal as the suppression of thought, and penned his glorious "Areopagitica," which remains to this day an unanswerable argument to all who, either from mental weakness or from a tyrannous disposition, seek to set bounds to human speculation or expression. Voltaire, Paine and a host of others have followed in demonstrating that free minds and free lips were necessary in order that men might grow and learn. In our own land Elijah Lovejoy gave his life for the principle of freedom of the press, and from his martyrdom was born the grand apostleship of Wendell Phillips in the cause of freedom. We stand indeed on holy ground when we approach the sublime company of those who, through the ages, have striven to secure not only for themselves, but for all mankind, the right of unfettered utterance on every theme. Well for us if we are found worthy to tread in their footsteps and to bear the most humble part in this great work.

Never was the cause of free speech in greater need of fearless championship. The people of the United States seem drugged or stupefied on this vital issue. For thirty years Comstockism, trailing its slimy length with the immunity afforded by plausible but damnably false pretences of concern for public purity, has sunk its venomed fangs deep in the flesh of men and women immeasurably purer than their persecutors. The foul murder of Ida C. Craddock was but an episode in the filthy career of this spawn of utter vileness. More recently the growing spirit of imperialism has proceeded to almost incredible lengths. Free speech is confessedly strangled in Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands, and restrained even in Cuba, where the United States cannot pretend to have any right to meddle. Sedition laws, the enactment of which utterly destroyed the Federalist party of a hundred years ago, are to-day complacently received by the degenerate issue of sires to whom liberty was something more than a name. The Declaration of Independence is trodden under foot and spit upon by the present rulers of our land, as containing too strong an affirmation of human rights. Workingmen are denied the privilege of peaceable assembly and the right to reason with their fellow workers. All these are but symptoms of a great and growing disease, the cure of which lies in the development of public intelligence.

This is the cause to which we have pledged ourselves. In our work for freedom of expression we invite the co-operation of all who believe in according to others the rights they claim for themselves. Human rights are without exceptions. White, black, brown, yellow or red of hue; male or female, young or old, poor or rich, of every class and rank; Catholic, Protestant, Buddhist, Jew, Mohammedan, Mormon, Theosophist, Spiritualist, Mental or Christian Scientist, Dowieite, Koreshan, Atheist or Agnostic in religion; Republican, Democrat, Prohibitionist, Socialist, Single Taxer or Anarchist in political alliance or social philosophy—all these and all others are entitled to the full and free expression of their ideas of truth and should be protected in it. Not all of them can be right. Perhaps none of them is wholly right. But out of the friction of their contending views is kindled the spark of truth. All true progress must come by the road of freedom of expression. Let us, therefore, build well for the millions who are pressing ahead, that their course be not checked by stumbling blocks unworthy of an enlightened age.—James F. Morton, Jr.

The Beauties of Government.

To be governed is to be watched, inspected, spied, directed, law-ridden, regulated, penned up, indoctrinated, preached at, checked, appraised, seized, censured, commanded, by beings who have neither title nor knowledge nor virtue. To be governed is to have every operation, every transaction, every movement noted, registered, counted, rated, stamped, measured, numbered, assessed, licensed, refused, authorized, indorsed, admonished, prevented, reformed, redressed, corrected. To be governed is, under pretext of public utility and in the name of the general interest, to be laid under contribution, drilled, fleeced, exploited, monopolized, extorted from, exhausted, hoaxed and robbed; then, upon the slightest resistance, at the first word of complaint, to be repressed, fined, vilified, annoyed, hunted down, pulled about, beaten, disarmed, bound, imprisoned, shot, mitrailleused, judged, condemned, banished, sacrificed, sold, betrayed, and, to crown all, ridiculed, derided, outraged, dishonored.—Proudhon.

A Free Society.

AN ADDRESS BEFORE THE BOTCROPTERS BY CHARLES LOCIS BREWER.

To those who keep in touch with current events it is getting very evident that Socialism is coming, whether we want it or not, as the only way out of the situation we are drifting into, and the only manner of expressing the rising spirit of brotherhood and fraternity. It vibrates in the air, pulses in the blood, thrills in the soul and is beginning to cut fantastic capers in most men's minds.

The only anti-Socialistic argument really worth anything is that which holds it up to reprobation as "The Coming Slavery." And the only people who can properly use that are the Anarchists. Coming from others, it is merely amusing to the audience and dangerous only to the chump who uses it.

And here is where I am glad to see my Socialistic and Capitalistic friends both neatly cornered. Every opponent of Socialism is coming more and more to teach the basic principles of Anarchism, and the Socialists are constantly countering by accepting these same principles and making them their own. Thus the gospel of Freedom is preached from all platforms and the candle of Governmentalism goes flickering away at both ends.

We are used to hearing Socialism and Anarchism defined as exact opposites, and so they are. But they are the opposite halves of one whole—the complementary poles of a well-balanced society. The social problem is merely a question of giving each its proper sphere.

While Socialism was only a theory its advocates were just as bigoted and unreasonable as any one else. They had their various cut-and-dried programmes all ready, and every one was to work so many hours a day for so many days a year and for so many years. The ideal Socialist State was a great machine, as smooth and stupid as clockwork, and there wasn't a place in it that a genuine man with blood and brains wouldn't be glad to swap for a job in hell.

But now the Socialist is getting his bumps against the real thing and learning to appreciate the demands of individuality. The capitalists on one side and the Anarchists on the other are pulverizing his mechanical programmes and making him see a big dynamic difference between human beings and brass cog wheels. And he is rising to the situation and meeting both classes of opponents by representing Socialism more and more as a healthy, natural development of society, which will mean freedom instead of oppression and spontaneity in place of bureaucracy. One of the most hopeful signs of the times is that prominent Socialists are coming out over their own signatures in Anarchist papers and declaring their adherence to the principle of individual freedom.

My own belief in Socialism began when I saw that as the government became an industrial organization it would naturally and necessarily cease to be a political and military organization. Later I had to admit that the industrial State might maintain a crueler and more crushing tyranny than was ever possible under military rule; and there is much in history and human nature to indicate that this will be attempted. Many Socialists still believe in law and look forward to the Socialist State as the reign of strict law in every department of life.

To meet this we have to depend on the growing love and knowledge of freedom among the people. In the bright light of publicity it is becoming clear that when the social commonwealth is established no one must be compelled to join it. All who choose, for any reason, good, bad or indifferent, to live and work and exchange independently, either singly or in groups, must be free to do so, and to have their own land, tools and capital and the use of all public utilities, such as mails and transportation, at cost and without any adverse discrimination.

But things once made clear are sometimes forgotten. Power generally corrupts and intoxicates, and the blindest and most incorrigible fool on earth is the big, strong, brilliant man who prostitutes his splendid faculties to the service of a creed or an institution. If the social commonwealth is established before the masses of Socialists are permeated with the principles of Anarchism there will be not only a strong effort to retain some such legal machinery as we now have to regulate individual conduct, but there will be great opposition to leaving the open door for individual initiative and progress in industrial matters. And under the influence of leaders in whom the lust of power is still strong the majority may decide that it is the Whole Thing, and that what it does not choose to do shall not be done at all. And then it may—in the name of the people, of course, and as a necessary measure for public convenience and safety—send its duly elected and accredited representatives to take possession of the Roycroft Shop, and every other independent concern in the country, and either close it up or run it according to the ideas of it.

But I think that if the love and knowledge of liberty is not strong and widely diffused enough to prevent such a move it will certainly be strong and self-centered enough to defeat it. For all the live people, every one capable of carrying a message to Garcia, everybody with electricity in their blood, ex-rays in their eyes and radium in their souls, will join the rebels and start in to baptize the world with fire. And when they get through I think it will be universally conceded that the talent is the call, and the call the authority, and that no administration, and no institution, and no majority will henceforth dare to stand in the way of the individual or say "Thou shalt not!" to anything he may wish to do.

And so I hope that, to avoid trouble and to inaugurate the reign of peace on earth in a peaceable manner, McMahan and Chandler and the rest of the Roycroft agitators will mix enough Anarchy with their Socialism to help their converts understand that each individual man and woman is inherently and by right superior to all the laws that men can make and immune forevermore from the rules of all institutions and the decrees of all majorities.

If this is done and the social commonwealth entered upon with the clear idea that it is for the people, and not the people for it; that it is not really a thing at all, but only an intelligent method to aid the development and facilitate the manifestation of individuality—then our public relations will be all right and lovely; and it will only remain for us to attend to the little personal detail of being all right ourselves and becoming harmonious notes in the harmonious whole.

Aluminum Currency in Iowa.

Dollars, half-dollars, quarters, dimes and 5-cent pieces made of aluminum and properly stamped circulate in Williams, Iowa, in all manner of business transactions. The prime purpose is to draw trade from other towns, and the plan seems to be working out successfully. It draws the trade, and, strange as it may seem, it passes as currency at above par and is redeemable in United States coin. One can buy any quantity of goods at the same price as for Uncle Sam's money in nearly all stores. In fact, the dealers, when selling goods, do not know whether the purchaser is to have it charged, pay in United States money or in aluminum coins.

A few months ago an association of these dealers put up $10,000 and established a butter and egg emporium. They hired a man to run it, and he buys all the butter and eggs that come to town. He pays 2 or 3 cents more per pound for butter and 2 or 3 cents more per dozen for eggs than any adjoining merchants do or can afford to do on Chicago or New York markets, but these prices are to be paid in aluminum coins. When a farmer wants Uncle Sam's money he gets the cash market prices paid in other towns. He has his choice, and in each case is satisfied.

As to the selling part of this butter and egg emporium, the promoters retail all of the butter and eggs needed by the citizens in Williams at the prices which prevail in other towns. The surplus is shipped to eastern markets.

The concern lost a little money for the first few months and fully expects to lose something every year. But the owners of the stock say their share of the presumed and inevitable loss of the emporium will not be as much as though they bought and sold butter and eggs in their own stores. Storekeepers are very anxious to get hold of these aluminum dollars as the coin of the realm, for the reason that they can go to the emporium any day and get dollar for dollar by exchanging the aluminum for bank notes.

It seems to be an endless chain of currency, and very clever in moving poultry, butter and eggs. The farmer likes the plan, for he is sure of a cash market for all he has to sell. If he takes aluminum dollars, they are good at any time at any one of a dozen or more places of business, and it requires no passbook or due bills or book accounts at the store.—Daily Paper.

Is the Higher Stirpiculture Possible?

Given knowledge of heredity sufficient to make it possible to use conscious selection in combining the qualities necessary to insure intellectual and moral as well as physical improvement, the higher stirpiculture would be practicable to an indefinite extent.

Do we possess such knowledge? We can improve the animals below man so as to make them fitted to serve our purposes. Having fellow human beings subject to our will, we could by breeding improve the stock and strain, increase in the descendants strength, power of endurance, amiability and submissiveness.

But when we attempt to use the reproductive element to change the characteristics of living beings so as to make them better, higher and more capable of self-support and self-government, without reference to their service to us, we are up against a different proposition. In so far as we can instruct persons to form wise unions for themselves, we can undoubtedly help them. But how far can we do this? We can advise consumptives and paralytics not to marry; we can advise the weak and feeble to remain single; we can urge the importance of selecting for partners persons who are essentially sound in body and mind. But do we know enough to inform the rising generation how to marry so as to insure offsprings of the best quality, mentally and morally, as well as physically? Do we know what the combinations were that gave to the world Socrates, Marcus Aurelius, Roger Bacon, Bruno, Servetus, Luther, Shakespeare, Milton, Kant, Gibbon, Humboldt, Washington, Jefferson, Webster, Lincoln, George Eliot and Florence Nightingale?

A large amount of vitality and muscular development do not imply intellectuality or a fine moral nature. What strong and symmetrical men were the South Sea Islanders seen at the World's Fair at Chicago! Yet, mentally, they were children.

One of the conditions of a high degree of intellectual development in a people is sensitiveness and susceptibility to the nervous maladies. Lombroso and other psychiatrists and alienists have shown that most of the noted characters of history, from Pericles to Peel, from Socrates to Spencer, were victims of neuropathic troubles of some kind. Nesbit gives sketches of nearly three hundred authors, artists, statesmen, generals, philosophers, philanthropists, etc., including the most famous men and women of the past, and shows that they inherited diseases or neuropathic tendencies which developed into physical or mental disorders. The world cannot, in its desire for physical strength and soundness, afford to lose men and women of genius such as have helped to make the race progressive and the world brighter and better.

Some writers maintain that genius is a result of the concentration of mental force in some portions of the brain at the expense of other portions, whereas in ordinary persons the distribution is general. Hence the eccentricities, the erraticisms, the weaknesses, as well as the brilliancy, of painters, poets, orators, inventors and discoverers—of genius.

Does anybody know how to teach the young how to make selections of companions that will add to the intellectual and moral wealth of the world?

It is in vain that theoretical stirpiculturists point to the results of men's experiments which have resulted in improved domestic animals, fruit and grain. It is evident enough that man can improve members of his own race under similar conditions, and for similar purposes, by the same methods.

The question is, How can the human race be improved mentally, morally and physically so that self-sovereignty shall not be lost in servitude, so that subjects of the experiments may be their own masters, able to order their own lives, and not be like "dumb driven cattle" under the domination and existing for the profit and pleasure of others?

The animals which have been domesticated and, under the supervision and selection of man, have been improved for his use, restored to a state of nature, would either perish or in time revert back to their original condition. In the struggle for life there have survived those physical and mental qualities in different environments which have been the best for the animals, those which have fitted them to compete successfully, to overcome the obstacles in their surroundings and to adjust themselves to apparently unfavorable conditions which could not be escaped. Every deviation from the type which Nature has produced in the struggle for life is a departure from the natural conditions which are favorable to the "survival of the fittest" where the hand of man does not come in to protect and enslave for his own purpose. If a group of men should attempt to modify family stock, to change by selection a number of human beings so as to make them pre-eminently virtuous and good, such efforts might result in unfitting the subjects of such experiments for a self-supporting career in an environment requiring them to compete with their fellowmen and to achieve success, if at all, by their own efforts. To succeed in this world, where competition is keen, men must be capable of attrition with their fellows and of benefiting thereby. They must possess combativeness and aggressiveness as well as knowledge. Mere amiability, kindness and concessiveness will not do.

In trying to breed a variety free from vicious inclinations, free from strong tendencies to coarseness of life, the danger might be in eliminating that animal strength, that natural vigor, without which virtue is mere weakness, negativeness—nothing. To have great strength of character, to have great moral qualities, there must be capacity for wrong-doing, with liability of abuse of those strong qualities which, unperverted and wisely directed and controlled, give us the highest type of manhood and womanhood.—R. F. Underwood in the Boston Investigator.

The True Kings.

In the higher condition of society, toward which mankind is unconsciously advancing, men will shun all responsibility for and arbitrary control over the conduct of others as sedulously as during past ages they have sought them as the chief good. Washington declined to be made king, and the whole world has not ceased to make the welkin ring with laudations of the disinterested act. The time will come yet when the declimature, on all hands, of every species of governmental authority over others will not even be deemed a virtue, but simply the plain dictate of enlightened self-interest. The sentiment of the poet will then be recognized as an axiom of philosophy—

"Whoever mounts the throne,—King, Priest, or Prophet,— Man alike shall groan."

Carlyle complains, in the bitterness of his heart, that the true kings and governors of mankind have retired in disgust from the task of governing the world, and betaken themselves to the altogether private business of governing themselves.

Every individual is the rightful sovereign over his own conduct in all things, whenever, and just so far as, the consequences of his conduct can be assumed by himself; or, rather, inasmuch as no one objects to assuming agreeable consequences. For disagreeable consequences, endurance, or burden of all sorts, the term "cost" is elected as a scientific technicality. Hence the exact formula of the doctrine, with its inherent limitation, may be stated thus: "The Sovereignty of the Individual, to be exercised at his own cost."—Stephen Pearl Andrews.

Woman's Industrial Emancipation.

If woman's industrial equality with man is secured all else will follow. Woman's industrial emancipation means more to me than her political emancipation. Complete industrial emancipation means the highest type of woman as a result, the word "industrial" comprehending in this sense all remunerative employment. Each step in the industrial movement has raised her in the scale of civilization rather than degraded her.

There is no fixed rule by which nature has intended that one sex should excel the other any more than there is any fixed point beyond which either cannot develop. Nature has no intentions and evolution has no limits. True science teaches that the elevation of woman is the only sure road to the evolution of man. As woman has the power given her to support herself she will be less inclined to seek marriage relations simply for the purpose of securing what may seem to be home and protection.

One of the greatest boons which will result from the industrial emancipation of woman will be the frank admission on the part of the true and chivalric man that she is the sole rightful owner of her own being in every respect; that whatever companionship may exist between her and man shall be as thoroughly honorable to her as to him. In callings where men surpass women, women will be obliged to abandon the field; but where services are performed with equal skill and integrity by both there will come honest competition and an equalization of compensation.—Carroll D. Wright.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 West 143d street, New York.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire let us hear from you if you want to continue to receive Lucifer.

Among the Mountains.

Socorro, N. M., Nov. 4.

A son of the mountains—the Alleghanies—I enjoy this feature of my sojourn in New Mexico far more keenly, as I think, than would those born and bred on the level plains. The purity of the atmosphere brings even distant mountain ranges to our very door, so to speak, while the "eternal sunshine" throws a splendor, a magnificence, over the landscape that must be seen to be appreciated.

For more than two weeks I have enjoyed to the full this purity of the "breath of life," these splendid panoramic views of the mountains and plains of New Mexico, and have meantime made the personal acquaintance of many of the progressive people living in three of the more prominent towns of this territory. Did space permit I should be glad to mention the names of all who have welcomed and who have been more or less helpful to me during these weeks, but as this is scarcely possible, I shall have to content myself with saying, in a general way, that everywhere I meet evidence that the vastness, the grandeur of scale on which Nature does things in this part of the world, have had a corresponding effect on mental development, and that narrowness, bigotry, prejudice, conventionalism, sectarianism are not characteristic traits of the people of New Mexico, at least of those with whom it has been my good fortune to become acquainted.

Myself a valetudinarian, I am much interested in the question of comparative advantages of different localities as health resorts. Of the three places just alluded to—Las Vegas, Albuquerque and Socorro—the first is perhaps the most celebrated; the hot springs and Montezuma Hotel, near that place, having been more generally advertised by the management of the Santa Fe Railway system than either of the other points; yet it would be very hard for me to choose as between these three if I were expecting to make a long stay in New Mexico.

As to elevation, Las Vegas is 6,383 feet above sea level; Albuquerque 4,935, and Socorro 4,571, and for this reason health-seekers with small lung capacity would probably choose the last named; also on account of its more southern latitude, the summers being longer and the winters milder.

Of these three Albuquerque is the more important as a center of progressive thought, also as a political and commercial metropolis, although not the seat of political power—that honor (or dishonor) belongs to Santa Fe, the oldest town in the territory and one of the very oldest in the United States.

At Albuquerque I had the pleasure of meeting many of the Socialists, also of the "New Thought" people, the Theosophists, etc. At Carpenter's Hall in that city I had the honor of addressing a small but very attentive and intelligent audience, presided over by W. P. Metcalf, president of the local Socialist club. Also at my room in the Highland House I met, by invitation, near a dozen wide-awake agitators for a more just and equitable arrangement of economic and financial conditions, opportunities and awards.

Sunday night, Nov. 1, I made a short run of seventy-six miles from Albuquerque to Socorro, an old town of some 1,100 inhabitants, county seat of Socorro County, at which place I am now the guest of our old-time friend, Ada M. Morley of Datil, N. M., near which place she has lived many years on a typical New Mexican ranch. Somewhat unexpectedly I found her busy doing what she can to defend a man named Wallace, an employé and neighbor, now in jail here, charged with killing another ranchman named McCammon in a dispute over the payment of a debt by McCammon to Wallace. The case is attracting much attention all over the territory, and as it is typical of the methods often employed by ranchmen and others in the great West, I will state it somewhat in detail as I find it reported in the papers, also by the prisoner himself and his many friends.

Irving Wallace, unmarried—a Scotchman, as his name would indicate—came to "The Datils," as a certain section of the New Mexican mountains are called, about fifteen years ago, and by industry, economy and fair dealing accumulated a herd of almost 200 cattle. This herd of cattle Wallace sold to a neighbor, named McCammon, for $4,000, receiving $300 down and notes for the balance; interest to be paid yearly thereon till settled in full. When the first payment of interest fell due Wallace called upon McCammon for his money and was met by a pistol shot at short range that pierced his clothes and grazed his flesh. The men clinched, and in the struggle McCammon was disarmed. Then starting for the house, he called to his wife to bring his "Winchester." Believing that he could not get to his horse soon enough to save his life, Wallace shot and fatally wounded his adversary, then helped him into the house and to his bed. Not knowing whether the wound would prove fatal, and knowing that the only witness to the encounter was the wife of his assailant, Wallace hid himself in the mountains, intending to return and give himself up for trial after the excitement consequent upon the shooting should have time to cool off. After some weeks of privation and exposure, the nights being cold and his clothing scanty, Wallace was arrested and placed in jail in Socorro, his preliminary examination being set for to-morrow, Nov. 5. As before said, this tragedy is a characteristic phase of Western life, and from the general good reputation of the principal actors the trial will be watched with great interest by hundreds if not thousands of people. As one well-informed reporter expressed it to me, "Not since the assassination of McKinley has there been so much excitement here over the sudden death of a fellow human being."

To-morrow night—Thursday—I expect to return to Albuquerque, hoping to do a little more work at that place before again taking passage over the main line to San Francisco, at which point I have appointed to meet a few of Lucifer's friends Monday evening, Nov. 9, hoping to be there in time to take a little part—if permitted—in the memorial meeting on the 11th in honor of the judicially murdered victims of the police "riot" at the Chicago Haymarket, May 4, 1886.

M. HARMAN.

"The Fight for Free Speech," which appears on the first page of this issue, is from a pamphlet, "Do You Want Free Speech?" written and published by James F. Morton, Jr., editor of the Demonstrator, Home, Wash. The pamphlet is written in Mr. Morton's usual clear, able style and is an important contribution to the literature of free speech. It may be ordered of James F. Morton, Jr., Lake Bay, Wash., or of this office.

We are always glad to receive calls from friends visiting the city. Take the Lake street elevated, stop at Ashland avenue, walk one block east, then one north. Or take Fulton street electric car west and stop at St. John's place, alighting in front of our house. The Lake street electric and Paulina street cars also pass within a block of us.

In another column Laura H. Earle asks some questions that will be difficult to answer. The letter was not written for publication, but I thought some of our readers may be able to give us light on the subject.

If any of our readers has a copy of Charles Bellamy's "Experiment in Marriage" to dispose of we would like to be informed of the condition of book and price asked.

John Turner Ordered Deported.

New York, Nov. 7.—The law against the admission of Anarchists to the United States was sharply upheld by Judge Lacombe in the United States court to-day when he ordered the deportation of John Turner, the English "red." This is the first case under the new law and highly interesting as indicating the attitude of the government. Turner had been ordered out of the country by the authorities at Washington, but sought to evade the order by a writ of habeas corpus. Pending an appeal to the Supreme Court, Turner must remain a prisoner on Ellis Island.

H. O. Pentecost, the attorney for Turner, contended that the law which classified Anarchists among the excluded persons was unconstitutional. Anarchy, Mr. Pentecost claimed, was a religion, but this contention is disposed of by Judge Lacombe, who said:—

"It is difficult to understand upon what theory the exclusion of an alien who is an Anarchist can be held to be a prohibition of the free exercise of religion."

Judge Lacombe quoted a federal decision which declared that every sovereign nation has the power inherent in sovereignty and essential to self-preservation to forbid the entrance of foreigners within its dominions or to admit them under such conditions as it may see fit to prescribe, and that the constitution has committed the entire control of internal relations to the national government in peace as well as in war.

"As to abridgement of the freedom of speech," said he, "that clause deals with the speech of persons in the United States and has no bearing upon the question what persons shall be allowed to enter therein."—Record-Herald.

A Permanent Postoffice Scandal.

The so-called frauds and scandals which have agitated the press of late are trifles compared with the greater loss and waste which are a daily burden upon federal revenues. The business of the Postoffice Department has been and is administered with great inefficiency, lack of economy, and with no broad-gauged appreciation of the increased needs of the country, while the postmaster general is a political appointee, and his chief assistants secure and hold their positions not because of their knowledge of the business or of their experience or familiarity with it, but for other reasons.

Instead of working on business principles, the postoffice machine is governed by a bulky book of laws that has grown from the slim book of 1794 as fast as successive Congresses have cared to pass postal bills. Rates of postage are changed, service is rendered, contracts are made under regulations passed by men dead for generations, whose laws were made for a postoffice which as late as 1873 cost in total expenditures only what it costs now for the single item of railroad transportation. The Postoffice Department may recommend until it is weary, and these laws do not budge. Congress—and that means chiefly the House Postoffice Committee—says what the postoffice shall do and shall not do. I once asked a high postoffice official why he failed to carry out a plan he had to save perhaps the total amount of the postoffice deficit on certain contracts. He shrugged his shoulders.

"Why bump one's head against a stone wall?" said he. "Congress won't pass it."

And here enters the next drag on the postoffice machine.

"Every plan that has ever been presented to Congress for improving the postal service," said a high postoffice authority, "has been scrutinized by interests. Do you suppose we can have a revision changing the present rates of paying the railroads as long as some of the most prominent senators and congressmen are identified with transportation interests, or establish a parcels post while T. C. Platt, president of the United States Express Company, is United States senator?"

I turned to another official.

"Do you mean," said I, "that you could not pass a bill obnoxious to interests?"

"Well"—and he smiled diplomatically—"there would certainly be opposition."

Finally there is the civil-service system. If a postoffice official fulfills his routine duties, he rises in the service by sheer mechanism. Once in a berth, it requires a trial for gross inefficiency or misconduct to get him out. If the miasma of an office where there is no spur of self-interest to goad a man to effort fails to stifle his progressiveness, sophistication tells him that it is unwise to arouse an interest. "Not too much zeal!" is a watchword in the United States postoffice. Even if the head of a department wished to have a force as efficient as that demanded by the manager of a business, he could not have it.

Here, then, is the institution: Heads who are not expected to know the business; a civil-service machine that comprises the real postoffice; parts of two outside departments enforcing the laws and auditing the mere bookkeeping accounts; antiquated laws governing; Congress directing; interests watching both Congress and the postoffice. It is a serious question what part the American people play in this government business, the people who paid the deficiency of more than $4,000,000 last year and who contributed nearly $130,000,000 in postage for its postal service.—M. G. Cunniff, in the World's Work.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Nov. 7.—When Congressman Robinson left for Washington a few days ago there was no commotion here except among the mail clerks. They could not understand why the east-bound mails were suddenly so heavy from Fort Wayne until they discovered that the packages bore the congressional frank of the congressman and were destined for Washington. The total weight of the packages, which included the congressman's personal effects, was 1,500 pounds.—Record-Herald.

It costs the government eight times more to carry the mails than it costs the express companies to have their matter hauled. —W. J. Bryan.

Who Shall Say Who Are Radicals?

When Mr. Crane comes to man his "radical ship" I wonder how many competent persons he will find. Not more than two, I fear, for besides himself I am the only genuine, all-around, thoroughbred radical in the lot. You know, "The whole world is queer but thee and me, and thee is a little queer."

I wonder if there is a radical anywhere who would not be "read out of our ranks" by somebody. Even I—a most thorough and consistent radical—am decidedly "read out" by our good Father Harman (see Lucifer 984), and Adeline Champney in some paper not only reads me out, but politely consigns me to the same hot place the Christians would if they could. And a good friend who recommends a colony to me says, "They are not radical on the sex question," but presumes they are quite radical enough to suit me.

Now, I am a good radical and these people are good judges, Mr. Harman especially, and if mistakes are made in this instance who can do the reading out and do it fairly?

I liked Mr. Crane's article, "Does It Pay to Be a Radical?" very much. It reminded me of a lecture I read years ago—"Can Radicals Be Happy?"—by Hugh Pentecost. I thought it one of the best things I ever read. Mr. Crane's characters are true to life, we frequently meet them, but I agree with Lillian Harman that "we cannot read them out of our ranks." But we can read them out of our own individual lives, and have a right to refuse to associate with any one who is inharmonious or disagreeable, whatever he calls himself.

Our good Father Harman has to give his young ones a lambasting once in a while to show how much he loves us, I suppose. That's a way some fathers have. But I don't think it was quite fair for him to give me such a licking when I wasn't any sassier than some of the other girls. Adeline Champney said as bad words as I did, and she didn't even get scolded. But I ought not to blame him. I feel just that way myself when people call my ideas stuff, rot, etc., and some way it doesn't sound so bad when the other fellow catches it.

What I said of free speech might have been said better a little differently. I meant if I was an editor I would shut out certain things, just as any editor has a right to do, but I am the last person in the world to put any restraint on anybody else writing or publishing anything they want to.

I suppose my article would have been just as good without using the words objected to, but we sometimes get an idea—erroneous, no doubt—that unless we use hard words and speak very loud we get no attention nor listeners.

LILLIE WHITE.

Lake Charles, La.

It is not the disease, but the physician; it is the pernicious hand of government alone which can reduce a whole people to despair.—Junius.

VARIOUS VOICES.

James W. Adams, Lake Bay, Wash.: Home grows slowly, both in numbers and improvements. No other village on the Sound equals it in neatness and thrift, and this is commented on by the old-timers. Inclosed find $1 on my subscription.

Walter Breen, Omaha, Neb.: As to the exact position of Ingersoll on the great economic question of the twentieth century, Socialism, is it not likely that his views on this subject are the same as Voltaire's on questions of a similar nature in the eighteenth century? My impression is that the future historian will find many parallels in the lives and the life-works of the two men. Both were men with a national reputation, both had incomes that were princely, both liked to live well and both enjoyed the wit and repartee of bright intellects of their age. They each made their central attack on the prevailing superstitions of their time, the one principally on the Roman Church and the other turned his attention on the Protestant religion. They each did their work with somewhat of the same weapons, sarcasm and ridicule, and did as much as any two of the world's greatest men (who labored on this line) to further the cause of mental liberty. This one great achievement alone will be sufficient to place them with the immortals. A century hence we shall no more think of inquiring about Ingersoll's position on the "labor question" than we would now think of seeking to discover the views of Monsieur de Voltaire on the "tenement house" question.

S. R. S., Kansas: I notice that Lucifer has made no mention of the decision referred to in clipping inclosed. The courts of New York had decided that divorces obtained in South Dakota were void in New York—a most damnable decision, since it made bigamists of many prominent New Yorkers who had got divorces in South Dakota and married again. The United States Supreme Court decision will make those cranks feel sick who have been trying to get Congress to pass a national divorce law, as it practically declares state sovereignty in the matter of divorce. It establishes as law the principle of "interstate courtesy." And it slaps in the face those puritans who howl and yowl eternally about "easy divorce." Easy divorce is all right—the easier the better. Let us hope that "easy divorce" will now take fresh start and grow and flourish like a green bay tree. The road out of unhappy marriage should be made smooth and wide and inviting, and without any toll gates or other obstacles.

No preventing Providence, my sweetheart, or solid girl, will be in Chicago the 17th, 18th and 19th to visit friends and relatives and attend the "New Thought" convention. She will give you a call. She and I are "equals" in marriage experience as well as other things. I am her third husband and she is my third wife. How is that for high? If at first you don't succeed, try, try again.

[The clipping referred to follows:]

"The Supreme Court of the United States in a recent decision has proclaimed the principle that a divorce which is valid in the state in which it was granted is valid in every other state of the Union, and frees both parties to the suit from the marriage tie absolutely and everywhere. This decision overrules a good many decisions of state courts which have recently undertaken, with incongruous and unfortunate results, to except decrees of divorce from the constitutional provision that 'Full faith and credit shall be given in each state to the public acts, records and judicial proceedings of every other state.' The marriage relation establishes a civil status. Every state has the right to determine for itself, within the limits of the national constitution, what shall be the civil status of its citizens. And its determination, under the federal constitution, must be respected in every other state."

Laura H. Earle, Redford, N. Y.: Where my copy of Lucifer has been going I feel rather uncertain; however, being now settled for a time, I should like to have it sent to me here, if you will be so kind. Having, by the untoward circumstances of my recent life, been deprived of every particle of information as to the movement of thought in the world, the sight of Lucifer will be even more than commonly welcome. I should like much to hear something of Virna.

There is a question as to sex manifestations which I should like to hear discussed by those who have thought and acted. Does a sex attraction that is exclusively physical justify itself? And how does such a phenomenon explain itself in a person who recognizes the essential differences between this emotion and that of love? Or are the two emotions only different aspects of the same great passion? Again, does gratification of the physical need blunt the perceptions for what might be called the more etherealized love? And would the answers to these questions have exactly the same application to one sex as to the other? This last question seems to me vital; as, in my own experience, I am more and more struck by the different, sometimes apparently opposite, effects of the same cause on the opposite sex. Of course, nobody knows these things, but opinions are often helpful to those struggling with the problems of life. To compare experiences should be of great value; but this, to a great extent, we are forbidden, I suppose, by our written and unwritten laws of taboo. Pardon me if I take your time with several questions instead of confining myself to my first statement of a question, but one seems to lead by a natural sequence to the others, and I find all irresistible.

A Thanksgiving Proclamation.

This [the American] people has been grateful for a mighty reason. It has believed it was a divinely ordained nation. It has believed the curtain of waters of the Atlantic Ocean was let down on the eastern side of this continent for a mighty purpose. It has believed Providence caused that curtain of waters to remain unpenetrated until 1492, with that mighty purpose. It believes Providence itself kept it there for fifteen centuries after the coming of Christ, and until Columbus' prow parted the waters of this western continent, for that mighty purpose. It has believed that purpose was to establish and maintain here on American soil a mighty and a model republic with corner stone of religion, science, labor and freedom, utterly regardless of what it cost in tears, in treasure, in effort and in blood. . . . It has buried the red flag of Anarchism. It has maintained law and order. . . . The due reward has not been withheld. Peace, prosperity and contentment have been its reward during the last twelve months. Destruction by epidemic and pestilence, by tornado and flood and fire has been mercifully kept away. . . . Let them glorify God, the author, gracious and benignant beyond expression, of our untold and priceless blessings. Let all the people fall not to give thanks.—Richard Yates, Governor of Illinois.

Fasting and prayer are religious exercises; the enjoining them is an act of religious discipline. Every religious society has a right to determine for itself the time for these exercises and the objects proper to them according to its own peculiar tenets; and this right can never be safer than in their own hands, where the constitution has deposited it.—Thomas Jefferson.

Who Is Max Graber's Wife?

Nineteen years ago Max Graber married Mrs. Sarah Graber in Russia. Several years afterward he left her in their native village and came to Chicago. He was a butcher and in the end became a man of comfortable means. In the Ghetto, where he lived, he met Lena Levison. She was a girl in her teens then, and American breeding had given her a certain charm lacking in the peasant wife left behind in Russia. Graber had a divorce document drawn up by a Chicago rabbi and sent it to his wife in the Czar's dominion. Before an ecclesiastical tribunal of Jewish high priests, it is said, Mrs. Sarah Graber accepted the divorce document with 500 rubles, and by the laws of the "gett" was declared divorced.

Then Graber married the pretty Lena Levison. By his second marriage Graber already had four children when Mrs. Sarah Graber suddenly appeared in the city. Magnified stories of Graber's wealth had been carried back to the village on the steppes. Mrs. Sarah Graber declared the "gett" had not divorced her. She had Graber arrested for bigamy, and after a trial in the Criminal Court he was convicted. Pending a decision upon the validity of "gett" divorces, however, Judge Horton suspended sentence and allowed Graber to be released on a recognizance of $2,500. Two suits for separate maintenance followed. Judge Holdom granted Mrs. Sarah separate maintenance and Judge Gibbons granted Mrs. Lena separate maintenance. As both women were thus recognized by the courts as Graber's legal wives, the marital conundrum was left as far from solution as ever.

Sexology the Secret of Life.

How much is there in the sex question? Much every way. The perpetuity, happiness and perfection of the race. Is that much, and is it worth striving for, and can it be done? Only in freedom can it be. Is this a land of freedom? For some, yes; for others, no. Theologians are free and protected by law to teach theology, and teachers of everything, so far as I know, with the exception of Anarchy and Sexology, are unmolested.

It is of Sexology I wish to write. Sexology is a comparatively new science to many. History tells us that the first lesson given to the Brahmin boy when he commences his religious life at nine years of age is: "Know that the shades of your ancestors in aerial form will attend you in your studies, and if you are worthy will hereafter reveal to you the secret of life. Always remember that what you now learn should never be revealed to the vulgar herd." And now, why do we die, and what is the secret of life and why kept from the vulgar herd? We die because the life force is wasted in riotous living. The secret of life is how to conserve this force, whereby comes regeneration, or the renewal of the physical, mental and spiritual man and woman; and to be kept from the common people that the priest might rule them.

Some believe that among the important things concerning sex is borning better babies. These teachers of Sexology believe that if only desired and intentional babies were born they would be better than undesired and unintentional ones. That only desired and intentional babies may be born, we must know that there are two distinct methods of sex communion—one for propagation and one for regeneration. If these facts were known and practiced the race would surely and steadily grow toward perfection and death would go out of fashion.

SARA CHNT CAMPBELL.

"WHO IS THE ENEMY?"

Dr. R. W. Shufeldt, biologist, author of several scientific works and of more than seven hundred articles on medicine, travel, science, sexual problems and other subjects, writes to E. C. Walker: "I thank you very much indeed for the copy you sent me of your valuable pamphlet, 'Who Is the Enemy—Anthony Comstock or You?' I have read it from cover to cover with the utmost satisfaction and unqualified approval. It is one of the best and strongest things you have put out, and I am with you solid in both the letter and spirit of it. I prize the copy most highly." Ask for table of contents and specimen pages of "Who Is the Enemy?" or send 20 cents to this office for the pamphlet.

Any one wishing to attend medical college in Chicago and whose means are small may obtain a scholarship at a greatly reduced price by addressing H., care of 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

The Liberal Mail-Order Jeweler, now permanent at No. 110 N. Kensington Av., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 20 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Thelma in the Crucible," free.

THE MAJESTY OF SEX.

This is the very latest WORD on the subject. This book will satisfy in a vital way the cry of the hungry soul. If you follow its teachings your body will become transformed and transmuted. You will be happy and healthy. You will prosper and be contented. It does not deal in theory alone, but goes straight to the heart of the subject. It teaches you how to live WELL and LIVING. Most of us know how to half-way live, but to live WELL and PROSPER is an ART. Learn how by sending $2.00 for the book. Circulars free. Address NANCY McKAY GORDON, 55 E. 59th St., Chicago, Ill.

Among the Moki Indians of Arizona the men weave dresses and the women build houses. Little children fearlessly handle live rattle-snakes. Religious rites antedate Columbus' time. These and other interesting facts about our brothers in red may be found in a profusely illustrated book of 224 pages, "Indians of the South-West," written by Geo. A. Dorsey, Curator of Anthropology, Field Columbian Museum, and published by the Santa Fe. If interested in Indians and their handicraft, buy a copy; only costs 50 cents; easily worth a dollar. Write to-day to W. J. Black, G. P. A., A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 77 Jackson Blvd., Chicago, and inclose coin or stamps

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We can not sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 25 cents each, two for 50 cents. Address Edwin C. Walker, 304 West 103d street, New York, N. Y.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to cleanse that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 41, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

FREE LITERATURE.

Your name will be sent to a great number of the finest papers published for example copies if you send 10 cents to INTERMOUNTAIN SUB. AGENCY, Box 186, Ovadon, Idaho.

RADICAL LITERATURE

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 10c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of Freethought and Free Love, Of"ou Northcote. 10c.

THE SOCIAL QUESTION. A discussion between Juliet H. Severance, M. D., and David Jones. 15 cents.

BORNING BETTER BABIES. Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 10c.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 320 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. $1.00.

KARREZZA, Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY, in four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes, 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Zelept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wilson). 25c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. E. B. Foote, Jr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (E. B. Foote), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola). 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intuition (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. E. B. Foote. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Treachism (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an Allegory), E. B. Foote, and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

WOMAN AND HER RELATION TO THE CHURCH OR CANON LAW FOR WOMEN. Harriet M. Closs. A succinct statement of the position to which women were doomed by the Church Fathers and authorities. Every woman should possess a copy. 10c.

THE CURSE OF MATERNITY. From the French of Henry Fevre. Together with How to Escape the Curse (Jonathan Maye Crane), Woman's "Duty" to Bear Children (E. C. Walker), Vice and False Morality (C. L. James), Love's Law (William Francis Barnard). 25 cents.

MODERN PARADISE. The Model Home, Solution of the Social Problem. Future Greatness of Electricity. Proposed Experiment in Social Science. An Earthly Eden and How to Attain It. A Unique Power Plant. Wonderful System of Education. Elegantly illustrated. Prof. Henry Gleich. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: A Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the exciting arms of babes." Paper covers; 41 large pages. 10c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE, as viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock, Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and His Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. One of the best short works on the subject. Daintily printed. A charming little gift book. "Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the majority of nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it." 25 cents.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and mind. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and mind. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and mind

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler's). Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 10c.

THE ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY AND THE STATE. Frederick Engels. Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans. 127 pages; bound in cloth, 40c. Postage, 5c.

THE HOME CYCLOPEDIA OF MEDICAL, SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE. Contains a full, plain and easy-reading treatise on "Health and Disease, with Recipes"; all the average reader can profitably learn of personal hygiene and common diseases (including special, separate chapters for men and women); all right up to date, and fully illustrated with hundreds of photo-engravings and electro-lithographs. Contains also the already popular "Cash Home Talk" about the definitions of the sexes and social customs in all ages and all countries, with "original and startling" suggestions for social reforms; newly revised, enlarged and well illustrated. All is "heart to heart" plain home talk from a clear-thinking, plain-speaking, liberal-minded medical author of over forty years' experience. Nearly 1,000,000 of his former books sold. A curious book for curious people, and a sensible book for every one. Answers 1,000 delicate questions one would like to ask one's regular physician and yet doesn't want to. 1,316 pages; 400 illustrations (30 in colors); 25c recipes. Cloth bound, $2.

THE WHOLESOME WOMAN. J. H. Greer, M. D. The latest and most complete work of its kind. Four books in one volume. Part I—SEX AND LIFE: The Principle of Life; The Dominant Power of Life; The Temple of the Soul; The Unfolding of Womanhood; The Fulfillment of the Law; The Fruits of Fulfillment; Home and Home-Making. Part II—TOKOLOGY: The Organs Fulfillment; Home and Home-Making. Part II—TOKOLOGY: The Organs of Generation; Menstruation; The Marriage Relation; Conception and Prenatal Culture; Child Birth; The Hygiene of Infancy; Development from Birth to Puberty; Disorders of Infancy and Childhood; Affections Peculiar to Women; What Determines the Sex of Offspring. Part III.—CHILD-CULTURE: The Foundation of Moral Uprightness; The Kindergarten (with diagrams); Manual Training. Part IV.—HEALTH AND HYGIENE: Long Life Not a Secret; "Breath Is Life"; How, When and What to Eat; Sleep and the Bath; Clothing and Dress; Mental and Physical Culture; What to Do in Sickness; What Not to Do in Sickness; Care of the Eyes and Ears; Care of the Extremities; Poisons Used as Medicines; The Application of Heat and Cold; Unnecessary Surgical Operations; An Ounce of Prevention. The complete work is published in one handsome, large quarto volume of 512 pages, with photogravure frontispiece, portrait of the author, 24 full-page half-tone and numerous smaller explanatory illustrations. It is printed on an extra quality of paper from new electroplates, and each volume is accompanied by a separate supplement of 41 plates (printed in colors), illustrating Sex in Plant Life; the Human Sexual Organs and the Laws of Reproduction; the Development of the Human Embryo and Fetus, showing nourishment and growth from day to day and month to month; the Plan of Fetal Circulation, etc. In extra cloth, with special emblematic cover design, $3.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. S. C. Walker. 10c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 10c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A. and Cecile Chavannes. 10c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 10c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socialand. Albert Chavannes. 10c.

MONEY, BANKS, PANICS AND PROSPERITY. By W. H. Clagett. 10c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A study of the industrial type. Dyer D. Lum. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERSTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 10c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

RELIGIOUS, POLITICAL AND SOCIAL FREEDOM. A lecture by Juliet H. Severance, M. D. 10c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

DAWN OF CIVILISATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

SOCIALISTIC, COMMUNISTIC, MUTUALISTIC AND FINANCIAL FRAGMENTS. By William B. Greene. $1.25.

AGE OF REASON; An Investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel portrait. 50c.

THE TEMPERANCE FOLLY; or, Who's the Worst? Lets Watchmaker, Dedicated to the wrecks and so-called sinners of a false civilization. 10c.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 460 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 472 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Phillip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmeyer. 20c.

THE STORY OF LIAIN; or, The Evolution of a Mind. Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Stuart Rose), and four Illustrations beautifully printed in colors. $1. Postage, 5c.

SONGS OF A CHILD, AND OTHER POEMS. By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. $1.50. Postage, 10c.

A RED HEART IN A WHITE WORLD. A suggestive manual of Free Society; containing a method and a hope. By J. William Lloyd. Handsome illuminated paper cover in white, red and green; 50 pages, 10c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

AN ESSAY ON THE DUTY OF CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE. By Henry D. Thoreau. A reprint of this classic essay on the supremacy of the individual conscience. Antique paper; artistic covers, dark green on olive. 10c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 81 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 624 pages. 50c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsle, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line" presentation edition, $1; five volumes, plainer binding, $1.50; all in one volume, $2.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public Address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 3, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

995.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

Your subscription is paid to No. ..... If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

HILDA'S HOME; A Story of Woman's Emancipation. Rose Graul. Will Macaulay, Rose Graul would say, "The cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty." Hence she has no fears that under Freedom the Home and the Family would cease to exist, of that woman will be less loving and lovable, or that man will be less manly and honorable. On the contrary, she maintains that only in the soil and atmosphere of freedom is it possible for true womanhood and manhood to live and flourish. 456 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward Fitzgerald's Interpretation; with original introduction; latest version. Special cover. Paper, 10c.

1804; or, The Disinherited. A drama in six acts. Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1. Postage, 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 40c; paper, 25c.

GOD AND THE STATE. One of the most eloquent pleas for liberty ever written. Paine's "Age of Reason" and "Rights of Man" consolidated and improved. It stirs the pulse like a trumpet call. By Michael Bakounine. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 51 pages. 15c.

SHROUDS WITH POCKETS. A life sketch. By Henry E. Allen. A touching story, told in simple and yet striking language, and yet more than a story. Vivid flashes of light are thrown on the unspeakable horrors of capitalism. Illustrated with many portraits of Socialists and other reformers. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Heroes." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 37 Freethinkers, including Hume, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltaire and Voltaire. 25c.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman March 30, 1892. Cloth, 40c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A BLUNDER IN POISONS. C. F. Nichols. "Vaccination will undoubtedly rank as the greatest and most pernicious failure of the century; this conclusion is no longer a matter of opinion, but of science," said Alfred Russell Wallace, and in this booklet the facts are arrayed in support of this assertion. 25c.

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD; An Outline of Practical Co-Operative Individualism. By Henry Gerlich. Regarded by many persons as a more interesting and consistent economic reform novel than Bellamy's "Looking Backward." Bound in red silk with gold title. Nearly 400 page. Paper, 50c; cloth, $1.

VACCINATION A CRIME. With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions. Felix L. Oswald, M. D. "Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads smallpox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents." With illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 160 pages. 50c.

HISTORY OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. By C. L. James. An excellent history of the French Revolution, well written by one thoroughly familiar with its subject. Special care has been exercised to give the facts as they are, the author not having made himself the champion of any faction. Neatly printed from large type on good book paper, with a substantial binding. 342 pages, with an index and bibliographical epitome. Cloth, $1.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. John R. Kelso. Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff or Protection; War Punishments; Barriers; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be. 69 pages. Cloth binding, somewhat damaged, reduced from $1.50 to 50 cents.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. By C. C. Reynolds. Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. 25c. E. C. Walker. 5c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspiring treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, embellished with portrait of the author. In two editions, de luxe, and paper. Prices, $1.25 and $1.00.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old asceticism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.'" The new Hedonism says: "Be happy and you will be virtuous." In another place the writer says: "In proportion as we have freed ourselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are ordinal and secretions; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproducing function." Paper covers; in large page, twelve copies, 50c; single copy, 5c.

THE BIBLE, John E. Remsburg. Contains eleven chapters on the authenticity of the Bible, based on the best authorities of the time; thirteen on the credibility of the Bible, ten on the morality of the Bible, and an appendix in which Mr. Remsburg presents a number of arguments against the divine origin and in favor of the human origin of the Bible. Twenty-six pages of index enable the reader to instantly refer to any authority quoted or argument used. Mr. Remsburg is one of the most versed, acutest and painstaking writers, and his book is a compendium of the latest scientific and rationalistic thought on the subject. The late Colonel Ingersoll spoke his famous lecture on the Bible by saying: "Some one ought to tell the truth about the Bible." This Mr. Remsburg has done—done it fully, and done it well. Large 12mo., 500 pages. Cloth, $1.25.

THE SLAVERY OF OUR TIMES. Count Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of the gifted author, and introduction by the translator, Aylmer Maude. Chapter titles: I. Goods Factors Who Work Thirty-seven Hours. II. Society's Influences While Men Perish. III. Justification of the Existing Position of Influences. IV. The Assertion of Economic Science that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System. V. Why Learned Economists Assert What Is False. VI. Bankruptcy of the Socialist Ideal. VII. Culture or Freedom? VIII. Slavery Exists Among us. IX. What Is Slavery? X. Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property. XI. Laws the Cause of Slavery. XII. The Source of Legislation is Organized Violence. XIII. What Are Governments? Is It Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV. How Can Governments Be Abolished? XV. What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword. Well printed on heavy paper; substantially bound. 186 pages. 25c.

Price 2 Cents

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VII., NO. 45. CHICAGO, ILL., NOV. 19, E. M. 303. [C. E. 1903.] WHOLE NO. 996

A MAN MUST LIVE.

A man must live. We justify
Low shift and trick to treason high,
A little vote for a little gold
To a whole Senate bought and sold,
By that self-evident reply.

But is it so? Pray tell me why
Life at such cost you have to buy?
In what religion were you told
A man must live?

There are times when a man must die.
Imagine, for a battle-cry
From soldiers, with a sword to hold,—
From soldiers, with a flag unrolled,—
This coward's whine, this liar's lie:
A man must live!

—Charlotte Perkins Stetson-Gilman.

The Outcome of State Socialism.

The experience of those who are loudest in their advocacy of a new social order under the paternal control of a government, shows that even in private voluntarily-formed societies the power of the regulative organization becomes great, if not irresistible; often, indeed, causing grumbling and restiveness among those controlled. Trades unions, which carry on a kind of industrial war in defense of workers' interests versus employers' interests, find that subordination almost military in its strictness is needful to secure efficient action; for divided councils prove fatal to success. And even in bodies of co-operators, formed for carrying on manufacturing or distributing businesses, and not needing that obedience to leaders which is required where the aims are offensive and defensive, it is still found that the administrative agency gains such supremacy that there arise complaints about the tyranny of organization. Judge then what must happen when, instead of relatively small combinations, to which men may belong or not as they please, we have a national combination in which each citizen finds himself incorporated, and from which he cannot separate himself without leaving the country. Judge what must under such conditions become the despotism of a graduated and centralized officialism, holding in its hands the resources of the community, and having behind it whatever amount of force it finds requisite to carry out its decrees and maintain what it calls order. Well may Prince Bismarck display leanings towards State Socialism.

And then after recognizing, as they must if they think out their scheme, the power possessed by the regulative agency in the new social system so temptingly pictured, let its advocates ask themselves to what end this power must be used. Not dwelling exclusively, as they habitually do, on the material well-being and the mental gratifications to be provided for them by a beneficent administration, let them dwell a little on the price to be paid. The officials cannot create the needful supplies; they can but distribute among individuals that which the individuals have joined to produce. If the public agency is required to provide for them, it must reciprocally require them to furnish the means. There cannot be, as under our existing system, agreement between employed—this the scheme excludes. There must in place of it be command by local authorities over workers, and acceptance by the workers of that which the authorities assign to them. And this, indeed, is the arrangement distinctly, but as it would seem inadvertently, pointed to by the members of the Democratic Federation. For they propose that production should be carried on by "agricultural and industrial armies under State control"; apparently not remembering that armies presuppose grades of officers, by whom obedience would have to be insisted upon; since otherwise neither order nor efficient work could be insured. So that each would stand toward the governing agency in the relation of slave to master.

"But the governing agency would be a master which he and others made and constantly kept in check; and one which therefore would not control him or others more than was needful for the benefit of each and all."

To which reply the first rejoinder is that, even if so, each member of the community as an individual would be a slave to the community as a whole. Such a relation has habitually existed in militant communities, even under quasi-popular forms of government. In ancient Greece the accepted principle was that the citizen belonged neither to himself nor to his family, but belonged to his city—the city being with the Greek equivalent to the community. And this doctrine, proper to a state of constant warfare, is a doctrine which Socialism unawares reintroduces into a state intended to be purely industrial. The services of each will belong to the aggregate of all; and for those services, such returns will be given as the authorities think proper. So that even if the administration is of the beneficent kind intended to be secured, slavery, however mild, must be the outcome of the arrangement.

A second rejoinder is that the administration will presently become not of the intended kind, and that the slavery will not be mild. The Socialist speculation is vitiated by an assumption like that which vitiates the speculations of the "practical" politician. It is assumed that officialism will work as it is intended to work—which it never does. The machinery of Communism, like existing social machinery, has to be framed out of existing human nature; and the defects of existing human nature will generate in the one the same evils as in the other. The love of power, the selfishness, the injustice, the untruthfulness, which often in comparatively short times bring private organizations to disaster, will inevitably, where their effects accumulate from generation to generation, work evils far greater and less remediable; since, vast and complex and possessed of all the resources, the administrative organization once developed and consolidated must become irresistible. And if there needs proof that the periodic exercise of electoral power would fail to prevent this, it suffices to instance the French Government, which, purely popular in origin, and subject at short intervals to popular judgment, nevertheless tramples on the freedom of citizens to an extent which the English delegates to the late trade-union congress say "is a disgrace to, and an anomaly in, a republican nation."

The final result would be a revival of despotism. A disciplined army of civil officials, like an army of military officials, gives supreme power to its head—a power which has often led to usurpation, as in mediæval Europe and still more in Japan—nay, has thus so led among our neighbors, within our own times.

—Herbert Spencer.

It is with antiquity as with ancestry—nations are proud of the one, and individuals of the other; but if they are nothing in themselves, that which is their pride ought to be their humiliation—Colton.

Comments on the Turner Case.

The tyranny which demands the deportation of Mr. John Turner, the Englishman who came here to organize store clerks into labor unions, and who was arrested at a meeting held in pursuit of that purpose, on the charge that he is an Anarchist, won its first judicial victory last Saturday when Judge LaCombe of the United States Circuit Court dismissed the writ of habeas corpus sworn out by Turner's counsel and decided that pending an appeal the petitioner must be detained on Ellis Island. Judge LaCombe also decided that the law under which Turner was held is not unconstitutional, and that he may be deported if the Immigration Commissioners find him to be an undesirable immigrant.

From arguments made before Judge LaCombe on motion of the prosecution to dismiss the writ of habeas corpus the fact is developed that the philosophic Anarchism of Mr. Turner is not the front of his offending. That was used as a pretext for his arrest and the order of deportation, but it is as a labor organizer that the government considers him dangerous. The demand for his expulsion was based by the prosecutor on the theory that labor unions are a menace to the republic.

The case will be appealed and the prosecution followed in any line of argument it may adopt.—The Truth Seeker (New York).

Trade unionism is intending to make efforts on Turner's behalf, because he is a trade unionist; but before it becomes enwrapped in side issues the essential question ought to have a fair study. This question is practically whether the new law does not violate the first amendment to the constitution, which says that "Congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of speech." Section 38 of the anti-Anarchist statute prohibits the entrance into the United States of any person who disbelieves in all organized government. If it were established that the government has the right, constitutionally, to exclude any person for any disbelief it may choose to proscribe, it is felt that it would be dangerous doctrine. Here is the section of the law to be tested:

"That no person who disbelieves in or who is opposed to all organized government, or who is a member of or affiliated with any organization entertaining or teaching such disbelief in or opposition to all organized government, or who advocates or teaches the duty, necessity, or propriety of the unlawful assaulting or killing of any officer or officers, either of specific individuals or of officers generally of the government of the United States, or of any other organized government, because of his or their official character, shall be permitted to enter the United States, or any territory or place subject to the jurisdiction thereof. This section shall be enforced by the Secretary of the Treasury under such rules and regulations as he shall prescribe. That any person who knowingly aids or assists any such person to enter the United States, or any territory or place subject to the jurisdiction thereof, or who connives or conspires with any such persons to allow, procure, or permit any such person to enter therein, except pursuant to such rules and regulations made by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall be fined not more than $5,000, or imprisoned for not more than five years, or both."

It is contended by counsel for the government that the act does not restrict the freedom of speech, "because the parts relating to Anarchists, etc., are but descriptive of a class of excluded aliens"—other classes being polygamists, prostitutes, paupers, insane persons, et al. "This alien is not deported because of his speech," he declares, "but because he was found here in violation of law. His speech is merely evidence of his belief, and by it he is identified as an alien of the excluded classes." The extract from his speech so relied on as evidence that Turner is one of the immigrants the new law sought to keep out of this country was as follows:

"All over Europe they are preparing for a general strike, which will spread over the entire industrial world. Everywhere the employers are organizing, and to me, at any rate, as an Anarchist, as one who feels that the people must emancipate themselves, I look forward to this struggle as an opportunity for the workers to assert the power that is really theirs. The trade unions have been growing, and have reached big proportions. The inevitable outcome is a struggle between the two, and the general strike offers to advanced people an opportunity to demonstrate their power, and to us, who belong to the advanced movement, an opportunity to help the workers to gain in audacity and courage, and thus determine as quickly as possible their emancipation."

It is argued that in these remarks Turner indicated a "general strike" as a means to an end—the overthrow of all government. "Even small strikes being usually accompanied by violence, a general strike would certainly involve great social disorder and confusion," submits the government counsel. "A general strike, therefore, cannot be regarded as a peaceful means of establishing Anarchy. This alien's belief and his principles of Anarchy may be inferred also from his actions and associates." That is, he intended to lecture on Nov. 9 on "The Legal Murder of 1887," meaning "the great Chicago tragedy on the 11th of November, 1887," which was the hanging of Anarchists. John Most was to speak from the same platform.

But it is admitted that he is an Anarchist—a philosophical Anarchist. Pentecost & Campbell, attorneys for Turner, maintain that the United States has imposed a limitation on its own powers of exclusion of aliens. "It cannot exclude an alien on account of his religious beliefs, nor can it exclude any one in a manner that amounts to an abridgment of the freedom of speech or opinion. It would be clearly unconstitutional, for example, to substitute the word 'Mormons' for the word 'polygamists' in the act of March 3, 1903, for although some Mormons are polygamists, a polygamist is a criminal, while a Mormon, as such, is merely a member of a religious sect. As a Mormon, he could not constitutionally be excluded, although as a polygamist he can be. Anarchists are members of a philosophical sect or school, and as such, under the constitution, have the same right to be in this country as the members of any other sect or school of thought."

All members of this sect or school are thus submitted to prior restraint, "prejudged and condemned for having certain ideas." That is what has induced a committee of persons interested in liberty of speech to support and assist the efforts to contest the constitutionality of an immigration law which excludes a person not only for what he "believes and advocates," but also for what he disbelieves. "It goes even farther," declare Turner's attorneys: "It excludes aliens who believe in organized government if they are members of or are affiliated with any organization that teaches disbelief in or opposition to organized government." It appears to them that there is no limit to the words which may be introduced into the law if it be right to exclude an alien on account of his opinions. Socialists, trade unionists, titled foreigners in search of American heiresses, "every class of persons, indeed, not already American citizens, may be shut out."

Counsel for the government, R. A. Paddock, asserts that Congress has the power of deciding what classes of aliens it shall admit, and what it shall reject. It was, he adds, competent for the lawmaking power to decide against "those obnoxious to it on account of opinions as well as those undesirable by reason of their pecuniary, physical, mental, and moral condition and their nationality." He quotes Justice Gray's decision in a Chinese case, that "deportation is the removal of an alien out of the country simply because his presence is deemed inconsistent with the public welfare."

Apparently the government considers that the interpretation of the law by Turner's counsel is correct. The arrest and expulsion of this alien was under the section which, as so interpreted, authorizes the deportation of aliens on account of religious, sociological, or political beliefs, regardless of whether or not they "believe in or advocate the overthrow by force or violence of government." The question, then, before the court is reduced to whether or not a law that excludes aliens solely on account of what they believe or disbelieve, or solely on account of their affiliation with people who believe or disbelieve something, is constitutional under the limitations set by the nation itself upon its own power by the first amendment.—New York Evening Post.

How nearly the United States have retrograded to the period in their history which is distinguished by the enforcement of the "alien and sedition laws," and how completely the autocratic principles of the defunct Federal party of Hamilton's day have triumphed in ours, is indicated by the decision of Judge Lacombe in the Turner deportation case.

Under Lacombe's decision, Tolstoy, greatest of Russians and foremost among non-resistants, could not visit this country. Neither could Kropotkin, the famous literary man to whom England affords an asylum against Russian persecution; nor Reclus, the geographer of world-wide fame. Nor is that all. Under the principle of the decision, it would be constitutionally possible to exclude any foreigner who has an opinion on any subject. For "no person who disbelieves in or is opposed to all organized government," read "no person who disbelieves in or is opposed to all competition," and you exclude the Socialist; "to all Protestantism," and you exclude the Roman Catholic; "to the Bible," and you exclude the agnostic; "to wars of conquest," and you exclude the anti-imperialist; "to the Pope of Rome," and you exclude Protestants; and so on with variations according to the popular prejudices or fears of the moment. Would these suggested exclusions be absurd? None could be more so than the one that Judge Lacombe sustains as reasonable. Any man may propose an amendment to the American constitution, but if he proposed an amendment repealing the instrument, on the ground that government is bad or useless, he would be an "Anarchist" under the "anti-Anarchist law;" and if he were a foreigner and made the proposition abroad, he could be deported if he afterwards got into this country and came before Judge Lacombe! If the whole thing did not cast an advancing shadow over the guarantees to free speech and free press within as well as without the United States, it might be humorous enough for a comic opera.—The Public (Chicago).

The doctrine of the anti-Anarchist act is akin to that embodied in the alien bill of 1798, and extremely likely, if tamely accepted, to be followed by a sedition act for the benefit of such native citizens as may, like myself, be in active disagreement with imperialism, and who dare to criticise Secretary Root, or his successor. To defend Turner is not at all to defend what he may do in the future or what he believes now; but to stand for the right of every one to free expression of even unpopular opinions and unpopular ideas of future states of society. Tyrants always begin with the most unpopular man, and trust to his unpopularity to get him out of the way, and then get rid of the next most unpopular.—A. C. Pleydell.

An act to exclude the discontented is ridiculous. When we have discontent, domestic or imported, the only safeguard is to teach these people to express their discontent in words before expressing it in dynamite.—Bolton Hall.

Natural Versus Artificial Selection.

"For always in thine eyes, O Liberty!
Shines that high light whereby the world is saved;
And though thou slay us we will trust in thee."

Dear Editor Lucifer:

In No. 988 I stood up a little man—"Breeding Prize Animals"—clad in what I supposed to be a coat of mail, in which I was anxious to see some broad, liberal-minded captain of the advanced guard of the grand army of progress point out the weak places with his mailed fist.

In No. 992 Mr. R. B. Kerr stood up a man of straw and labeled "Coursen," and proceeded to knock the "stuffin'" out of us, apparently to his entire satisfaction, unmindful that the wolf-dog with which he clinched his argument had only been made the guardian of the flock by means of the fence, which I had called attention to as destructive in individual liberty, which to my mind is the only condition that makes for real progress.

Does he not recognize the fact that the wolf-dog would still be a destroyer of the flock, or exterminated, but for that fence, or changes in his surroundings over which he (the wolf-dog) had no control? For surely Mr. Kerr will not argue that the wolf had any choice in the means used to develop a more gentle, affectionate nature—a lover of sheep instead of mutton.

Will Mr. Kerr contend that we are to have grand-masters of our likes and dislikes—of our passions—who can trample the liberties of the individual under foot, as the primitive man did those of the wolf-dog?

I thought individual liberty was the bedrock on which Liberals were building, and in which they put their trust and swore by, so that, when the curtain goes down on a life that went out on the picket-line while keeping his camp-fire aglow to guide the wanderer, we can say: "Sleep on, brother; it is destiny. You have done what you must."

Evolution seems not to have any patent, machine-made, catch-me-quick laws, or short cut to make 'way-back D—d fools into brainy, liberty-loving, consistent men and women, for

"I tell you that the gods give not, they sell;
For so much heaven, so many hours of hell."

Long, patient, natural selection—Destiny—that girts us around by a law of heredity over which we really have no control, any more than the planets have over their movements, say to us, "So far," etc. Matter contains within itself the possibilities of life; influenced by attraction and repulsion, decides for us our likes and dislikes, over which we have no control. "Even our days are heritors of the days gone by."

In Tucker's "Liberty," New York, I find on page 2, No. 377, the following sensible remarks, signed by S. R.:

"No doubt artificial selection, if drastic enough, would enable us to breed a race of long-legged, or flat-footed, or bull-headed people. But would it produce strong-minded, or clear headed, or justice-loving, or independent and free beings? Try real equality of opportunity, give natural selection a chance under conditions favorable to progress. Give each all his earnings, and let him indulge his amoristic sentiment to the top of his bent. Do this and wait a few hundred years. The scientific breeding experiment may then be found superfluous."

GEORGE H. COURSEN, JR.

Anent "Observations" and Criticism.

At the risk of repetition and of tiring the readers with what seems to threaten to be an endless controversy with the irrepressible C. F. H. I shall endeavor to clear away a few misapprehensions in the minds of both C. F. H. and G. E. M. of the New York Truth Seeker. I did not write the article "Does It Pay to Be a Radical?" in order to warn radical women against impostors in the radical camp; few of them, if any, I think, need any such warning. I merely pointed out that most conservatives judge radicalism by the impostors. In that G. E. M. agrees with me. Nor is it true that I contemplate ceasing to be a radical because my views do not agree with those of some others who call themselves radicals.

I think it is safe to say that no one who read my article, with the possible exception of the erudite but in this instance purblind truth seeker G. E. M., drew the absurd and absolutely false inference that I think it is wrong for a radical woman to repel my advances, if I should attempt to make any advances to her; up to date it is safe to assert, and I challenge contradiction, that I have never made any advances of the nature suggested by G. E. M. to any woman. If I should do so I shall not be either grieved or surprised if they are rejected.

If radicals and Freethinkers such as C. F. H. and G. E. M. so misapprehend my views which I took so much pains to express, it is not surprising that conservatives generally have such a false notion of what radicalism is.

C. F. H. writes: "Truth and lies are both good, and the only course open is to ask Mr. Crane what to avoid." I had no idea I was teaching an infant class. The answer is the simplest possible one: Avoid the truth when a lie and its consequences are preferable; avoid a lie when truth and its consequences are preferable. When in doubt, keep your mouth shut. Use common sense in surmising what the consequences in either case will be. You are no more likely to err in judging the consequences of a lie than you are in judging the consequences of the truth. You may tell the truth with the utmost frankness and sincerity, as I did in my article, and yet may give impressions as false as those which that article seems to have given to C. F. H. and G. E. M.

For a strictly truthful man C. F. H. proves that he is not above willful deceit when he can persuade himself that it is merely a joke. For instance, he writes: "The skull was no doubt placed there [on the anonymous note which he now admits he wrote to me] by some meddling mail agent, as a warning not to mail unpopular doctrines." Of course I know that the cunning jester C. F. H. himself was the "meddling mail agent" who put the skull there, and he knows I know it and that I knew it at the time I received his letter. But think what a false impression that jesting remark gave to many persons who took it in all seriousness, knowing the meddling propensity of mail agents.

JONATHAN MAYO CRANE.

What is morally wrong can never be made politically right.—Burke.

Mankind bestows more applause on her destroyers than on her benefactors.—Gibbon.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 West 145th street, New York.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire let us hear from you if you want to continue to receive Lucifer.

Lucifer and the Postoffice Department.

We have received a letter from Edwin C. Madden, Third Assistant Postmaster General, saying that the copies of Lucifer on file in his department show that this paper is published to advertise the private business of its publisher, and giving us until Dec. 12 to show cause why its certificate of admission to the mails at second-class rates should not be revoked.

It has been only a few weeks since we were required to take our subscription lists, cash-books, and letters ordering Lucifer, to the postal officials to prove that we had a legitimate list of subscribers. Copies of Lucifer were at that time in the possession of the postal officials. A free copy is supplied to the postoffice each week. It would seem that if our advertising justifies our exclusion the question of the "legitimacy" of our subscription list would be a matter of no interest to the postal officials. Of course, we are not in a position to know whether the inspection of our business (showing as it does that it is a small one and not financially "paying") had any influence on the decision of the inspectors. But if the desire and intention was to suppress the paper, as it has been in times past, it would naturally appear that to deny the second-class rate would kill our paper. But we have no evidence that such is the desire of the officials. So far as the Chicago postal officials are concerned, we have been treated courteously and fairly ever since Lucifer was admitted to the second-class rating in Chicago. Neither have we had evidence of enmity at headquarters in Washington. We have not learned just what proportion of our space we are entitled to use in advertising books for sale at our address. We have asked for information on this point. If there is no special enmity against us we will doubtless receive this information. We will then comply with the ruling, and continue to issue Lucifer as heretofore. In the meantime we hope to hear from our friends in regard to what they think of the matter—what, in their opinion, we should do, and what they will do if the final decision is against us.

Lucifer carries less advertising in proportion to its reading matter than the great dailies and popular magazines. Both magazines and dailies are actually published at a "nominal price." That is, if their advertising were removed, and the space filled with reading matter, they would lose money, and the more subscribers they had the more money they would lose. This is a self-evident fact. But with enormous circulations, at a price that scarcely covers the cost of blank paper, they are enabled to add page after page of advertising at such a high price that all expenses of publication are covered and a handsome profit made for the publishers. The Postal Department carries these millions of tons of advertising matter at a loss, attempting to economize by excluding from the mails a few small papers. Why, in all the years of Lucifer's life its issues have not approached in weight that of one Sunday edition of the Chicago American. And while these large advertising mediums, if deprived of their advertising, would lose money increasingly as their subscription list grew larger, Lucifer would not only pay expenses with a doubled circulation, but would make money as its list increased. That is, with 5,000 paying subscribers we could dispense with advertising altogether, and with 10,000 the publishers would be making money. Only a few of the books we advertise are our own publications. Instead of trying to obtain advertising from the publishers, we do the advertising at our own risk, receiving our pay through the commission allowed us, which amount, though small, helps to pay the cost of issuing the paper.

The following letter was written by one of Lucifer's friends, who has contributed to its expenses frequently, and who certainly would not have aided us in its publication had it been a mere "advertising medium:"

"I would think that very many of the contributors to Lucifer's columns, as well as subscribers, could give strong affidavits showing the falsity and the absurdity of the postoffice charge, for surely they would not give their best efforts, nor would the paper be run at a loss, for the privilege of advertising a few books belonging to others. It is not rational to mistake a contributory adjunct as the head and entirety."

This paper represents many years of work and sacrifice of the common comforts of life on the part of its editor, and, in a lesser degree, on the part of his helpers. It has been the main object in life for twenty years of Moses Harman, who is now in his seventy-fourth year. He has faced abuse, privation, prison walls for it. And to him Lucifer is not a business, a bread-winner, but an Idea. Only recently have conditions been such that he could have the ordinary comforts of life; but he would forego any physical comfort rather than give up the paper. For there is a pleasure in a life-work that mere money-grubbing cannot give.

So much for Moses Harman, though infinitely more might be said of his work, his purpose, and what others have called his sacrifices. And of myself, his daughter? Lucifer does not fill my life as completely as it does his, for I have other important interests. But I am yet a young woman, I am well and strong, and it is my intention that my father's work shall live.

LILLIAN HARMAN.

The Bigotry of Ignorance.

Philosophy, by carrying certainty with it to a given length, and pointing out real difficulties where that certainty ends, is ever mild in its features and tolerant in its tone; on the other hand, the more implicitly we bow to authority, the less tolerant we become to those who choose not to bow as obediently as ourselves. The mind always seizes with a kind of convulsive grasp those truths for which it can give no very satisfactory account, as though the tenacity with which they are held would go to make up the deficiency in their evidence; and on this ground it is those who are most ignorant, to prevent the appearance of absurdity, commonly find it necessary to be most dogmatical. On the other hand, an abundance of knowledge and a strength of evidence, as they define more clearly the bounds of the known and the unknown, tend perpetually towards toleration.—Morell, in "History of Philosophy."

My lad, if thee would be truly successful, ally thyself in youth with some righteous, unpopular cause.—John G. Whittier.

At the Gate City.

Monday night, Nov. 9, I reached the metropolis of the Pacific Coast—that is, of the west coast of North America—San Francisco. Though the train was three and a half hours late in reaching Point Richmond (10 p. m.), and though another hour was lost in getting over the bay to the Santa Fe building in the city proper, I found three of Lucifer's faithful friends awaiting my arrival—C. V. Cook, C. Reinish and J. H. Lohmeyer. How many more had come and gone I know not. I sent a telegram from Fresno to tell our friends not to wait for me—but, as usual in such cases, the message was not received in time to do any good.

The change from the dry and clear atmosphere of Arizona and New Mexico to the comparatively moist and foggy air of San Francisco was one of the most noticeable of the changes experienced since leaving Chicago, a little more than two months ago. A gentle shower of rain, just before reaching Point Richmond, gave due warning that we were no longer in the "Land of Eternal Sunshine," as the two "territories" just named have been aptly called.

The most picturesquely beautiful, perhaps, of all the beautiful and grand sections of country passed through on this the so-called "scenic route" from the Atlantic to the Pacific, is that seen during the passage through the Tehachapi Mountains, just before reaching the great level plains that divide the Sierras from the Coast Range proper. Within a comparatively few miles the road passes through seventeen tunnels, mostly very short, the longest about one mile in length. To many tourists who have never had a like experience the rapidity and apparent recklessness of danger with which the train plunges through these mountain fastnesses and round the short curves and steep inclines is enough to cause not a little nervous uneasiness as to whether they will ever again see the home and friends left behind in the Atlantic States.

Last night, the 10th of November, I had the pleasure of meeting a half-dozen or more of the independent thinkers and radical workers of this city, in a very enjoyable symposium at the rooms of Charles T. Spradling. Among these were the well-known Dr. York, S. H. Tarr, J. Nielson and Dr. Weitzel, who was living in Oskaloosa seventeen years ago, when the fight was on between the officials of Jefferson County, Kansas, and the prosecuted and imprisoned Autonomists, in regard to the right of the individual woman and man to live together in the conjugal relation without permission asked of the aforesaid officials.

To-night I expect to meet the Socialists, the Anarchists, the rationalists, the libertarians of all names and of no name, at a mass meeting, to be held at Turk Street Temple, to do honor to the memory of the men who gave up their lives in Chicago, sixteen years ago, in testimony of their faith in the doctrine that the earth and its opportunities belong to the people, all the people, and not to a privileged few who claim the right to own these opportunities to the exclusion of those who do all the hard work and bear all the real burdens of producing and distributing the means of existence on this planet; and inasmuch as I have been, unofficially, notified that I will be expected to take some part in this memorial meeting, I will cut short this letter to Lucifer's readers and proceed to jot down a few notes to be used—if called for—upon this memorable occasion, this mile-stone, so to speak, in the history of the ages-old struggle, for freedom and justice against the forces of organized inequity (iniquity) and wrong.

M. HARMAN.

For the next week or two, letters addressed to me at 384 Dolores street, San Francisco, will probably reach their destination all right. M. H.

Authority the Origin of Belief.

The overwhelming majority of the human race necessarily accept their opinions from authority. Whether they do so avowedly, like the Catholics, or unconsciously, like most Protestants, is immaterial. They have neither time nor opportunity to examine for themselves. They are taught certain doctrines on disputed questions as if they were unquestionable truths, when they are incapable of judging, and every influence is employed to deepen the impression. This is the origin of their belief. Not until long years of mental conflict have passed can they obtain the inestimable boon of an assured and untrammeled mind.—Lecky.

Woman's Best Age.

A play that has achieved a notable success this season has for its central figure a woman of sweet character who has passed her earliest youth and settled into old maidhood. Her admirer takes her at her own valuation and apparently ceases to care for her. She decides, wisely, that she will be young again. She abandons demure, unsightly dress, gives nature a chance, and by making herself attractive, physically and mentally, wins back his love.

The play proves what every woman should know:

That not years, but lack of mental freshness, makes a woman old.

The highly prized girlish years, from eighteen to twenty-five, are really years of babyhood.

The most beautiful women in the world, able to attract and to hold the greatest men, have almost invariably been women past thirty—very often they have been past forty.

A woman lacking full mental development is like a green peach: she may be very pretty to look at; but that is all. Of course, if she is to spoil before maturity, better take her, as you would take the peach, when it is a little green, rather than after it has spoiled.

And that fact—that women of maturity attract men worth while—is very unimportant compared with this other fact:

The mature woman is the best mother.

Constantly, in studying the lives of those who succeed, you find that it is the tenth or even the fourteenth child that makes the family famous. Carlyle and Napoleon do for examples in widely divergent fields.

Each was so fortunate as to have for mother a mature woman, at her best when the child was born.

Women make constantly the great mistake of letting the years count. Don't let them count.

Women are as different from one another as are cabbages from rose bushes. If you are a rose bush don't consent to be old at the age which ends a cabbage's career. You are beginning to realize your possibilities when the cabbage type of woman has ended her life's usefulness.

And remember this, you need not be a cabbage woman unless you want to.

Keep young, keep cheerful. Keep up your interest—not merely in what your husband or best young man has to say about himself, but in every question.—Chicago American.

Don't Be a Poke-Nose.

What is a poke-nose?

A poke-nose is a person who is forever interfering with others' affairs. The poke-nose usually justifies his poke-nosiness by claiming that he or she is acting for the benefit and general good of the one into whose affairs the long nose is inserted to the greatest extent.

The private poke-nose is a neighborhood nuisance, but when poke-noses organize for the purpose of forcing upon society their peculiar brand of poke-nosed cussedness they become a public nuisance and are tyrannical and unbearable. It is the work of the organized poke-noses to force upon the people all sorts of tyrannical laws that oppress all who are not in sympathy with them.

The organized society of poke-noses are not ill-meaning people on the whole, and many of them, aside from their particular brand of poke-nosiness, are very agreeable people. They actually believe that they are working for the good of humanity, and even when their theories have been "weighed and found wanting" they are so blind that they do not see their own error, and go on imposing their ways upon others as much as possible. As Mayor F. O. Beal of Bangor recently said, "Tyrannical laws from the beginning of Christendom to the present time have been the cause of more bloodshed than all the other causes put together." . . .

The true Individualist knows that only in freedom can he attain the best possible conditions in which to live and do good, and knowing this he knows that others must have the same right; consequently when he sees another living differently from what seems best to him, so long as that other in no way infringes upon the rights of others, he knows it is none of his business, and, being the being he is, he will carefully mind his own business.—The Phrenopathic Journal.

VARIOUS VOICES.

We are always glad to receive calls from friends visiting the city. Take the Lake street elevated, stop at Ashland avenue, walk one block east, then one block north. Or take Fulton street electric car west and stop at St. John's place, slighting in front of our house. The Lake street electric and Paulina street cars also pass within a block of our residence.

Myra Pepper, Kansas City, Mo.: I note what you say about evidence of subscribers wanting the paper. I want Lucifer and expect to take it and pay for it as long as we both shall live.

A. J. Merakergaard, Sioux Falls, S. D.: Inclosed find $1 to renew my subscription to Lucifer for one year. Lucifer is growing brighter every week, and is the best eye-opener for the masses that is published.

F. B. Earnshaw, Porterville, Cal.: Please send Lucifer six months to inclosed address. Am sending 50 cents for same. When I get settled will subscribe for your valuable paper. Am fighting the economic battle in this state.

May de Crane, Lake City, Iowa: They seem to want to put the little paper in a back seat, but I hope they won't succeed. Mamma says she does not see how she can live without it. Hope all the Liberals will try to help it along. Inclosed find $1 on subscription. Wish I could send more.

S. R. S., Kansas: Myra Pepper said in Lucifer that only two Freelove men had overstepped the bounds of propriety in corresponding with her. I imagine that one was one of whom I have heard complaints from five different sources. Freelove and free lust are, to my way of thinking, distinct species. The first is a biped, the other a quadruped.

David W. Gilmore, Kansas: When I saw your editorial in No. 990 I intended to send you some money, but as I was busy I neglected it. However, here is a dollar for a year's subscription. A great deal of meddling is being done with the affairs of other people, but I suppose we will have to make the best of conditions as we find them until such time as it will suit the majority of the people to make a change.

Jacob B. Daisy, Charleston, Ill.: My paper was stopped recently. I send 25 cents for renewal. Please send me two latest numbers. I want the paper very badly. I can't understand why the postal officials ask the editors of reform papers if their subscribers want the paper. I have taken Democratic and Republican papers, and the question never was asked of the editors, so far as I know, and my papers were not stopped if I owed on subscription.

J. B. Elliott, Philadelphia, Pa.: I am sending you a notice of the death of Sada Bailey Fowler, author of "Irene: or, The Road to Freedom." Mrs. Fowler was a member of the Underground Railway, workers for the abolition of slavery. At the time of her death she was a member of the American Press Writers' Association, and was interested in other progressive movements. Ed Wheeler and Thomas Phillips, candidate for Mayor of this city on the Labor ticket in 1876, were the speakers at the funeral. Mr. Phillips said, among other things, that when he and Henry George were speaking at a political meeting in 1876 Mr. George alluded to the fact that Thomas Jefferson was the greatest advocate of the rights of man, ignoring Thomas Paine's services. Phillips spoke in favor of Paine, and Sada Bailey, who was also a speaker, paid a high tribute to Paine, which showed that she was a brave woman. I hope some others who know more of her will write up the story of her life.

J. S. Harlenberg, Hornellsville, N. Y.: Your statement in regard to my being in arrears received, and I hasten to put myself in good standing by inclosing $1 to pay up. Will try to not let my subscription lapse again. I wish the laws were so we could not trust each other at all; then we would have to have a much larger circulation of money, so we could do business on a cash basis.—H. L. and Mrs. Green were my personal friends for over twenty-five years. Have had many pleasant hours with Mr. Green. I subscribed for his magazine when it was a small pamphlet published in Salamanca, N. Y. We had quite a controversy at the time of Putnam's death over the so-called scandal resulting therefrom. I claimed that he was not as liberal as he should have been, and that if he had anything to say against Putnam he should have said it while Putnam was alive. I hope you will continue with us many years yet to publish your Light Bearer. There are many good things in Lucifer that I value highly, and still others that I can't accept.

J. H. L., Texas: My town is a church-dominated town of 5,000 people, and my employment includes all the mechanical work, including proof-reading, on a church paper of 2,000 circulation, and you may imagine how distasteful such work is to a printer who eagerly devours every word in Lucifer each week. But I must keep the wolf from the door of my loved ones. Allow me to express my appreciation of the typographical neatness and literary accuracy of Lucifer. It isn't every paper that maintains such faultless English and such restful uniformity of style in punctuation, capitalization, etc.

L. N., Brooklyn, N. Y.: Allow me to send you a few names for sample copies of Lucifer, as they may become interested and subscribe for it. I wish I could send you some subscribers from Syracuse; inclosed clipping would indicate that the people there need some Lucifer education. As to myself and wife, we like your valuable paper very much. But I wish that some of your correspondents would study Socialism a little (it is so simple) before they start to criticise it or tell others all about it. I am myself a Socialist of the Marxian school, but let me add that there are in this country a number of other brands of Socialism with which I would not like to be identified.

[The clipping referred to is a dispatch to the New York World and is headed, "Boy Hasn't Even Feathers; And, Being Stone, He Can't Ask the Parrot to Spare Him a Few," and is as follows:]

"Syracuse, Sept. 29.—The beautiful new statue on the top of the Kirkpatrick memorial fountain, on the north side, offends the women of that section, and they threaten to destroy it unless it be clothed. The statue is the work of the sculptor Jerome Connor, and is entitled "The Boy and the Parrot." Both figures are clothed only in the garb of nature. The women of the vicinity will not allow their children to play in Union Park, where the statue stands. They will probably memorialise the Common Council regarding it."

A Mutual Credit Currency.

Why should we not have a voluntary currency, a due-bill issued by each individual, or farm, or corporation, using the money terms dollars and cents to specify the amounts, but redeemable in trade, according to the business of the signer, instead of in gold or silver? For instance, the farmer's due-bill will read: "Good for one dollar in farm products;" the shoe merchant's or shoe manufacturer's due-bill will be good for shoes; a newspaper's due-bill will be good for subscription or advertising.

To bring this about we do not have to wait for legislation or consent of politicians, or to get a majority of the people to understand the plan. We have merely to modify, according to circumstances, what is already in practice. Railroad tickets, street-car tickets, tickets of admission to lecture or theater or entertainment, restaurant meal tickets, postage stamps, etc., are all modifications of the same idea. An organization in Cincinnati called the Mercantile Exchange, something like the labor exchanges scattered throughout the country, is successfully putting the plan in practice, and has been in operation for several years.

Any individual, or any number of men two or more, engaged in any kind of business—farming, manufacturing, or any other line—can form a central organization for the issue of a currency "good in trade," and in different denominations like money. To get these in circulation, any reliable individual brings his own due-bills, good in his own line of trade, to this central organization, and receives the organization's trade checks in exchange. Five or 10 per cent, if desired, may be left to the central organization for expenses. For instance, the farmer brings $100 of his own due-bills, good for farm products, and receives $90 of its trade checks. These $90 he uses exactly as he would money, guaranteeing them by his own indorsement as he pays them out.

Now, suppose he takes $5 of these trade checks to the shoe store and buys shoes with them. The shoe merchant indorses them, and pays his bill at the shoe factory. The shoe factory indorses them and pays them out for labor. The shoe factory employes take them to the grocery store for groceries. The grocer goes to the wholesale grocer for flour. The wholesale grocer sends them to the flour mill. The miller sends them back to the organization that issued them and calls for wheat. This organization now takes up the farmer's due-bills and sends them to be redeemed in wheat for the flour mill.

There is no favoritism, nor interest on money, nor stock speculation, in all this round. Each one gets what he wants, and pays for it in what he has to sell. The scheme is not only practical, but is in operation in Cincinnati now, except that it has not reached the farmers as yet to any great extent.

Of course, this mutual credit currency will not pay taxes, but that is a small item in a prosperous business.—The Cincinnatian.

"WHO IS THE ENEMY?"

Dr. R. W. Shufeldt, biologist, author of several scientific works and of more than seven hundred articles on medicine, travel, science, sexual problems and other subjects, writes to E. C. Walker: "I thank you very much indeed for the copy you sent me of your valuable pamphlet, 'Who Is the Enemy—Anthony Comstock or You?' I have read it from cover to cover with the utmost satisfaction and unqualified approval. It is one of the best and strongest things you have put out, and I am with you solid in both the letter and spirit of it. I prize the copy most highly." Ask for table of contents and specimen pages of "Who Is the Enemy?" or send 20 cents to this office for the pamphlet.

Any one wishing to attend medical college in Chicago and whose means are small may obtain a scholarship at a greatly reduced price by addressing H., care of 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

The Liberal Mail-Order Jeweler, now permanent at No. 130 N. Kensington Av., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 20 to 30 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Theism in the Crucible," free.

THE MAJESTY OF SEX.

This is the very latest WORD on the subject. This book will satisfy in a vital way the cry of the hungry soul. If you follow its teachings your body will become transformed and transmuted. You will be happy and healthy. You will prosper and be contented. It does not deal in theory alone, but goes straight to the heart of the subject. It teaches the ART of LIVING. Most of us know how to half-way live, but to live WELL and PROSPER is an ART. Learn how by sending $2.00 for the book. Circulars free. Address NANCY M'KAY GORDON, 35 E. 30th St., Chicago, Ill.

"ETERNAL SUNSHINE."

THE HIGHLAND HOTEL, ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO.

One block north of Santa Fe Station. All modern improvements. A veritable Sanitarium. Unsurpassed in purity of Air and Water, and in Natural Scenery. Above the dust and turmoil of the city's streets. Prices moderate and reasonable. Write to S. H. SYMONDS, Proprietor.

Among the Moki Indians of Arizona the men weave dresses and the women build houses. Little children fearlessly handle live rattle-snakes. Religious rites antedate Columbus' time. These and other interesting facts about our brothers in red may be found in a profusely illustrated book of 224 pages, "Indians of the South-West," written by Geo. A. Dorsey, Curator of Anthropology, Field Columbian Museum, and published by the Santa Fe. If interested in Indians and their handicraft, buy a copy; only costs 50 cents; easily worth a dollar. Write to-day to W. J. Black, G. P. A., A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 77 Jackson Blvd., Chicago, and inclose coin or stamps

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We can not sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 20 cents each, two for 35 cents. Address Edwin C. Walker, 241 West 145th street, New York, N. Y.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-in Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address O. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 62, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

FREE LITERATURE.

Your name will be sent to a great number of the finest papers published for sample copies if you send 10 cents to INTERMOUNTAIN SUB. AGENCY, Box 188, Gooding, Idaho.

EAT SOME SAND!

About five years ago, Prof. William Windsor, Ll. B., Ph. D., the world's most eminent Paleontologist, discovered the Sand Cure for indigestion and Constipation, and since that time more than a half million sufferers have tried it and found that it is Nature's Simple Remedy, by restored health. It does not purge or gripe, but it cleans the body out.

"The Natural Life" is the title of Prof. Windsor's monthly magazine in which the Sand Cure is fully described and discussed. It is devoted to the teaching of Vivosophy ("the wise way of living"), Natural Diet, Health and Character Culture, Righteousness and Freedom. One Dollar per year.

PROFESSOR WINDSOR will send full directions for the Sand Cure to anyone sending 25 cents for a three months' trial subscription to The Natural Life. Address THE WINDSOR PUBLISHING CO., Back Bay Postoffice, Boston, Mass.

RADICAL LITERATURE

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of Freethought and Free Love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

THE SOCIAL QUESTION. A discussion between Juliet H. Severance, M. D., and David Jones. 15 cents.

BORNING BETTER BABIES. Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; Illustrated. 50c.

KARESSA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Eclept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wilde). 25c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. S. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (G. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (S. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola). 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariselle), Homelessness of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Hedlund). 25c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. S. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, S. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Hotter). 25c.

WOMAN AND HER RELATION TO THE CHURCH OR CANON LAW FOR WOMEN. Harriet M. Closs. A succinct statement of the position to which women were doomed by the Church Fathers and authorities. Every woman should possess a copy. 10c.

THE CURSE OF MATERNITY. From the French of Henry Fevre. Together with How to Escape the Curse (Jonathan Mayo Crane), Woman's "Duty" to Bear Children (E. C. Walker), True and False Morality (C. L. James), Love's Law (William Francis Barnard). 25 cents.

MODERN PARADISES. The Model Home. Solution of the Social Problem. Future Greatness of Electricity. Proposed Experiment in Social Science. An Earthly Eden and How to Attain It. A Unique Power Plant. Wonderful System of Education. Elegantly Illustrated. Prof. Henry Gerlach. 50c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: A Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men and women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE, as viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock, Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and His Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. One of the best short works on the subject. Daintily printed. A charming little gift book. "Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; it is a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it." 25 cents.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided, and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.25.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Models of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; Do Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman; What Is She? What Will She Be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attractions and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Madness and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES. Edwin C. Walker. Contents—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only"; Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution, and the Crusades; The "Spoiling of the Heathen"; What Are the Effects of Ealds and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; Is What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women. With appendix: The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of it all. 25c.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE. Edward Carpenter. This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the future, and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who hates a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a charming literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author: The Sex Passion; Man, the Ungrown; Woman, the Bud; Women in Freedom; Marriage, a Retrospect; Marriage, a Forecast; The Free Society; Some Remarks on the Early Star and Sex Worships. Notes on the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population. The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work. Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up to date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 36 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has 500 pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid, to any address, for $2.75.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Belinda B. Chandler's), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? &c.

THE ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY AND THE STATE. Frederick Engels. Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans. 212 pages; bound in cloth; 60c. Postage, 5c.

THE HOME CYCLOPEDIA OF MEDICAL, SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE. Contains a full, plain and easy-reading treatise on "Health and Disease, with Recipes"; all the average reader can profitably learn of personal hygiene and common diseases (including special, separate chapters for men and women); all right up to date, and fully illustrated with hundreds of photo-engravings and chromo-lithographs. Contains also the already popular "Plain Home Talk" about the relations of the sexes and sexual matters in all ages—newly revised, enlarged and well illustrated. All in "heart to heart" plain talk from a clear-thinking, plain-speaking, liberal-minded medical author of over forty years' experience. Nearly 1,000,000 of his former books sold. A virtuous book for curious people, and a sensible book for every one, and yet doesn't want to, 1,343 pages; 400 illustrations (50 in colors); Embraces 2 vols. Cloth bound, $5.

THE WHOLESOME WOMAN. J. H. Greer, M. D. The latest and most complete work of its kind. Four books in one volume. Part I—SEX AND LIFE: The Principle of Life; The Dominant Power of Life; The Temple of the Soul; The Unfolding of Womanhood; The Fulfillment of the Law; The Fruits of Faithfulness; Home and Home-Making. Part II—TOKOLOGY: The Organs of Generation; Menstruation; The Marriage Relation; Conception and Prenatal Culture; Child Birth; The Hygiene of Infancy; Development from Birth to Puberty; Disorders of Infancy and Childhood; Affections Peculiar to Women; What Determines the Sex of Offspring. Part III—CHILD-CULTURE: Foundation of Moral Uprightness; The Kindergarten (with diagrams); Manual Training. Part IV—HEALTH AND HYGIENE: Long Life Not a Secret; "Breath is Life"; How, When and What to Eat; Sleep and the Bath; Clothing and Dress; Mental and Physical Culture; What to Do in Sickness; What Not to Do in Sickness; Care of the Eyes and Ears; Care of the Extremities; Poisons Used as Medicines; The Application of Heat and Cold; Unnecessary Surgical Operations; An Ounce of Prevention. The complete work is published in one handsome, large quarto volume of 810 pages, with photogravure frontispiece, portrait of the author in full-page half-tone and numerous smaller explanatory illustrations. It is printed on an extra quality of paper from new electroplates, and each volume is accompanied by a separate supplement of 41 plates (printed in colors), illustrating Sex in Plant Life; the Human Sexual Organs and the Laws of Reproduction; the Development of the Human Embryo and Fetus, showing nourishment and growth from day to day and month to month; the Plan of Fetal Circulation, etc. In extra cloth, with special emblematic cover design, $3.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White, 5c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. S. C. Walker. 10c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 10c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A. and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

LIBERTY, Political, Religious, Social and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Scotland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MONEY, BANKS, PANICS AND PROSPERITY. By W. H. Clagett. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A study of the industrial type. Dyer D. Lum. 10c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Amos. 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 10c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

RELIGIOUS, POLITICAL AND SOCIAL FREEDOM. A lecture by Juliet H. Severance, M. D. 5c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

SOCIALISTIC, COMMUNISTIC, MUTUALISTIC AND FINANCIAL FRAGMENTS. By William B. Greene. $1.25.

AGE OF REASON; An Investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel portrait. 50c.

THE TEMPERANCE FOLLY; or, Who's the Worst? Lets Waltstocker. Dedicated to the wrecks and so-called sinners of a false civilization. 5c.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 460 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 472 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, R. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clement and David Overmeyer. 20c.

THE STORY OF IDA; or, The Evolution of a Mind. Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Ouida." (W. Stuart Rose), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. $1. Postage, 5c.

SONGS OF A CHILD, AND OTHER POEMS. By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. $1.50. Postage, 12c.

A RED HEART IN A WHITE WORLD. A suggestive manual of Free Society; containing a method and a hope. By J. William Lloyd. Handsomely illustrated paper cover in white, red and green; 80 pages. 10c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

AN ESSAY ON THE DUTY OF CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE. By Henry D. Thoreau. A reprint of this classic essay on the supremacy of the individual conscience. Antique paper; artistic covers, dark green on oilcloth. 10c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 81 portraits of delegates, including Beal, R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 626 pages, 4to cloth. $2.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Spookie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in one volume. $1.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

998.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

Your subscription is paid to No. ..... If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

HILDA'S HOME. A Story of Woman's Emancipation. Rose Gratz. With Macaulay, Rose Gratz would say, "The cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty." Hence she has no fears that under Freedom the Home, and the Family would cease to exist, or that woman will be less loving and lovable, or that man will be less manly and honorable. On the contrary, she maintains that only in the soil and atmosphere of freedom is it possible for true womanhood and manhood to live and flourish. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward Fitzgerald's interpretation; with original introduction; latest version. Special cover. Paper, 25c.

HOLA; or, The Disinherited. A drama in six acts. Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1. Postage, 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

GOD AND THE STATE. One of the most eloquent pleas for liberty ever written. Paine's "Age of Reason" and "Rights of Man" consolidated and improved. It stirs the pulse like a trumpet call. By Michael Bakunin. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 92 pages. 25c.

SHROUDS WITH POCKETS. A life sketch. By Henry E. Allen. A touching story, told in simple and yet striking language, and yet more than a story. Vivid flashes of light are thrown on the unspeakable horrors of capitalism. Illustrated with many portraits of Socialists and other reformers. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Heroes." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 87 Freethinkers, including Brano, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley and Voltaire. 25c.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman March 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A BLUNDER IN POISONS. C. F. Nichols. "Vaccination will undoubtedly rank as the greatest and most pernicious failure of the century; this conclusion is no longer a matter of opinion, but of science," said Alfred Russell Wallace, and in this booklet the facts are arrayed in support of this assertion. 10c.

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD; An Outline of Practical Co-Operative Individualism. By Henry Olerich. Regarded by many persons as a more interesting and consistent economic reform novel than Bellamy's "Looking Backward." Bound in red silk with gold title. Nearly 400 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, $1.

VACCINATION A CRIME. With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions. Felix L. Oswald, M. D. "Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads smallpox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents." With illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 126 pages. 10c.

HISTORY OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. By C. L. James. An excellent history of the French Revolution, well written by one thoroughly familiar with his subject. Special care has been exercised to give the facts as they are, the author not having made himself the champion of any faction. Neatly printed from large type on good book paper, with a substantial binding. 343 pages, with an index and bibliographical epitome. Cloth, $1.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. John R. Kelso. Contains Definitions and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff or Protection; War Powers; Monetary Affairs; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be. 139 pages. Cloth binding, somewhat damaged, and reduced from $1.50 to 50 cents.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only subserving or dispersing old superstitions. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. R. C. Walker. 5c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most general theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overflowing freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, embellished with portrait of the author. In two editions, de luxe, and plain. Prices, $1.25 and $1.00.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old assertion is said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new Hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" The author places the writer next in proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have been taught to perceive that the ancient and impure things are ordinary and unrefined; that the quiet and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 25 large pages; twelve copies, $1; single copy, 5c.

THE BIBLE; by E. Bonsburg. Contains eleven chapters on the authenticity of the Bible, based on the best authorities of the time; thirteen on the credibility of the Bible, ten on the immorality of the Bible, and an appendix in which Mr. Bonsburg sets forth unanswerable arguments against the divine origin and in favor of the human origin of the Bible. Twenty-six pages of index enable the reader to find any authority quoted or argument used. Mr. Bonsburg is one of the most careful, accurate and painstaking writers, and his book is a compendium of the latest scholarship and rationalistic thought on the subject. The late Colonel Ingersoll kept his fashions lecture on the Bible by carrying those who sought to tell the truth about the Bible." This Mr. Bonsburg has done—done it fully, and done it well. Large 12mo., 500 pages. Cloth, $1.25.

THE SLAVERY OF OUR TIMES. By Count Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of the gifted author, and introduction by the translator, Aylmer Maude. Chapter titles: I. Goods Factors Who Work Thirty-Seven Hours. II. Society's Indifference While Men Perish. III. Justification of the Existing Position of Affairs. IV. The Assertion of Economic Science that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System. V. Why Learned Economists Assert What Is False. VI. Bankruptcy of the Socialist Ideal. VII. Culture or Freedom? VIII. Slavery Exists Among us. IX. What Is Slavery? X. Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property. XI. Laws the Cause of Slavery. XII. The Results of Legislation as Organized Violence. XIII. What Are Governments? Is It Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV. How Can Government Be Abolished? XV. What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword. Well printed on heavy paper; substantially bound. 186 pages. 50c.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VII., NO. 46. CHICAGO, ILL., NOV. 26. E. M. 302. [C. E. 1903.] WHOLE NO. 997

A THANKSGIVING POEM.

If God exists, we ne'er do ill.
Thank God!
Whate'er we do, we do his will.
Thank God!
In him we live and think and act,
Blaspheme, believe, indite a "tract,"
Expose a lie, or fight a fact.
Thank God!

We pray for Brown, and Smith is spared.
Thank God!
We pray for peace, and war's declared.
Thank God!
The God of Love does all things well,
As freezing beggar-brats can tell—
We're told there's little frost in hell.
Thank God!

A lot of snakes are poison-fanged.
Thank God!
The innocent are sometimes hanged.
Thank God!
We can't by prayer—howe'er we beg—
On Alpine tops hard-boil an egg,
Nor cure by faith a wooden leg.
Thank God!

The earth produces fruit and flowers.
Thank God!
And weeds, and hot volcanic showers.
Thank God!
Tornadoes, earthquakes, tidal waves,
Remorseless tyrants, trembling slaves,
And consecrated mitred knaves.
Thank God!

"Praise God, from whom all blessings flow!"
Thank God!
And ev'ry ill, as well, you know.
Thank God!
The famine, harvest, fast, and feast,
The best and greatest, worst and least,
The skeptic, and the lying priest.
Thank God!

—G. L. Mackenzie, in Truth Seeker.

Censors of the Play and Press.

The recent discussion at the Playgoers' Club, London, and the Lord Chamberlain's recent refusal to permit the performance of "La Citta Morta" by Signora Duse, are reminders that even in this "land of the free" there is an effective veto on the exercise of liberty of the stage. This censorship of the British stage dates from the time of Elizabeth, when a Master, or Licensor, of the Revels was appointed. The dramatists' occasions of offense were then, and until quite recent times, not moral, but political. The gross humor of those early playwrights was countenanced, but for their satire on the Scotch in "Eastward Ho" Ben Jonson, Marston and Chapman were committed to prison. This was at the direct command of James I., who took the duties of censor into his own hands, as also did his son and successor. One of Massinger's plays was refused a license because it contained matter which might have displeased Spain at the time negotiations were proceeding for the marriage of Charles I. to the Infanta. Under the Commonwealth the stage was entirely suppressed, and its revival at the Restoration was followed by the appointment of the Lord Chamberlain as Director of the Drama. The profligacy of the Restoration comedies leaves no doubt that his duties were not to shield morals, but to expunge anything that might offend the court. Thus Shakespeare's "Richard II." was refused a license because its picture of the dethroned monarch recalled the recent triumph of Cromwell. Under William III., however, the censorship directed itself more to the suppression of blasphemy and so-called indecency.

In 1737 the dramatic control of the Lord Chamberlain was for the first time confirmed by Parliament, and forthwith his hand became more heavy. But its chief end was still political, and satires against the government of the day received sharper treatment than indelicacy or alleged vice. It was in sheer self-defense against the ridicule cast upon him by Fielding that Walpole closed the Haymarket. The censorship as it now stands in England is regulated by the act of 1843, under which no play may be acted without a license from the Lord Chamberlain. There is no definite list of forbidden subjects, but the veto has now come to be applied to plays contravening orthodox morality, and against the presentation of Biblical characters or the caricaturing of modern political personages on the stage.

The most recent operation of the last clause was the withdrawal a year ago of the license granted to the play "Secrets of the Harem." A melodrama dealing with Turkish life, it had for years enjoyed constant popularity at provincial and suburban theaters. But during its presentation at Battersea it attracted the attention of the Turkish Ambassador, and on his protest the Lord Chamberlain withdrew the license as offending the feelings of the Porte. Turkish sensitiveness, indeed, knows no bounds. Only a few months ago a performance of Euripides' tragedy of "Iphigenia in Tauris" was prohibited in Constantinople because the play referred to regicide—the murder of Agamemnon by Clytemnestra! No regard was given to its legendary character, but lest any spectator should be moved to go and do likewise the play was vetoed and all translations of the tragedy in modern Greek were confiscated. The play formerly called "Secrets of the Harem" is now being performed nightly in England without interference, the title having been altered to "Secrets." . . .

Press censorship in England is said to have been abolished in 1692, liability to civil and criminal prosecution being substituted in that year for the more cumbersome operation of individual censorship. The gain is, of course, obvious; the constant wail of our Comstocks against their own limitations is sufficient evidence of this. In England the interference with the mails is popularly supposed to be rare, and it must be confessed that prosecutions under the postal laws are seldom witnessed. Doubtless mails are tampered with and information obtained from this source, but whenever a specific instance comes to light a popular clamor warns an offending Minister that an Englishman still has some of the old rebel blood left in him. During the past few years so-called liberal newspapers have endeavored to arouse this sleeping enemy of freedom, the Daily News (London) in particular urging the government to discriminate between "lottery" circulars and what it is pleased to call "legitimate correspondence." A pro-Boer journal like the Daily News is treading on dangerous ground. Any interference and discrimination such as it suggests must inevitably lead to injustice. It is a small step from suppressing a gambling tout's obnoxious letters, to denying your political opponents the use of the mails.

In France and Germany espionage and prosecution under the postal laws are common. In Russia every tenth letter is opened and read by the authorities; and, in fact, the ways of the Russian censor are worth studying by those who lightly tolerate the thin (Comstock) end of the wedge. Newspapers are forbidden to mention any information or rumor about the imperial family, save such as comes from official sources; news about the army, navy, and movements of troops or warships; news about political offenses or trials, students' or peasants' disturbances; news about domestic epidemics, or "disciplinary steps" against heretics. To offend in these matters is to suffer imprisonment. Are these measures successful? No, not even in Russia, nor in Germany. Most Russian and German newspapers keep "a man of straw" as the registered editor of the journal. He is paid about one thousand dollars a year for the sole duty of appearing as defendant in the event of prosecution. If the judgment goes against the newspaper (it generally does) the nominal editor goes to prison, and the real editor looks out for another man of straw. As for foreign journals entering Russia, the "blacking out" process is familiar to all the world. If the objectionable articles are lengthy they are torn bodily out or the newspaper destroyed. Short items are disfigured beyond recognition by the aid of an oblong stamp, which when inked and pressed on the paper makes an obliterating network of white lines and black diamonds. The peculiar mottled smudge made by this stamp has won for it the slang description of "Caviare." Any one who has seen the black "caviare" of Russia, spread on a slice of bread and butter, will appreciate the phrase.

In Germany the authorities do their best to rival Russian censorship. Quite recently the editor of the Vorwaerts has been sent to jail for telling the truth about the Emperor preparing for himself a fortified refuge against the hour of need. It is only common justice to say that if King Edward of England ever started fortifying Osborne or Balmoral he would probably invite the Press Association and the other news agencies with a view to booming himself in the newspapers. A year ago a Munich magazine published an article expounding the doctrine that great men are hard of speech and not eloquent. Imprisonment for lese majeste was the reward of this irritating suggestion that Kaiser Wilhelm was either slow of speech or not a great man. In Germany, too, schoolboys have been prosecuted for caricaturing the Kaiser in chalk on a blackboard.

In England there is one specious argument against the abolition of the stage censorship. Some managers of theaters, while anxious to offer to the public plays free from unnecessarily puritanical restraints, are not at all desirous of being put to the trouble of fighting in police courts and running the risk of imprisonment as well as law costs. The fact that the censor has passed any given play secures the theatrical manager from all risk of prosecution for obscenity or treasonable libel. It is certainly one of the anomalies of paternal government that while a publisher or editor is always liable to prosecution, there is no literary censor to whom manuscripts can be submitted with a view to a definite final decision being passed as to their liability to prosecution. In other words, no amount of willingness to submit to censorship can give the writer or publisher immunity from the liability of prosecution. A compulsory submission to censorship by no means necessarily follows from these premises. Both as regards stage plays and literature, a voluntary State censor is surely conceivable. So long as the State enforces its "obscene" laws, why should not the State appoint a censor armed with full powers to give immunity from prosecution to such plays and writings as he may approve, but giving him no power to compel the submission to him of plays and writings? Let those who wish to take risks do so, and allow the censor to judge only for those who desire a definite decision in advance. My own belief is that the Censor of Plays in England is decidedly somewhat in advance of average public opinion, and the great need of the day is that writers and publishers should at least not lag behind public opinion through timidity based on indefinite fears and a desire to be on the "safe side." Pioneers are always wanted and will never be multitudinous—the whole army of thinkers should have the satisfaction of knowing that where the pioneers found in their day pitfalls, mines, and armed enemies, average manhood may now safely travel without fear.

London, England. GEORGE BERNSHOUGH.

Why, Indeed?

Why is it that street railway corporations are solicitous about the non-unionists' right to work? Is it because in a humanitarian spirit they wish to give as many work as they can possibly employ, or because they wish to break the power of labor to protect itself against exploitation?—Americus, in Free Society.

What Pays?

When Jonathan Mayo Crane has decided whether it pays to be a radical perhaps he will turn his attention to the question. Would it pay to be a conservative? That is, if it does not pay to be known as a radical, how would it pay to drop out of the ranks and be known as one of the "respectables"? There may be some avowed radicals who would like, on occasions, to be able to draw into a respectable shell and hide. There are men and women of very radical "views" who still discreetly preserve a reputable position in society. They are often to be seen between two fires, trying to "serve God and Mammon." With one hand they hold on to their conservative friends and alliances, while with the other they grasp at freedom of action and expression. Sometimes they are parents, and may be observed bringing up their children in the authorized way, while taking great pains to keep hidden their own very much revised version of the moral code. Is their position desirable? Does it pay?

I had a dear little auntie, whom I loved and who loved me. Her ideas were musty. She was too religious to countenance the heresy of evolution; Ingersoll she regarded as a half-brother of Satan—a real Satan, hoofs, horns and all. She was once heard to refer to "Freelove or Socialism or whatever you call it." That comprised her knowledge and comprehension of present-day social movements.

I sometimes went to see her. In the old days of my young propriety we had been very confidential and of course nothing had happened to change this habit. I could still listen sympathetically to the epic of the family ills, and advise as to making over Julia's green dress and putting Amelia into corsets and giving Barbara music lessons. I could sincerely regret Robert's unfortunate marriage and Frederic's cigarettes. But when it came to reciprocity! Then what mental gymnastics I had to perform and what a censorship I had to exercise over my tongue to retain the proper measure of giliness and yet to keep concealed the awful, awful facts! I put my foot in it once, when I wore a short skirt, and tried to defend myself. I nearly lost my reputation for all sense of womanly modesty that time.

Sometimes it was exhilarating to see how near I could approach the edge, but when I looked at the dear little woman and thought what pain it would give her my heart smote me. And, oh! the after anxieties. Now what was it I said about that trip to the beach? Am I sure I can tell the same story again? And suppose she should question René. René is my youngster and I never taught him to tell lies. He doesn't know I am not respectable, for he has been taught only radicalism, and when he does come in contact with the "respectable" I hope he will not find it worthy of respect. But suppose my little aunt should question René and he should admit that it was Leander and not my Past Master took us to the beach. Or suppose René should tell the girl cousins of our camping trip; how Daddy Roy and Evelena went in one canoe, and Marmee and Sylvester and Me in another, and Uncle Bert and Aimée and her baby girl in another, and each canoe carried its own little tent and we camped on the bluff above the headwaters of the stream. That was an idyllic vacation week,—but, oh! the little auntie!

And then what delights when the Past Master and I took the youngster and paid a family visit of a Sunday afternoon! Now the Past Master and I are very dear friends, but I knew and he knows that if we had tried to "keep the home together" we should by this time be bitter and jealous and altogether behaving in an outrageous "married" way to each other. But the dear little auntie didn't dream that the marriage was called off and that the Past Master had bachelor's quarters in the city, while René and I were reveling in the country. So when "Daddy Roy and Marmee and Me" went to see auntie we were a very happy three and the dear people thought Lena had "done so well," and no doubt used us as stunning examples of marital felicity. Oh, yes! It was delightful to be introduced as "Mrs. Everhard" when I dropped that name long ago, and I could just feel the Past Master wince when they introduced "my niece's husband."

No, it didn't pay. That is what the Past Master and I said to each other. To be used as illustrations of the beauty of a thing we detested! To have all we had attained in the way of true friendship attributed to the very condition that had so nearly swamped us! And yet, how shock the little auntie? How step out of her good thoughts into the ranks of the harlot and the wanton and the libertine? For my good auntie's virtue was severe, and held no half-ground. The cousins, too! Julia is really a girl of intellectual power and I hoped sometime to bring her out. It didn't pay and I knew it, but I wanted to make it pay, and I loved them!

But when it came to René, to René's morals, to inoculating that white soul with the virus of vulgarity, to teaching René to be ashamed of his strong, clean, beautiful little body! I drew the line! I told her my ideas were not as hers, nor my virtue of the time dishonored brand she worshiped. I told her about the Past Master and myself, and my tongue once loosened went on and told her about Aimée, who claims a right to motherhood without signing away her self-ownership. I told her that young mother was as pure as any woman of us all, even the Immaculate Julia and Amelia. No, I caught my balance and said not a word of Leander and Sylvester, nor of the Past Master and Evelena and Lucinda and Margaret. But I said I was as much of a Socialist as is consistent with being an Anarchist—and she went white. I suppose she saw René blowing up the President. I told her I was quits with religion and out after a new brand of morality. I told her I couldn't longer expose René to the dangers of her morality. I told her I could agree to disagree on anything but principle, but there I could not compromise. I told her my principles were as sacred to me as her religion to her. I told her good-by, and I left her to break it to the cousins and to the human fire-cracker whom she has loved and honored and obeyed for thirty years.

And I went out and breathed. I took long, deep breaths and rejoiced that nothing stood between me and Truth. I forgot I had lost a group of dear friends, for I had freed myself from a pretense, a bondage, a suffocation. And I said to myself: "This is the only thing that pays,—to breathe deep, to speak true, and to stand for what you are!" And it really doesn't matter whether you stand alone, or surrounded by comrades, or whether the harlot and the hobo come up to call you sister or brother. It matters not whether you are dubbed saint or sinner, whether you are crowned or kicked, nothing will pay until you stand for what you are. Even if René should—but, oh! may I be so wise and so true that René may "see the same truth" with me!

LENA BELFORT.

VARIOUS VOICES.

We are always glad to receive calls from friends visiting the city. Take the Lake street elevated, stop at Ashland avenue, walk one block east, then one block north. Or take Fulton street electric car west and stop at St. John's place, alighting in front of our house. The Lake street electric and Paulina street car; also pass within a block of our residence.

Jacob B. Daisy, Charleston, Ill.: I like to see Lucifer's light shine. It is the best educator I can find anywhere. I hope it will always live to do good. I want to receive it and will pay for it.

Charles Anthony, Boston, Mass.: I see that you say you will stop all subscriptions that are not paid in advance. Now, I can't afford to lose a single copy. Lucifer is the very bread of life to us, and I intend to keep ahead.

E. L. Small, Massachusetts: Lucifer is about my only source of information as to what is going on in the world of agitation. I inclose $2, which please apply on my subscription. I think Lillian always fully maintains the character of the paper, and Mr. Harman should not too long delay the completion of his memoirs.

Mrs. M. E. H., New York City: I have been a paid-up subscriber to Lucifer since 1889, and intend to remain so until the end of my life. I inclose $1 to renew my subscription for another year. I hope your dear father will be greatly benefited by his sojourn in California.

S. E. B. Armes, Santa Ana, Cal.: I see that my time for Lucifer will expire with the next number, so I inclose a dollar for renewal, as I do not want to miss a number while your father is westward bound. When I see so many of the reform papers being denied pound rates I wonder what our so-called servants at Washington will do next.

Albina L. Washburn, San Diego, Cal.: There has been a great advance in public thought on sex questions in the past few years. I find more inquirers and more who believe things they dare not utter. The public press, however, lags behind. I have been shut out of the Sun here for saying in its columns (through non-censorship of manager and editor) that "marriage without love was prostitution." I will write soon to Comrade Harman in San Francisco and await his coming to Southern California with large hope for himself, Lucifer and the people. I inclose money for subscription to Lucifer and pamphlets for distribution. I distribute copies of Lucifer all the time and could use more papers and pamphlets for missionary work.

C. V. Cook, San Francisco, Cal.: On inclosed sheets I hand you names of Liberals that may become interested in Lucifer's work. Am unable to contribute anything to help provide for the expense of distribution of even sample copies. I hope, however, for their sake, as well as for you who work for Lucifer, that you have means to do so and thus aid in extending your subscription list.

Laura H. Earle, New York: Can you not find out why it is that Lucifer does not reach me? When I was in Vineland over a year ago I would get about one paper out of three, and it was just so last spring in Jersey City. I made complaint at post-office in both places, but with no result. Is Lucifer on Cortelyou's blacklist, or some other body's censored index? And is this what is to happen to all those that are honest and free spoken?

Walter C. Behlen, Ohio: I am not receiving Lucifer. My subscription had not expired, but it matters not. The ruling of the postal officials is not going to prevent me from reading your excellent little periodical. I can find no chaff in Lucifer, something that can be said for very few papers. Your paper and Free Society are fine publications; they are not published for bank accounts, but for education of individuals to grasp the essence of freedom and in it to live non-invasive lives. In order to achieve this the superstition of earth, as well as the myth of the sky, must both make way for a clearer conception of the realities of things. Science is worth more to this world than theology, but science can only truly bloom and spread its beneficent effects in freedom. I inclose $1 for one year's extension of my subscription to Lucifer, the light-spreader. Sometimes I wonder who there is to fill your place when you shall have passed away. Hoping that Lucifer may still live and prosper, I remain one of your many admirers.

Adeline Champney, Boston, Mass.: I see that I am entitled to but four more numbers of Lucifer, but please don't stop it. I will send the money soon, for I should feel lost without Lucifer. Lillie D. White hits me hard in No. 995. I wish I could have sent a mental telegram to Lucifer's readers that would have suggested to them to look up the Aug. 27 number and see just what I did say. I never attempted to "read out" any individual, and as to my consigning any one to the place we don't believe in—why, that sounds ugly, and makes Adeline Champney seem a very "not nice" sort of person. I don't want to seem "nice," but I don't want to be rude, either. The difference between Lillie D. White and myself wasn't a personal one, nor was it so treated. She is advocating the freedom of woman for the sake of individual happiness, and I am advocating it for the sake of the child and of society as well. That seems to be the difference, and on that I am willing to stand. I hope Laura Earle's question will bring out some really profound discussion.

William Fretz, 190 Ingham avenue, Trenton, N. J.: In Lucifer No. 995 Laura H. Earle asks some pertinent questions. "Does a sex attraction that is exclusively physical justify itself?" In view of the fact that thousands of women and men do consider it justifiable, and expect nothing more, it can safely be affirmed; but what is the distinction between the purely physical passion and love? Can love be so etherealized as to eliminate all desire for the physical? Can a eunuch love in the fullest sense? Some writer has defined passion and love thus: "Passion is the emotion of love in extreme; love between men and women is simply passion in its broadest sense, emotion in its extreme state." Can love be devoid of passion, or vice versa? It seems to me the physical emotions and love emotions so interblend that if there is really any difference either one is justifiable when there is full reciprocity. In don't see why Miss Earle's questions do not apply to both sexes. I am glad she asked them and I hope others will make comments according to their light and experience.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 West 143d street, New York.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire let us hear from you if you want to continue to receive Lucifer.

The postal authorities have not yet informed us how much space we can legitimately devote to our own advertising. If the statement that we are devoting too much space to advertising our book business was made in good faith, and was not a mere pretext for denying us second-class privileges, we will doubtless receive this information soon. We will then confine our advertising to the allotted limits. In the meantime we would like to receive advertising from other publishers or any one else to whom Lucifer's advertising space is of value. We have not sought advertising heretofore, for we have preferred to advertise books at our own risk, taking a commission as pay for our advertising space, and at the same time assisting in the circulation of literature which we think of important educational value. But as it seems that we are not to be allowed to do this hereafter, we will be glad to receive advertising and will give terms on application.

We have received nothing for publication from the editor this week. Probably he has sent a letter, but did not start it in time. Without doubt we will have something from him for next week's paper. He sends good reports of his experiences in San Francisco.

A friendly photographer in San Francisco has taken photographs of M. Harman to be sold for the benefit of Lucifer. The price is 25 cents, and they may be ordered through this office.

Is This Lese Majeste?

Whenever President Roosevelt grows eloquent over the beauties of personal holiness, his enthusiasm recalls, for some reason or other, the story of the little girl who prayed: "O Lord, make Martha Smith a good little girl, so that I may take her playthings away from her and she won't make any fuss about it."—The Public (Chicago).

What Is Due to Teachers.

As water will not ascend higher than the level of the first spring-head from whence it descendeth, so knowledge derived from Aristotle, and exempted from liberty of examination, will not rise again higher than the knowledge of Aristotle. Therefore, disciples do owe unto masters only a temporary belief, and a suspension of judgment, till they be fully instructed, and not an absolute resignation or perpetual captivity.—Francis Bacon.

The only unfailing and permanent source of improvement is liberty.—J. S. Mill.

The John Turner Outrage.

It has been determined to carry the case of John Turner to the Supreme Court of the United States—to employ the best council, to neglect no legal weapon that may be of help in preventing the deportation of this unoffending Englishman. No matter what the outcome may be, no matter whether the panic-inspired statute of March 3, 1903, be declared constitutional or unconstitutional, the one thing to do is to fight under the rules of the game every inch of the day to defeat or victory. "The summer soldier" and "the sunshine patriot" already are under cover, but when the fight has been lost or won their reputations only will be missed. The question is not whether you and I believe as John Turner does, but whether we believe he has the social right to express what he believes, the right to free movement over the world.

Money is to be raised, public meetings of protest and exposition are to be held, the press is to be aroused to a sense of its present shame, its peril, its responsibility. Let every paper whose editor respects himself and wants to say his thoughts, as John Turner wants to say his thoughts, call upon its readers to contribute to the John Turner Defense Fund. In defending Turner we are defending ourselves, our right to think, to speak, to move, to grow.

The Free Speech League has become the John Turner Defense Committee. Ed W. Chamberlain, 111 West Forty-second street, New York City, is chairman; A. C. Pleydell, 175 Broadway, is secretary, and Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., 120 Lexington avenue, is treasurer. The other members of the committee, so far accepted, are Benj. R. Tucker, Joseph Barondess, George E. Macdonald, Edwin C. Walker, Moses Oppenheimer, H. Gaylord Wilshire, W. F. Doll, Dr. J. A. Maryson, David Rousseau.

EDWIN C. WALKER,
244 West One Hundred and Forty-third street, New York.

It is a spacious, high-domed chamber, magnificently wainscoted and furnished. In the center stands a massive, imposing desk, equipped with a marvelous battery of electric buttons. At it sits William Williams, Commissioner of Immigration for the Port of New York. The scene is the commissioner's office in the administration building on Ellis Island.

Presently a visitor is ushered in. He is a lawyer—Hugh O. Pentecost—and he wishes to see his client, John Turner of England.

Mr. Turner has the distinction of being the first prisoner held under the act of Congress passed on March 3, 1903, which provides for the deportation from this country of "persons who disbelieve in organized government." Mr. Turner was arrested while addressing a meeting in this city on the night of the 23d of last month.

Commissioner Williams touches a button and a guard appears. An order is handed to him and he disappears. Several minutes pass in silence. Although it is the 10th of November, the air is so balmy that every window of the office is half opened. Through one window can be seen the stars and stripes fluttering from the flagstaff on the bay bulkhead. Across the channel, flooded in the perfect sunlight, looms the giant statue of Liberty Enlightening the World.

Then the door opens and a rather short, stockily built, ruddy-cheeked man of middle age enters. His face gleams with intelligence and is adorned with a thick, sandy beard, trimmed in what is called the Van Dyke fashion. This is John Turner, strenuous organizer of British trade unionism and, as he terms himself, Anarchist. He is closely attended by a guard in the person of Captain Weldon of the Ellis Island federal police. Turner and Captain Weldon seat themselves at the desk beside Commissioner Williams and Lawyer Pentecost. Captain Weldon produces a pad of paper and a lead pencil to take notes and Commissioner Williams signals Mr. Pentecost to begin his interview.

This is how Turner, the British subject and United States prisoner, is compelled to hold consultations with the lawyer retained for his defense upon accusations of having violated an act of Congress.

Now, Turner," observes Lawyer Pentecost, "Judge Lacombe will hand down to-morrow in the United States Circuit Court his order dismissing our habeas corpus proceedings. You will then be deported unless we appeal the matter to a higher court. What is your wish?"

Captain Weldon grips his paper pad and prepares to take copious notes.

"As I do not seem to be wanted in this country," says Turner, at once wearily and sarcastically, "I think it might be best to let the authorities ship me back. I am a trifle homesick, anyway."

"But your friends may think it better for you to fight the matter to the last ditch," suggests Lawyer Pentecost.

"My position is just this," says Turner decisively and between his clenched teeth, "I am a British subject, and as such bow to the mandates of the United States Government, under which I have not the rights of a citizen. Personally I prefer to return to England, but if my good American friends think there is a principle involved in the matter I will stay and fight it. This is an American question, in which, as a British subject, I am not personally interested. It is a question involving the constitutionality of an act of the United States Congress, rather than my personal well-being."

"You should remember," observes Lawyer Pentecost, "that if an appeal is taken it may take six months to get a decision. This will mean six very sad and gloomy months for you in a cell on Ellis Island."

"I will gladly stay here till I rot," replies Turner, "if by so doing I can assist my American friends in their fight for the vital principle of liberty involved."

This ends the interview of lawyer and client in the presence of federal government witnesses. A curt sign is given that nobody else is to be permitted to speak to Turner, and he is led from the room by Captain Weldon.

The scene is grotesquely reminiscent of a drama of the "shocker" variety, where the conspirator against the Czar is hied back to his dungeon after an inquisition before the Imperial Chief of the Third Section.

While waiting for the boat to leave Ellis Island something more is learned of Turner's treatment by those in a position to know. He is kept confined in a cell, with the exception of the period allowed daily for a brief walk. While walking he is closely guarded by keepers. The general conditions of this imprisonment are worse than any criminal undergoes in a state penal institution. Not a soul is permitted to talk to him except his counsel—and this exception seems to be a matter of courtesy on the part of the commissioner rather than a right defined by the law. Incidentally it may be observed that a prisoner's consultation with his counsel is hardly of much value in his defense when the interview is held in the presence of prosecuting government officials who take fluent notes of all that is said. It is simply a hollow mockery.

All mail, either received or dispatched by Turner, is opened and read by the Ellis Island officials before delivery.

On the little steamer, as it ploughs its way across the sunlit bay to the barge office, Lawyer Pentecost is induced to indulge in a few reflections.

"What appeals to me most," he says, "is the humor of this act of Congress. It is a law which, when some of its aspects are considered, is enough to make an American citizen roll over on his back and laugh uproariously. According to the law that very eminent American novelist, William Dean Howells, would be sentenced to five years' imprisonment if he invited Count Tolstoy to visit this country. Tolstoy, like Turner, is a 'disbeliever in organized government.'"

Mr. Pentecost is asked to elucidate.

"The law," says he, "provides heavy punishment for those who aid and abet proscribed persons in reaching our shores. Say, for example, you had a boyhood friend in the old country whom you had only vaguely heard from in twenty years. Say you decided one day to write to him and invite him to come to this country and offered him your home and your friendship when he got here. It might so happen that this friend of yours had once printed or publicly expressed a disbelief in organized government or had indulged in violent Anarchistic ravings. You might be entirely ignorant of this and be the most patriotic American who ever drew the breath of life. Yet proof of this utterance, together with your letter of invitation to visit America, forwarded to Secretary Cortelyou of the Department of Commerce and Labor, would be sufficient evidence to make you a federal prisoner and subject you to the five years' imprisonment specified in the section of the law. You see, the act has some unique features."

Comment was made upon the copious notes made during the interview with Turner.

"The federal authorities," observed Lawyer Pentecost, "are somewhat candid in admitting that they are extremely anxious to find out who—if anybody—invited Turner to visit this country. There's a nice term of imprisonment awaiting the party if they get him. Then they're mighty anxious to find out what steamship brought Turner to this country. There are heavy penalties for a master, agent or consignee of a vessel who lands a proscribed person on our shores."

In discussing the legal aspects of the case Lawyer Pentecost observed: "It would fill a few pages of the New York Daily News thoroughly to show the absurdities of this law. We have, for example, a religious sect in this country called the Plymouth Brethren. Its members, I believe, are old-time, dyed-in-the-wool Americans. Their theology teaches them to repudiate organized government. To be consistent, the United States Government would have to ferret them out and ship them all back to dear old London on the same ship with Turner. The law, you see, doesn't go after a man for what he believes in, but for what he disbelieves in, with the accent on the 'dis.'

"Another remarkable and somewhat humorous feature of the law is the absolute and despotic power it places in the hands of one man—Secretary Cortelyou. Mr. Cortelyou has the power to stop any steamship entering this port and dump the passengers—first-class as well as steerage—on Ellis Island and subject them to a secret, star-chamber inquiry. It doesn't matter if the passenger is a duke or prince—it's the cell for him if Mr. Cortelyou suspects him of disbelief in organized government.

"Here's another proposition: Suppose some peaceful, lovable humanitarian disciple of Tolstoy had settled in the West some three years ago and now owned a prosperous farm. If Cortelyou caught him he could be first imprisoned and then deported back to Russia, although he had never opened his mouth upon the subject."

Mr. Pentecost seemed to see in the law, above all else, a covert menace to trade unionism in this country which deserved the attention of every thinking man.—New York Daily News.

The Turner case is revealing the anti-Anarchist law which Congress enacted last winter as a menace to personal liberty of the most extraordinary character. The old "alien and sedition laws," which have been a hissing and a by-word for a century, were very pearls of liberty in comparison with this so-called anti-Anarchist law. It is doubtful if even in Turkey, much less in Russia, the material for a story so significant of absolutism could be gathered.

But the worst is not told there. Besides what is told there and what we described last week, we find this law a complete reversal of the American theory of arrests. Except in time of war, or when the writ of habeas corpus is suspended, the executive department of the general government is supposed to have no power of arrest. Think of the anomaly of a Presidential order of arrest in time of peace! Orders of arrest are judicial writs, issued upon proof duly made, and subject to judicial investigation. But under this law the order of arrest is issued by a member of the President's cabinet. It may be issued by him against any alien who has not lived in this country more than three years. The person arrested can be immediately taken from any part of the country to Ellis Island; be there examined privately, without witnesses or counsel, by three men who are appointed and can be dismissed by the cabinet officer issuing the warrant; and if two of them report to this cabinet officer that they believe the arrested man "disbelieves in all organized government" the cabinet officer can send him back to the country of his birth without allowing him to see friends or family or to settle his business affairs. From this decision there is no appeal to any court or jury. The practical result will be to put every alien who may take part in political or trades-union agitation against the policy of the administration at the mercy of the Secretary of the Department of Commerce and Labor for three years after arrival, and open a door to blackmail by federal officers.

We have called this cabinet officer's order of arrest a "lettre de cachet," something the use of which helped mightily to bring on the French Revolution. Is it badly named? When the President can arbitrarily arrest and deport any alien of not more than three years' residence, seizing him anywhere in the country and depriving him of every legal right except a habeas corpus hearing before a judge whose hopes of promotion depend upon the President's good will, how long before he will be able arbitrarily to arrest citizens, and deport or incarcerate them at his own pleasure? Since Destiny began to determine Duty in this country, we have traveled far and fast toward the Gehenna of popular liberties. Each stage has made the next one easier to reach, for Gehenna lies at the bottom of a hill.—The Public (Chicago).

New York has witnessed another indefensible outrage in the arrest of John Turner of London on the charge of "inciting and promoting Anarchy in violation of the alien labor laws." After this, talk of free speech in this country! It is dead, dead, dead, and only to be resurrected by a speedy awakening of the moral consciousness of the American people. Mark the facts. The press report, never colored to favor an Anarchist, contains not one syllable to Turner's discredit. His subject, on the occasion of his arrest, is stated to have been "Trades Unionism and the General Strike." There is no hint of any appeal to violence in it; and indeed the subject negatives the idea. Besides, it is well known that Turner is a philosophical speaker, and has never been an apostle of force. There was no disorder during the address, absolutely nothing to form the faintest excuse for such an arrest. The act cannot possibly be construed as anything but a formal declaration that the United States no longer stands for freedom of expression, but chooses to pattern after Russian tyranny.—James F. Morton, Jr., in The Demonstrator (Home, Wash.).

The Immigration Commissioners say they have been looking for Mr. Turner for four months, and were surprised that he could have got in without their knowledge. It would almost seem as if not only Roosevelt, but the Immigration Commissioners, the police, and the daily papers were all in the pay of the capitalists who wish to keep out all disturbers of their peace. And this is what "American freedom" is coming to—that a great nation of nearly one hundred millions of "free" men are afraid to allow a solitary Englishman to enter their country because he advocates liberty and co-operation for the common good! No wonder Mr. Turner wishes to get back to England. He had better stay there till Congress is compelled to repeal its Russian restrictions on freedom.—Secular Thought (Toronto).

Progressive societies of all kinds are uniting for the defense of John Turner, the English labor organizer who was lately arrested and ordered to be deported under the new law against the admission of "Anarchists" to the United States. One literary society on the East Side voted the whole contents of its treasury, amounting to $75, to the defense fund, and generous subscriptions have been taken up at the Liberal Club, at the Liberal Arts Society, and at other meetings. A total of over $700 was reported on Monday. There is a determination to test the question whether a man's views on the subject of labor and government can be used as a pretext for outlawing him in the United States.—Truth Seeker (New York).

The decision of Judge Lacombe in the Turner case should make it clear to all that constitutions have no existence outside of the interpretations which judges put upon them. Constitutional guarantees, then, are but shadows.—Americus, in Free Society.

Social Notices.

A ball for the benefit of Free Society will be given at Aurora Hall, Milwaukee avenue and Huron street, Saturday evening, Dec. 5. Admission, 25 cents.

W. F. Barnard will deliver a course of lectures, under the auspices of the Sociological League, at Jefferson Hall, 70 Adams street, Sunday evenings at 8 o'clock. Admission, 10 cents. Subjects: Nov. 29, "What Is Progress?" Dec. 6, "Government an Evil"; Dec. 13, "The New Conception of Evolution."

The St. Louis Debating Club is now organized with regular meetings, lectures and debate every Saturday evening, at 1008 North Seventeenth street. This place is open each evening and Sunday all day, and also serves as an information bureau for all who desire information about St. Louis. Friends of Lucifer visiting St. Louis please call. Communications should be written in English, although letters in German, French, Italian, Spanish, Russian, Bohemian, Roumanian and jargon can be read and answered. St. Louis readers of Lucifer who have furnished rooms for rent should notify the club. Address St. Louis Debating Club, 1008 North Seventeenth street, St. Louis, Mo.

Education and Race Suicide.

Our country has always suffered from the delusion that size counts for everything. We measure value by bulk and numbers. It is the same erroneous judgment which leads us to measure the importance of families by the number of children produced in them. Is it not time that we should attach rather more importance to quality than to size? I assert that it is much better that a home shall have from two to five children, strong in body, vigorous in mind, all of them so equipped that in the course of nature one may expect them to live to maturity, than that there should be from twelve to eighteen, half of whom are doomed to die in infancy and less than half of whom will be fairly educated and equipped for life.

I quickly admit that the higher education of women has a tendency to diminish the number of children born in a family. It gives a girl a thousand resources within herself and a thousand interests outside of herself. The higher education undoubtedly makes girls more critical of men and more independent of them. The well-educated woman knows that there is no ideal home excepting the home created by a man and a woman who are working together to maintain it in the bonds of love. The better educated, the more intelligent, the more developed women are, the greater is their sense of responsibility. With this increased sense of responsibility there comes to highly educated women a greater sense of personal dignity that is not felt by women less developed. When such women become mothers, they are willing and intentional mothers, not unwilling and accidental victims of maternity.—May Wright Sewall.

Back of every great, worthy achievement of man find the woman—mother, teacher, wife. They are there, contributing to the advancement of the race an impetus only less than that of the divinity that did create us. I have heard atavistic male creatures in human semblance deplore the presence of "the new woman," the woman who wishes perhaps to earn her own bread, certainly to shape her own life and the lives of the children she will bring into the world, to take an equal part with her brothers in the government that taxes her, to broaden her mental horizon until it shall include the best thought of all lands and times; and, truly enough, such women are not for such men; they have outgrown their critics. Their business is to improve the race by improving the individual—and they are hard at it.—National Magazine.

THE SALE OF AN APPETITE.

A STORY BY PAUL LAFARGUE.

Emile Destouches stood outside the finest restaurant in Paris, shivering with cold and ready to die of hunger. A portly capitalist came out, invited him inside, gave him the best dinner money would buy, and then proposed a contract, by which Destouches was to digest the capitalist's food for five years, in return for a salary of two thousand francs a month, payable in advance. The young man gladly accepted, but in a short time repented of his bargain. To understand why, you must read the book. It is one of the cleverest satires on the present capitalist system ever written.

It is translated from the French by Charles H. Kerr, and is beautifully illustrated with engravings from original wash drawings by Dorothy D. Dorne. It is printed on the finest of paper and daintily bound in cloth, with unique cover design, making a charming holiday gift.

Price, including postage to any address, fifty cents.

CHARLES H. KERR & COMPANY,
PUBLISHERS,
56 FIFTH AVENUE, CHICAGO.

Please mention Lucifer when ordering.

Government Is Class Oppression.

In reality government is nothing but a machine of one class for the oppression of another, in a democratic republic certainly no less than in a monarchy, and is at its best an evil, which in the struggle for class rule will be inherited by the victorious proletarians, and the worst side of which the workers will be no more able to remove than was the Paris Commune; consequently its power must be clipped as much as possible, until a rising generation will be able to throw off all government rubbish.—Frederick Engels.

"WHO IS THE ENEMY?"

Hugh O. Pentecost writes thus to Edwin C. Walker about the latter's new work, "Who Is the Enemy; Anthony Comstock or You?" "Your pamphlet is a strong discussion of the question at issue that one could give to a conservative friend with some hope that he might read it through."

Dr. R. W. Shufeldt, biologist, author of several scientific works and of more than seven hundred articles on medicine, travel, science, sexual problems and other subjects, writes to E. C. Walker: "I thank you very much indeed for the copy you sent me of your valuable pamphlet, 'Who Is the Enemy—Anthony Comstock or You?' I have read it from cover to cover with the utmost satisfaction and unqualified approval. It is one of the best and strongest things you have put out, and I am with you solid in both the letter and spirit of it. I prize the copy most highly." Ask for table of contents and specimen pages of "Who Is the Enemy?" or send 20 cents to this office for the pamphlet.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

The Liberal Mail-Order Jeweler, now permanent at No. 110 N. Kensington Av., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 20 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Theism in the Crucible," free.

THE MAJESTY OF SEX.

This is the very latest WORD on the subject. This book will satisfy in a vital way the cry of the hungry soul. If you follow its teachings your body will become transformed and transmuted. You will be happy and healthy. You will prosper and be contented. It does not deal in theory alone, but goes straight to the heart of the subject. It teaches the ART of LIVING. Most of us know how to half-way live, but to live WELL and PROSPER is an ART. Learn how by sending $2.00 for the book. Circulars free. Address NANCY M'KAY GORDON, 55 E. 26th St., Chicago, Ill.

"ETERNAL SUNSHINE."

THE HIGHLAND HOTEL, ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO.

One block north of Santa Fe Station. All modern improvements. A veritable Sanitarium. Unsurpassed in purity of Air and Water, and in Natural Scenery. Above the dust and turmoil of the city's streets. Prices moderate and reasonable. Write to S. R. SYMONDS, Proprietor.

WANTED—100 women to study medicine or midwifery. Next term begins January 1, 1904. COLLEGE OF MEDICINE AND SURGERY, 246 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, Ill. DR. FLORENCE DRESSLER, Secretary. (Dept. A.)

Among the Moki Indians of Arizona the men weave dresses and the women build houses. Little children fearlessly handle live rattle-snakes. Religious rites antedate Columbus' time. These and other interesting facts about our brothers in red may be found in a profusely illustrated book of 224 pages, "The Moki Snake Dance," written by Geo. A. Dorsey, Curator of Anthropology, Field Columbian Museum, and published by the Santa Fe. If interested in Indians and their handicraft, buy a copy; only costs 50 cents; easily worth a dollar. Write to-day to W. J. Black, G. P. A., A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 77 Jackson Blvd., Chicago, and enclose coin or stamps

THE NEW LIFE.

Ida M. Brooks, editor. A monthly periodical devoted to a finer and nobler realization of life; 25 cents a year, 3 months for 25 cents; sample copy free. If you are tired of the old life, with its pain, heartache and suffering, send for book of 224 pages, "The Moki Snake Dance," written by Geo. A. Dorsey, Curator of Anthropology, Field Columbian Museum, and published by the Santa Fe. If interested in Indians and their handicraft, buy a copy; only costs 50 cents; easily worth a dollar. Write to-day to W. J. Black, G. P. A., A. T. & S. F. Ry. Co., 77 Jackson Blvd., Chicago, and enclose coin or stamps

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We can not sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 20 cents each, two for 35 cents. Address Edwin C. Walker, 244 West 143d street, New York, N. Y.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to cleanse that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 63, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

EAT SOME SAND!

About five years ago, Prof. William Windsor, LL. B., Ph. D., the world's most eminent Phonologist, discovered the Sand Cure for Indigestion and Constipation, and cured the Sand Cure for Indigestion and Constipation, and cured the same time more than a half million sufferers have since that time more than a half million sufferers have tried it and found that it is Nature's Simple Remedy. It does not purge or gripe, but it by restored health. It does not purge or gripe, but it cleans the body out.

"The Natural Life" is the title of Prof. Windsor's monthly magazine in which the Sand Cure is fully described and discussed. It is devoted to the teaching of Vitosophy ("the wise way of living"), Natural Diet, Health and Character Culture, Righteousness and Freedom. One Dollar per year.

PROFESSOR WINDSOR will send full directions for the Sand Cure to anyone sending 25 cents for a three months' trial subscription to The Natural Life. Address THE WINDSOR PUBLISHING CO., Back Bay Postoffice, Boston, Mass.

RADICAL LITERATURE

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of Freethought and Free Love. Oxford Northcote. 10c.

THE SOCIAL QUESTION. A discussion between Juliet H. Severance, M. D., and David Jones. 25 cents.

BORNING BETTER BABIES. Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. R. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

KARESZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together, with That Great Fraud, Vegetable Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wilde). 25c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. H. H. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (H. H. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola). 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. H. H. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (R. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (H. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, E. H. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

WOMAN AND HER RELATION TO THE CHURCH OR CANON LAW FOR WOMEN. Harriet M. Closs. A succinct statement of the position to which women were doomed by the Church Fathers and authorities. Every woman should possess a copy. 10c.

THE CURSE OF MATERNITY. From the French of Henry Fevre. Together with How to Escape the Curse (Jonathan Mayo Crane), Woman's "Duty" to Bear Children (E. C. Walker), True and False Morality (C. L. James), Love's Law (William Francis Barnard). 25 cents.

MODERN PARADISE, The Model Home. Solution of the Social Problem. Future Greatness of Electricity. Proposed Experiment in Social Science. An Earthly Eden and How to Attain It. A Unique Power Plant. Wonderful System of Education. Elegantly illustrated. Prof. Henry Gierloff. 25c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: A Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE, as viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A searching portrait of the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock, Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and His Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Impotence, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. One of the best short works on the subject. Daintily printed. A charming little gift book. "Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it." 25 cents.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided, and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSWORK. H. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Modern of the Monogamic Idea; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman; What Is Man? What Will She Be? The State Ruling Beings in Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 10c.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES. Edwin C. Walker. Contents—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only"; Defenders of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen"; What Are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; Is What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" The Tenements; Action for Advanced Women. With appendix: The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization. The Folly and Cruelty of It all. 10c.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE. Edward Carpenter. This is a book with which few will wholly agree, but which nearly every one can read with profit and enjoyment. The subject is the relation of the sexes in the past, present and future, and it is treated with absolute frankness and fearlessness by a writer who unites a broad outlook, a strong grasp of his subject and a forcible, inspiring literary style. The following table of contents will indicate the line of thought followed by the author: The Sex Passion; Man, the Child-Bearer; Woman, the Serf; Woman in Freedom; Sex Heritage; A Retrospect; Marriage, a Forecast; The Free Society; Some Remarks on the Early Star and Sex Worships. Notes on the Primitive Group Marriage; Jealousy; The Family; Preventive Checks to Population. The book is printed on extra book paper and handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work. Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up to date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has 350 pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid, to any address, for $1.75.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler's), Life's Gifts (Olive Beaupland), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY AND THE STATE. Frederick Engels. Chapter Titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans. 212 pages; bound in cloth, 40c. Postage, 5c.

THE HOME CYCLOPEDIA OF MEDICAL, SOCIAL AND SEXUAL SCIENCE. Contains a full, plain and easy-reading treatise on "Health and Disease, with Recipes"; all the average reader can profitably learn of personal hygiene and common diseases (including special, separate chapters for men and women); all right up to date, and fully illustrated with hundreds of photo-engravings and chromo-lithographs. Contains also the already popular "Plain Home Talk" about the relations of the sexes and social customs in all ages and all countries, with "original and startling" suggestions for social reforms; newly revised, enlarged and well illustrated. All is "heart to heart" plain home talk from a clear-thinking, plain-speaking, liberal-minded medical author of over forty years' experience. Nearly 1,000,000 of his former books sold. A curious book for curious people, and a sensible book for every one. Answers 1,000 delicate questions one would like to ask one's regular physician and yet doesn't want to. 1,248 pages; 408 illustrations (96 in colors); 35c recipes. Cloth bound, $2.

THE WHOLESOME WOMAN. J. H. Greer, M. D. The latest and most complete work of its kind. Four books in one volume. Part I—SEX AND LIFE: The Principle of Life; The Dominant Power of Life; The Temple of the Soul; The Unfolding of Womanhood; The Fulfillment of the Law; The Fruits of Fulfillment; Home and Home-Making. Part II—TOKOLOGY: The Organs of Generation; Menstruation; The Marriage Relation; Conception and Prenatal Culture; Child Birth; The Hygiene of Infancy; Development from Birth to Puberty; Disorders of Infancy and Childhood; Affections Peculiar to Women; What Determines the Sex of Offspring. Part III.—CHILD-CULTURE: The Foundation of Moral Uprightness; The Kindergarten (with diagrams); Mental Training. Part IV.—HEALTH AND HYGIENE: Long Life Not a Secret; "Breath is Life"; How, When and What to Eat; Sleep and the Bath; Clothing and Dress; Mental and Physical Culture; What to Do in Sickness; What Not to Do in Sickness; Care of the Eyes and Ears; Care of the Extremities; Poisons Used as Medicines; The Application of Heat and Cold; Unnecessary Surgical Operations; An Ounce of Prevention. The complete work is published in one handsome, large quarto volume of 416 pages, with photogravure frontispiece, portrait of the author, 24 full-page half-tone and numerous smaller explanatory illustrations. It is printed on an extra quality of paper from new electroplates, and each volume is accompanied by a superb supplement of 41 plates (printed in colors), illustrating Sex in Plant Life; the Human Sexual Organs and the Laws of Reproduction; the Development of the Human Embryo and Fetus, showing nourishment and growth from day to day and month to month; the Plan of Fetal Circulation, etc. In extra cloth, with special emblematic cover design, $2.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 10c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 1c.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A. and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socialand. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MONEY, BANKS, PANICS AND PROSPERITY. By W. H. Clagett. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A study of the industrial type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

RELIGIOUS, POLITICAL AND SOCIAL FREEDOM. A lecture by Juliet H. Severance, M. D. 10c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 178 pages. 25c.

GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.

SOCIALISTIC, COMMUNISTIC, MUTUALISTIC AND FINANCIAL FRAGMENTS. By William B. Greene. $1.25.

AGE OF REASON; An Investigation of True and Fabulous Theology. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel portrait. 50c.

THE TEMPERANCE FOLLY; or, Who's the Worst? Lois Waisbrooker. Dedicated to the wrecks and so-called sinners of a false civilization. 10c.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 466 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 413 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmeyer. 25c.

THE STORY OF LIAM; or, The Evolution of a Mind. Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Stuart Rose), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. $1. Postage, 8c.

SONGS OF A CHILD, AND OTHER POEMS. By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. $1.50. Postage, 12c.

A RED HEART IN A WHITE WORLD. A suggestive manual of Free Society; containing a method and a hope. By J. William Lloyd. Handsome illuminated paper cover in white, red and green; 50 pages. 10c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edge. 75c.

AN ESSAY ON THE DUTY OF CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE. By Henry D. Thoreau. A reprint of this classic essay on the supremacy of the individual conscience. Antique paper; artistic covers, dark green on olitine. 10c.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 21 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 428 pages. 50c

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper. 15c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Spoonie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line" presentation edition, $5; five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $2.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

997.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

Your subscription is paid to No. ..... If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

HILDA'S HOME; A Story of Woman's Emancipation. Rose Graul. With Macaulay, Rose Graul would say, "The cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty." Hence she has no fears that under Freedom the Home and the Family would cease to exist, or that women will be less loving and lovable, or that men will be less manly and honorable. On the contrary, she maintains that only in the soil and atmosphere of freedom is it possible for true womanhood and manhood to live and flourish. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward Fitzgerald's interpretation; with original introduction; latest version. Special cover. Paper, 25c.

1805A; or, The Disinherited. A drama in six acts. Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1. Postage, 7c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, an advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

GOD AND THE STATE. One of the most eloquent pleas for liberty ever written. From "Age of Reason" and "Rights of Man" consolidated and improved. It stirs the pulse like a trumpet call. By Michael Bakounine. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 32 pages. 10c.

SHROUDS WITH POCKETS. A life sketch. By Henry E. Allen. A touching story, told in simple and yet striking language, and yet more than a story. Vivid flashes of light are thrown on the unspeakable horrors of capitalism. Illustrated with many portraits of Socialists and other reformers. 25c.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Ills Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 87 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltaire and Voltaire. 25c.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman March 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

VACCINATION A BLUNDER IN POISONS. C. F. Nichols. "Vaccination will undoubtedly rank as the greatest and most perplexing failure of the century; this conclusion is no longer a matter of opinion, but of science," said Alfred Russell Wallace, and in this booklet the facts are arrayed in support of this assertion. 25c.

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD; An Outline of Practical Co-Operative Individualism. By Henry Olerich. Regarded by many persons as a more interesting and consistent economic reform novel than Bellamy's "Looking Backward." Bound in red silk with gold title. Nearly 400 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, $1.

VACCINATION A CRIME. With Comments on Other Sanitary Superstitions. Felix L. Oswald, M. D. "Vaccination spreads diseases; vaccination impairs the organic functions; vaccination encourages reliance on worthless remedies; vaccination spreads smallpox; compulsory vaccination furnishes dangerous legal precedents." With Illustrations of diseases frequently resulting from vaccination. 108 pages. 10c.

HISTORY OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. By C. L. James. An excellent history of the French Revolution, well written by one thoroughly familiar with his subject. Special care has been exercised to give the facts as they are, the author not having made himself the champion of any faction. Neatly printed from large type on good book paper, with a substantial binding. 343 pages, with an index and bibliographical epitome. Cloth, $1.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. John H. Kelso. Contents: Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff or Protection; War Punishments; Maritime Rings; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be. 128 pages. Cloth binding, somewhat damaged, and reduced from $1.50 to 50 cents.

RELIGIOUS AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist fancies that he can best protect liberty by logically opposing investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life and religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, embellished with portrait of the author. In two editions, de luxe, and cloth. Prices, $1.25 and $1.00.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old asceticism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new Hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.' In another place the writer says: In proportion as we have freed ourselves from unnatural superstitions we have begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are unlikely and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproducing function." Paper cover; 32 large pages, twelve copies, 25c; single copy, 5c.

THE BIBLE. John E. Remsburg. Contains eleven chapters on the authenticity of the Bible, based on the best authorities of the time; thirteen on the credibility of the Bible, ten on the morality of the Bible, and an appendix in which Mr. Remsburg sets forth unanswerable arguments against the divine origin and in favor of the human origin of the Bible. Twenty-six pages of index enable the reader to instantly refer to any authority quoted or argument used. Mr. Remsburg is one of the most careful, accurate and painstaking writers, and his book is a compendium of the latest scholarship and rationalistic thought on the subject. The late Colonel Ingersoll took his famous lecture on the Bible by saying: "Some one ought to tell the truth about the Bible." This Mr. Remsburg has done—done it fully, and done it well. Large 12mo., 500 pages, Cloth, $1.25.

THE SLAVERY OF OUR TIMES. Count Leo Tolstoi. With portrait of the gifted author, and introduction by the translator, Aylmer Maude. Chapter Titles: I. Goods Perform Work Which Thirty-Seven Slaves. II. Society's Indifference While Men Perish. III. Justification of the Existing Position of Slaveowners. IV. The Assertion of Economic Science that Rural Laborers Must Enter the Factory System. V. Why Learned Economists Assert What Is False. VI. Bankruptcy of the Socialist Ideal. VII. Culture or Freedom? VIII. Slavery Exists Among us. IX. What Is Slavery? X. Laws Concerning Taxes, Land and Property. XI. Laws the Cause of Slavery. XII. The Origin of Legislation is Organized Violence. XIII. What Are Governments? Is It Possible to Exist Without Governments? XIV. How Can Governments Be Abolished? XV. What Should Each Man Do? An Afterword. Well printed on heavy paper; substantially bound. 186 pages. 60c.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VII., NO. 47. CHICAGO, ILL., DEC. 3, E. M. 303. [C. E. 1903.] WHOLE NO. 998

THE SLAVE OF IGNORANCE.

Once, as in dreamy mood I strayed
Along a splendid hall of art,
I saw one picture on the wall
That burned its import on my heart;
That fixed its meaning in my soul,
And stamped its impress on my mind;
For in that picture I beheld
The toiling millions bound and blind.

The canvas held the burly form
Of Hebrew Samson at the mill,
Docile and ox-like trudging round,
Obedient to a master's will.
Thy masters mock thee, and despise
The patient strength on which they feed;
Thy feeble protests they ignore
In haughty, overmastering greed.

Slave of the mills of privilege,
Scourged on by poverty and dread,
The selfishness of ages weights
The crown of thorns upon thy head;
The greed of all the years has bound
The fear of want about thy brow;
A serf thou wert in ages past,
Wealth owned thee then—it owns thee now!

O slave, by ignorance enthralled,
Uplift thy visage to the light!
The sun of reason shines for all,
Look up—its beams will give the sight!
Thou hast the power to shape the world,
To make it what thou'dst have it be,
There is no need of other power
Than thine own will to make thee free.

—Robert T. Whitelaw, in Torch of Reason.

Sex Morality, Bond and Free.

I am one of those who greatly welcome the questions asked by Laura Earle (Lucifer No. 995, Various Voices). I believe those and many more questions must be asked and answered by sex reformers before clear thinking is attained. Moreover, much as I value individual thinking, I believe there must inevitably be a collective ideal, in outline, at least, of what sex morality consists.

Sex morality, in principle, of even an elementary kind, scarcely as yet exists. The husband is still quite common who, having been too brutal and ignorant to know how to awaken sex passion in a woman, coerces his sex-slave by the remark, "What else do you suppose I married you for?" The "honest woman," like the honest politician observed by Thomas B. Reed, is "one who stays bought." And the other form of prostitution so common in our towns, and almost as complacently tolerated, shows how far we are from the standard set up by Grant Allen, in "The New Hedonism," that "Chastity is a profound disinclination to give the body where the heart is not given in unison."

The sex creed of society is still represented by the Church, which in its marriage service pronounces sexing to be "sin," and which commands the woman to obey—"in bedde and at the borde," as the word ran in the older and more explicit formula. Under such superstitions, people are taught that all sexing except for propagation is low and vulgar, and thus the most beautiful of educative influences has been omitted from the lives of many.

Laura Earle asks whether an exclusively physical sexual attraction is justified; whether the mere physical and the more ethereal emotion are two aspects of the same passion; whether the satisfaction of the physical need blunts the perceptions for the more etherealized love, and if the answers to these questions have exactly the same application to both sexes.

All that I have observed of sexual life confirms my belief that the parallel between ordinary sex expressions and those of another social function—that of eating in company—is almost perfectly exact. The man who goes to feast with friends and thinks only of gratifying his palate is happily a rarity. If, however, all food had been withheld from him beforehand, or only the least congenial food permitted, he could scarcely be condemned if his thoughts were wholly occupied with eating. The wish for shared and reciprocated joy in sexing is very strong in sane and civilized human beings, and where this wish exists, there is love in more or less degree.

The ardent temperament shows a high capacity for both physical emotion and strong love, and these are undoubtedly two forms of the same passion. Inherited temperament counts for more than habit, but the habit of sexing without love—so frequent in bond-marriage and in prostitution—does, I think, tend to lessen the power of the more ethereal love. Total deprivation of sexing may have as bad or worse results of the same kind. I also note that when etherealized love amounts to an insanity, this is usually due to sexual starvation.

I have observed no important difference between men and women in sex feeling, except that men more easily lose their self-control, and this is probably due to a far stronger instinct of initiative in sex-love. And I think that women suffer considerably more in health from sexual starvation, though often without recognizing the cause of such ill-health. But as the strongly sexual man very rarely submits to total sexual starvation, and the woman of similar temperament is often forced to do so, the comparison cannot be made with any certainty.

The highly spiritualized form of love is no doubt the most wonderful and beautiful development of the sex instinct. As such, it is always the form most ridiculed by the vulgar. It is fully capable of denying and even destroying the very desire from which in evolutionary course it arose. Yet those of us who know it best must admit its visionary and unpractical character. Some day, perhaps, this Pegasus of the heavens may be harnessed to some noble earthly chariot. But at present our simpler task is to study the nature and needs of ordinary sex-love, which is a mixture of instinctive desire and loving kindness,—in fact, the sexual comradeship which, as Le Gallienne tells us, was what Grant Allen meant by love; and he adds, speaking of the highly spiritualized passion: "Love is something far more terrible. It has nothing whatever to do with reason, nothing to do with theories. It burns this way, it burns that way. But the flame it sets alight is for one martyr, it is kindled by one torch." Let us not be drawn to worship this fiery god thus truly described, but rather, if fate permits, keep him out of our lives; his far gentler elder brother, whom Grant Allen knew and honored, is our better friend.

DORA FORSTER.

Environment a Powerful Factor.

Answering Laura H. Earle, I will take up her last question first. The application, I think, will be the same as regards the sexes if we take persons of the same temperament, etc. For instance, if we ask these questions of a woman who is confined in a close, stuffy workroom, with practically no physical exercise, and who would take cold if exposed to what would be a bracing atmosphere to a woman like Laura Earle herself, and compare her answers with the answers given to the same questions by a man who works in the open air, then we may expect confusion and feel that the sexes are radically different. However, ask the same questions of a man and woman who are both devoted to athletics, and given a woman who will be honest, I think you will find the answer much the same.

Now for the first question, which, I think, answers itself: if the attraction is exclusively physical, then surely it justifies itself. I think myself that the physical need is something apart from the emotion we call love, but, like all other physical needs, may be more intensely enjoyed coupled with love. For instance, we may enjoy a supper, a book or an opera very much with a friend, but will any one gainsay the fact that the presence and participation of a loved one does enhance the enjoyment? I do not quite understand what Miss Earle means by etherealized love, but if she means gratification with the person loved, I say decidedly no, for the more points of mutual enjoyment the more intense the love. If, on the other hand, love for one and gratification with another is meant, then in this case also it seems to me that each would have his or her quota of love or like, and so would not interfere with the feelings toward the other except to make us more appreciative of whatever may be the attraction for us in the other.

I hope we will hear from many of Lucifer's Friends and that we will truly get some light on these questions.

PERLE MCLEOD.

Corporal Punishment.

The Minnesota Training School has adopted a spanking device as a substitute for the old method of administering corporal punishment to unruly boys and girls of the institution. It is a decided improvement upon mother's slipper and father's strap.

Punishing incorrigible boys is no small task. The least of the trouble is in applying the strap. The culprit must first be caught. Then, if he is a robust chap, he may resist his captor; a struggle follows, one or both are hurt, and it is easy to make a charge of brutality against the whipper. Applying the lash under these difficulties the blows are likely to fall indiscriminately anywhere on the anatomy between the head and the feet.

The device adopted at the training school, while not eliminating the preliminary struggle, is designed to be a more scientific and humane application of the strap. The exact spot on the anatomy which it is proposed to attack may be marked with chalk, and the castigation is then administered with exact precision.

The spanking machine is not an automatic affair, dealing swift and terrible blows, as has been depicted, but a long bench, upon which the victim is placed, with a convenient part of his anatomy upward. If very obstreperous the youth may have his hands or his feet strapped to the corners of the bench while the corrective agent applies the lash.

To the general public the idea of a spanking machine is a matter of considerable amusement, but it is a serious matter with the inmates of the institution. They have become convinced that it is a demoniacal invention, but, nevertheless, an effective agent in the discipline of incorrigibles. It has, in fact, greatly curbed the vicious propensities of the many unmanageable boys.

Superintendent F. A. Whittier and the members of the State Board of Control, who are familiar with the results of the spanking machine, assert that it is far superior to the old hand method. And there is talk of getting up an automatic attachment by which any given number of lashes may be applied quickly and accurately.—Omaha Daily Bee.

A blow degenerates and lowers the mental self-esteem of the victim, and has a brutalizing and a demoralizing effect on the one who inflicts it. Flogging was the punishment inflicted on the negroes when in slavery, and the Southern aristocrats even felt that it was better to hire it done than to inflict it themselves. This was a concomitant of slavery and had as much an effect in obliterating that institution in civilized countries as any other one cause.

Juries now generally acquit the man who kills the party who struck the first blow. What satisfaction is there in it for an intelligent man or woman to tie a child to a bench and beat it into submission? In the Omaha schools, and in some others, this ancient relic of medievalism survives, and it is euphonistically called disciplining. Only a few years ago in Kansas City a little girl was so disciplined by one of the lady teachers that it caused her death, after which occurrence the board, in obedience to the voice of public opinion, abandoned corporal punishment. But how sad to think of a human life being offered up as a sacrifice before a change in the rules was made! Thoughtful people, after all, are now agreed that there is no difference between wife and child beaters. Let us hope that all will in the near future agree on this reform.

WALTER BIXBY.

Put not thy future in pledge. Why should man who is capable of development be a slave to a vow?—Elizabeth Gibson.

The Suppressed Panama Message.

A renewed discussion of President Roosevelt's propensities is aroused by the news that, prior to the development of Panama's revolution, he had made up his mind to advise Congress that "we must forthwith take the matter into our own hands," and build an isthmian canal by any route that might seem good to us, without waiting for the consent of "those whom the accident of position has placed in temporary control of the ground through which the route must pass," says the Literary Digest. Such was the message, already written, that he was intending to send to Congress, when the Panama revolution changed the whole aspect of affairs. The message is now made public as proof that the administration had no hand in abetting the secession of Panama. But while it may prove that, it also proves something else equally important, declare the opposition papers. It proves, says the Atlanta Journal, that we have an unsafe President; it proves, says the Philadelphia Record, that we have a President who considers himself above laws and treaties; it proves, says the Springfield Republican, that we have a President who, in international affairs, disregards the moral law.

After informing Congress that Colombia has refused to ratify the canal treaty, the President said in this suppressed message:

"In my judgment, it is time to declare that the beginning of the canal can not be much longer delayed. This nation does not desire to be unreasonable or impatient, but it can not and will not permit any body of men permanently to obstruct one of the great world highways of traffic; and refusal to permit the building of the canal amounts to such obstruction. Of course, to insist upon unreasonable terms is equivalent to a refusal. . . .

"It seems evident that in a matter such as this we should finally decide which is the best route, and if the advantages of this route over any other possible route are sufficiently marked, we should then give notice that we can no longer submit to trifling or insincere dealing on the part of those whom the accident of position has placed in temporary control of the ground through which the route must pass; that if they will come to agreement with us in straightforward fashion we shall in return act not only with justice but with generosity; and that if they fail to come to such agreement with us, we must forthwith take the matter into our own hands."

These are "astounding words," declares the New York Evening Post, and "they will revive the acute fears that many had when President McKinley was assassinated, lest a firebrand type of man succeed to the Presidency." It continues:

"This is obviously to throw law, treaties, and decency to the winds. Under such a robber contention, we should be entitled to seize any land on earth which we happened to want, and which we thought ourselves possessed of sufficient brute force to take. It is a declaration of stark and lawless absolutism, tempered only by land-hunger, which we have lived to see made by an American President."

It is "unprecedented in international law," and "indefensible in morals," declares the New York Times; and the Springfield Republican fears for the effect upon our national character. The Louisville Courier-Journal calls it "cowboy diplomacy."

Throughout the whole of the isthmian entanglement, and, indeed, throughout the whole of his administration, Mr. Roosevelt has exhibited jingoistic tendencies which might be more readily pardoned in one of his hasty temperament were it not for the position to which he has been elevated by a lamentable accident. He has been President for two years now, and in view of his record it is a most disquieting reflection to consider the probability of his election for four years more. His curious ideas of the Presidential prerogatives; his penchant for entangling foreign alliances; his failure to appreciate the sentiment of the people in regard to his color fallacies; the manner in which he lets impulse instead of reason guide him in state matters of the weightiest import—all these things which spring from his unfortunate temperament render him an unsafe pilot for the national vessel. He seems "drunk with sight of power"; caught with the Old World fallacy that might means right; and ready upon the merest pretext to plunge the country into war. He is dangerous.—Atlanta Journal.

A man who should defend himself against a charge of larceny by proving that he had intended burglary instead would be in much the same position as the President who is accused of conniving at the Panama revolt for the sake of negotiating a canal treaty, and who replies that he was prepared to cut the canal across the soil of another nation without any consent. If this be not enough to startle Americans, who have detested the casuistry of European diplomacy, and who have been proud of a country that scrupulously kept faith, let them reflect upon the further fact that the President is as superior to the laws of the United States as he is to the sovereignty of Colombia and the treaty obligation of the United States to respect the rights of that republic in the Isthmus of Panama. The Spooner act provided that if the President should fail to obtain a canal treaty with Colombia he should negotiate one with Nicaragua. The President does nothing of the sort. Failing to get a canal treaty with Colombia, he proposes to cut a canal at Panama against the protest of the sovereign of the country, whose rights in the isthmus we are pledged to sustain, and have on former occasions sustained.

Nothing but documentary evidence would convince the country of anything so extraordinary, but the reply to the charge that the administration had procured the revolution which it manifested indecent haste in recognizing is the production of what the President had written regarding the canal as a part of his annual message. It may prove that he did not know of the impending revolution, but it also proves that he is an entirely different man from any previous President of the United States, and that he has no respect for either treaties or laws that stand in his way.—Philadelphia Record.

So we find the United States in the disgraceful position of having done with reference to Panama in 1903 what we successfully protested against with reference to South Carolina in 1861; of having violated a treaty in doing so; and of excusing their turpitude by placing upon that treaty an interpretation at variance with all our previous interpretations of it. Nor is that the worst. By executing with Panama, so hurriedly that the new nation was obliged to borrow a seal from our Secretary of State in default of one of her own, a treaty which is stuffed with present plunder and future benevolent assimilation, we have given the whole affair an aroma of interestedness which it is not easy to distinguish from a stench.—The Public (Chicago).

Bird Shot.

Do not the people of Germany to-day get more for their outlay for government than do the people of the United States? I think they do. When we consider that a "half-witted Emperor" is head of affairs, this comparison all the more bears the sting of disgrace. The railroads, telegraphs and telephones of Germany, publicly owned, furnish a better service, together with a parcels post, are managed with less cost to the people than in this country, and with no such damnable corruption and jobbery as obtain here.

Free press in the United States—I say it is a falsehood—there is no such thing! And since the deporting of John Turner free speech in America is just as brazen a falsehood. Some day an indifferent public will realize the true situation. Some day we will see the awful hypocrisy and baseness in those who prate so loudly of patriotism and at the same time are robbing the people of millions.

The article recently published in these columns on "The Coming Slavery of State Socialism," by Herbert Spencer, is considered by many as being the strongest argument ever made against Socialism. Mr. Spencer voices my sentiments in reference to the brand of Socialism he attacks. I am as much opposed to that kind of "State" Socialism as he or any one else can be. I have met a great many Socialists, and have heard nearly every Socialist speaker of any reputation, but I have never met any Socialist who advocates any such State Socialism as Herbert Spencer so successfully writes down.

For one, I am not worrying about any hard and fast Socialistic programme for the future. When the majority fully comprehend the philosophy of Scientific Socialism, then I feel quite sure that the honesty and common sense of the people will find a way to put that philosophy into practical working order. I say I am not worrying about this part of the coming change. If the Socialist philosophy is squarely based on fairness and justice and equity between man and man it ought to come, and it will come, somehow some day.

To me there is enough in this one phase of the Socialist philosophy to hold my firm adherence, viz.: The destroying of the incentive to do wrong, to exploit, to be unkind. No other reform ever proposed goes to the root of human action to any such extent. Even the Single Tax, which I consider next in importance to Socialism, makes no pretense of eliminating the incentive for one individual to take advantage of or to make a profit off another. Why would any sane person act unfairly or unjustly, or be unkind, if there was no profit or no advantage in doing so? You answer.

When the public operates all productive capital, then the incentive to make profit in any unfair way would at once cease—would be destroyed. So I have unbounded confidence that this greed-cursed earth could be changed into a veritable paradise if any system of industry can be inaugurated under which the incentive to do wrong would be destroyed. Then it would be easier to do right than wrong—it would be easier to earn than to steal a living.

Human nature need not be changed—only destroy the incentive to do wrong, and a new and better world is thus created. No reform with narrower scope is worth the effort of our lives. All other reforms but Socialism deal merely with effects instead of causes. They do not seek to eradicate the causes of wrong doing. I look out over an unhappy world. Poverty, misery and wretchedness are the rule. Everywhere evil abounds. I look again and it is easy to discover that nearly all this misery and suffering are preventable. Back of every unjust act is a profit incentive. Men do wrong in the hope of reaping some advantage thereby, and for no other reason. No sane person would adulterate, cheat, lie, steal or deceive if he knew he would reap no advantage by doing so. No sane woman would be a prostitute if the opportunities for a better and happier life were not economically closed against her. And so throughout the realm of human action every preventable evil to-day is caused by the greed for profit, for advantage. The Socialist urges a remedy that is basic and fundamental. He alone realizes that so long as the incentive to do wrong remains, prisons and jails and armies will multiply. The Socialist can demonstrate that there is but one way of destroying the incentive to do wrong, and that is by giving the public control of all productive capital. Herbert Spencer nor no other human being has brain enough to successfully refute this position. This is the heart and soul of the Socialist philosophy, and so certain am I that it is unassailable from every standpoint of reason and logic that I would gladly forfeit my life upon the issue.

HENRY E. ALLEN.

Benton Harbor, Mich.

Perpetuity and Happiness of Humanity.

How is humanity perpetuated except by obeying the laws of health, of which the law of sex is a most important part? If the sex force is wasted in riotous living, and other laws of health are disobeyed, we die. If the sex force is conserved for its two legitimate uses, propagation and regeneration, and all other laws of health observed, in time humanity will, some believe, reach perfection, happiness and eternal life on earth and in the body.

The primary use of sex is for the renewal of the already created bodies and minds of the participants; hence desire for sex communion when offspring is not the object. Hitherto this part of our nature has in the main been used much as some use the desire for food. The desire for food merely because it tastes good is mistaken for hunger. Hunger and appetite are two distinct elements. Appetite can and should be controlled to the right use of food, and when so controlled, and proper food is used, helps sustain life; but if we eat irregularly or immoderately or of improper food we have bodily ailments. Likewise, if the sex force is used immoderately or improperly we have not only bodily ailments, but mental as well. The propagative force should be used only when propagation is the object, and enlightened humanity will only so use it. The regenerative act, in which there is no waste of vitality, builds up the physical and mental man and woman and should be used in contradistinction to the generative.

Were teachers of sexology unmolested, in time we would have a better and happier humanity and heaven would be here on earth.

SARA CHRIST CAMPBELL.

An Improvement.

Miss Quickstep—I hear you are as good as married, Mr. Lansing.

Lansing (cheerfully)—Better. I am still single.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 West 143d street, New York.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire let us hear from you if you want to continue to receive Lucifer.

We have at last been informed what our rights are in regard to advertising. This information, while not official, comes to us from one who is in a position to know. He tells us that the publisher of a paper has a right to devote 50 per cent of his advertising space to his own advertising. Therefore it will be necessary for us to confine our own advertising to a space not exceeding that occupied by the advertising which we do for others. Since we are informed that the amount of our advertising would cause us to be deprived of the second-class privilege, we have solicited advertising from others. We hope our friends will patronize our advertisers, and show them that though we claim only a small circulation, advertising space in Lucifer is worth the price. We will have more new advertising in next week, which, though promised, we have not received in time for this issue.

A subscriber suggests that we should ask all our subscribers to write a postal card, stating that they take the paper for the reading matter, and not specially for the advertisements. This would be appreciated by us. If we are allowed to retain the second-class privilege this time, the same question regarding authenticity of subscriptions is likely to come up at any time, and we would need the letters from subscribers to prove the number we claim. In sending in subscriptions or statements in regard to subscription, it is best to write on a separate sheet from anything of a personal nature or for publication. When we were required to offer letters in evidence, a short time ago, there were quite a number that I felt sure the writers would not want used in that way, and others had been used for copy for the printers. I am being more careful now in keeping them, and I hope our friends will bear the above suggestion in mind when writing.

L. H.

Again nothing has been received from the editor for publication in Lucifer. He is holding weekly meetings in San Francisco, and has perhaps been too busy to write. The third and last of the series will be held Sunday evening, Dec. 6, at Memorial Hall, Odd Fellows' Building. He will be glad to see all the friends of Lucifer in San Francisco. Address M. Harman, care of C. V. Cook, 217 Parrott Building, San Francisco, Cal.

A friendly photographer in San Francisco has taken photographs of M. Harman to be sold for the benefit of Lucifer. The price is 25 cents, and they may be ordered through this office.

Methodist Logic.

Four young men, Van Dine, Niedemeier, Marx and Roeski, who, it is asserted, have confessed to the killing and wounding of a number of men and to various robberies in the past five months, were captured in a sensational manner by a few farmers in Indiana last Saturday while the boys were being pursued by a large force of Chicago police and detectives. A Methodist preacher visited the boys in their cells, "under direction of the Chicago Sunday American," as he says, and reports his interview in that paper. I quote the following from his interview with Van Dine:

"'I am a Methodist minister,' I said. 'I suppose you have never had much use for preachers.'

"At once he brightened up and replied, 'I used to attend the Sheffield Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church Sabbath school.' He referred with favor to those days, and suggested that he would have been better off had he continued in that direction. Van Dine declared to me that he had no fear for the future. To my horror he said, 'I have asked God to forgive me and expect to go to heaven.' While he was positive in this assertion, still I attributed it to mere bravado."

What right had this preacher to attribute to bravado the acceptance by this boy of the teachings of his church, the church which teaches that belief and repentance are not only essential but sufficient for salvation?

Of his interview with another of the boys, Peter Niedemeier, the reverend interviewer says:

"He said to me that all there was to life was simply that it had a beginning and an end. Everything had to have an end. And I am ready for the end.'

"If there is anything in the theory of fatalism, which I believe is pure nonsense, I would declare this young man to be a fatalist. With all due respect to Calvinistic theology, I can see in this youth's talk some evidences of the religious predestination beliefs of his family history somewhere in the past."

But though the Methodist evangelist could see evidences of Calvinism in this boy, he could not give the one who belonged to his own church the benefit of the promises of that church.

L. H.

Latest in the Turner Case.

Last week two meetings of the John Turner Defense Committee were held in the parlors of the treasurer, Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., 120 Lexington avenue, New York City. Substantial progress was reported by those members who are attending to the important details. A great mass meeting is to be held in Cooper Union on Thursday evening, Dec. 3.

These additions have been made to the Defense Committee: Alexander Jonas, Herman Schlueter of the Volks Zeitung; Algernon Lee and Peter Burrows of The Worker; Charles B. Spahr of The Outlook.

Encouraging reports come from Chicago and other places; here and there men and women are wakening to the necessity for earnest work if there is to be preserved a trace of the liberties so hardly won in the past. Opportunity for thought, for speech, for movement, is opportunity for growth, for expansion of life, for ripening of judgment, for enjoyment of the fruits of labor and the fruits of culture. The defense of John Turner is only an incident; the judicial nullification of the infamous act which says that belief or disbelief is a crime is the essential. If not judicial nullification, then legislative repeal. Precedent to the act of March 3, 1903, were other acts which led to and made it possible. Just thirty years after the enactment of the Comstock postal statute came this statute under which John Turner is held for deportation. The three decades that lie between the two have been crowded full with like enactments, each, if possible, worse than its predecessors. Unless the Juggernaut of wrong is halted now, other and worse edicts are to come. They who have sown the wind are beginning to reap the whirlwind.

It takes a great deal of money to hire halls, to pay for advertising, to retain effective legal talent, to reach those who must be reached before we may turn back toward the light. What have you done? What will you do? The treasurer of the Defense Committee is Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., 120 Lexington avenue, New York City. The secretary is A. C. Pleydell, 175 Broadway, New York City.

Edwin C. Walker,
244 West One Hundred and Forty-third Street, New York.

Public opinion is the judgment of the incapable many opposed to the discerning few.—The Philistine.

The Egyptian Discovery.

The recovery of Dr. Grenfell in Egypt of papyri comprising a collection of the sayings of Jesus is a matter of both archæological and religious importance, though the latter phase is subject to an exaggeration which may not be warranted. While the authenticity of the present discovery seems beyond question, for the work has been done under the most reliable investigators—that is, there can be apparently no question that the papyri come from the second century after Christ—it is unfortunately true that the work of establishing the authenticity of any new document of that period to the degree of accepting it as Biblical, is an impossibility. Literary forgery was common in the period immediately following Christ. His followers increased in numbers for a quarter of a century before having any literature. Then Paul wrote his epistles to strengthen his adherents against the assaults of others. The most violent altercations occurred; epistles and gospels and revelations were manufactured and circulated by different parties, each in its own support, and in many instances the names of the apostles or other persons high in Christian repute were affixed to give greater authority. Dionysius of Corinth (170 A. D.) complained that his writings were falsified, but consoled himself that the same thing was done with the "Scriptures of the Lord." Paul found it necessary to warn his Thessalonian followers to accept no letters as authentic to which his signature was not attached.

Apparently the papyri found at El-Hibeh are the sayings of Jesus to St. Thomas, but the authenticity of their authorship, because of the conditions existing at the time they were placed in the necropolis, must prevent their consideration as Biblical. The anonymity of their authorship counts as nothing against them, for most of the books of the Bible are anonymous. No one knows who wrote them and no one knows when they were written. There are books in the Bible of to-day that were rejected by some of the earlier authorities of the sects; there are books rejected in the Bible of to-day that were accepted by them. What is canonical (that is, has a right to a place in the Bible), and what is not, has been the subject of many arguments and occasioned any number of councils. The Bible as we have it to-day is scarce 300 years old. The Roman Catholic Church in the Council of Trent (1546), and the Greek Church in the Council of Constantinople, decided once for all what the list of books forming the Bible should be for their adherents, and the Westminster Assembly (1647) adopted the list which has since been accepted by the Presbyterians of England, Ireland and America, the Congregationalists of both countries, and, in short, by the Protestant evangelical and orthodox churches with which we come in daily contact in the United States. This latter list is the same as the Catholic list, except that it rejects the Old Testament apocrypha. The latter was for a long time printed in an appendix, but in 1827 the British and Foreign Bible Society decided it would no longer circulate these books. The American Bible Society followed its example, and since that time the appendix has been omitted.

It is interesting to compare the canonical lists with the three great manuscripts of the Greek Bible now extant—the Sinaitic, the Vatican and the Alexandrine. The Sinaitic was found by Tischendorf in the Convent of St. Catherine, Mount Sinai, in 1859, and is the oldest of the New Testament codices in existence, dating back to the fourth century. It has the four Gospels, the fourteen Epistles of Paul, Acts, the seven Catholic Epistles, Revelation, the Epistle of Barnabas, and a part of the Shepherd of Hermas, the last two of which are not in the Bible now.

The Vatican manuscript, in the Vatican library at Rome, belongs to the middle of the fourth century. It ends by mutilation at Hebrews ix., 14. Up to that point it agrees substantially with the Alexandrine manuscript. What other books it may have contained one cannot say.

The Alexandrine manuscript belongs to the fifth century, and was probably written in Egypt. It includes, in the Old Testament, Tobet, Judith, Esdras, First Maccabees, Second Maccabees, Third Maccabees, Fourth Maccabees, the Wisdom of Solomon, and the Wisdom of Jesus, and, in the New Testament, the two Epistles of Clement, none of which are now in our Bible.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Tolstoy's pamphlet, "Thou Shalt Not Kill," has been suppressed, the Russian government having ordered the plates destroyed and unsold copies burned.

Labor in New Zealand.

"An ideal laboratory," is what a canny Scot has called New Zealand, and this small part of the British Empire has truly proven the testing ground of many of the sociological experiments that are agitated during the present time. It is this fact which makes the report of Victor S. Clark on "Labor Conditions in New Zealand" in the November bulletin of the Bureau of Labor of unusual interest. Comprising a population of 814,000 white persons, of a homogeneous race (less than 2 per cent being from countries other than in which the English language is the native tongue), it presents a natural adaptability for experiments of a sociological character, for they can neither be damaged by being spread over too great an area or by the difference in racial instincts which might mark any other new country.

Dr. Clark seems to have been a dispassionate student of the conditions in New Zealand, and not one who went there with the purpose of proving a theory and embodying in his report the successful results. In this he will probably not meet with favor from the small army of American experimenters, who frequently find that distance lends enchantment to the view, and point to New Zealand whenever any question as to practicability arises. Almost at the very outset Dr. Clark makes very plain the difficulties which confront an investigator who would compare New Zealand conditions with American, saying:

"To sum up the relative labor conditions of New Zealand and the United States—and the natural conditions back of them are so different as to make the comparison seem almost absurd—the former country is marked by uniformity, the latter by diversity; the first is socialistic, the second individualistic in its tendencies and sympathies; while the working classes of both are looking ultimately toward economic betterment, those of the colony seek this primarily through legislation and social reform, those of the Union through individual and collective self-help and the improvement of industrial processes. The working class of the States begins with the water-boy and ends with the general manager, while in New Zealand it seldom rises above the foreman. Primary education is free in both countries, but educational facilities are broader in the States. The New Zealand workman does not, like the American, have absolutely free, secondary, and higher education in state high schools and universities, or free technical education in manual training schools placed within the reach of his children. Neither does the public provide his children with free text-books, as do many American towns of equal size with his largest cities. The government attempts more for the betterment of the workman inside his class in New Zealand; but it does not provide nearly the same facilities for rising out of his class that are provided by public means in our own country. The longer one studies economic and social conditions among the two peoples, the more impressed he becomes with the difference in the fundamental ideals and sympathies that lie behind their institutions. And the recognition and voluntary acceptance of status by all classes of the people seems to be the underlying point from which the social ideals of New Zealand begin to diverge from our own."

Dealing with the arbitration act, Dr. Clark says that "it is commonly admitted that it has met the purposes for which it was designed, and, where there is a general agreement, that its influence has been beneficial. While it is neither candid nor literally true to call New Zealand a land without strikes, no serious labor disturbances have arisen since the arbitration law went into effect. But this must be qualified for an American by the consideration that the relations of employer and employe in New Zealand were nominally harmonious prior to the act; that the industries in the colony are on a small scale; that the conditions of a great manufacturing or commercial center or of an extensive mining region are nowhere to be found." The employing class is satisfied to raise wages if it can raise the price of the manufactured material in proportion, and since the act went into effect the price of living has increased 20 to 40 per cent. The ultimate question evidently will be decided by the attitude of the farming classes, who are naturally hostile to the laboring element, claiming that the latter, being migratory, adopt legislation that burdens the land, and that in time of depression will move to other colonies, leaving them burdened with debt.

Human Providence.

Those who look wisely into the future of society will feel that the conception of man becoming without fear or boast the arbiter, within certain limits, of his own destiny, has in it something far more satisfying that the old belief in Providence, which implied our remaining passive. Social union will be strengthened by the conception, because every one will see that union forms our principal resource against the miseries of human life.—Auguste Comte.

VARIOUS VOICES.

We are always glad to receive calls from friends visiting the city. Take the Lake street elevated, stop at Ashland avenue, walk one block east, then one block north. Or take Fulton street electric car west and stop at St. John's place, alighting in front of our house. The Lake street electric and Paulina street cars also pass within a block of our residence.

Christina Christensen, Bee, Wash.: I don't like to do without your little paper, so inclose $1 to renew my subscription. There is much common sense in it—and common sense is rare.

Lizzie M. Holmes, La Veta, Colo.: I inclose renewal of my subscription and assure you I am a subscriber and want to always be. Lucifer is like a group of old friends coming to visit me once a week.

R. D., Tacoma, Wash.: My subscription to Lucifer has expired. I am in a hospital and unable to renew at present, but I wish very much to have the paper, and if you will continue me on your list I will pay you as soon as possible.

W. W. W., Minneapolis, Minn.: To-day I accidentally ran across an old copy (April, 1900) of Lucifer, and in reading it through I find that it voices my views and opinions so perfectly that I would like to become a regular subscriber if you are still publishing the paper.

Flora W. Fox, Rochester, Minn.: After some delay I now inclose $1 on subscription. I miss Lucifer more than any other paper. Was surprised to see notice of H. L. Green and wife being asphyxiated. Green was often inconsistent and narrow, but his magazine did good to a certain class of readers who could not stand stronger food.

C. M. Moe, Spokane, Wash.: The year has rolled around and the time to remember Lucifer again. Many thanks to its many able writers for their thought-awakening articles. When all have respect for the individual right to individual ideas, we can exchange thoughts and progress toward the desired goal. Inclosed find $1 for Lucifer.

Walter Breen, Omaha, Neb.: I regret to see in your paper, which I regard as one of the most valuable scientific journals published in the United States, that there is an effort being made to deny you the mails at second-class rates. If it is necessary to make an affidavit to the fact that I have always paid for my subscription and that I have never received same on credit I will be glad to do so. I feel sure that, as your journal circulates among thinking people only, all your subscribers will be only willing to do the same.

Bolton Hall: I have about as little sympathy for anti-Comstockism as I have for Comstockism. In the first place, anti-Comstockism is what Comstock thrives upon; and in the second, Comstock is not a disease, but a symptom. If we grant that what most persons consider vice can be and ought to be suppressed by police methods, then Comstock is all right. In any case, like most clergymen, he finds his account in doing what he thinks is right. The silversmiths who cried, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!" were doubtless sincere.

E. Z. Ernst, Olathe, Kan.: I greatly appreciate your noble fight for the oppressed and enslaved human family. I know something of the sacrifices it takes to work along lines which are new to the common people. Lucifer covers more ground along reform lines than any other journal, and is the most liberal paper I have ever read. Inclosed find $1 to continue my paper, and I hope that many thousands more will do likewise without delay.—The Labor Exchange work is not dead, but is quietly working out the industrial problem and when that part of the work is done sex slavery will soon be overcome. It is most astonishing how the masses of the superstitious folk will hang to and hug their old fallacies, even years after they have been taught the truth. More than half the people would be ready to throw off the yokes of orthodox dogmas if all the people would act at once and Mrs. Grundy were handicapped. The fact is that woman's oppression through the churches and disgraceful treatment they get under the law and the marriage contract is principally the result of their own making. The average man is much more liberal than most women. I believe the time is at hand when each individual must begin to think and act more independently and fight the battle of truth and justice boldly, so that more light may dawn on those who are still in the shade.

F. L. Avery, Mass.: I first saw Lucifer some years ago in Liberty Colony, in Tennessee, where Comrade J. Allen Evans was its stanch friend. Its work is grand, and I hope it may go on. I am no pessimist, but when such papers as Freedom, with all the means and social support that Helen Wilmans could command, are wiped out of existence, and a score or more of others also, any reform paper may well expect to hear the call soon. Blessed if I see in what it pays to be a radical; to toil, save, and deny one's self of comforts, to say nothing of the little things that go to make life a pleasure, all for the sake of "the other fellow," who is too big a fool to think for himself or to use liberty if he had it. See the voters march to the polls and give a 300,000 majority to the G. O. P., as in the last election in Pennsylvania, where labor is as hardly crushed under the heel of capitalism as in any state, and ask if it pays to help such fools till they ask it, till they will to think and to act? Of course, I know that reformers are born to be such, and in a sense, as they see their ideas spread abroad and take root, they are paid; and when a kindred spirit is met the joy of such comradeship goes far toward making all accounts equal. I sincerely hope that all will go well with Lucifer and that its good editor will live long to continue its work, and that his health may be restored and his heart refreshed by his trip among friends.

We appreciate the good wishes of our friend, but do not share his apprehensions as to the fate of Lucifer. It has lived through worse storms, and we hope and believe that it will survive this. It is not altogether for the benefit of "the other fellow" that we work—we work to make the world a more agreeable place to live for ourselves, our loved ones, and those who are to come. Those Pennsylvania voters probably believed they were acting for the best when they voted for the Republican party. It is for those who believe they have something better, to demonstrate its superiority.—L. H.]

Social Notices.

A ball for the benefit of Free Society will be given at Arrus Hall, Milwaukee avenue and Huron street, Saturday evening, Dec. 5. Admission, 25 cents.

W. F. Barnard will deliver a course of lectures, under the auspices of the Sociological League, at Jefferson Hall, 79 Adams street, Sunday evenings at 8 o'clock. Admission, 10 cents.

"WHO IS THE ENEMY?"

Hugh O. Pentecost writes thus to Edwin C. Walker about the latter's new work, "Who Is the Enemy; Anthony Comstock or You?" "Your pamphlet is a strong discussion of the question at issue that one could give to a conservative friend with some hope that he might read it through."

Dr. R. W. Shufeldt, biologist, author of several scientific works and of more than seven hundred articles on medicine, travel, science, sexual problems and other subjects, writes to E. C. Walker: "I thank you very much indeed for the copy you sent me of your valuable pamphlet, 'Who Is the Enemy—Anthony Comstock or You?' I have read it from cover to cover with the utmost satisfaction and unqualified approval. It is one of the best and strongest things you have put out, and I am with you solid in both the letter and spirit of it. I prize the copy most highly." Ask for table of contents and specimen pages of "Who Is the Enemy?" or send 20 cents to this office for the pamphlet.

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,
THE LIBERAL MAIL-ORDER JEWELER.
Now permanent at No. 110 N. Kensington Ave., La Grange. Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 20 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's Line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Those in the Crucible," free.

J. H. GREER, M. D.,
52 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.
Office Hours—9 a. m. to 6 p. m.; Wednesdays and Saturdays, 9 a. m. to 8 p. m.; Sundays, 9 a. m. to 12 m.
Telephone, Randolph 42.

DR. OGILVIE A. RICE,
DENTIST.
3506 MILWAUKEE AVE., COR. WESTERN, CHICAGO.
Telephone West 141.

PHILIP G. PEABODY,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
12 COURT SQUARE, ROOM 61.
BOSTON, MASS.

Equal Opportunities: A Fable.

Half a mile down the road was placed a pile of boxes, each box containing the economic life of one man for a year. At the starting point were five men in readiness for the race.

The first was mentally and physically excellent.

The second was perfect physically, but deficient mentally.

The third was intellectually brilliant, but weak in body.

The fourth was below par in both mind and body.

The fifth had a good mind and body, but was intensely sympathetic.

All started at the same place and time. All had the same distance to go. All were to use the same track, reach the same goal and receive the same reward—food, clothing and shelter for a year. What greater equality of opportunity could be conceived of?

The race occurred. The third and fourth lagged behind. The fifth stayed back to help them along. The second ran on all fours because he thought he could go faster that way. The first reached the goal ahead of the rest, took all the boxes and possessed himself of the economic lives of the others.

When the four suggested that it would have been more in accordance with justice to have a handicap race, the first replied: "The trouble with you is that you have failed to carefully differentiate between equal division and access upon a basis of equality upon complying with like conditions." Then the four cursed the first for his great discovery.—A. E. W., in Lucifer No. 984.

But when they thought a little one of them said: "You have possessed yourself of that by which we must live and which was the common heritage of us all. You are fewest though you are first, and we do not recognize that title. You will please hand over to our tax department the full annual value of the opportunity of which you have deprived us."

Then the first cursed the four for their little discovery.

HOLTON HALL.

HILDA'S HOME.
A STORY OF WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION.
BY ROSA GRAUL.
With Mercutley, Rosa Graul would say: "The cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty." Hence she has no fears that under Freedom the Home and the Family would cease to exist, or that woman would be less loving and lovable, or that man would be less manly and honorable. On the contrary, she maintains that only in the soil and atmosphere of freedom is it possible for true womanhood and manhood to live and flourish.
428 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.
M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY.
BY EDWARD CARPENTER.
One of the best short works on the subject. A charming little gift book.
"Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it."
DAINTILY PRINTED. PREPAID, 25c.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES.
BY E. C. WALKER.
Contents—Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What Is She? What Will She Be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Licel, Flirt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections Upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love and Life." Price 25c.
M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; OR THE PRICE OF VIRTUE.
By Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Witehood, by Lucinda B. Chandler; Life's Gifts, by Olive Schreiner, and Marriage—What It Was and Is, and Will the Coming Woman Marry? Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE.
By John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention, by Marietta Bominberger, of North Heights, by A. Warren, and The Sexes and Love In Freedom, by Oscar Rotter. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN.
By Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yclept Society, by Moses Hull; Virgin Soil, by George Everton, and Normal Sexual Action, by Ernest Winne. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. By M. Harman. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Moral. By A. F. Tindall. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM, by E. C. Walker. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

KAREZZA.
SCIENCE OF MARRIAGE.
A godsend to every wife—a joy to every husband.
This work brings peace into homes disrupted by inharmony in the sexual relation. Dr. A. B. Stockham advises a practice which leads to individual liberty and to deeper love between husband and wife.
Dr. F. G. Welch: "After a personal trial of its teachings, I want to thank you for a great service to humanity."
Mrs. George E. Raushaw: "Out of a beautiful and ennobling experience, I can say, I KNOW."
Gives a high ideal of the marital relation and teaches control of the Procreating Power.
J. A. Stueller, M. D.: "I have received more actual benefit from the practice of KAREZZA teachings than from all other books on Sexual Science."
A. B. Franklin, M. D.: "KAREZZA does more than any other single thing to make marriage a perpetual courtship."
LEVANT CLOTH, POSTPAID, $1.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM.
THE RELATIONSHIP OF EACH TO HUMAN LIBERTY.
BY E. C. WALKER.
The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organization and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. Price 5c.
M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

MEN, WOMEN, AND CHANCE.
BY WILLIAM PLATT.
Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Moe and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. Price 75c.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD.
AN OUTLINE OF PRACTICAL CO-OPERATIVE INDIVIDUALISM.
BY HENRY OLERICH.
Regarded by many persons as a more interesting and consistent economic reform novel than Bellamy's "Looking Backward."
Nearly 450 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, $1. Bound in red silk with gold title.
M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

CREATIVE LIFE.
A BOOK FOR YOUNG GIRLS.
BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.
A timely and important message not found in text books. Every girl seeks and should have this true, plain and practical knowledge. One writes: "Thank you, thank you, dear Doctor, for the plain but beautiful thoughts. Womanhood, motherhood and life have new meanings. You ennoble your theme." Prepaid, 25c.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.
BY JOHN R. KELSO.
Contents—Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff or Protection; War Powers; Amendments; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.
319 pages. Cloth binding somewhat damaged, and reduced from $1.50 to 50c.
M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY, AND THE STATE.
BY FREDERICK ENGELS.
Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans.
217 pages; bound in cloth. Price 5c.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

JUST OUT.
PARENTHOOD.
By Alice B. Stockham, M. D., author of "Tokology" and "Karezza." Highest ideals for best offspring. Vital and important subjects discussed. Inclosure of new philosophy of the Creative Energy. G. G. Hunt says: "Many sending new philosophy of the Creative Energy. G. G. Hunt says: "Many sending terms of 'PARENTHOOD should be graven in gold and handed down to posterity." Prepaid, 25c.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

WOMAN AND HER RELATION TO THE CHURCH, OR CANON LAW FOR WOMEN.
BY HARRIET M. CLOSZ.
A succinct statement of the position to which women were doomed by the Church Fathers and authorities. Every woman should possess a copy. Price, 10c.
M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

THE NEW LIFE.
Ida M. Brooks, editor. A monthly periodical devoted to a finer and nobler realization of life; 75 cents a year, 3 months for 25 cents; sample copy free. If you are tired of the old life, with its pain, heartache and emptiness, read The New Life, and you will come into and live the new life, which is joy, peace and bountiful supply of all good and desirable things. Address THE NEW LIFE PUB. CO., Box 198, Ovodoo, Idaho.

IBOLA: OR, THE DISINHERITED.
A drama in six acts. By Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1; postage 7c.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

A TALE OF THE STRASBURG GEESE.
By E. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strasburg Geese, by C. W. Coolidge; A Traveler's Tale, by E. B. Kerr; The Cat's Story, by Emile Zola. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW.

A PRIMER OF SEXUAL RATIONALISM.

BY E. C. WALKER.

"Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes."

Paper covers; 62 large pages. Price 10c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD OWN

TOKOLOGY.

A COMPLETE HEALTH GUIDE.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

Teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions.

Treats of diseases of women and children; contains practical teachings on Change of Life, Limiting Offspring, etc.

Lizzie N. Armstrong writes: "If I knew I were to be the mother of inestimable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of Tokology."

Dr. C. E. Wilde: "Tokology is doing more for women than all other books put together."

CLOTH, PREPAID, $2.25; LEATHER, $2.75.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

VICE; ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES.

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

Contents—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only"; Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Prosecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spotting of the Heathen"; What Are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women. With Appendix: The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 15c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

A treatise on Sexual Science and Marriage, rich in thought and strong in expression. Emphatically a book for the thinker.

Carpenter holds that woman's freedom is based upon economics; she must be independent financially that she may not be forced to sell herself in or out of marriage. He also makes a strong plea for a motherhood of freedom and thoughtful preparation.

AMERICAN EDITION, CLOTH, PREPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

TRUE MANHOOD.

AN INVALUABLE GUIDE TO HEALTH, STRENGTH AND PURITY.

BY E. B. SHEPHERD.

WHAT EVERY FATHER WANTS HIS BOY TO KNOW.

The Christian Endeavor World: "Its suggestions are wise and ennobling." Dr. Stockham, author of Tokology, says: "TRUE MANHOOD explains the transition from boyhood to manhood, giving knowledge of priceless value."

Levant cloth. 328 pages. Prepaid $1. STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

A NOVEL BY GEORGE N. MILLER.

FORTIETH THOUSAND.

"The Strike of a Sex" is a fascinating novel bearing upon the sexual relations. It is a bold protest against the customary life of most married people, and at the same time a prophecy of happier conditions between man and wife. Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

SONGS OF A CHILD,
AND OTHER POEMS.

By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. Price $1.50; postage 12c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

"PERSONAL EXPERIENCES OF TWO AMERICAN ANTI-VIVISECTIONISTS IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES."

BY PHILIP G. PEABODY.

With an Appendix by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c. Apply to PHILIP G. PEABODY, 15 Court Square, Boston, Mass.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY.

By Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Inexistence of Transition, by E. C. Walker; Motherhood in Freedom, by Moses Harman; The Greatest Sin (an allegory), by E. B. Kerr, and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom, by Oscar Rother. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE CURSE OF MATERNITY.

From the French of Henry Fevre. Together with How to Escape the Curse, by Jonathan Mayo Crane; Woman's "Duty" to Bear Children, by E. C. Walker; True and False Morality, by C. L. James; and Love's Law, by William Francis Barnard. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN.

By E. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.; The New Martyrdom, by Lillian Harman, and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of Freethought and Free Love. By Orford Northcote. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE COMING WOMAN, by Lillie D. White. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

998.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

THE SALE OF AN APPETITE.

A STORY BY PAUL LAFARGUE.

Emile Destouches stood outside the finest restaurant in Paris, shivering with cold and ready to die of hunger. A portly capitalist came out, invited him inside, gave him the best dinner money would buy, and then proposed a contract, by which Destouches was to digest the capitalist's food for five years, in return for a salary of two thousand francs a month, payable in advance. The young man gladly accepted, but in a short time repented of his bargain. To understand why, you must read the book. It is one of the cleverest satires on the present capitalist system ever written.

It is translated from the French by Charles H. Kerr, and is beautifully illustrated with engravings from original wash drawings by Dorothy D. Deene. It is printed on the finest of paper and daintily bound in cloth, with unique cover design, making a charming holiday gift.

Price, including postage to any address, fifty cents.

CHARLES H. KERR & COMPANY,

PUBLISHERS,

56 FIFTH AVENUE, CHICAGO.

Please mention Lucifer when ordering.

THE MAJESTY OF SEX.

This is the very latest WORD on the subject. This book will satisfy in a vital way the cry of the hungry soul. If you follow its teachings your body will become transformed and transmuted. You will be happy and healthy. You will prosper and be contented. It does not deal in theory alone, but goes straight to the heart of the subject. It teaches the ART of LIVING. Most of us know how to half-way live, but to live WELL and PROSPER is an ART. Learn how by sending $2.00 for the book. Circulars free. Address NANCY M'KAY GORDON, 55 E. 30th St., Chicago, Ill.

"ETERNAL SUNSHINE."

THE HIGHLAND HOTEL, ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO.

One block north of Santa Fe Station. All modern improvements. A veritable Sanitarium. Unsurpassed in purity of Air and Water, and in Natural Scenery. Above the dust and turmoil of the city's streets. Prices moderate and reasonable. Write to S. B. SYMONDS, Proprietor.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 63, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Coldest photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We cannot sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourself why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 30c each, two for 50c. Address EDWIN C. WALKER, 244 W. 143d St., New York, N. Y.

FREE LITERATURE.

Your name will be sent to a great number of the finest papers publishing for sample copies if you send 10 cents to INTERMOUNTAIN SUB. AGENCY, Box 188, Ovaldo, Idaho.

WANTED—500 women to study medicine or midwifery. Next term begins January 1, 1904. College of Medicine and Surgery, 245 Ashland Blvd., Chicago, Ill. DR. FLORENCE DRESSLER, Secretary. (Dept. A.)

EAT SOME SAND!

About five years ago, Prof. William Windsor, LL. B., D., the world's most eminent Physiologist, discovered the Hand Cure for Indigestion and Constipation, and since that time more than a half million sufferers have tried it and found that it is Nature's Simple Remedy, used by restored health. It does not purge or gripe, but cleans the body out.

"The Natural Life" is the title of Prof. Windsor's monthly magazine in which the Hand Cure is fully described and discussed. It is devoted to the teaching of Natural Philosophy ("the wise way of living"), Natural Health and Character Culture, Righteousness and Freedom. One Dollar per year.

PROFESSOR WINDSOR will send full directions for the Hand Cure to anyone sending 25 cents for a three months' trial subscription to The Natural Life. Address THE WINDSOR PUBLISHING CO., Back Bay Postoffice, Boston, Mass.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VII., NO. 49. CHICAGO, ILL., DEC. 10, E. M. 303. [C. E. 1903.] WHOLE NO. 999

ART'S PRIZE.

There is a hard and painful loneliness
Which all must know who probe life's problems deep
Each for himself! On up the mountain steep
To that white rock, which seems the top, they press,
Till it is theirs almost;—
Then 'tis the prize is lost,—
Heights beyond heights they see.
Never the search is done,
Never the goal is won'
Yet is there victory!

Half-hearted, follow not! Stand thou away!
Truth is not found complete, in man's short day!
There is no victor's crown bright to the eyes,—
He who would win must count each step his prize.

—John Thornton.

The Mental Aspect of Sex.

"The intellectual transfiguration of sexual instinct is the result of a long course of intellectual evolution, and in the race or individual it, perhaps, more certainly than anything else indicates the hight of development which the man or the society has reached, and the width of the chasm which divides it from primitive conditions of life."—Olive Schreiner.

In any intelligent consideration of sex needs and sex manifestations the student finds the greatest difficulty in determining what is normal and what abnormal. Ages of dense ignorance, false reasoning and perverted emotions have resulted in such an unnatural, strained condition of all things sexual that it is difficult to go to the root of the matter, and one too often mistakes effects for causes, and thus fails to understand the subject.

Even radical thinkers and Freelovers are seldom able to take a purely normal view of the relations of men and women. Our lives are a constant protest against the old conceptions of sex, and the social conventions founded thereon, and for this very reason we are liable to go to extremes and to depart from a purely rational attitude. In our efforts to counteract the influence of sex superstitions we give special prominence to the sexual functions, and sex assumes undue proportions in our thought. From its subordinate position as a part of life, it becomes the all of life, and we lose the true valuation which alone gives a well-rounded character and a wholesomely happy life.

In seeking to escape from the arbitrary and artificial conditions of to-day, many make the mistake of going back to the animals to determine what is normal and what abnormal. While it is true that no study of human life is well founded which does not begin with the life of the lower orders, at the same time no such study can be complete if it ends there. Man is not merely a higher animal. As the animal is distinct from the plant, so is the human life distinct from the animal. In either case the difference is a matter of degree of development, and it is hardly more exact to regard man as merely a higher animal than it would be to regard the animal as a higher plant.

In studying human conditions, then, we must add to our investigation of physiological functions an analysis of mental activities. Great as is the common ignorance of sexual physiology and hygiene, it is surpassed by the densest of ignorance concerning the mental manifestations of the sex nature.

To the great majority sex is a distinction of physical structure merely, and sex interchange an act of the sexual organs prompted by the functional demands and activities of the body. This great majority have but a narrow conception of the possibilities of sex interchange. An unknown world lies just beyond their vision—a world of growth, of inspiration, of delight—but they deny its existence. Yet it is into this new world, this human world of intelligence, that rational knowledge and freedom of experience are leading us as we emerge from the animal world of instinct.

In speaking for the mental aspect of sexual interchange I would not for a moment seem to undervalue the physical. I am not one of those who think to elevate sex by weeding out its physical manifestations. "The soul is the body and the body is the soul;" the man is one, and the finest development of mind and of body are interdependent.

Our "Palace of Delight" must be raised upon a firm foundation in the solid earth. We cannot build in mildair. Some seek to suspend an edifice by intangible cords, from the throne of a mythical god; and because they cannot really get away from the earth, they call it vile and degrading. It may be that love etherealized beyond all physical expression is an angelic condition—being unacquainted with the psychology of angels I cannot say—but it is not a human condition, and for men and women to be angels would be as abnormal as for them to sink into mere animalism.

Just here let me define what I mean by a natural action or condition, since there are no standards; differences of time, of race, of individual make various standards. What is natural depends on degree of development; that is natural to society or to the individual which is in accord with present development and in line with future progress.

Taking a sane-minded review of the evolution of sex, we see the long process of growth through which love has been born into the world. Love—I speak now of the love between man and woman—love is distinctly human, even though, like all human attributes, its origin must be sought far back in the history of animal development. From sexual instinct to love is a long journey—the long journey from the brute to the man,—and the history of this journey is the history of the growth of the intellect. In no other department of his life do we consider a man's instincts a competent guide to conduct. Knowledge gained through experience and reason enables him to govern his actions with a conscious purpose toward the attainment of greater happiness through self-control and self-direction. So must it be with his sex life. . . . .

The brute has the same senses that man has, and they afford him similar pleasurable and painful sensations. Through memory he may learn to seek a recurrence of pleasurable sensations and an avoidance of those which are unpleasant, but his perceptions are concerned essentially with the causative object, and not with his own sensation. He is perceptive, rather than conscious. He may reason, but he never reflects. When the animal begins to observe, to compare, to analyze his own sensations, he is no longer a brute; he has passed into the human domain. Henceforth there is a mental aspect to his life. He has become conscious, albeit dimly, of his individuality, and a new phase of development sets in, along new lines.

Watch a hog eating an apple. He enjoys the gustatory sensations produced, and he learns a preference for apples. But what is his pleasure compared with that of the man? Man's nerves report the same sensations, but refined and sharpened by habits of discrimination and comparison. To the mere sensation of taste he adds the mental pleasure of the understanding of that sensation and an appreciation of it which comes only through mental activity and which gives to eating a beauty, a sentiment, an art of its own. What has the true epicure in common with the hog?

Some animals delight in musical sounds; the savage beats his tom-tom with a kind of rude enjoyment, but the science of sound and the art of beauty in sound which we call music is a mental evolution far beyond his conception.

The ox on the hillside, the Polish plowboy behind him, the poet under the oak tree—all see before them the same panorama of mountain, river and plain, but who enjoys it the most? And what is the difference in the pleasure they receive? Is it quantity of sensation or quality of mental appreciation?

In every human sensation and emotion this mental aspect is found. In some individuals it is weak and undeveloped; in others it predominates till the bodily sensation is but the suggestive impulse, the spring at touch of which, as in Parisian pleasure gardens, fountains of beauty and joy spring forth. This mental pleasure is finer, more elusive, more complex and ever more intense than physical pleasure, and in the natures which have it most developed exists the fullest capacity for happiness.

Into the field of sexual sensations and enjoyments the intellect enters as fully as into other pleasures and experiences of life—indeed, far more so. The objective cause of many other forms of pleasure may be and often is merely an inanimate and unconscious object, while our sexual pleasures come to us through another sentient, intelligent being like ourselves toward whom we send out feelings of gratitude, of sympathy, of most delicate and intense appreciation. A new factor here enters into our enjoyment—namely, mutuality. More than the perception of beauty, more than the thrill of contact, is the response that comes from eyes and lips, the joy upspringing to mate our own delight, the giving of pleasure completing the happiness of receiving.

Herein is Love born in our souls. Not in the touch of flesh to flesh, not in the warmth and thrill and ecstasy of the gratified sexual impulse is Love begotten, but in the finer sentiments and appreciations of mutual delight. Without this mental participation Love cannot live, and sooner or later, but inevitably, the attraction ceases, exhausted.

As one writer says:

"Among the masses, and in marriage, the woman gives merely sensual delight of an intense kind for a few weeks, and then becomes a convenience for the house and bed. This is because human beings are really little more than brutes. It is not only the men, the women, too, grow cold in affection after the heat of the honeymoon: that is, they have had enough of physical pleasure. In short, the ordinary sexual intimacy is an animal affair.

"But there is another realization of love, when, in the moments of intimate union, the man and woman, in their dearest and sweetest sensations (those intensities which some call the soul), recognize each other as one; and on the substructure of the physical pleasure enjoy a finer pleasure, and for those precious moments are perfectly happy in the sense of pure lovingness, which each feels is of the other, and the gratification each gives the other. Such love and such use and liberty of the person always leave the two more to each other, more respectful to each other, and with a memory of deep gratitude."

One more quotation:

"Sexual instinct has finally become love; when, as 'the result of a long course of intellectual development,' the longing of the man and woman for each other has become so refined as to be offended at any idea of constraint, and so informed as to recognize itself as something necessary, energizing and elevating—an unconscious impulse come to consciousness as knowledge—then, among free men and women, men and women freed from the old ideals of subjection to each other, the instinct may lead to an art—the art of love; and having two ends—to inspire and to nourish the most beautiful and precious emotions of the soul, and to continue the race."

It is this development of love and sympathy, this enriching of life with more tender emotions, finer ideals and nobler aspirations, which is the goal of the use of the sex nature for pleasure. This is a purely personal use of sex, whereas propagation is a racial use. The latter serves to keep the race alive, to perpetuate the human species; the former tends to educate, to refine, to ennoble it, to make it happier and worth perpetuation.

There is an attempt to make human propagation, stirpiculture, a science. There may well be also a science, or perhaps an art, of love. The former studies nerve tissues, blood corpuscles, organs, secretions, periods; and seeks to determine the conditions of perfect physical parentage. The latter may well study feelings, emotions, thoughts—the delicate interactions of personalities, the subtle mentality of man and woman intimacies—with a view to determining the conditions of perfect love-enjoyment.

And it may happen that with the latter attained, the former will be less needful; that the desired issue of love will be even superior to the results of scientific breeding from physical conditions.

Sex love as a begetter of happiness holds a far different place to human experience from that of sex passion as a begetter of offspring.

In order to attain the greatest love-happiness from sexual activity, I believe it is essential to make this distinction between the bodily function and the love-interchange and enjoyment. The mental participation in sex-pleasure is much; it is essentially human and educational. But there is a higher mode of intercourse possible in which the physical basis, though absolutely essential and fundamental, is the substructure merely, upon which Love builds its delicate structure of beauty and joy. In this supreme experience, thought blends with thought, the finest qualities of mind and character are intensified and made visible. From this soul communion, this synchronization of two individualities, who can say what vital thought waves may not flow out to fecundate the sluggish racial thought and bear fruit in social harmony and progress?

It is the development of this perfect enjoyment, this art of love, pregnant with possibilities, that freedom from arbitrary restraint, increase of knowledge and the rationalizing of sex are tending.

ADELINE CHAMPNEY.

The Religion of Richard Wagner.

According to Dinger's tabulation of Wagner's views as a Neo-Hegelian, his philosophy was evolutionary materialism and sensualism, his religion Atheism, his ethics optimism and eudemonism, and his politics Anarchism: a summary of isms sufficient to chill the marrow and curdle the blood of many a devout Wagnerite of to-day. The works, which derived their inspiration and took a more or less distinct tinge from these tenets, are the projected musical dramas, to which the text was written, but the music never composed: "Siegfried's Death" (afterwards embodied in the third part of the tetralogy), "Wieland the Smith," "Jesus of Nazareth," and the subsequently completed "Ring of the Nibelungen," although in this last-mentioned tragedy of the gods he has thrown a veil of symbolism over his ideas and presented them in a more artistic and therefore less aggressive form. His strong and cheerful optimism as to the glorious prospects of mankind here prevented him from looking beyond and seeking consolation in the magnified looming of human hopes on the bright sky of the hereafter. The expression of this feeling comes out very forcibly in his essays and especially in his personal correspondence. "The future generation," he writes, "will have no longer any need of God and immortality, since this life will satisfy all our hopes, so that we shall not have to direct our thoughts beyond the earth to an imaginary heaven." He characterizes all such "religious presumptions" as "anthropomorphistic speculations, which are injurious and immoral, because they place the final purpose of man outside of himself," whereas he is only the supreme and crowning product of cosmic evolution and can "serve no other purposes than those of nature, which has produced him conformable to certain conditions of necessity." His spiritual superiority does not exempt him from the operations of the laws of development and dissolution which govern all other organisms.

In a volume entitled "The Destiny of Man" Mr. John Fiske endeavors to show the unreasonableness of supposing that "Man as the goal of Nature's creative work" should be only one of the many perishable forms of matter and destined to disappear with the rest, and asks: "Has all this work been done for nothing? Is it all ephemeral, all a bubble that bursts, a vision that fades?" To these indignant interrogatories Wagner would have replied: "No, indeed; man's immortality and eternal beatitude consist in the persistence and perfection of the spiritual element, not in the individual, but in the race; and there is no reason why the contemplation of this slow but unceasing process of evolution and its glorious consummation in the highest possible elevation of humanity, even though it be completed with the present life upon the earth, should put any logical thinker to intellectual confusion." It is interesting to note how easily, in regions of speculation lying out of the range of scientific demonstration, diametrically opposite conclusions may be deduced from precisely the same premises. Liszt was greatly exercised at his friend's utter lack of faith and in his letter seeks to show him the error of his ways, quoting with a slight and suitable variation the exhortation in Elsa's song:

"Lass zu dem Glauben Dich neu bekehren: Es giebt ein Glück."

and beseeching him not to turn away contemptuously from this "only true and eternal bliss."

Wagner, however, was too much of a eudemonist, too thoroughly given up to the gratification of what he called his Glückseligkeitstrieb, to be greatly influenced by such admonitions. Ethically his philosophy of life might be summed up in Pope's exclamation,

"O happiness, our being's end and aim."

His bitter hostility to Christianity arose chiefly from its ascetic teachings, which put a barrier between man and the full exercise and enjoyment of the powers and passions with which nature has so lavishly endowed him and which are essential to his welfare and conservation. In "Jesus of Nazareth" he infers from the statement that "God is love," that love is supreme and absolute and knows no limitations. Indeed, the whole didactic purpose of the drama is to glorify love as the primal and universal law of the race in opposition to the restrictions imposed upon its manifestations by human enactments. In the crucible of this consuming and refining passion individual egotism is transformed into the altruism of domestic and social relations, thus fulfilling in the province of the emotions the alchemist's dream of transmuting base metals into gold. It endues Siegfried's sword with a magic power that shatters Wotan's spear, "the shaft of sovereignty" and symbol of conventional moral order, and urges the youthful hero onward through a sea of fire to the rescue and redemption of Brünnhilde.

Highly significant, too, is Wagner's enthusiasm for Häfis and Shelley. The former he declares to be not only "the most gifted poet," but also "the greatest and sublimest philosopher that ever lived." What attracted him so strongly to the Divân (known to him only in Daumer's fragmentary and rather imperfect translation) was the glowing sensuality that pervades all the ghasals, the warm erotic hues that color even the religious poems, and the unceasing denunciation of priestcraft and pietism. The motto of Häfiz: "Strive always after ready bliss," and his expressed preference of the tulip-cheeked beauties of Shirâz to the promised houris of Paradise, would commend themselves to Wagner as the quintessence of wisdom. As for Shelley, his admiration and also his knowledge of the English poet appear to have been confined to "Queen Mab," which charmed him by reason of its radically revolutionary spirit and atheistic tendencies.—Professor E. P. Evans, Munich, in the Open Court (Chicago).

Child Labor Causes Tramps.

Miss Jane Addams, of Hull House, Chicago, writing in Charities, a New York weekly review of general philanthropy, points out that child labor has a decidedly debilitating effect upon the mental and physical systems, and so drives men to tramp life. "It is surprising," writes Miss Addams, "to find how many begin to tramp because they are tired to death, just as a business man goes to the woods because he is worn out with the stress of business life. This inordinate desire to get away from work seems to be connected with the fact that the men have started to work very early, before they had the physique to stand up to it, or the mental vigor with which to overcome its difficulties, or the moral stamina which makes a man stick to his work whether he likes it or not." We cannot demand any of these things from a growing boy. They are all traits of the adult. Miss Addams goes on to illustrate by means of a man in the municipal lodging house of Chicago, who had begun to work in a textile mill quite below the present legal age, in New England, and who had worked hard for sixteen years in a place that required no mental exercise, but made him simply a cog in an industrial wheel. "At last," said this man, "I was sick in bed for two or three days with a fever, and when I crawled out I made up my mind that I would rather go to hell than go back to that mill." This man does not steal, Miss Addams says, but for four years now he has been tramping. The mere suggestion of a factory throws him into a panic. The physician has made a diagnosis of general debility. The man, in his opinion, is not fit for steady work, because prematurely spent. All this makes it very clear that the young, if too early submitted to the grind of factory life, must swell our pauper list.—Woman's Journal.

"The One Woman."

Mr. Dixon's book, "The One Woman," is being so widely read that it deserves some further comment. Why is it read so much? It is read because it appears to treat of the divorce question, in which the public, both progressive and non-progressive, are interested; still more because it seems to combat reform movements which are still unpopular; and also because while it has a heavy flavor of the sensational horrors which the untrained imagination loves for their stimulating qualities, it really presents some dramatic situations of the story with ability. The most curious feature of the book is that the author evidently believes himself to be defending monogamy and the ideal of "the one woman;" yet the idea of monogamy put forth by the only philosophizer in the book, who evidently presents Mr. Dixon's own views, is this: "Love as many women as you please, but don't desert your wife and children. . . . . Honor your wife with a polite lie."

It seems scarcely worth while to write a book to set forth a compromise with society such as every society man knows how to make when he falls in love with "the other woman." The hero of the story works his own downfall solely because he can only think of love in terms of monogamic marriage. The moral which Mr. Dixon thus unconsciously preaches is: Don't be a monogamist.

There is a passionate protest against "destroying the integrity of the family," and history is vaguely referred to; but the historical veneration for marriage is not hinted at; nor does Mr. Dixon tell us whether the crushing out of divorce and the strict enforcement of monogamy, actual monogamy, or, as he prefers, fictional monogamy, would make the American mother of one child, or of none, into his ideal woman. The real causes of ninety-nine out of a hundred divorce cases are of course not touched on in describing the unusual case in the story.

In another point, also, Mr. Dixon seems to sacrifice truth to prejudice. He evidently dislikes innovation both in the philosophy of economics and in the philosophy of sex; and he thinks to strike one blow at both of the movements he dislikes by calling his hero a Socialist and making him defy society in sex relations. But neither divorce and remarriage, nor the bravado displayed in the case described, is at all especially characteristic of Socialists, as I believe most of their enemies would admit. Divorce is characteristic of the American people, and is obviously resorted to as a means of making bond-marriage less intolerable, and indeed to make its continuance possible, among a sensitive and highly nervous people.

One great blemish in the book is the vulgarity of the language of both the women, which is most incongruous with both the culture and the exceptional strength of character insisted on in the description of both of them. The queenly Kate is made to say to the one-eyed bachelor who she has begun to admire: "I'll put you in training for a handsome woman I know." And later in the story she becomes a mere scold, in a situation which should naturally have evoked all her womanly tact.

Socialists will not be much frightened at the arguments employed against Socialism in the book. They chiefly consist in calling Socialism "the herd idea," and Socialists (like the mathematician and able writer Karl Pearson) "frowsy-headed."

DORA FORSTER.

A Jewish Criticism

Many of you hold, no doubt, that the manuscripts of the Bible have been preserved as written, without the alteration of a jot or tittle, and that its teachings are literally true and infallible. But where such sentiments are found among Jews it is because they have absorbed them from the Christian theologians. These theologians have adopted them from the exigencies of their theology and in order to sustain their doctrine concerning Christ. If the story of the fall of Adam were not true, there would be no necessity for the second Adam.

The text of the Bible has been corrupted. Moses did not write the Pentateuch, and Isaiah did not write all of the prophecy that goes by his name. The miracles are mere fables. God never descended to Sinai, and Moses never ascended it. The Bible did not produce religion, but religion produced the Bible.—Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch.

The poorest education that teaches self-control is better than the best that neglects it.—Sterling.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 West 143d street, New York.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Anarchy.

SYNOPSIS OF A LECTURE SUNDAY EVENING, NOV. 27, AT MEMORIAL HALL, ODD FELLOWS' BUILDING, SAN FRANCISCO.

Usually I do not call myself an Anarchist.

Usually I prefer not to be tagged or labeled at all, because of the great difficulty of overcoming prejudice in regard to certain words that by long use have become polarized—that is, have become like needles or bars of steel that, by lying in a certain direction for a long time, will lie in no other direction if placed on a pivot and left free to move. They always point to the magnetic pole of the earth;—not to the north star, as is commonly supposed.

So it is with certain words in the minds of most people. Among these is the word Anarchy. So long has this word been associated with assassination of rulers and with the idea of destruction of social order that it seems quite impossible to disabuse the mind of the average hearer of that impression—utterly false though it may be—whenever the words Anarchy and Anarchist are mentioned.

For this occasion, however, I purpose to break my rule and, in order that there may be no misunderstanding in the matter, will freely and frankly avow myself an Anarchist—in the true, the etymologic, the scientific and philosophic sense of that word.

The world of mankind may be rightly divided into two very distinct classes, Archists and Anarchists.

An Archist is one who believes that the masses of human beings cannot or will not govern themselves, and that the preservation of social order requires that some must rule and others must obey.

The word "archy" is Greek, from "archein," to be first, to be chief or principal. From this comes the kindred word "Archon," a ruler of men.

An Anarchist, from the formation of the word—"an" meaning not, and "archy"—means one who does not believe that the masses of people must have rulers to keep them from robbing and killing each other.

An Anarchist, from the etymology of the word—that is, the scientific or philosophic Anarchist—wants neither a

Mon-archy, meaning rulership by one man or woman; nor an

Olig-archy—rulership by a few persons; nor a

Hier-archy—rulership by a priest or a priesthood; nor a

Plut-archy (plutocracy)—rulership by the rich; nor an

Arist-archy (aristocracy)—rulership by the "best" citizens; nor a

Pant-archy—rulership by all the people (commonly called a democracy or a republic).

Of all these forms of archy the philosophic Anarchist has least use, perhaps, for the last named, from the fact that it is least honest, least real, most illusory, most deceptive, most fraudulent.

None but the philosophic Anarchist sees that a government by all the people is an impossibility, a misnomer, a contradiction in terms.

None but the philosophic Anarchist knows that the term "free government" is a "delusion and a snare," a phrase used by Archists to hypnotize the masses of people into the belief that they are the real sovereigns and that the government officials are their servants, or the agents selected by ballot to execute the will of the people.

None but the logical Anarchist knows that all government of man by man means archy in some of the forms just named, and that of all of these forms pantarchy—a democracy or a so-called republic—is most objectionable because the cunning and greedy few can rule and rob the producers of wealth and keep them quiet by telling them they are self-governing because they have the elective franchise.

None but a logical Anarchist knows that the only possible form of government in which the people can be self-governing is one in which each individual governs himself, and allows every other person to do the same; remembering always that "The man of whole soul commands not nor obeys."

Self-government, then, is the repudiation of archy, of archons, which mean that some must be first or chief, which assumption again involves the logical necessity that some must be ruled by others, and therefore the logical conclusion is that self-government means Anarchy.

As further definition and illustration of what philosophic Anarchism means, take the following:

When we destroy darkness, light takes its place. Darkness can only be destroyed by letting in the light.

When ignorance is destroyed, knowledge takes its place, science takes its place.

When disease is removed, health takes its place.

When Tyranny and Injustice are removed, Liberty and Justice take their place—that is to say, when Archy is removed, Anarchy takes its place, for Archy is nearly if not quite synonymous with Tyranny and Injustice, and Anarchy is nearly if not quite synonymous with Liberty and Justice.

The phrase "free government," meaning a free archy, is a misnomer, a contradiction in terms, an utter impossibility, an unthinkable proposition.

How can there be a government—an archy—without subjects, without those who are ruled by others?

M. HARMAN.

Art and Life.

Art and science seem to me as necessary to life as air, water and sun. Science prolongs life and art intensifies and charms it. What pleasure would there be in living a few more years if these years were not enriched a hundred fold by our faculties of admiration? Art gives the joy of life. Science withdraws the fear of death. Joy gives health and health gives good will. Yes, art gives the joy of life. Art opens the door of the ideal, without which this life of ours would be so terre a terre that it would signify little to us if we lived or died. Art is the faculty of realizing sentiments and representing beauties which transport us beyond this world of ours, and this faculty is the elixir of life.—Sarah Bernhardt.

One who believes at all in the possibility that economic slavery and economic murder can be abolished by legislative decrees will always be disappointed, for he attributes to government a mission which it never possessed and never will possess. Our apostles of peace should reflect that the mission of governments is to support prevailing institutions. . . . They cannot wish a transformation of existing things, for only by that which prevails do they assert and vindicate their existence.—August Spies.

San Francisco Meetings.

(RECEIVED TOO LATE FOR LAST WEEK'S ISSUE.)

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., Nov. 25, 1903.

The meeting at the Turk Street Temple, San Francisco, held in honor of the memory of the slain champions of liberty and justice in Chicago, Nov. 11, 1887, was not altogether satisfactory to myself and to the friends who came expecting to hear what I might have to say on that occasion. The committee on programme had promised me the first or opening half-hour; then changed it to the last half-hour. When called to the platform, at 10:10 o'clock, I said, in substance:

While I may have learned but little during a somewhat extended journey of life, one of my lessons of experience is never to undertake a public address after 10 o'clock at night. Man is said to be a bundle of habits. One of my life-long habits is "Early to bed and early to rise." It would be just neither to myself nor to my hearers—most of whom are working men and therefore need a good night's rest, to prepare them for their duties to-morrow—to attempt more than a very brief off-hand talk to those who have already listened two hours to addresses more eloquent than I could give.

The story of the judicial murder of August Spies, Albert Parsons, George Engel and Adolph Fischer, sixteen years ago to-day, can never grow old so long as men love liberty, hate tyranny, and honor manly courage in defense of the right, the true, the equitable.

If the heroic sacrifice of Leonidas and his immortal three hundred Spartans at the pass of Thermopylae should be embalmed in the memory of liberty-lovers in all lands and climes; if the act of Arnold Winkelreid, when he rushed with outstretched arms upon the spears of the Austrian phalanx, crying, "Make way for liberty," should be commemorated in prose and verse to the end of time; if Socrates, the Grecian philosopher, should be gratefully remembered for calmly accepting the deadly hemlock rather than deny his principles; if Giordano Bruno, the Italian heretic in theology and physical science, should be held in deathless remembrance as one of the greatest of martyrs to the doctrine that all men and all women should have equal right to interpret what are called sacred oracles for themselves, without the guidance of priest, parson or pope—if the tragedies that ended the mortal lives of these historic persons, and of many others, women as well as men, that could be named, should be held in undying honor by thinking people everywhere, then there is great propriety and reason for such assemblies as I now see before me, held to commemorate the more recent but not less heroic and not less tragical sacrifice of the four champions of the downtrodden toilers, on the 11th of November, 1887, in Chicago, U. S. A.

It is quite needless, even had I the time, that I relate the circumstances that led up to the police riot of May 4, 1886. Then as now there was great dissatisfaction with the working of our social, our industrial and financial institutions. Then as now those of the workers who read history and dared to think for themselves, saw that the forebodings of Abraham Lincoln had become true—as voiced in a letter to a friend, only a few days before his assassination:

"I see in the near future a crisis approaching that unnerves me and causes me to tremble for the safety of my country. As a result of the war, corporations have been enthroned, and an era of corruption in high places will follow, and the money power of the country will endeavor to prolong its reign by working upon the prejudice of the people until all the wealth is aggregated in a few hands, and the republic is destroyed. I feel at this moment more anxiety for the safety of my country than ever before, even in the midst of war. God grant that my suspicions may prove groundless."

This prediction, it was felt by the workers all over the country in 1886, and nowhere more keenly than in Chicago, was bearing fulfillment. Strikes were common. Chicago was the storm-center, so to speak, of the agitation for an eight-hour working day. On the first of May, 1886, a general strike to enforce this economic and very reasonable demand of Labor upon Capital was ordered. Over forty thousand of the Chicago workers were said to have responded to this call and walked out, leaving most of the shops and factories silent and deserted. Then came the shooting by the police of many innocent persons at the McCormick reaper works, where some small boys, assisted by some former employes of the company, had shown their lack of good sense by stoning the windows and causing a few dollars' loss of property—a misdemeanor, of course, but no crime of all when compared to that of the police in firing volley after volley of leaden bullets into the unarmed crowd, causing the instant death of seven men, the mortal wounding of several others, besides serious injury to many more.

To protest against this outrage by the alleged keepers of the peace a meeting of protest was hastily called to be held at the Haymarket for the evening of May 4. Speeches were made by Albert Parsons, August Spies and Samuel Fielden, all very moderate and pacific in tone and manner when we consider the terrible nature of the provocation that called out this demonstration of protest.

The meeting was a peaceable one—orderly in every respect. To show that there was no expectation of violence, it is only needed to say that many of the leaders brought their wives and children with them to the meeting. The Mayor of the city, Carter Harrison, Senior, was present till near the close—there was an appearance of rain; people were fast dispersing. So sure was Harrison that there would be no trouble that he went to the Desplaines street police station, where a large platoon of policemen were held in reserve to enforce order if needed, and told Captain Bonfield to send his men home, as they would not be needed.

But why continue the sickening recital of the disobedience of orders by the pliant tools of plutocracy? Carter Harrison was a friend of the people, the working masses, but—judging from reasonable probability—Bonfield was acting under orders from a higher source than the Mayor of the city. These orders were from the "powers behind the throne"—the capitalistic conspirators who had decreed that the agitation for an eight-hour law must be stopped. All subsequent history of the case goes to show the existence of such conspiracy.

Prominent among these evidences of conspiracy is the course of the large daily papers, in Chicago and elsewhere, in persistently misrepresenting the facts of the case, both before and after the Haymarket affair—before, during and after the trial—continued even to the present time.

If the term "bold, bad lying" was ever justifiable it was and is justifiable in speaking of the attitude, the record, of these papers.

If ever the term "prostitute press" was justifiable, as shown by evidence the most overwhelming—at the trial and ever since—then the large daily papers and many of the weeklies and monthlies of the United States have deserved this appellation, when they speak of "Anarchy" and the "Anarchists," and especially of the men judicially murdered in Chicago for their opinions and for daring to give utterance to those opinions.

* * *

On Saturday evening, Nov. 21, I was given the first half-hour at Apollo Hall at a memorial meeting held in honor of the Chicago martyrs by the Italian, the Spanish and the French Anarchists of this city. The meeting was not a large one, not more than one hundred and fifty being present, but if I am to judge by actions and tones of voice, and the responses to the speeches—all in foreign languages except my own—it was a very enthusiastic assemblage.

Sunday evening, Nov. 22, I had the pleasure of addressing about 250 of the English-speaking Liberals, Freethinkers, Agnostics, Spiritualists, Anarchists, Socialists, etc., at Memorial Hall, Odd Fellows' Building, this city. I spoke about one hour on "The Impending Revolution—Its Outcome: Will It Be Monarchy, Anarchy or Socialism?" Dr. York was chairman of the meeting, which lasted till considerably after 10 o'clock.

The weather has been quite unfavorable most of the time since I came to San Francisco. Rain, rain, mists and fogs, are the order of the day—and night also. The effect on my health has not been favorable, and yet I have had no day or night in which I was wholly unfitted for duty, whether of a public or private nature. Just how long I shall remain here is not yet determined, but having rented a hall for one month, I expect to stay till near the midwinter holidays.

Address as before, 217 Parrott Building, San Francisco.

M. HARMAN.

Be not jealous over the wife of thy bosom, and teach her not an evil lesson against thyself.—Mrs. Browning.

VARIOUS VOICES.

We are always glad to receive calls from friends visiting the city. Take the Lake street elevated, stop at Ashland avenue, walk one block east, then one block north. Or take Fulton street electric car west and stop at St. John's place, alighting in front of our house. The Lake street electric and Fulton street cars also pass within a block of our residence.

Henry Bool, Ithaca, N. Y.: Allow me to say, I take your paper, Lucifer, for its reading matter, and consider it to be one of the best periodicals that it is my privilege to read.

E. D. Brinkerhoff, New York: So far as advertisements in Lucifer are concerned, I pay little attention to them, as I take the paper for its reading matter and not for its advertisements.

Belle Chaapel, Le Roy, Pa.: Please do not stop my paper. I will very soon send money for subscription. Would to-day, but cannot get to postoffice. The little paper is great—a real gem—that I prize above all the others that come to me.

J. E. Witman, Hazleton, Pa.: Enclosed find $1 for renewal of subscription to Lucifer. We—Mrs. Witman and myself—desire to get acquainted with a few radicals or Liberals living not far away—say in Philadelphia, Allentown or Harrisburg.

J. W. Lindquist, Ben Lomond, Cal.: I have moved about so much the past year that very few of my papers have reached me, but the copies of Lucifer have been read by many. I enclose money order to pay my arrears. I have the highest respect for your sincere and brave work. Yes, it does pay to be yourself and speak what you think.

E. Hayden, Red Bluff, Cal.: Inclosed is $1, for which please renew my subscription to Lucifer for one year. The paper is too sweet and pure a voice for liberty to be estopped. If it meets postal opposition it can only be from mere prejudice; there can be no reasonable ground for it, and every lover of freedom should recognize the greater need of just such a clear call for enlightenment and liberty as Lucifer sends forth, and should rally to its support. You have my deepest sympathy in your brave effort. Whatever may be the opposition of to-day, the approbation of posterity will not be withheld.

C. N. Greene, Topeka, Kan.: We have known Moses Harman for twelve years, much of which time we have been, as we are to-day, subscribers of Lucifer. We take the paper for two reasons—the reading matter it contains (not the advertisements), and because of our love and appreciation of its editor, who in spite of persecution and imprisonment dares to stand firm in his convictions and work for woman's emancipation, a religion in harmony with nature and the freedom of the race from all that enslaves. Long may he continue the fight in the mortal body, and may he see the fruition of his hopes.

E. C. Reichwald, Chicago: Regarding the article in Lucifer pertaining to the death of Mr. and Mrs. Green, I wish to say that it reads the same as an account in which they say the Greens were found dressed in silks and broadcloth. This is not correct and evidently originated in the brain of some reporter. Directly after reading the account I had a photo taken of them just as they were found, dressed in their night clothes, in order to refute the falsehood of the report.

[The report was printed as found in a Chicago daily, we having no other report to give. It is not unusual to find inaccurate statements made by reporters. Mr. Green was much more fairly treated in reports of his death than was S. P. Putnam when he met death in a similar manner a few years ago.—L. H.]

Mary M. Clark, Albia, Iowa: I think you are a brave, true woman. Stand by your principles and surely there are enough of us to help you. It is very strange to me that our "public servants" find so little to do. We receive through our mail an average of one poor, trashy paper every week that we have never asked for or paid for. They have beautiful names, such as "Home Treasure," "Happy Homes," "Sweet Hours," "Family Fireside," etc. We subscribed for one once, some three years ago, and although I have several times notified them to discontinue it, still it comes and the postal authorities never have written us asking us "If we want it, if we have paid for it," etc., like they have about Lucifer. Such papers contain all kinds of vicious advertisements, calculated to defraud the "dear people." Why don't the government "dads" look after them? The advertisements in Lucifer, such as Dr. Foote's book, "Borning Better Babies," E. C. Walker's "Vice: It's Friends and Foes," "Government Analyzed," etc., are not nearly so apt to attract the attention of the young and inexperienced as "A woman with $10,000 wants to marry nice young man," "Whisky easily made, costs 25 cents a gallon; many a poor man can pay for a home," "Money made quickly," and such books as "Meet Me at Dusk," "Will See You Later," and even much worse. We are so glad that your dear old father has taken this western trip. It will do him much good if he does not overwork, and he will do the cause much good, too. The West is more liberal than the East.

Alfred Schneider, Chicago: I have noticed in the last few numbers of Lucifer that this "government of the people" intends to shut your paper out of the second-class matter privilege, through the postoffice department. Of course it is rather preposterous to do this without asking the people (your readers); but what government ever asked anybody in behalf of the people? But it behooves me to protest against such outrage on free speech and free press, with all the sincerity of which I am capable. As I have been unable, under this reign of prosperity, to find work for the last four months, I ask you to continue sending me your paper, although my subscription expired several weeks ago. I will pay you in a short time. I hope that all of your readers will stand by you, and so show the government of what stuff those are made who believe in liberty.

A Professional Monster.

For barbarous inventions the medical profession takes the lead. It seems incredible that a man clothed in his right mind, who has a particle of humanity left in his heart, would do the things which we see recorded in medical journals every day.

It occasionally happens when a child is born that depressions of the skull are noticed. The bones of the cranium are very soft, and during the ordeal of birth sometimes these bones are pressed upon so as actually to produce temporary deformity of the skull. Every experienced midwife or mother also knows that in a little time, if the child lives, these depressions will come out all right. They need excite no anxiety whatever. The skull will shape itself up as soon as the child recovers from the effect of the pressure received during birth.

Dr. P. Baumm, a German gynecologist, suggests that in case a new-born infant presents a depression of the skull, due to pressure during birth, a small cork-screw be inserted into the depression, and then the depressed portion of the skull drawn up even with the cranium. He actually reports four cases in which he did this fiendish act. Two of the children died from internal hemorrhages, and the other two, he very triumphantly states, lived through it. This heartless wretch absolutely took a new-born child, screwed a common cork-screw right through the soft bones of the cranium, and then pulled out on it so as to even up the bones to his satisfaction.

Where was the mother when he was doing this? She was probably a poor, cringing creature, afraid of her doctor, as they are in Germany, and did not dare say a word. The medical profession in Germany has got the people under foot. The people have no rights, do not dare to breathe except as the doctor gives them leave. Everything is done with military precision. And the state of affairs that exists in Germany between the professional class and the common people is exactly the condition towards which things are tending in the United States. As the doctors get more and more laws to strengthen them they will grow more and more arrogant.—Medical Talk (Columbus, O.).

Not a Case for the Hatchet.

An Indianapolis man perpetrated a joke on Carrie Nation while she was there. A local dentist was standing on a corner when Mrs. Nation got through haranguing the crowd. "Look at that man," said the Indianapolis joker, pointing to the doctor. "He is well off, and he makes money out of the tears of orphans, the wails of widows, and the groans of strong men."

"He keeps a rum shop, does he?" said the smasher, darting a piercing glance in his direction.

"No," said the man, "he is a dentist."

Tolstoi's Opinion of the Kaiser.

Kaiser William had Tolstoi's book, "Thou Shalt Not Kill," suppressed in all his dominions on account of the following passage: "What must be going on in the head of William of Germany, a man of limited understanding, little education, and with a great deal of ambition, whose ideals are like a German junker's when any silly or horrid thing he says is always met with an enthusiastic 'Hurrah!' and commented on as if it were something very important by the press of the world. He says soldiers should be prepared to kill their own fathers in obedience to his command, and there is another hurrah. When he says the gospel must be introduced with the iron fist the people shout 'Hurrah!' He says the army must not take any prisoners in China, but kill all, and he is not placed in a lunatic asylum, but they cry 'Hurrah!' and sail to China to execute his orders."

"WHO IS THE ENEMY?"

Hugh O. Pentecost writes thus to Edwin C. Walker about the latter's new work, "Who Is the Enemy; Anthony Comstock or You?" "Your pamphlet is a strong discussion of the question at issue that one could give to a conservative friend with some hope that he might read it through."

Dr. R. W. Shufeldt, biologist, author of several scientific works and of more than seven hundred articles on medicine, travel, science, sexual problems and other subjects, writes to E. C. Walker: "I thank you very much indeed for the copy you sent me of your valuable pamphlet, 'Who Is the Enemy—Anthony Comstock or You?' I have read it from cover to cover with the utmost satisfaction and unqualified approval. It is one of the best and strongest things you have put out, and I am with you solid in both the letter and spirit of it. I prize the copy most highly." Ask for table of contents and specimen pages of "Who Is the Enemy?" or send 20 cents to this office for the pamphlet.

SPECIAL RATES SOUTHWEST.

On the first and third Tuesdays of each month the SANTA FE sells one-way and round-trip tickets to many points in the Great Southwest—rates very low.

The object is to induce homeseekers and investors to go and see for themselves the magnificent opportunities awaiting them in this prosperous section. In eastern Oklahoma, Indian Territory, Texas, New Mexico or California there is a fortune for the man of enterprise—not fabulous wealth, maybe, but a competence at least.

If you can't make up your mind just where you want to go, let us send you our illustrated literature. It is straightforward and will help you in making a selection. We have no lands to sell—our aim is to have you locate near our line where we can co-operate with you; for the SANTA FE is an exponent of progress and development.

We have a list of reliable land agents to whom we can refer you if you wish. But first let us send you the literature—that will get us acquainted. Use coupon below.

J. M. CONNELL, Gen. Agt.,
A., T. & S. F. RY.
109 ADAMS ST., CHICAGO.

SEND HOMESEEKERS' LITERATURE TO
Name.....
Street No.....
City.....

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-in Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 61, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

KAREZZA.

SCIENCE OF MARRIAGE.

A godsend to every wife—a joy to every husband.

This work brings peace into homes disrupted by inharmony in the sexual relation. Dr. A. R. Stockham advises a practice which leads to individual liberty and to deeper love between husband and wife.

Dr. F. G. Welch: "After a personal trial of its teachings, I want to thank you for a great service to humanity."

Rev. George R. Kaufman: "Out of a beautiful and ennobling experience, I can say, I KNOW."

Gives a high ideal of the marital relation and teaches control of the Procreating Power.

J. A. Smalley, M. D.: "I have received more actual benefit from the practice of KAREZZA teachings than from all other books on Sexual Science."

A. B. Franklin, M. D.: "KAREZZA does more than any other single thing to make marriage a perpetual courtship."

LEVANT CLOTH. POSTPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

HILDA'S HOME.

A STORY OF WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

With Macaulay, Rosa Graul would say: "The cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty." Hence she has no fears that under Freedom the Home and the Family would cease to exist, or that woman would be less loving and lovable, or that man would be less manly and honorable. On the contrary, she maintains that only in the soil and atmosphere of freedom is it possible for true womanhood and manhood to live and flourish.

426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD.

AN OUTLINE OF PRACTICAL CO-OPERATIVE INDIVIDUALISM.

BY HENRY OLERICH.

Regarded by many persons as a more interesting and consistent economic reform novel than Bellamy's "Looking Backward."

Bound in red silk with gold title. Nearly 450 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, $1.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

BY JOHN H. KELSO.

Contents—Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff or Protection; War Punishments; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

5.9 pages. Cloth binding somewhat damaged, and reduced from $1.50 to 50c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; OR THE PRICE OF VIRTUE.

By Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Witehood, by Lucinda B. Chandler; Life's Gifts, by Olive Schreiner, and Marriage—What It Was and Is, and Will the Coming Woman Marry? Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We cannot sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 25c each, two for 50c. Address EDWIN C. WALKER, 244 W. 143d St., New York, N. Y.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A Discussion of Freethought and Free Love. By Orford Northcote. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Marxian. By M. Harman. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Moral. By A. F. Tindall. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $3.75; unbound, $1. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE COMING WOMAN, by Lillie D. White. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

WANTED—100 women to study medicine or midwifery. Next term begins January 3, 1904. College of Medicine and Surgery, 245 Ashland Blvd., Chicago, Ill. DR. FLORENCE DRESSLER, Secretary. (Dept. A.)

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL CARDS

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

THE LIBERAL MAIL-ORDER JEWELER.

Now permanent at No. 110 N. Kensington Ave., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 20 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's Line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Things in the Campfire," free.

J. H. GREER, M. D.,
52 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.

Office Hours—9 a. m. to 6 p. m.; Wednesdays at 1 Saturdays, 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays, 9 a. m. to 12 M.
Telephone, Randolph 62.

DR. OGILVIE A. RICE,
DENTIST.
1506 MILWAUKEE AVE., COR. WESTERN, CHICAGO.
Telephone West 141.

PHILIP G. PEABODY,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
15 COURT SQUARE, ROOM 61.
BOSTON, MASS.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW.

A PRIMER OF SEXUAL RATIONALISM.

BY E. C. WALKER.

"Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes."

Paper covers; 32 large pages. Price 10c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD OWN

TOKOLOGY.

A COMPLETE HEALTH GUIDE.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

Teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions.

Treats of diseases of women and children; contains practical teachings on Change of Life, Suffring offspring, etc.

Lizzie N. Armstrong writes: "If I knew I were to be the mother of inconceivable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of Tokology."

Dr. C. B. Willis: "Tokology is doing more for women than all other books put together."

CLOTH, PREPAID, $2.25; LEATHER, $2.75.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES.

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

Contents—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only"; Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen"; What Are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women. With Appendix: The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 25c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

A treatise on Sexual Science and Marriage, rich in thought and strong in expression. Emphatically a book for the thinker.

Carpenter holds that woman's freedom is based upon economics; she must be independent financially that she may not be forced to sell herself in or out of marriage. He also makes a strong plea for a motherhood of freedom and thoughtful preparation.

AMERICAN EDITION, CLOTH, PREPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM.

THE RELATIONSHIP OF EACH TO HUMAN LIBERTY.

BY E. C. WALKER.

The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organization and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. Price 5c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

CREATIVE LIFE.

A BOOK FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

A timely and important message not found in text books. Every girl seeks and should have this force, plain and practical knowledge. One writes: "Thank you, thank you, dear Doctor, for the plain but beautiful thoughts. Womanhood, motherhood and life have new meanings. You ennoble your theme." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

A NOVEL BY GEORGE N. MILLER.

FORTIETH THOUSAND.

"The Strike of a Sex" is a fascinating novel bearing upon the sexual relations. It is a bold protest against the customary life of most married people, and yet the same time a prophecy of happier conditions between man and wife. Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

"PERSONAL EXPERIENCES OF TWO AMERICAN ANTI-VIVISECTIONISTS IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES."

BY PHILIP G. PEABODY.

With an Appendix by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c. Apply to PHILIP G. PEABODY, 15 Court Square, Boston, Mass.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY.

By Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition, by E. C. Walker; Motherhood in Freedom, by Moses Harman; The Greatest Sin (an allegory), by R. B. Kerr; and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom, by Oscar Ratter. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE CURSE OF MATERNITY.

From the French of Henry Fevre. Together with How to Escape the Curse, by Jonathan Mayo Crane; Woman's "Duty" to Bear Children, by E. C. Walker; True and False Morality, by C. L. James; and Love's Law, by William Fraser Barnard. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN.

By R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.; The New Martyrdom, by Lillian Harman, and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

999.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

THE SALE OF AN APPETITE.

A STORY BY PAUL LAFARGUE.

Emile Destouches stood outside the finest restaurant in Paris, shivering with cold and ready to die of hunger. A portly capitalist came up, invited him inside, gave him the best dinner money would buy, and then proposed a contract, by which Destouches was to digest the capitalist's food for five years, in return for a salary of two thousand francs a month, payable in advance. The young man gladly accepted, but in a short time repented of his bargain. To understand why, you must read the book. It is one of the cleverest satires on the present capitalist system ever written.

It is translated from the French by Charles H. Kerr, and is beautifully illustrated with engravings from original wash drawings by Dorothy D. Deene. It is printed on the finest of paper and daintily bound in cloth, with unique cover design, making a charming holiday gift.

Price, including postage to any address, fifty cents.

OTHER BOOKS THAT WILL INTEREST LUCIFER'S READERS.

ESSAYS ON THE MATERIALISTIC CONCEPTION OF HISTORY. By Antonio Labriola, Professor in the University of Rome. Translated from the latest Paris edition by Charles H. Kerr. Cloth, 296 pages. Price $1, postpaid. Ready Dec. 20.

A STUDY IN GOVERNMENT. By Henry E. Allen. Price 5c.
IMPRUDENT MARRIAGES. By Robert Blatchford. 5c.
WOMAN AND THE SOCIAL PROBLEM. By May Wood Simons. 5c.
SOCIALISM AND THE HOME. By May Walden Kerr. 5c.
SOCIALISM VS. ANARCHY. By A. M. Simons. 5c.
SINGLE TAX VS. SOCIALISM. By A. M. Simons. 5c.
MORALS AND SOCIALISM. By Charles H. Kerr. 5c.
THE FOLLY OF BEING "GOOD." By Charles H. Kerr. 5c.
RESIST NOT EVIL. By Clarence S. Darrow. Cloth, 25c.
CRIMES AND CRIMINALS. By Clarence S. Darrow. 10c.
REALISM IN LITERATURE AND ART. By Clarence S. Darrow. 5c.
WHAT TO READ ON SOCIALISM. 72 large pages, illustrated, mailed free on request.

CHARLES H. KERR & COMPANY,
PUBLISHERS,
56 FIFTH AVENUE, CHICAGO.

Please mention Lucifer when ordering.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

One of the best short works on the subject. A charming little gift book.

"Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to civilize others, they may even try to learn it."

DAINTILY PRINTED. PREPAID, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES.

BY E. C. WALKER.

Contents—Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What Is She? What Will She Be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Verses Fear; Reflections Upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love and Life." Price 15c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY, AND THE STATE.

BY FREDERICK ENGELS.

Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans.

217 pages; bound in cloth. Price 60c; postage 5c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STORY OF IJAIN;

OR, THE EVOLUTION OF A MIND.

By Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Stuart Ross), and four Illustrations Scientifically Colored in colors. Price $1; postage 8c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE.

By John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention, by Marietta; Reminiscences of Berlin Heights, by A. Warren, and The Sexes and Love in Freedom, by Oscar Ratter. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN.

By Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Vclept Society, by Moses Hull; Virgin Soil, by George Egerton, and Normal Sexual Action, by Ernest Wiese. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE.

By R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese, by C. W. Coolridge; A Traveler's Tale, by R. B. Kerr; The Cat's Story, by Emile Zola. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE REVIVAL OF PERITANISM, by E. C. Walker. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VII., NO. 50. CHICAGO, ILL., DEC. 17, E. M. 303. [C. E. 1902.] WHOLE NO. 1000

CAUTION.

To the States, or any of them, or any city of the States: Resist much, obey little;
Once unquestioning obedience, once fully enslaved;
Once fully enslaved, no nation, state, city, of this earth, ever afterward resumes its liberty.

—Walt Whitman.

New York Partly Awake.

The John Turner mass meeting at Cooper Union on Thursday evening, Dec. 3, was a decided success. The large hall was crowded. John Sherwin Crosby presided. The speakers were: The Hon. John De Witt Warner, Congressman Robert Baker, Ernest H. Crosby and Henry Frank. Among the vice-presidents were: Felix Adler, William H. Baldwin, Jr., W. Franklin Brush, James Byrne, Horace E. Deming, Henry George, Jr., Professor Franklin H. Giddings, James K. Paulding, E. W. Ordway, Joseph M. Price, Charles M. Higgins, William Jay Schieffelin, Carl Schurz, Judge Samuel Seabury, Henry D. Sedgwick, Jr., Charles Sprague Smith, Charles B. Spahr, Oswald G. Villarde, C. W. Watson, R. W. G. Welling, Horace White, Mornay Williams and the Rev. Leighton Williams.

The papers, most of them, could not see what was coming. In spite of this list of names of prominent citizens—some of them very prominent citizens—only two papers this side the Brooklyn bridge printed an advance notice of the meeting. These were the News and the Evening Post. One of the others, the most vociferous friend of "labor," printed, a few days before, one of the dirtiest conceivable "reports" of a committee meeting at Dr. Foote's. The great meeting revealed to it its tactical error, and it hastened to say that "surprisingly large was the meeting" and "very prominent were the names of many of the men who consented to serve as presidents." The papers, with possibly one exception, have found there is an issue that cannot be ignored, and reports, interviews and editorials are now quite numerous. So far as I have seen up to this date the Evening Post, the News and the Brooklyn Eagle have spoken for fair play and the better traditions of the republic. Hostile editorials have appeared in the Tribune, the Times, the Commercial Advertiser and the Mail and Express.

At the meeting, letters from Edward M. Shepard, William Lloyd Garrison, from Mr. Turner himself, and from others were read amid thunders of applause. Ernest H. Crosby and John De Witt Warner surpassed their usual best, and that is saying very much. Every speaker was in deadly earnest, and sincerity is the soul of eloquence.

Vital printed matter is in course of preparation; other meetings are to be held, here and in other cities; the case is going to the Supreme Court, and the Congress will be besieged to repeal the thought-strangling sections of the immigration law. All this legal and educational work requires money. Every step taken expends labor and labor must be fed. The treasurer of the Free Speech League is Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., 120 Lexington avenue, New York City. Join the league—only $1 a year—and send additional sum if you can. The active and most efficient secretary is A. C. Pleydell, 175 Broadway, New York City. Write to him and let him know what you can do to arouse the people of your town, city or state. First of all, get a good statement of the merits of the Turner case into your local paper or papers. Write this statement yourself or furnish the editors with material which Mr. Pleydell will send to you if you ask him.

EDWIN C. WALKER.

244 West One Hundred and Forty-third street, New York.

I do not know Mr. Turner; nor do I know anything of his speeches, writings or beliefs, except as they appear in the proceedings against him. They have now resulted in the order of a cabinet officer of our republic that he be excluded by force from our country for believing in a theory of human society different from that held by you and me and the great majority of Americans and other civilized men, and in a decision of a federal court that there is no judicial power to interfere with that order. To my mind, the order of Secretary Cortelyou is thoroughly un-American, and is dangerous to the future prosperity and dishonors the true and useful glory of our republic. . . .

It seems to me to be clear that the word Anarchist, as used in the law, did not refer to the philosophic and peace-loving belief held by Mr. Turner. He believes, as I understand, and as the judicial record fairly implies, that humanity would be better off without government dependent upon force. The statute, as I conceive it should be interpreted, referred rather to a disposition and will on the part of the foreign visitor or immigrant to use force or advise others to use force against organized government. The statute does, indeed, refer to "persons who believe in the overthrow by force or violence of the government of the United States or of all governments and of all forms of law, or the assassination of public officials." This part of the statute is not well phrased; but the word "believe" as here used I understand to refer to an effective disposition and will to use force, and not to any philosophic creed.

I take it we must all approve the exclusion of those who come here to use force themselves or to advocate the use by others of force or violence to overthrow any part of our government, or any kind of murder, high or low. The decree against Mr. Turner is based solely, however, upon the provision for the exclusion of Anarchists, a provision never intended, I believe, to apply to those who hold philosophic and high-minded, even if impracticable, theories of human society, and do not threaten or urge violence. My fault-finding, therefore, is not so much with the statute, except that its phraseology is not clear, as it is with the application made of it by the national executive. That application I regard as un-American, high-handed, tyrannical and stupid.

In the brief submitted to Judge Lacombe in behalf of the government, no assertion, not even a hint, is made against Mr. Turner's character. He is not accused of desiring or seeking violence. The whole charge is that he has called himself an Anarchist. The able contention of his counsel is not disputed that he is an Anarchist only in the sense of those who believe that peace and virtue and happiness do not need the exercise of governmental force.

The sole defense of the government is that Mr. Turner "disbelieves in all organized government." Secretary Cortelyou applies a statute evidently intended to exclude persons who threaten violence or murder, to the case of a man merely holding in his own conscience and mind, and who in the freedom of his own England has expressed, a belief that human progress and safety do not need the aid of armies or police. . . . I must frankly say that the action of Secretary Cortelyou seems to me to have been only of a piece with much else indicating a temper in our administration, and possibly (though I believe not) for a time dominant in American life, of hostility to freedom and favoring those narrow, arbitrary, obstructive, militaristic theories of public administration against which the very birth of our republic was a protest; theories which all countries, as they have grown more intelligent and more prosperous, have left behind.

Is it not intolerable that our government should admit freely a man who believes in despotism, religious persecution, or who supports polygamy (for mere belief in polygamy does not exclude), but that, on the other hand, men should be excluded for holding doctrines long preached and even practiced by many of the Quaker and other sects greatly respected by us all—doctrines held to-day by Tolstoi—doctrines the very holding of which implies a certain nobility and generosity of temper and faith? For me those beliefs are as yet impracticable and unsound; but I am far from saying or believing that they are more impracticable than much of the doctrine formulated in the Sermon on the Mount.

Has not America, has not civilization, come to everything now dear to them, to everything upon which their civilization and happiness depend, through the triumph of beliefs which were once odious and once treated as criminal, and for which men were deported and even burnt and crucified? Because Mr. Turner's belief is very far from mine, who am I that I shall say that, in the ages to come, he shall not be found right and I wrong? . . .

Are we to envy England the glory of her freedom? Are we not rich that the archives of our State Department hold the drafts of the noble dispatches we sent to Austria when she was displeased with our courtesy to Hungarian exiles? Must we in the twentieth century envy England the replies made in the middle of the nineteenth century by Lord Palmerston to Louis Napoleon and to other monarchs of continental Europe who would reduce the liberty of thought and speech in England—replies ever since stoutfastly sustained by the English government and English sentiment? Are we not to serve better, rather than worse, the cause of human freedom than the nation, once our oppressor, to which we sent the Declaration of Independence as an affirmation by America of a sound, sober, safe policy of public administration for all time to come? Is it credible that in our day and in our land there should be found men in places of great power who do not see that nothing is so conservative, nothing so safe as an absolute liberty to think and to speak and to write, so long as there is no urgency or invitation to vice or to violence!

I earnestly hope that the meeting at Cooper Union will demand that the statute shall be so modified as to make it clear that no belief shall exclude any man from our land, except as it shall form part of an intention to promote crime or vice or violence. I hope that the meeting will go further, and, assuming—as I think it ought to assume—that no such thing as this deportation of Mr. Turner was ever intended by Congress, declare that his deportation or any other interference with peaceful freedom of belief by the executive authority is a high-handed offense against American right, American law, American conscience, American order and American freedom.—Edward M. Shepard, in letter read at Cooper Union meeting.

I shall be grateful if you will convey to the Free Speech League, as also to all those who have in any way assisted, my very high appreciation of their efforts in my behalf. But while I am quite unable to adequately express how I value their personal feeling of friendship, I am still more concerned that the whole force of public opinion shall be brought to bear with a view to abrogating this law under which I was arrested and am now detained for deportation.

That is the question of principle to keep steadily in sight, and my personality is only incidental to it. Whether I am deported or not makes very little difference, but the safe and permanent establishment of this measure means the beginning of an era of attempted suppression of opinion which would menace every minority in the United States.

What is there about America that can cause it to fear the ideal of one who in Great Britain and Ireland, France or Belgium, remained unmolested? Is the new democracy more fearful of opinions than the older European countries? I hope, for the credit of the United States, honest opinion will not be permanently barred out by ill-conceived legislation, and that lovers of liberty will not rest till they have again placed America among those liberal countries which do not use political discrimination against the stranger at their gates.—John Turner, in letter to Mr. Pleydell, read at Cooper Union.

It is generous of Mr. Turner to suffer persecution voluntarily that citizens of the United States may test the constitutionality of the law against free speech and free thought as well. If the methods of Russia and Turkey are to prevail here, the sooner we know it authoritatively through the Supreme Court the better. By this self-sacrifice we shall learn definitely whether or no we are to wear shackles extemporized for us by imperialism in a season of national hysteria. Free expression is a danger to tyrants, and stifling individual opinion is the first step from democracy to despotism. Against this manifest tendency let every lover of liberty protest.

"Now, while the padlocks for our lips are forging, Silence is crime."

—William Lloyd Garrison, in letter read at Cooper Union.

Early in American history, there was a popular uprising against the alien and sedition laws, which seem to me to have been less arbitrary, less insidious, and less of a menace to freedom of thought and speech than is the present procedure of the Department of Commerce, as is illustrated in the Turner case. Since the time of the "English star chamber" proceedings, I know of no more flagrant case of imprisoning and deporting a person without giving him an opportunity for a fair trial and without any other evidence against him than vague suppositions as to what his theories and beliefs are.—Alfred J. Boulton, in letter read at Cooper Union.

The opinions of Mr. Turner I do not know, but that is not the question. The issue is whether any man's opinion should bar him from our shores. The misuse of such power begins with any use of it.—Thomas C. Hall, in letter read at Cooper Union.

The legislation against which we protest is of an atrocious class. The bill is a badly drawn document, and it would be easy to demonstrate how ridiculous are its inconsistencies. But it is too serious a matter. One might as well discuss the etiquette of murder as to criticise the rhetoric of such an act as this. . . . Thousands upon thousands of voters in Western States, thousands of peaceable citizens, married here, acquiring homes and building up the country, are at the mercy of reptile informers, inspired by officious zeal, paid by personal enemies, or subsidized by foreign governments to counteract the immigration of their citizens, and they may at any time be taken from their work, their friends, and their families, and, if condemned in secret trial, deported thousands of miles to the country they left.—John DeWitt Warner, in address at Cooper Union.

Comments of the Press.

One of the speakers at the Cooper Union meeting said he feared that Americans have forgotten what liberty means. He called attention to the significant absence from the meeting of the clergy, leading merchants, judges, the Mayor, the patriotic sons and daughters of this, that and t'other—the representatives of that element of society which calls itself "better" and claims a monopoly of virtue and patriotism—and he charged them all with being recreant to the faith of their fathers. The indictment was severe, but it was a true bill. Except a few earnest men and women on the platform, there was hardly a sprinkling of old-fashioned Americans in the hall. As one of the morning papers said, with half a sneer, the audience "was recruited mainly from the lower East Side." Perhaps that is why most of them deemed it safe to report the meeting falsely and to assert in stupid headlines that it was a demonstration in defense, favor and support of Anarchists and Anarchy.

It was such a meeting as might have been held in New York more than a century ago to protest against the alien and sedition laws, or in Boston before that to denounce the tyranny of an English king. It was called in defense of the fundamental rights of the American citizen, the rights of free thought, free speech, and public trial by judge and jury under the forms and safeguards of the common law. It was a meeting called to protest against and demand the repeal of a law so invasive of those American rights as to wring from the indignant John DeWitt Warner this startling challenge to authority: "We will resist to the death our government, or any other government, that attempts to penalize free thought and free speech by enforcing such a law as this."

The audience was earnest, alert, intelligent. It knew what items such names as Guizot, Reclus, Thoreau, Emerson and Spencer stand for, and quickly appreciated the slightest allusions to them. More than all, that audience knew the meaning of "administrative process," knew what dangers to the citizen lie in any curtailment of the right of free speech, and had a living, human grasp of those principles and ideals which have become mere academic platitudes to too many of us. Curious, is it not? While Americans are prating solemnly of the evils of immigration and devising barriers to keep aliens out of the country, the immigrants are defending American principles, keeping alive the American ideal and jealously guarding American rights from invasion by the perverted machinery of American government.—Daily News (New York).

The ability of the anti-Anarchist clauses of the immigration law to make martyrs to free thought is being signally illustrated in the agitation that has arisen in New York City over the deportation of John Turner, the English labor organizer. The mass meeting in Cooper Union to protest against the government's act was the scene of a great gathering of earnest people, who believe that Turner's deportation would be essentially an act of stark tyranny, unjustified by any condition and utterly opposed to the principle of free speech, and especially of free thought, upon which the American republic was founded. Whether Congress will heed the protest, in case the United States Supreme Court sustains Judge Lacombe, may depend entirely upon the amount of popular feeling aroused. The labor unions of America, to whose work and principles Mr. Turner has been devoted, might take up this affair to good advantage and press it upon the attention of Congress. . . . The long struggle for intellectual liberty, from the Middle Ages down to the opening of the nineteenth century, stands for too much agony and sacrifice in human history to be repudiated in our own time. The principle won at such great cost cannot be attacked without arousing a violent protest, of which the Cooper Union meeting was but the first sign. . . . It should not be forgotten, in any consideration of this case, that protection for the Anarchist who preaches violence and assassination of rulers is not demanded by any one. That section of the new law which is exciting protest, and under which it is proposed to deport Mr. Turner, provides for the deportation of any alien who "disbelieves" in organized government. Mr. Turner, like Tolstoi and Krepotkin, never in his life suggested or advocated violence or assassination, yet, like those two celebrated men, he does "disbelieve" theoretically in organized government. His intellect has honestly brought him to that conclusion, which stands for an ideal. Is it not a mistake and a violation of the spirit of our institutions to drive this man from the country because of an honest belief in academic anarchy, peaceably held? . . . The conclusion cannot be avoided that in prohibiting the presence in this country of men simply because they "disbelieve" in the government which exists in this stage of civilization, Congress acted without realizing the effect and bearing of its legislation.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

As we have already pointed out, Mr. Turner was arrested in true Russian style, while making an address upon trades unionism at a hall in this city. The sole reason for the interference of the federal authorities, by direction of Secretary Cortelyou, was some speeches which Mr. Turner had delivered in England, and to which the British authorities had never deemed it worth while to pay any attention. . . . If there is one ideal associated with the history of the United States it is the right to free thought and free speech. There was no other motive behind the coming of the Pilgrims than the desire freely to worship as they pleased. . . . The country has recognized that free speech is the best safety-valve in any free land. It has hitherto always declined to follow the example of the French republic in punishing men for their political views. . . . The truth is that the statute as now worded, whether intentionally or because of carelessness, savors of the Middle Ages, of the days of religious intolerance and persecution, and is a blot upon the country's good name. It puts sweeping powers into the hands of a government official which he ought never to possess and cannot be trusted with, as Secretary Cortelyou has shown. It will inevitably bring with it a system of espionage at home and abroad. It involves already deportation after a secret hearing in which the accused man is made the main witness against himself; and from the decision of a commissioner he has no appeal save to a cabinet officer. The wrong is plainly so monstrous that Congress cannot refuse to amend the law so that it shall apply only to those persons who come here advocating the commission of violent crimes.—Evening Post (New York).

Where are the workingmen? How many unions have discussed the case of Mr. Turner? One. The Central Labor Union—and it voted that it could not afford to help him! Could not afford to help a unionist! It was afraid of being contaminated. How many workingmen know about this case? We have interrogated a great many. "Oh, yes; I saw Mr. Turner's name mentioned in the papers as being arrested." "What! Turner, the Anarchist? They sent him back to England, didn't they?" And that was all they knew about the outrage on their champion. In the speech, after making which Mr. Turner was arrested, the reporters claimed that his utterances were incendiary, inasmuch as he said that within ten years there would be a strike beside which all other strikes have been infants' efforts. Mr. Turner is mistaken. The workingmen are asleep to stay. Sleeping men do not think, and the workingmen are asleep as far as all the vital principles of liberty in this country are concerned. Once in a while they wake up and break some comrade's head and then go to sleep again. They are in the brute force stage, and are met with brute force, and they always lose in the end because they can be hired to club and shoot and arrest their comrades. The institutions of society are in no possible danger from them. Mr. Turner can be safely turned loose.—Truth Seeker (New York).

It seems probable at the present writing that, as a result of the attempt of the government to deport John Turner, the constitutionality of the law under which the attempt is made will be passed upon by the Supreme Court of the United States. It is to be hoped that the case of the defense will be adequately presented. In my view the only hope of overturning the law lies in the argument that it is in conflict with the spirit of the constitution, for I consider it almost certain that the higher court will decide, as did the lower court, that it does not conflict with the letter. As it could not in any case be in the power of Congress to pass effective laws limiting the freedom of speech of persons not residing within the jurisdiction of the United States, it is hardly to be supposed that the framers of the constitution intended to forbid such legislation, of the possibility of which they never could have dreamed. But, on the other hand, it is still less to be supposed that, in framing a constitution for a land whose earliest settlers came here from foreign shores in search of freedom to speak, they intended to make it possible to prevent others from following this example. Turner's lawyers should build their case on this contention.—Liberty (New York).

It is not generally known that the new anti-Anarchist law not only authorizes the deportation of aliens disbelieving in organized government, but provides long terms of imprisonment for American citizens inviting such aliens to those shores. If I were to invite a friend John Henry Mackay to this country to pay me a social visit, I could be imprisoned for years under this law. But John Henry Mackay, residing in Berlin, can invite me to visit him there without danger of interference on the part of Emperor William, provided always that during my sojourn I do not speak with unseemly levity of the emperor's mustache. Which is the freer country, the United States or Germany?—Liberty (New York).

While the unwisdom of officialism is daily illustrated, the argument for each proposed new department sets out with the postulate that officials will act wisely. After endless comments on the confusion and apathy and delay of government offices, other government offices are advocated. After ceaseless ridicule of red-tape, the petition is for more red-tape.—Spencer.

Verily, thou art either working man, beggar man, or thief; for, except ghost, there is naught else for man to be.—Carlyle.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 West 143d street, New York.

Lucifer and its literature can be obtained in San Francisco at the book store of Robert C. Ross, 1203 Market street, opposite City Hall.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire let us hear from you if you want to continue to receive Lucifer.

Notes of Travel.

OAKLAND, Cal., Dec. 9, 1903.

"Speech is silvern, but silence is golden," saith the proverb. For some weeks past I have occupied but little of Lucifer's space. Having arranged to give a short lecture course in San Francisco, I thought it best to concentrate the little energy I possessed upon making these lectures a success and depend upon others to do the writing for Lucifer's columns. That our readers have little or no cause to regret this arrangement I have good reason to believe. Now that this lecture course is ended I once more ask a share of the weekly space in our old yet ever young Light Bringer.

First, I wish to say a few words in regard to California as a health resort in winter—or fall and winter. It is just one month since I landed in San Francisco, having reached that city on the evening of Nov. 9. As most of our readers know, winter is the wet season in California, and notably so in San Francisco. It so happened that the wet season began simultaneously with my arrival on this coast, and for two weeks or more there were almost no dry days. Often, too, when there was no rain the fogs in San Francisco were sufficient to shut out the sun and make the invalid regret having left so soon the almost perpetual sunshine of New Mexico and Arizona. The two weeks last past have, however, made amends, and most of the days have been bright, sunny and pleasantly warm, though the nights have been cool enough for overcoats, heavy blankets and fires in sitting rooms.

* * *

Speaking of New Mexico, I am reminded of a promise made to many friends in that land of sunshine, of pure air and pure water, to make further mention of the fact that health-seekers, living in the Eastern States, and in the great "Middle West," need not cross the continent to find these prime conditions of a first-class health resort in greatest perfection. Added to these advantages should be mentioned the fact that flesh-eaters can have beef and mutton direct from the alfalfa pastures, instead of from the slaughter-pens of the great cities, to which pens they have been brought many hundreds and even thousands of miles in stock cars, packed like sardines in a box, deprived of food, of water, of exercise and even of the privilege of lying down. Vegetables and many fruits grow to great perfection in New Mexico, so that the vegetarian does not need to depend upon cold storage and long carriage for his supply of these necessaries of life.

Of the three stops in New Mexico—at Las Vegas, Albuquerque and Socorro—it is difficult to decide which interested me most, as a health-seeker. Each has advantages peculiar to itself. The first named is the farther north and occupies the higher ground. The second is medium as to latitude and altitude, and consequently has less variation of temperature winter and summer. The last named is farthest south, and much lower in altitude, hence has more summer and less winter.

As to sunshine and dryness, Albuquerque stands pre-eminent, not only among New Mexican cities, but, according to the editor of the Journal-Democrat of that city, pre-eminent among all the inhabited sections of the United States—as shown by carefully kept records. As to population, business, wealth and political influence, Albuquerque is easily the metropolis of New Mexico, and on these accounts will probably attract more health-seekers than either of the other places named. As yet there is no large sanitarium located here and no pleasure resort, such as the Montezuma Hotel, near Las Vegas, was designed to be, but in the way of hotels located near the Santa Fe depot and business center Albuquerque is fairly well supplied. A week's stop at the Highland Hotel, located, as the name indicates, on high ground, and convenient to the railway station, convinced me that the host and hostess of this hotel understand their business and do their best to make their guests feel at home, and for a temporary stopping place, or even for a longer sojourn, the Highland Hotel, of which S. R. Symonds is proprietor, is hereby recommended to the readers of Lucifer who may be traveling in New Mexico for health, business or pleasure.

At Socorro is located the School of Mines for the territory, and while I have little faith in the plan of educating people at the expense of the taxpayers, it would seem right and proper that attention be paid to the best methods of mining and of extracting metals from the native ores, in a country largely dependent on mines. In company with an old friend and subscriber I had the pleasure of a drive out to this school, and of making the acquaintance of its professors, and of examining its various departments, laboratories, etc. Socorro is one of the oldest towns in New Mexico, and possesses great advantages as a health resort, also as to its opportunities for business enterprises. Any reader of Lucifer who may feel interested in learning more of this city, the most southern point visited while on my trip to the Pacific Coast, can obtain reliable information by addressing J. H. Hilton, one of our subscribers at Socorro, N. M.

My trip through Arizona, another land of perpetual sunshine, was made without stop and mainly by night, so that I cannot speak with such confidence as of New Mexico of its advantages as furnishing opportunities for getting and keeping well. As to scenery, while much of what I saw was grandly beautiful there was too much of the desolate and barren to make Arizona very desirable for permanent homes or even as temporary stopping places. South of the line of the Santa Fe, however, I am told, there are many flourishing settlements, famous for health and for building beautiful and desirable homes.

As a land of unlimited possibilities, however, California seems to exceed anything I have seen since leaving Chicago. San Francisco, with its suburbs, Oakland, Berkeley, Alameda, Fruitvale, and a few others, is doubtless the most wonderful city on the continent, especially when we consider the changes wrought in the comparatively small area within the past thirty or forty years. The population of San Francisco and its suburbs is now believed to exceed half a million human beings, while the buildings and other improvements are on a scale of magnificence and beauty scarcely surpassed anywhere in the western world.

Speaking of the possibilities of California, I have just been made acquainted with the groundwork of an individualistic co-operative enterprse, to be located within two hours' ride by rail from San Francisco, that impresses me as very practicable if the right kind of people can be got together. There are nearly four hundred acres in the tract, water and timber, with bearing fruit-trees, vines, buildings, etc., one mile from a railroad station. Any one wishing further information in regard to this enterprise can address me at San Jose, Cal., care 126 South McLaughlin avenue.

Having taken so much space with the introduction to what I meant to say as to the reception accorded me by the people of San Francisco, I must close for this week, hoping in my next to give some account of the western metropolis—of business enterprise and of progressive thought, also of the three lectures I was permitted to give at Memorial Hall, Odd Fellows' Building, San Francisco.

M. HARMAN.

What sense is there in paying the bills of another world while living in this? We can live in but one world at a time, and it is the heaven of this life that we should seek and the hell of this life that we should shun.—Boston Investigator.

San Francisco Protests.

The following resolutions were adopted at a meeting at Memorial Hall, Odd Fellows' Building, San Francisco, Nov. 29:

"Resolved, That we, citizens of San Francisco, do hereby protest against the unjust and arbitrary action of the Third Assistant Postmaster General, E. C. Madden, in proposing to strike from the list of papers receiving second-class rates Lucifer, the Light-Bearer, published by Moses Harman of Chicago, and Freedom, published by Helen Wilmans of Seabreeze, Fla., as an unwarranted encroachment upon the rights of free speech and free press, and therefore a denial of constitutional rights.

"Resolved, That a committee appointed by the president of the evening sign these resolutions and forward a copy to the Third Assistant Postmaster General, E. C. Madden."

The resolutions were signed by a committee composed of Scott Briggs, 132 McAllister street; S. H. Tarr, 217 Parrott Building, and C. V. Cook, 384 Dolores street.

The hall was well filled and the expression of protest apparently unanimous.

Copies of the following letter of protest were circulated and unanimously signed by those present in the hall, which copies will be sent to the Third Assistant Postmaster General:

"San Francisco, Cal., Nov. —, 1903.

"Mr. Madden, Third Assistant Postmaster General, Washington, D. C.—Dear Sir:

"We the undersigned desire to enter our protest against the action of the United States Postoffice Department in attempting to deprive the papers, Lucifer the Light-Bearer, published by Moses Harman of Chicago, and Freedom, published by Helen Wilmans of Seabreeze, Fla., of the privileges of second-class registration.

"Yours respectfully, ——."

M. HARMAN.

Tess and Other Women.

A good friend whom I have never seen, noting my queries published in No. 995, has sent me back numbers of Lucifer—with a prescience quite marvelous—to the very date of my being obliged to forego it. Now my spare minutes are given to reading up; as they are rare, I've not got very far yet. But I owe the sender gratitude for the mental feast he has provided me.

In the first place, in these papers, I am struck by the vivacity and logical force of the writings of Lucifer's new correspondent, Lena Belfort. Her plea for a new literature, a literature more true to life and in line with our vigorous young ideals, comes at a time when it is needed. Would that it might be heeded! And her answer to George Brown's nonsense about Hardy's Tess, and women generally and generically, was strong and to the point. If I did not know George Brown to be a good fellow and a lovable one, I should let his utterances pass as nothing more than the stock chatter of the every-day trolley-car philistine, and forget them. As it is, I become indignant again, for the —th time, at this glib talk of "prostitutes" and "the chaste woman." It seems to me that if I were a man, feeling as men do, as I have heard George Brown say he thinks, that the prostitute is necessary to men; if I used her myself; if this were the case, it seems to me that bare decency would forbid my speaking ill of this creature of my need. Nay, merely as a reasoning being, leaving sex out of the question, I do not vilify the vessel that serves my necessities.

It has always struck me as a pretty low thing for women to run down that caste called prostitutes; but at least we do not say, "We must have them"; we do not use them. Ah! I forget. We virtuous women (Brown would say chaste women, wouldn't he?) are preserved to our husbands, lovers, masters, by the prostitutes. Then I say "Shame!" to that man or woman who, living in comfort or in virtue at the expense of another's comfort or virtue, utters one word of blame of the one whose parasite he is. Which is the parasite? The prostitute, or that society which sucks her blood?

Now, I wish that my friend would give us an exact definition of the word chastity. Mind, I mean something positive that we may know it by when we see it. If it exists outside of Brown's "chaste" mind, of course, it can be defined. Of course, I know what the conventional, dyed-in-the-wool conservative means when he speaks of chastity. But what can a radical mean? What does the word mean to a man for whom the ceremony of marriage is a shibboleth? I wish Brown would tell us whether it is a quality or a condition; and then whether it applies to body, mind, or soul. It can scarcely be a quality; for qualities—of body, mind and soul—are desirable, or they are undesirable, irrespective of sex. Brown implies that chastity in man is either undesirable or impossible—or at least different from chastity in woman. It cannot, then, be a quality. If it is a condition, it might, of course, be affected by sex, if a condition of body. Mental and spiritual conditions have not yet been determined by sex, I believe. If it is a physical conditon, I should be very glad to know what it is. I do not pretend to deep physiological science. Will Mr. Brown kindly enlighten my ignorance?

Though I will not join in the vulgar hue and cry against those arbitrarily called prostitutes, still I do not wish to see their tribe increase; and I firmly believe that this loose talk about "chastity" does a great deal to keep up that false sentiment which creates real prostitution.

LAURA H. EARLE.

The New Thought Convention.

After being one of Elbert Hubbard's "freaks" for some time and mingling with the constant stream of charmed and charming visitors to the much-overrated Roycroft Shop, I drifted into the Chicago convention, and found its atmosphere very pleasant and congenial.

Aside from the general interest in a "reformed Roycrofter," I met a fine spirit of comradery and good-fellowship that spoke well for the New Thought people. Probably in no other gathering containing so many people of influence and high position did conventionality ever count for so little, and individuality have such free scope. Strangers from thousands of miles apart were mutually fused by the instinct of the occasion into the happy units of a family reunion.

The whole drift of New Thought teaching is in the direction of individualism. It helps in the attainment of that personal poise and power that fits for release from all restraint. Before those who really live in its spirit, law is ridiculous and government absurd.

The world will hear from this convention and the people who composed it. It is the New Life—the charmed life, the full-orbed life—that is irresistible. It is immune from prison or injunction. Its smile is stronger than uniformed regiments; its silent thought more explosive than dynamite. The New Thought reformer, in any line, needs no revolutionary programme, no campaign of noisy invectives and denunciation. Kindly and sweetly he lives and works, and all the things that bind and bar humanity's rising love-tide vanish like the winter's ice before the coming spring.

All this was immanent and vibrant at the convention. That some of the people who created this spirit were not familiar with the avowedly Anarchistic forms of its expression helps to show its universality and power. The love of freedom is a growing love. Real New Thought people make good Anarchists.

C. L. BROWNE.

Socialism vs. the Single Tax.

To my recent fable designed to show the inadequacy of "equal opportunity" as a remedy for the economic injustice of the day, Bolton Hall appends a Single Tax sequel in Lucifer No. 998. In the fable, five men of unequal ability run a race under equal conditions, with their economic lives for a year as the reward, and the ablest man not only wins his own prize, but also possesses himself of the prizes rightfully belonging to the others. As a solution of the difficulty, Bolton Hall suggests that the winner be taxed by the losers to the full value of the wrongfully appropriated prizes.

The Single Tax position is therefore this: The winner has no right to the economic lives of his fellows, but so long as conditions allow him their possession, we will try to even up matters by taxing him so heavily that he will not really be a gainer after all.

Now the Socialist position is also that the winner has no right to the economic lives of his fellows, but it differs from the Single Tax position in maintaining that conditions which allow such wrongful possession are necessarily themselves wrong, and must be changed. In other words, it is foolish to try to even up the result of continually recurring unfair races, instead of arranging races that are fair from the start. Furthermore, to tax a robber is practically an admission of the righteousness of robbery. As was suggested in the before-mentioned fable, there is no just remedy but the handicap race, assuring to each individual his own economic life, and fully acknowledging his ethical right thereto.

ALEX. H. WIGHT.

Equal Opportunities: A Fable.

A man who sought to serve all humankind deeply regretted the vicious antagonisms which prevented the members of the various sects of economic reformers from working harmoniously, unitedly, and thus intelligently and effectively.

Pondering in humility, and ever desirous of perceiving, receiving and considering, there was given unto this man the knowledge that, whilst the various camps of reformers were blindly worshiping crude devices of human creation, the real economic goal sought by all of them was the natural ultimation of the universal principle of justice—viz.: access upon a basis of equality upon complying with like conditions.

Furthermore it was given to this man to perceive that, acknowledging the unquestioned accuracy of the foregoing fundamental fact, evolutionary and constitutional proposed laws could be drafted which, enacted into law by the suffrage of the people, would speedily permit and aid all humans to work out their economic salvation.

An ungentlemanly reformer who was sadly short in mental grasp and discretion, but blessed with a bountiful supply of real valor, blurted out a harsh curse upon the man who dared to disclose truth in its most practical form.

A profound thinker who had succeeded in forcing his broad intellect into the contracted rut of land reform via the Single Tax route as the only genuine and unquestioned economic panacea was so shocked at the crude assault of the ungentlemanly reformer that, to make amends, he assailed the newcomer with the illy planned, revolutionary and unconstitutional device, the taxation of land values, and slew him, like a gentleman should, according to the rules of approved warfare. Then all the Single Taxers chorused, Selah! and the false consistency of the adherents of the various economic divisions was successfully maintained.

MORAL.—The leaders of the various economic isms must close their mental vision to the reception or perception of any new harmonizing and practical disclosure; otherwise their distinctive occupation would vanish. The masses suffer and are debased through unnatural economic legislation, but the ignoble position of reform leaders must be upheld. EDWARD STERN.

Answers to Laura H. Earle's Questions.

"Does a sex attraction that is exclusively physical justify itself?" Whatever, and only whatever, is mutual is justifiable and right.

"And how does such a phenomenon explain itself in a person who recognizes the essential difference between this emotion and that of love?" Physical attraction is an essential part of love. There is no real, all-around love without physical attraction.

"Or are the two emotions only different aspects of the same great passion?" Physical attraction and whatever else composes love is part of the great passion called love—Love, the savior or saver of humanity.

"Does the gratification of the physical need blunt the perception for the more etherealized love?" If the two distinct methods of sex communion are understood and practiced the answer is a most decided no.

"And would the answers to these questions have the exact same application to both sexes?" I see no reason why the application would not be the same to both sexes.

SARA CHRIST CAMPBELL.

The Task of Voltaire.

Voltaire's task, however, was never directly political, but spiritual, to shake the foundations of that religious system which professed to be founded on the revelation of Christ. Was he not right? If we find ourselves walking amid a generation of cruel and unjust and darkened spirits, we may be assured that it is their beliefs on what they deem highest that have made them so. There is no counting with certainty on the justice of men who are capable of fashioning and worshiping an unjust divinity, nor on their humanity so long as they incorporate inhuman motives in their most sacred dogma, nor on their reasonableness while they rigorously decline to accept reason as a test of truth.—John Morley.

We are all of us, in the realm of religion, Anarchists.—Dr. Lyman Abbott.

VARIOUS VOICES.

We are always glad to receive calls from friends visiting the city. Take the Lake street elevated, stop at Ashland avenue, walk one block east, then one block north. Or take Fulton street electric car west and stop at St. John's place, alighting in front of our house. The Lake street electric and Paulina street cars also pass within a block of our residence.

Alex. E. Wight, Wellesley Hills, Mass.: For the information of those government officials who are attempting to suppress Lucifer, I wish to state that I have been a paid subscriber for several years, and am now paid for at least one year in advance. I subscribe to Lucifer for two reasons: (1) because it advocates a most important social reform, and (2) because it avails itself more fully than any publication of which I know of such freedom of the press as is allowed to the papers of the United States. It is in the completest sense (aside from legal limitations) a people's forum.

F. E. Gorton, Fenton, Mich.: Please let me say that I have been a subscriber to and reader of Lucifer for several years, and had I been a reader of this journal when I was just entering manhood it would have been worth more than a thousand dollars to me. It was first recommended to me by Dr. E. B. Foote of New York, and I am grateful to him for so doing. Now, I would most heartily advise all young people to become readers of this journal. It treats of a subject that is tabooed but which is of great importance to all, and every young person who reads Lucifer carefully will thank me for recommending it.

C. L. James, Eau Claire, Wis.: I perceive that your article "Not a Case for the Hatchet" was a satire on the extract from Medical Talk, Columbus, O., headed "A Professional Monster." I see that because it immediately followed the extract and was so thoroughly adapted to expose it. There was no need for you to write, "This is sarcasm," as Artemus Ward would have done. We could see that without. Now, if you will go on clipping absurdities from quacks' organs, and adding to each a tag so very pertinent as that about Carrie Nation and the dentist, Lucifer will soon resume its former attitude of resistance instead of captivity to the Movement in Favor of Ignorance. Do not lose the opportunity!

Amicus, Springfield, Mass.: The Watch and Ward Society has lately secured the arrest of four prominent Boston booksellers for having in their possession Boccaccio's "Decameron," Margaret of Navarre's "Heptameron," and the works of Rabelais. The Watch and Ward Society will not increase its popularity by such ill-advised demonstrations against books that have a well-established standing in literature, even though, if its victims are convicted in courts, its treasury may benefit by a share of the fines imposed. These four booksellers, well-known Boston men, were treated with indignity. After a harsh arrest they were registered at the police station, and subjected to the Bertillon measurements for identification of criminals, and many newspapers have criticised the society for its action in the matter.

The Assimilation of Poland.

It is 108 years since the final partition of Poland, at which time a great empire, consisting of 24,000,000 people with a brilliant history, high hopes, great institutions, and splendid possibilities, was ruthlessly carved and apportioned to Russia, Prussia and Austria, and Poland as a political entity ceased to be. Still the Polish people are much in evidence in the history of the world. They are yet to be reckoned with all over the globe, and still they are the perplexity of their conquerors. It requires a peculiar digestive apparatus for a country to digest and assimilate a conquered people. Prussia is most troubled with indigestion in this direction. Try as it will, it finds it hard to kill the Polish spirit, although it is almost a crime to think in Polish; to teach the Polish language has been absolutely prohibited, both in public and private schools; children are not allowed to converse in Polish on the playgrounds. Some two years ago some Polish children were brutally flogged because they refused to pray in the German language, and when the mothers interfered both children and mothers were cast into prison. A relief fund raised for the benefit of these prisoners has been interpreted as evidence of treason. Polish names of towns and villages are being rapidly changed into German. Polish business men are prohibited from having their signs in Polish. A letter addressed in the language of the Poles must not be delivered. Vast sums of money are spent in trying to colonize Polish provinces with Germans. A monument to Bismarck has recently been unveiled in Posen. The same kind of tyrannies, though not so grievous, obtain in Russia. In the Austrian section of Poland alone are the representatives of this ancient and progressive people allowed their freedom. Truly, imperialism sets for itself hard tasks.—Unity (Chicago).

"WHO IS THE ENEMY?"

Dr. R. W. Shufeldt, biologist, author of several scientific works and of more than seven hundred articles on medicine, travel, science, sexual problems and other subjects, writes to E. C. Walker: "I thank you very much indeed for the copy you sent me of your valuable pamphlet, 'Who Is the Enemy: Anthony Comstock or You?' I have read it from cover to cover with the utmost satisfaction and unqualified approval. It is one of the best and strongest things you have put out, and I am with you solid in both the letter and spirit of it. I prize the copy most highly." Ask for table of contents and specimen pages of "Who Is the Enemy?" or send 20 cents to this office for the pamphlet.

Hugh O. Pentecost writes thus to Edwin C. Walker about the latter's new work, "Who Is the Enemy: Anthony Comstock or You?" "Your pamphlet is a strong discussion of the question at issue that one could give to a conservative friend with some hope that he might read it through."

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

KAREZZA.

SCIENCE OF MARRIAGE.

A godsend to every wife—a joy to every husband.

This work brings peace into homes disrupted by bitterness in the sexual relation. Dr. A. R. Stockham advises a practice which leads to individual liberty and to deeper love between husband and wife.

Dr. F. G. Welch: "After a personal trial of its teachings, I want to thank you for a great service to humanity."

Rev. George R. Hatchett: "Out of a beautiful and ennobling experience, I can say, I KNOW."

Gives a high ideal of the marital relation and teaches control of the Procreating Power.

J. A. Smalley, M. D.: "I have received more actual benefit from the practice of KAREZZA teachings than from all other books on Sexual Science."

A. R. Franklin, M. D.: "KAREZZA does more than any other single thing to make marriage a perpetual courtship."

LEVANT CLOTH, POSTPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

HILDA'S HOME.

A STORY OF WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

With Mercutio, Rosa Graul would say: "The cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty." Hence she has no fears that under Freedom the Home and the Family would cease to exist, or that woman would be less loving and lovable, or that man would be less manly and honorable. On the contrary, she maintains that only in the soil and atmosphere of freedom is it possible for true womanhood and manhood to live and flourish.

426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD.

AN OUTLINE OF PRACTICAL CO-OPERATIVE INDIVIDUALISM.

BY HENRY OLERICH.

Regarded by many persons as a more interesting and comprehensive economic reform novel than Bellamy's "Looking Backward."

Round in red silk with gold title. Nearly 400 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, $1.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

BY JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents—Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff or Protection; War Punishments; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

519 pages. Cloth binding somewhat damaged, and reduced from $1.50 to 50c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; OR THE PRICE OF VIRTUE.

By Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood, by Lucinda B. Chandler; Life's Gifts, by Olive Schreiner, and Marriage—What It Was and Is, and Will the Coming Woman Marry? Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of Freethought and Free Love. By Orford Northcote. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of so called Moralists. By M. Harman. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LIBERTY; Political, Religious, Social and Moral. By A. F. Tindall. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM, by E. C. Walker. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE COMING WOMAN, by Lillie D. White. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

MISCELLANEOUS.

GOING TO CALIFORNIA?

If you had not thought of it, why not make plans now to go? If you are going, we have just a word for you about getting there.

There is only one road which takes you up in Chicago or Kansas City and puts you down in Los Angeles or San Francisco without the aid or consent of another. This one railway is the SANTA FE. It is the only line under one management between points named, which fact assures uniform and efficient service.

Upon request we will gladly mail you a book and a booklet. Use coupon below if you would like them. The book describes the trip to California by way of the old Santa Fe trail. The booklet tells of the California Limited on the Santa Fe Ry. Scenery finest in America. Train best in world.

Daily service of the California Limited resumed on November 29 for eighth season. Other fast daily trains carry Pullman standard and tourist sleepers.

J. M. CONNELL, Gen. Agt.,
A., T. & S. F. RY.
109 ADAMS ST., CHICAGO.

SEND ME CALIFORNIA BOOK AND LIMITED BOOKLET.
Name.....
Street No.....
City.....

A BARGAIN.

FOR SALE—The Bradford Windmill plant, at Bradford, Wis., is for sale cheap. It consists of a well-equipped foundry, machine shop and wood shop. The cause is poor health, old age, and inability to run it. It is located in as fine a country as can be found west of the lakes. It fell into my hands through a bankruptcy sale, and therefore I can sell for less than the tools cost. Inquire of

S. O. BISHOP, Bradford, Wis.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 63, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We cannot sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 50c each, two for 90c. Address EDWIN C. WALKER, 244 W. 143d St., New York, N. Y.

WANTED—100 women to study medicine or midwifery. Next term begins January 1, 1904. College of Medicine and Surgery, 245 Ashland Blvd., Chicago, Ill. DR. FLORENCE DRESSLER, Secretary. (Dept. A.)

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

THE LIBERAL MAIL-ORDER JEWELER.

Now permanent at No. 130 N. Kensington Ave., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 20 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's Line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Truths in the Crucible." Free.

J. H. GREER, M. D.,
32 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.

Office Hours—9 a. m. to 3 p. m.; Wednesdays and Saturdays, 9 a. m. to 8 p. m.; Sundays, 9 a. m. to 12 m.
Telephone, Randolph 42.

DR. OGILVIE A. RICE,
DENTIST.
1305 MILWAUKEE AVE., COR. WESTERN, CHICAGO.
Telephone West 141.

PHILIP G. PEABODY,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
19 COURT SQUARE, ROOM 61,
BOSTON, MASS.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD OWN

TOKOLOGY.

A COMPLETE HEALTH GUIDE.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

Teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions.

Treats of diseases of women and children; contains practical teachings on Change of Life, limiting offspring, etc.

Lizzie N. Armstrong writes: "If I knew I were to be the mother of innumerable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of Tokology."

Dr. C. B. Willis: "Tokology is doing more for women than all other books put together."

CLOTH, PREPAID, $2.25; LEATHER, $2.75.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES.

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

Contents—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only"; Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Fooling of the Heathen"; What Are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women. With Appendix: The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 15c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

A treatise on Sexual Science and Marriage, rich in thought and strong in expression. Emphatically a book for the thinker.

Carpenter holds that woman's freedom is based upon economics; she must be independent financially that she may not be forced to sell herself in or out of marriage. He also makes a strong plea for a motherhood of freedom and thoughtful preparation.

AMERICAN EDITION, CLOTH, PREPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM.

THE RELATIONSHIP OF EACH TO HUMAN LIBERTY.

BY E. C. WALKER.

The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organization and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. Price 5c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

CREATIVE LIFE.

A BOOK FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

A timely and important message not found in text books. Every girl seeks and should have this true, plain and practical knowledge. One writes: "Thank you, thank you, dear Doctor, for the plain but beautiful thoughts. Womanhood, motherhood and life have new meanings. You ennoble your theme." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

A NOVEL BY GEORGE N. MILLER.

FORTIETH THOUSAND.

"The Strike of a Sex" is a fascinating novel bearing upon the sexual relations. It is a bold protest against the customary life of most married people, and at the same time a prophecy of happier conditions between man and wife. Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW.

A PRIMER OF SEXUAL RATIONALISM.

BY E. C. WALKER.

"Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes."

Paper covers; 42 large pages. Price 10c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

"PERSONAL EXPERIENCES OF TWO AMERICAN ANTI-VIVISECTIONISTS IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES."

BY PHILIP G. PEABODY.

With an Appendix by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c. Apply to PHILIP G. PEABODY, 15 Court Square, Boston, Mass.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY.

By Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition, by E. C. Walker; Motherhood in Freedom, by Moses Harman; The Greatest Sin (an allegory), by E. B. Kerr, and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom, by Oscar Rotter. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN.

By E. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.; The New Martyrdom, by Lillian Harman, and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE.

By E. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese, by C. W. Coolridge; A Traveler's Tale, by E. B. Kerr; The Cat's Story, by Emile Zola. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

1000.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

THE SALE OF AN APPETITE.

A STORY BY PAUL LAFARGUE.

Emile Destouches stood outside the finest restaurant in Paris, shivering with cold and ready to die of hunger. A portly capitalist came up, invited him inside, gave him the best dinner money would buy, and then proposed a contract, by which Destouches was to digest the capitalist's food for five years, in return for a salary of two thousand francs a month, payable in advance. The young man gladly accepted, but in a short time repented of his bargain. To understand why, you must read the book. It is one of the cleverest satires on the present capitalist system ever written.

It is translated from the French by Charles H. Kerr, and is beautifully illustrated with engravings from original wash drawings by Dorothy D. Deene. It is printed on the finest of paper and daintily bound in cloth, with unique cover design, making a charming holiday gift.

Price, including postage to any address, fifty cents.

OTHER BOOKS THAT WILL INTEREST LUCIFER'S READERS.

ESSAYS ON THE MATERIALISTIC CONCEPTION OF HISTORY. By Antonio Labriola, Professor in the University of Rome. Translated from the latest Paris edition by Charles H. Kerr. Cloth, 246 pages. Price $1, postpaid. Ready Dec. 20.

A STUDY IN GOVERNMENT. By Henry E. Allen. Price 5c.
IMPRUDENT MARRIAGES. By Robert Blatchford. 5c.
WOMAN AND THE SOCIAL PROBLEM. By May Wood Simons. 5c.
SOCIALISM AND THE HOME. By May Walden Kerr. 5c.
SOCIALISM VS. ANARCHY. By A. M. Simons. 5c.
SINGLE TAX VS. SOCIALISM. By A. M. Simons. 5c.
MORALS AND SOCIALISM. By Charles H. Kerr. 5c.
THE FOLLY OF BEING "GOOD." By Charles H. Kerr. 5c.
RESIST NOT EVIL. By Clarence S. Darrow. Cloth, 75c.
CRIMES AND CRIMINALS. By Clarence S. Darrow. 10c.
REALISM IN LITERATURE AND ART. By Clarence S. Darrow. 5c.
WHAT TO READ ON SOCIALISM. 32 large pages, illustrated, mailed free on request.

CHARLES H. KERR & COMPANY,
PUBLISHERS,
56 FIFTH AVENUE, CHICAGO.

Please mention Lucifer when ordering.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

One of the best short works on the subject. A charming little gift book.

"Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it."

DAINTILY PRINTED. PREPAID, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES.

BY E. C. WALKER.

Contents—Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; What Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What Is She? What Will She Be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Platform Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections Upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love and Life." Price 25c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY, AND THE STATE.

BY FREDERICK ENGELS.

Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans.

217 pages; bound in cloth. Price 60c; postage 5c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STORY OF IJAIN;

OR, THE EVOLUTION OF A MIND.

By Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Stuart Ross), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. Price $1; postage 8c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE CURSE OF MATERNITY.

From the French of Henry Fevre. Together with How to Escape the Curse, by Jonathan Mayo Crane; Woman's "Duty" to Bear Children, by E. C. Walker; True and False Morality, by C. L. James; and Love's Law, by William Francis Barnard. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE.

By John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention, by Marietta; Reminiscences of Berlin Heights, by A. Warren, and The Sexes and Love in Freedom, by Oscar Rotter. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN.

By Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yelept Society, by Moses Hull; Virgin Soil, by George Egerton, and Normal Sexual Action, by Ernest Whose. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

PRICE 5 CENTS. CHICAGO, ILL., DEC. 31, E. M. 302. [C. E. 1903.] WHOLE NO. 1001

HOW DID YOU DIE?

Did you tackle that trouble that came your way
With a resolute heart and cheerful,
Or hide your face from the light of day
With a craven soul and fearful?
Oh, a trouble's a ton or a trouble's an ounce,
Or a trouble is what you make it,
And it isn't the fact that you're hurt that counts,
But only how did you take it?

You are beaten to earth? Well, well, what's that?
Come up with a smiling face.
It's nothing against you to fall down flat,
But to lie there—that's disgrace.
The harder you're thrown, why, the higher you'll bounce;
Be proud of your blackened eye!
It isn't the fact that you're licked that counts,
It's how did you fight—and why?

And though you be done to the death, what then?
If you battled the best you could,
If you played your part in the world of men,
Why, the critic will call it good.
Death comes with a crawl or comes with a pounce;
And whether he's slow or spry
It isn't the fact that you're dead that counts,
But what's done before you die.

—By Edmund Vance Cooke.

THE BIBLE VIEW OF WOMEN.

Hugh O. Pentecost, who is undoubtedly the ablest Freethought speaker in America, delivered an address in Lyric Hall, New York City, on Sunday, Dec. 13, on "The Bible View of Women," which should have been heard by every woman in the great city. The morning was rainy, however, and the audience was much smaller than those which usually attend his Sunday morning addresses. Here is a synopsis of his address, which certainly will interest every reader of Lucifer:

Woman to-day is more the companion of man than ever before. In former centuries it was never the habit of man to regard woman as his equal, though he sometimes pretended to regard her as his superior. Almost all the avenues of life are now open to woman. She not only earns her living in factories and mills, and in some places in coal mines, but she is also permitted to enter the so-called liberal professions. Many women now are lawyers and doctors. Literature is open to her and the field is largely occupied by her. She is also instrumental in promoting art and education. The majority of the teachers in the schools, taking them all together, are women. Department stores employ thousands of women, and they have proved their value in business offices where they are typewriters, stenographers and private secretaries. Nothing bars her from entering any business unless it be her own desire not to take advantage of her opportunities.

They are not yet allowed to vote. She can do anything else but that. Men want to spare her the responsibility of government; not on the ground that she has no right to vote, but because it is too heavy a duty to put upon her. In England women take a prominent part in political campaigns. Here, too, they take part in politics, but in a less public way.

This emancipation of woman has come about through instrumentalities which are worth considering. All great-minded men rejoice in the emancipation of women, and the Christian Church has taken all the credit for it. Christianity has opposed every advancement of the human race in every possible way and by every means; by torture, by thumbscrew and rack, by jails, by armies, by laws and by social ostracism. When human nature advances in spite of these obstacles, the Church takes the credit for it.

The Church glories in the fact that there is no slavery in this country and attributes it to the influence of Christianity, having such a short memory that it forgets how the Church took sides with the slave-holders and held up the Bible in support of the system of slavery. Slavery was abolished in spite of all the power of the Church in favor of slavery.

So in all departments of human activity. The working people have had no greater foe than the Church. Beginning with pope and going on down to the most obscure Protestant preacher, we find the Church arraigned against the laborers. By and bye, when organized labor shall have triumphed in spite of the Church, the Church will claim all the credit for advancing the condition of the workers.

One peculiar boast of the Church is that woman has been lifted up by Christianity. The time will come when the Church will claim Herbert Spencer, Huxley and Tyndall, and will boast that the Church overthrew every opposition to science.

The Bible, according to the Church, is the word of God. It seems to be perfectly fair to consult the word of God in regard to God's view of women, the Christian view of women, the Bible view of women. I want to show you what God thinks of women, what the Bible says of them, what Christianity thinks of them, as shown by its greatest teachers. Take the Old Testament, third chapter of Genesis.

Because the woman Eve disobeyed God and ate the forbidden fruit in the garden of Eden, God said to her: "I will greatly multiply thy sorrow and thy conception; in sorrow shalt thou bring forth children"—because she listened to the voice of a serpent instead of obeying God—"and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee." There is the beginning of the subjection of woman. And to the serpent who caused the woman to disobey, he said: "Because thou hast done this, thou art cursed above all cattle, and above every beast of the field; upon thy belly shalt thou go"—before that, I understand, serpents walked on legs—"and dust shalt thou eat all the days of thy life."

But let us see what he did to the man. "And unto Adam he said, Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree . . . cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life."

See the difference in the punishment. It is visited directly on the serpent and on the woman. The woman can never bear a child without suffering and she must be her husband's slave. But in the case of the man, the ground is merely cursed for his sake and he has to work for a living. God struck the serpent and the woman directly; but he couldn't strike Adam, so he just cursed the ground.

Now turn to the last of the ten commandments, given in the twentieth chapter of Exodus, and see what a place woman occupies. "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife,"—and it doesn't say anything about coveting another woman's husband; that was all right; a husband was free to do as he pleased; he belonged to himself; but a woman was property, the same as his ox and his ass—"thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his manservant, nor his maidservant"—that means his slaves; wherever a servant is spoken of in the Old Testament it means a slave—"nor his ox, nor his ass, nor anything that is thy neighbor's."

Now let us see about the slaves. In the twenty-first chapter of Exodus we read: "If thou buy an Hebrew servant, six years shall he serve: and in the seventh he shall go out free for nothing. If he came in by himself, he shall go out by himself; if he were married, then his wife shall go out with him. If his master has given him a wife, and she have born him sons and daughters, the wife and her children shall be her master's, and he shall go out by himself."

Remember this is God's book and this is the way God told his chosen people to take the wives and children away from their servants who wished to go free after serving six years. "The wife and her children shall be her master's." This God-given law has been enforced in this country in my own lifetime. I have seen men put on the block and sold away from their children. I have seen wives taken from their husbands and sold. I have seen children taken from their parents and sold.

But sometimes the love of the Hebrew slave for his children and his wife was greater than his love for freedom, and he preferred to remain a slave in order to be with them. The word of God provides in such a case that his master shall "bring him to the door, or unto the door post; and his master shall bore his ear through with an awl; and he shall serve him forever."

Now the man slave could go free at the end of six years of servitude, if he wanted to go. But how about the woman slave? "And if a man sell his daughter"—think of it! the word of God authorizing a man to sell his daughter!—"if a man shall sell his daughter to be a maidservant, she shall not go out as the menservants do." She must remain a slave forever. There are other things in this chapter which I cannot read to you. If any of Mr. Comstock's agents were here I might be arrested.

In Leviticus, twelfth chapter, I read: "And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, Speak unto the children of Israel, saying. If a woman have conceived seed, and born a man-child: then she shall be unclean seven days." Unclean because she has born a child. There is where we get the horrible idea that it is a filthy thing for a woman to bear a child. "And she shall continue in the blood of her purifying three and thirty days." In all that time she must not touch any hallowed thing. I suppose that includes man. And she is not permitted to enter a temple. She must be regarded as a filthy creature for thirty-three days.

That is for bearing a man child, but if she bears a girl child, then "she shall be unclean two weeks"—twice as long as for a man child; it is twice as filthy to bear a girl as it is to bear a boy—"and she shall continue her purifying threescore and six days." Thirty-three days of purifying for a boy and sixty-six for a girl. And because this woman had been so filthy as to bear a child she had to pacify the Lord by bringing him a "lamb of the first year for a burnt offering, and a young pigeon, or a turtle-dove, for a sin offering."

It was a sin for her to have a child, but God would forgive her sin if she would bring him a young pigeon or a turtle-dove. Then the priest had to make atonement for her to bring her at one with God. That is to say, she separated herself from God by her sin of bearing a child and the priest had to intercede for her and get God to forgive her.

This twelfth chapter of Leviticus is an expression of the uncleanness of the minds of God and of God's people. The same unclean idea is expressed by David in the Psalm where he says, "In sin did my mother conceive me." And this abominable idea lingers to this day, and your minds and my mind are so filled with these preposterous ideas of uncleanness that I cannot say what I want to say about it without shocking you. Constant references are made in the Bible showing that extraordinary uncleanness of the mind in regard to the birth of a child and the sex relations, and even to-day the prevailing idea is that these things are so obnoxious and filthy that anybody who speaks of them is vile or unclean.

In one of the courts of this city a woman was on trial for writing and offering for sale a book in which she combated this idea of uncleanness. The judge looked over her book and said to me: "Pentecost, have you read this book?" "Of course I have read it," I replied. "Do you know," he continued, "that this woman has actually used the name of the Almighty in connection with a discussion of the sex relations?" He said he had never heard of such blasphemy before. The idea of mentioning the name of the Almighty in connection with the birth of a child was blasphemy!

In Deuteronomy, chapter twenty-one, God says: "When thou goest forth to war . . . and seest among the captives a beautiful woman, and hast a desire unto her, that thou wouldst have her to thy wife: then thou shalt bring her home to thine house."

"If thou hast a desire unto her!" The woman has nothing to say about it. If you want her, go right in and pick her out. God says it is all right, and the woman has nothing to say about it.

"And it shall be, if thou have no delight in her, then thou shalt let her go whither she will." If she does not suit you, turn her out. That is God Almighty's command.

In the twenty-fourth chapter of Deuteronomy a husband whose wife finds no favor in his eyes is authorized to write her a bill of divorcement and send her out of the house. A woman could not divorce her husband for any cause, but the man can turn his wife out of the house as soon as he gets tired of her.

"And when she is departed out of his house, she may go and be another man's wife;" but, mark you, "her former husband, which sent her away, may not take her again to be his wife," if the second husband also tires of her and turns her out. No matter if the first husband finds that he made a mistake in sending her away and that he loves her more than he thought he did, he may not take her back again, after she has been another man's wife, for she has been "defiled," and that is "abomination before the Lord." Jehovah can't stand it. He can stand having her turned out of the house. He can stand two men having her for a wife, but he can't stand it to have her first husband take her back after her second husband has put her out of the house.

Now we come to the New Testament. Some Christians say it is the New Testament which has uplifted woman. Let us see. Jesus was a Jew and the Old Testament was his Bible. But the Christians say he was God. Then he was Jehovah. It was he who said all the things which the Bible says Jehovah said about woman. He made those Old Testament laws. How did Jesus regard woman? The twelfth chapter of Matthew tells how he treated his mother. His mother was naturally interested in her son. She knew he was going around making unpopular speeches and was likely to get into trouble.

One day while he was talking to a crowd his mother and brothers came to see him and word was taken to him that they were outside and wished to speak to him. What word did he send to them? Did he say, "Wait a few minutes until I finish talking to these pharisees and then I will see you"? Or did he tell the crowd to excuse him until he could find out what his mother wanted? No. He said, "Who is my mother? and who are my brethren?" Then he stretched his hands out to his disciples and said: "Behold my mother and my brethren!" He did not even send out word that he was busy and could not see them. He virtually said, "These people do not appreciate or understand me; you are my mother and my brethren."

In the second chapter of John's gospel we read the account of his first miracle. It was at a wedding feast. His mother was there. She was proud of her boy and expected wonderful things of him. When the wine was wanted his mother went to him and told him they had no wine. He replied, "Woman, what have I to do with thee? mine hour is not yet come." Yet, notwithstanding this rude reply, the mother forgave her son and said to the servants, "Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it."

Even at the crucifixion, as related in John, chapter nineteen, he again spurned his mother. If you will find in all history colder treatment of a mother, I'd like to know where it is. He was like all the others of that time who regarded woman as Jehovah regarded her. It never occurred to him that a woman has any particular right to man's respect. The mother of Jesus and her sister and Mary Magdalene stood by the cross, and when Jesus saw his mother and the disciple whom he loved standing by, he said to his mother, "Woman, behold thy son!" and to the disciple he said, "Behold thy mother!" And from that hour the disciple took her to his own house, a thing which probably her own son had never done.

Look at the Christian idea of marriage. When Jesus was asked if it was proper for a man to give his wife a bill of divorcement as the Mosaic law allowed, he said it was permitted in the old days because of the hardness of men's hearts. But he would allow a divorce for only one cause. His disciple said, "If the case of the man be so with his wife, it is not good to marry." Not good to marry if you cannot get rid of your wife when you get tired of her. His answer was one of his vague and mystic statements. "All men cannot receive this saying, save they to whom it is given. For there are some eunuchs, which were so born from their mother's womb: and there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men: and there be eunuchs, which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it."

That was simply saying, "Marriage is a sin. You had better not marry, but if you do marry you will be forgiven."

Tolstoi has taken that same gospel idea of the sinfulness of marriage and made it the theme of his novel "The Kreutzer Sonata." In that book the doctrine is taught that if a man even looks on his own wife with loving desire he defiles himself. That is the gospel doctrine. It is sinful to marry, but if you can't appreciate spiritual things and be spiritual-minded, get married.

See what Paul says about marriage in First Corinthians, chapter seven: "But and if thou marry, thou hast not sinned; and if a virgin marry, she has not sinned. Nevertheless such shall have trouble in the flesh: but I spare you." Now here is Paul's reason for opposing marriage: "He that is unmarried careth for the things that belong to the Lord, how he may please the Lord; but he that is married careth for the things that are of the world, how he may please his wife." He seems to think it is not a good thing for a man to try to please his wife. "There is a difference also between a wife and a virgin. The unmarried woman careth for the things of the Lord, that she may be holy both in body and in spirit; but she that is married careth for the things of the world, how she may please her husband." A married woman is not holy in the spirit if she tries to please her husband. A virgin is holy in body; a married woman isn't. "And this I speak for your own profit; not that I may cast a snare upon you, but for that which is comely, and that ye may attend upon the Lord without distraction." That is the Bible idea of marriage. If you have a wife she will distract you from the Lord.

Women must obey. In Ephesians, chapter five, Paul says: "Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord."

That was Paul's idea. I shall show you that it was Peter's idea also. In the third chapter of the first epistle of Peter, he says: "Likewise, ye wives, be in subjection to your own husbands." He tells them how they must wear their hair and that they must not wear gold ornaments or fine apparel. They must obey their husbands, "even as Sara obeyed Abraham." I think it is unlikely, however, that Sara obeyed Abraham all the time.

Then Peter gives advice to the husbands and tells them to dwell with their wives according to knowledge, "giving honor unto the wife as to the weaker vessel." "The weaker vessel!" Certainly. She is nothing but a woman.

In another place Paul says, "Let your women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law. And if they will learn anything, let them ask their husbands at home."

Woman was not taught to read or write, and if she wanted to know anything she could ask her husband. Work and keep your mouth shut was the rule for women. Fancy the chance a woman had to learn anything by asking such men as Paul was preaching to.

In his epistle to Timothy, Paul says: "Let the woman learn in silence with all subjection. But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence."

And Paul gave his reason for it. Here it is: "For Adam was first formed, then Eve." That was the reason why a woman must not be permitted to teach. "And Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in transgression. Notwithstanding she shall be saved in childbearing, if they continue in faith and charity and holiness with sobriety."

Mr. Pentecost mentioned the facts that there are no women angels spoken of in the Bible; that God is masculine, but that when antichrist is mentioned in Revelation it is a woman who is called by a name that he would not utter before his audience; that the churches are mainly supported by women and will perish when women become free from the thraldom which the Church has put upon them.

JONATHAN MAYO CRANE.

The matrimonial knot is sometimes tied so tightly that it wounds those whom it unites.—De Varennes.

THE RIGHT OF FREE THOUGHT.

If Mr Turner can be justly excluded, by the same law the government might have deported the late Herbert Spencer, the celebrated English philosopher. For Spencer was also one who, in a philosophical sense, "disbelieved in government." He was an intense individualist, and doubtless regarded theoretical Anarchy as the final ideal state, to which the cosmic process of evolution is slowly taking us. He was, of course, no revolutionist; but neither is John Turner, so far as any one can prove. Turner in England has been allowed perfect freedom to express his views; it was not until he came to America that he was found to be too dangerous to have at large.

It has been urged in some quarters, since the case of Turner began to attract attention, that if his teachings on government do not involve the use of violence and assassination they may have bad effects upon weaker minds and ultimately lead to regrettable episodes. This is inhibiting opinions because of their possible ulterior effects when passing through unknown and possibly unsafe mediums. Need it be pointed out that reasoning of this sort has in all ages been used to justify the shackling of thought? Russian autocracy to-day fetters the Russian intellect and destroys the liberty of speech and of the press in order that doctrines dangerous to government as it exists in Russia may not be overthrown. What has the experience of 1,900 years proved to enlightened, self-governing people if it has not shown that the human mind should be as free as the air in its processes? Restrictive laws never propagated truth, nor struck down error.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

SENATOR HOAR ON THE TURNER CASE.

Senator George F. Hoar of Massachusetts, in a letter to A. C. Pleydell of New York, says: "Your letter of Dec. 1 came to Washington while I was at home in Massachusetts, and has just reached me. It is too late to answer it in time for your purpose. I should have said, if I were to write a letter to be read at your meeting, that I should not approve any law or any construction of any law that excluded persons from the country merely because they disbelieved in all organized government, unless they also favored forcible resistance to all organized government. That should be clearly established, and should not be taken as established by anybody's deduction, as a matter of logic, from what the person who is under consideration avows as his belief. One of the greatest single causes of religious persecution and intolerance is the imputing to other men opinions which they themselves disavow, but which their opponents charge them with because they seem to the opponents the logical deduction from what they say they think. I am not bound to accept or submit to what another man thinks the logical consequence of what I say or do."

DEATH OF HANNAH J. HUNT.

Another old-time friend of Lucifer has passed over the other side. Hannah J. Hunt, the mother of Lillie D. White, Lizzie M. Holmes, C. F. Hunt and S. A. Hunt, died Dec. 11, at the age of 78, after a severe illness of nine days, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Holmes, in La Veta, Colo.

Mrs. Hunt was an intelligent and thoughtful woman, a stanch friend of free expression, free thought, and of tolerance in all things; while she could see and expose the absurdities in the old orthodox creeds, her spiritual nature always clung to the idea of a true religion, and she died believing in a future life, a good God, and the ultimate good of all things. She was both just and merciful, keenly sympathetic, and kind and lovable to all. She was much beloved in the little village where she died, and her many friends mourn for her.

POSTAL RULINGS MADE TO ORDER.

And now Autocrat Madden is again after Lucifer, this time on the preposterous ground that it is issued mainly for advertising purposes. Some of the dodges of Maddenism are scarcely credible. The autocrat seems to invent a new ruling for each reform paper which he wishes to suppress. He will shut out one for carrying no advertising matter, and another for carrying too much, the decision to be rendered, not according to law, but according to his own caprices. I trust that Lucifer will come out all right. It is a pity that such papers as are not Republican organs must be subject to these petty annoyances and persecutions at the hands of the most corrupt department in Washington. —The Demonstrator (Home, Wash.).

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES. VOL. VII., NO. 51.

MOSES HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Denied Entry as Second-Class Mail Matter by the United States Postoffice Department.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One copy, one year	$2.00	One copy, six months	$1.00
Two copies to one address, one year	2.25	Two copies to one address, six mos.	1.35
One copy, three months	50 cents	Single copies	5 cents

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire notify us if you wish to continue to receive Lucifer.

EASTERN REPRESENTATIVE:
E. C. WALKER, 244 WEST 143D STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Lucifer and its literature can be obtained in San Francisco at the book store of Robert C. Ross, 1203 Market street, opposite City Hall.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

THE CENSOR STRIKES AT LUCIFER.

Lucifer of Dec. 17, No. 1,000, was printed and delivered at the postoffice at the regular time. Failing to receive bill for postage from the postoffice, and being informed by subscribers that Lucifer had failed to reach them, an inquiry was sent to the postmaster, and this was the reply:

"M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.—Sir: Yours of Dec. 18 received. The edition of Lucifer of Dec. 17 is held at this office as unmailable, by order of the department at Washington, which has ruled that matter in this edition is in violation of section 497, Postal Laws and Regulations. The matter is now in the hands of the postoffice inspector in charge. Respectfully,

"F. E. COYNE, Postmaster."

This letter was received at noon on Sunday. On Sunday evening the copy for Lucifer must be taken to the linotype office to be set for the next week's paper. As there was no means of knowing whether the objectionable matter was contained in the advertising matter or in the reading columns, and as I did not even know what section 497 referred to, and as, furthermore, the copy from the editor was late in making its appearance, I decided to omit the publication of Lucifer for last week.

On consulting the statutes at the postoffice I found that section 497 prohibits the mailing of obscene literature, of instructions for the prevention of conception or for the procuring of abortion, or of matter pertaining to lotteries. As it was clear that there was nothing concerning the last three subjects in No. 1,000, the charge is apparently based on alleged obscene matter. We certainly have no desire or intention to print obscene literature, believing as we do that the subject of the sexual relations through which the world is peopled is one meriting earnest thought and serious discussion—a subject not to be dealt with flippantly, coarsely, obscenely.

The inspector, in reply to the request of Clarence S. Darrow to inform him whether the offending matter was contained in advertisements or reading matter, said that it was in the articles, but did not specify which article or articles. The first three pages of that issue were taken up with reports of the mass meeting in Cooper Union, New York, protesting against the incarceration and threatened deportation of John Turner, and comments of the press thereon. The paper contained also "Notes of Travel," by the editor; a brief report of the "New Thought" convention, and two short articles on Socialism and the Single Tax. These, with a copy of protest passed at a San Francisco meeting against the action of Mr. Madden in the cases of Lucifer and Helen Wilmans, and the customary "Various Voices," took up nearly the entire paper. As none of these dealt in any way with the sex question, it would be difficult to realize that even the most vivid imagination could see any obscenity in them. Of the two short remaining articles, one was written by Mrs. Sara Crist Campbell, a refined, gentle woman, a good wife and a mother of grown children, and the other by Miss Laura H. Earle, also refined, cultured, and womanly. Both these articles were on the sex question, but if these articles, written seriously and earnestly by women of such character as these, are obscene, then everything ever written on the sex question, be it ever so pure and with the highest motives, must also be obscene.

* * *

Nearly all of our readers know that about two months ago we were required to submit to the postal officials evidence of our circulation, including subscription lists, cash-books, and letters ordering the paper covering a year's time. We were told that we had no right to send Lucifer regularly to any but paid-in-advance subscribers, or those from whom we held letters definitely requesting credit; that we could print only twice as many copies as we had paid-in-advance subscribers. We revised our subscription list in compliance with this ruling, and cut off nearly five hundred names, among them some of our best friends. We also reduced the number of copies printed, which reduction practically deprived us of the privilege of sending out sample copies.

We heard no more in regard to the legitimacy of our list of subscribers, but were ordered to show cause, on or before Dec. 12, why the second-class privilege should not be revoked on the ground that Lucifer is published primarily to advertise the private business of the publisher. We tried to learn what our rights were in regard to advertising, but could get no authoritative information. We were told by one who had been connected with the Arena that, at the time this question arose in regard to that publication, the decision was that the publisher had a right to 50 per cent of the advertising space for his own business. We obtained advertising from others, and reduced our own advertising to much less than 50 per cent. Then we notified the Postoffice Department of the change, saying that this was our understanding of the matter, and saying that if we were in error we would comply with the rules when informed what they were. About two weeks later we received the following reply—if reply it can be called:

"Publisher Lucifer the Light-Bearer, Chicago, Ill.—Sir: I am directed by the department to inform you that after the hearing accorded to you on Dec. 12, 1903, to show cause why the authorization for the acceptance of your publication as second-class matter under the act of March 3, 1879, should not be revoked, the department determines that Lucifer the Light-Bearer is not entitled to transmission in the mails at the second-class rates of postage, because it appears from the evidence submitted to the department that the publication is 'designed primarily (chiefly) for advertising purposes'—i. e., to promote another business of the publisher—and is therefore within the prohibition of the law (act of March 3, 1879, ch. 180, sec. 14, 1 Supp. p. 246, section 428, P. L. & R.)

"Therefore the authorization granted for the acceptance of Lucifer the Light-Bearer for mailing at the second-class rates of postage has been revoked, and I am directed to require all separately addressed copies and packages of unaddressed copies which may hereafter be offered for mailing at this office to be prepaid with stamps affixed at the third-class rate of postage—one cent for each two ounces or fraction thereof. Respectfully,

"F. E. COYNE, Postmaster."

The postoffice business differs from other business in many ways, but in none is the difference more conspicuously manifest than in the fact that in dealing with the men who conduct any private business it is possible to learn, by inquiry, under what conditions you can transact business with them. It would seem that the postal officials are under no obligation whatever to answer inquiries which in private life common courtesy, to say nothing of business policy, would prompt them to answer. If there is any invariable ruling in regard to advertising, we should have been given it on request. We see newspapers and magazines advertising their own publications and those of others unmolested, and know that a very large proportion of subscriptions are not discontinued at their expiration. It would be interesting to see the rulings which have been encountered enforced in all other instances, from the great magazines and dailies, which advertise anything they choose, down to the smallest publication. If they were conditions would soon be changed.

* * *

This decision will nearly double the cost of issuing Lucifer. Postage on fifty-two copies of Lucifer will cost 52 cents, instead of 2 cents as heretofore. It is necessary to send out many sample copies, as it is almost exclusively through them that Lucifer's circulation is increased. At $1 a year the receipts on subscription were not sufficient to cover cost of publication. It was necessary to receive some income through the advertising columns for us to get sufficient to pay bills. The cost of composition, press work, paper and mailing has increased at least 40 per cent during the past five years. We had decided that it would be necessary to raise the price of the paper with the beginning of the new volume, even had we not suffered this decision in regard to the postage. But now it is absolutely essential that the greatest number of our subscribers pay double the former amount if Lucifer is to live. So we have raised the price to $2 a year, and will do all we can to make the paper worth it. As heretofore, we will not discontinue sending the paper to any one who really wants it and who is unable to pay for it. From such we will accept little or nothing. The extra 50 cents we receive from others will help to pay for such as these and for sample copies. We hope to hear from every one of our subscribers. We wish to be informed by each who is willing to pay the extra dollar, and we also want to know how many there are who cannot. We ask those who desire the paper to live to support it. We are willing and glad to give sufficient time to issue the paper, and neither ask nor need to receive living pay nor any pay for our share of the work other than the satisfaction which is ours in doing it.

* * *

I do not believe that "Whatever is, is right," but I am certain that good can be made to come of even evil conditions. It is for us to see if this will not give added determination and energy to all of us who wish to see Lucifer live, and with it the principles for which it stands—free thought, free speech, free press, and free men and women.

What say you?

LILLIAN HARMAN.

We will give a copy of Dr. Foote's "Home Cyclopedia," price $2, with Lucifer one year for $3. This is a family guide book of medical, social, and sexual science, containing 1,248 pages, with 400 pictures, eighty in color. Send for circulars.

"Nora: A Doll's House," and "Ghosts," by Henrik Ibsen, bound together in olive cloth, with red lettering. Containing sketch of the life of the author. 108 pages. With Lucifer one year, $2.25.

HOW TO HELP TO CIRCULATE LUCIFER.

We hope the friends of Lucifer will do all they can to extend its circulation. For this reason we make the price of $2.25 for two copies to one address. The extra 25 cents merely pays for extra time, trouble and paper.

A friend writes: "I think most of your subscribers would cheerfully pay extra rather than have the paper suppressed. Some of them might, and doubtless would, take two or more copies and give them away for the good of the cause. I am not working now, but you could depend on me to give at least $5 toward extra subscriptions. I think many of the best friends of the paper would give at least twice as much as they have been giving rather than see the paper stopped. It must not stop."

Henry E. Allen of this city writes of the suppressed issue: "Your last issue is a credit to any movement and it stirs me to think of its being denied second-class rates."

We have a partially "new dress" every week, as the type is set by linotype and is new with each issue. But we have an almost complete new dress this week, and we hope the improvement in appearance will merit the approval of our friends.

NOTES FROM THE FAR WEST.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Dec. 22, 1903.

The railways advertise that it is only three days' ride between San Francisco and Chicago, and yet it is near a month since I wrote the last "notes" that I have seen printed in Lucifer. Letters written by me and mailed on Tuesdays or Wednesdays do not reach Lucifer's office till Monday of the next week—too late for appearance in that week's issue.

The railways are in receipt of enormous subsidies for carrying the mails, the pay for which service being seven to ten times as great as that received by them for carrying ordinary merchandise, "express" matter, etc. In view of this well-known fact it would seem that the people who pay the bills have just cause for complaint when there is a chronic lack of promptness in fulfilling the contract on the part of these railways; for, after making reasonable allowance for tardiness in handling the mails by the postoffice officials, the chief responsibility of delay is believed to lie at the doors of the railway management.

I have had ample opportunities for knowing whereof I speak when I say that the railroad companies act much as though they feel themselves responsible to no one for the fulfillment of their contracts as to time.

And why should they?

A few weeks ago at a station on the Southern Pacific Railway the train, as usual, was several hours late. Men and women in the waiting-rooms were getting impatient of the delay, when in rushed a man exclaiming:

"Here comes the government!"

"How's that?" asked a bystander.

"Why, don't you know who it is that governs this state? Your question shows you are not a Californian. Every Californian knows that the Southern Pacific Railway owns the legislature and the judiciary of the state."

Is it not much the same in every state of the American Union? The Santa Fe is said to own New Mexico and Arizona, and how many more states and territories it may be difficult to ascertain with certainty. And in the national legislature, the so-called Congress of the United States, and in the national judiciary it is believed that the railway combine has been able in the past to get, with rare exceptions, whatever legislation and whatever judicial ruling it has asked for.

Three days more only—or rather two days more only—till the most popular and most universally observed of all the American holidays. For some weeks the silent observer, on the streets of San Francisco, cannot have failed to observe the preparations going on for this annual carnival, so to speak. "Thanksgiving Day" is, every year, something of a carnival, but everybody does not stop work to join in the observances—the feasting and the general merry-making—as is done at Christmas and during the week that follows "Christmas-tide."

The fact that this week closes the solar and calendar year, and that thenceforward the days begin to gain perceptibly upon the nights, accounts, no doubt, in a measure for the universal and time-honored popularity of the Christmas festival. Even by those who care nothing for the religious or theologic traditions connected with the observance of this holiday, the general cessation of business, of gainful occupations, is welcomed as one of the social events that make life endurable and also enjoyable.

The phrase "social events" is, as I think, very appropriate here. At this carnival, when every one seems to catch the contagion, the merry-making epidemic, the poor and unfortunate are remembered as at no other time in the whole year. At this time few if any will refuse to give something to reduce the sum of human misery. Professional beggars thrive during "holiday week" as at no other time of year.

After a few days spent in San Jose, a thriving little city of some thirty thousand inhabitants, visiting with our old-time friends, Mrs. Elizabeth H. Russell and Mrs. Hillis and her family, formerly of Cleveland, Ohio, and also with our old-time Kansas friends, the Secrests, I find myself again in San Francisco, trying to do a little work on Lucifer's lines. Have made the personal acquaintance of many radical thinkers and workers; am slowly adding to Lucifer's subscription list; have sold some books and pamphlets; have given three set lectures to fairly good audiences on subjects outlined as follows:

(1) "The Impending Revolution—Will Its Outcome Be Monarchy, Anarchy or Socialism?"

(2) "Sexual Reform as an Element of Social Progress."

(3) "Ingersoll on the Sex Question."

Next Sunday I am to begin another series of meetings for 3 o'clock p. m. in Fraternal Hall, Odd Fellows' Building, with subjects outlined as follows:

Sunday, Dec. 27—"Love in Freedom—The Marriage Superstition."

Sunday, Jan. 3—"Motherhood in Freedom—Woman Man's Savior."

Sunday, Jan. 10—"Evolution—How It Evolves. Psychic Impression."

Seats and discussions free at all meetings.

M. HARMAN.

* * *

SAN JOSE, Cal., Dec. 15, 1902.

How time flies! It seems scarcely possible that three and one-half months can have come and gone since I left Chicago. Altogether those months have been very enjoyable ones to the writer. Every day has been a revelation, so to speak. Change, perpetual change! No two days alike as to experiences. So many new faces, new names, new personalities, new scenes—the work of nature or of art—that there has been neither time nor opportunity for lapsing into forgetfulness of the demands of the here and the now.

To one who remembers the days before the Mexican war, when California was a foreign country, a part of the Spanish-American states, and as little known to the average citizen of these United States as Chili or Patagonia now is, it seems little less than miraculous to find in California to-day a duplication of Chicago, New York, or Boston, and with all the appearance of having been here for centuries.

The difference between Market street, San Francisco, and State street, Chicago, is too small to be noticeable, except, perhaps, in the height of the main buildings. We have here the same gorgeous display of merchandise, the same eager rush of thousands of well-dressed women and men in and out of the stores and along the broad sidewalks, the same perpetual din of travel and of traffic—the street cars, the steam cars, the truck wagons, the boats, the factories, the newsboys, the street peddlers, street beggars—prominent among which latter, just now and for a week or more past, have been the "Salvation Army" and "Volunteers of America" begging with banners for "help for the poor of San Francisco—a Christmas dinner for 2,000 poor people," etc., etc.

Thus it is seen that, with the other evidences of a high state of civilization, California has thousands of people in need of dinner and willing to accept a dinner as a gift from the charitably disposed.

Among the reflections naturally arising from witnessing the persistent public begging of many hundreds of the Salvation Army people—all of whom seem to be well dressed and well-fed—are these:

If all the time spent by the Salvation Army in standing on the street corners asking people for money were spent in some productive labor, would not the sum total of poverty and misery be reduced in a more rational way than by this world-wide system of begging for "God's sake"?

Do not all systems or schemes of public charity help to perpetuate rather than cure the evils of poverty, disease, deformity, idiocy, etc.?

Is it not true that the more religious the people the more beggars? that is, the greater the number of those who depend on charity for the means of subsistence, and the less keen the repugnance felt by the recipients towards that method of obtaining a livelihood; also the less understanding of the causes that make it necessary that we should "have the poor always with us"?

This question of how to abolish poverty, and thereby abolish the methods of the Salvation Army and of other organized forms of beggary, brings again to mind the many plans of getting people away from the cities to the country, and allowing them to draw their sustenance directly from Mother Earth. From what I have learned since my arrival in California, I am inclined to think that few if any countries in the world are better adapted to forming co-operative communities on the same general plan of that adopted by the people of Home, Wash. Here the soil is much more productive, the climate milder, the means of transportation and of communication with the rest of the world far superior.

M. HARMAN.

ERRATUM.—In No. 999, page 380, second column, the line, "The man of whole soul," should read, "The man of noble soul."

M. H.

THE ECONOMIC DIFFERENCE.

The enslaving nature of land monopoly has been neatly illustrated by General Wood in the Philippines. Here is the dispatch from Manila published in the Chicago Evening Post of the 11th, which tells about it:

"Major General Leonard Wood has proclaimed in Moroland an anti-slavery law, passed last October by the legislative council of the Moro provinces. On the promise of the sultan and dattos to abide by its provisions General Wood has suggested to Governor Taft the establishment of the native Moros on lands which will be assigned to them by the sultan and dattos at a rate of valuation sufficient to provide the latter with a moderate income from the rentals."

Now, what is the difference, in economic principle, between the slavery that allows sultans and dattos to exact work without wages, and the "freedom" that allows them to confiscate wages in the name of "rentals"?—The Public (Chicago).

Precisely the same as the difference, to the tenant, between allowing the landlord to collect rent for the use of land and allowing the State to collect the rent in the form of a tax on land values.

H. R.

"WHO IS THE ENEMY?"

Hugh O. Pentecost writes thus to Edwin C. Walker about the latter's new work, "Who Is the Enemy: Anthony Comstock or You?" "Your pamphlet is a strong discussion of the question at issue that one could give to a conservative friend with some hope that he might read it through."

Dr. R. W. Shufeldt, biologist, author of several scientific works and of more than seven hundred articles on medicine, travel, science, sexual problems and other subjects, writes to E. C. Walker: "I thank you very much indeed for the copy you sent me of your valuable pamphlet, 'Who Is the Enemy: Anthony Comstock or You?' I have read it from cover to cover with the utmost satisfaction and unqualified approval. It is one of the best and strongest things you have put out, and I am with you solid in both the letter and spirit of it. I prize the copy most highly." Ask for table of contents and specimen pages of "Who Is the Enemy?" or send 20 cents to this office for the pamphlet.

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,
THE LIBERAL MAIL-ORDER JEWELER.
Now permanently at No. 110 S. Kensington Ave., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 25 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's Line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Thirteen in the Crucible." Free.

J. H. GREER, M. D.,
52 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.
Office Hours—9 a. m. to 6 p. m.; Wednesdays at 1 Saturdays, 9 a. m. to 1 p. m.; Sundays, 9 a. m. to 12 m.
Telephone, Randolph 42.

DR. OGILVIE A. RICE,
DENTIST.
3556 MILWAUKEE AVE., COR. WESTERN, CHICAGO.
Telephone West 141.

PHILIP G. PEABODY,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
15 COURT SQUARE, ROOM 61.
BOSTON, MASS.

VARIOUS VOICES.

We are always glad to receive calls from friends visiting the city. Take the Lake street elevated, stop at Ashland avenue, walk one block east, then one block north. Or take Fulton street electric car west and stop at St. John's place, alighting in front of our house. The Lake street electric and Paulina street cars also pass within a block of our residence.

R. Starcke, Beaver Falls, Pa.: I do not like to miss a single number of Lucifer. The world would be better and wiser if it were read by every individual.

Lena Selde, Spokane, Wash.: I must be in arrears on my subscription to my beloved Lucifer, so inclose $1, for which send Lucifer as directed. I want to say things about the Postoffice Department, but will leave it for some one who can say it better, if not more forcibly, than I could.

J. E. Boultenhouse, Ann Arbor, Mich.: Lucifer is able, honest, and courageous. I challenge the government to show that it is not being conducted for the private gain of its officials instead of for the public good, and to show cause why it should not, on this account, be denied the benefit of taxation.

J. C.: I like the paper, but I think you ought to have more original articles. I'd like to see something from E. C. Walker and James S. Denson and Rev. Sid occasionally. I like Adeline Champney and Dora Forster. Why don't Lillian give Lucifer more of her interesting opinions on matters and things?

R. E. Bruce, Mich.: For the inclosed 25 cents please send me another copy of "Married in the Making." I loaned the one I had and it did not come back the last time. Many had read it before and pronounced it an exceedingly truthful presentation of existing conditions in more homes than we are willing or wish to admit.

Adeline Champney, Boston, Mass.: I am sending you enclosed $1 to pay my subscription to Lucifer for the ensuing year. Hard as it is for me to get this yearly dollar, I cannot do without the paper. One must have some paper that reaches after "bedrock" principles. The feature of the open court to all ideas is also worth much more than the money.

H. E. S., Baker City, Ore.: For the inclosed 50 cents kindly continue sending Lucifer to my address. I am opposed to an administration that discriminates against any publication or boosts. All should have equal right to use the mails by paying their proportion of the labor cost of handling and transporting mail. I suppose some Socialists have made answer to Herbert Spencer's "State Socialists" in No. 996. He presupposed an ignorant working class that allowed the "officials" to rule. Modern Socialism is democratic rule; the people to make their own laws, to use officials as servants and dismiss them at any time they usurp beyond their rights or show incompetence. Those who prefer to be their own superintendents can do piece, job, or contract work. In vocations that absolutely require management—superintendence—it is better to have the superintendent responsible to those he directs than to royalty, plutocracy. The merit system is better than the "pull" system, the co-operative than the competitive or Anarchist system. Best results with least work, abolition of poverty and establishment of justice are all possible under Socialism, the best system as yet discovered.

Walter Breen, Omaha, Neb.: The Appeal to Reason only two years ago had to make the fight of its life for free access to the mails. If your second-class rates are revoked you must put a one-cent stamp on every paper sent out until such a time as a change of administration gives us freedom of press and mails. I for one, as a subscriber of nine years' standing, will pay $3 per annum to get my paper, which I think as much of as my Truth Seeker, as a protest against this twentieth century species of inquisition. We Freethinkers must look at this matter this way: these "Tories of a new type" are like the persecutors of the old Inquisition, and we should be thankful that we are not all deported or imprisoned. Let us take heart and think of what Voltaire and others had to go through to get their ideas before the world.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

KAREZZA.
SCIENCE OF MARRIAGE.
A guidance to every wife—a joy to every husband.
This work brings peace into homes disrupted by inharmony in the sexual relation. Dr. A. R. Chatham advises a practice which leads to individual liberty and to deeper love between husband and wife.
Dr. F. G. Welch: "After a personal trial of its teachings, I want to thank you for a great service to humanity."
Rev. George R. Bateham: "Out of a beautiful and unfolding experience, I can say—I KNOW."
Gives a high ideal of the marital relation and teaches control of the Procreating Power.
J. A. Smalley, M. D.: "I have received more actual benefit from the practice of KAREZZA teachings than from all other books on Sexual Science."
A. B. Franklin, M. D.: "KAREZZA does more than any other single thing to make marriage a perpetual courtship."
LEVANT CLOTH, POSTPAID, $1.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 32, Chicago.

WOMAN AND HER RELATION TO THE CHURCH, OR CANON LAW FOR WOMEN.
BY HARRIET M. CLOSE.
A succinct statement of the position to which women were doomed by the Church Fathers and authorities. Every woman should possess a copy. Price, 10c.
M. HARMAN, 300 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; OR THE PRICE OF VIRTUE.
By Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Withhold, by Lucinda B. Chandler; Life's Gifts, by Olive Schreiner, and Marriage—What It Was and Is, and Why; Life's Gifts, by Olive Schreiner, and Marriage—What It Was and Is, and Why; Will the Coming Woman Marry? Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 300 Fulton St., Chicago.

GOING WEST THIS WINTER?

Whether the journey is for pleasure, business or health—for a few days or several weeks—near by, to Oklahoma or 'cross continent to California—

It will pay you to look into the SANTA FE as the way to go. You can ride in state on the California Limited or in the more economical tourist sleeper on other fast trains. The service is faultless either way.

Bear in mind the fact that the SANTA FE is the only road under one management from Chicago through to the Pacific Coast. It is Santa Fe All the Way, and that's much to say.

We realize that the best advertisement is a pleased patron, and no effort will be spared to make your trip enjoyable. This coupon is offered for your use.

J. M. CONNELL, Gen. Agt.,
A., T. & S. F. RY.
109 ADAMS ST., CHICAGO.

I am planning a trip to.....
Please send me literature and information as to rates, etc.
Name.....
Street No.....
City.....

A BARGAIN.
FOR SALE—The Brodhead Windmill plant, at Brodhead, Wis., is for sale cheap. It consists of a well-equipped foundry, machine shop and wood shop. The cause is poor health, old age, and inability to run it. It is located in as fine a country as can be found west of the lakes. It will take my hands through a bankruptcy sale, and therefore I can sell for less than the book cost. Inquire of S. G. BISHOP, Brodhead, Wis.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME
Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., suite 69, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!
Cabinet photographs of Mrs. C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We cannot sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 25c each, 4 for 50c. Address EDWIN C. WALKER, 244 W. 143d St., New York, N. Y.

WANTED—100 women to study medicine or midwifery. Next term begins January 5, 1904. College of Medicine and Surgery, 245 Ashland Blvd., Chicago. 1tf. DR. FLORENCE DIEHLER, Secretary. (Over, S.)

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD OWN

TOKOLOGY.

A COMPLETE HEALTH GUIDE.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

Teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions.

Treats of diseases of women and children; contains practical teachings on Change of Life, limiting offspring, etc.

Lizzie N. Armstrong writes: "If I knew I were to be the mother of innumerable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of Tokology."

Dr. C. B. Wills: "Tokology is doing more for women than all other books put together."

CLOTH, PREPAID, $2.25; LEATHER, $2.75.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES.

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

Contents—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only"; Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen"; What Are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women. With Appendix: The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 15c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

A treatise on Sexual Science and Marriage, rich in thought and strong in expression. Emphatically a book for the thinker.

Carpenter holds that woman's freedom is based upon economics; she must be independent financially that she may not be forced to sell herself in or out of marriage. He also makes a strong plea for a motherhood of freedom and thoughtful preparation.

AMERICAN EDITION. CLOTH, PREPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM.

THE RELATIONSHIP OF EACH TO HUMAN LIBERTY.

BY E. C. WALKER.

The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organization and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. Price 5c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

CREATIVE LIFE.

A BOOK FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

A timely and important message not found in text books. Every girl seeks and should have this true, plain and practical knowledge. One writes: "Thank you, thank you, dear Doctor, for the plain but beautiful thoughts. Womanhood, motherhood and life have new meanings. You ennoble your theme." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

A NOVEL BY GEORGE N. MILLER.

FORTIETH THOUSAND.

"The Strike of a Sex" is a fascinating novel bearing upon the sexual relations. It is a bold protest against the customary life of most married people, and at the same time a prophecy of happier conditions between man and wife. Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW.

A PRIMER OF SEXUAL RATIONALISM.

BY E. C. WALKER.

"Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes."

Paper covers; 42 large pages. Price 10c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

"PERSONAL EXPERIENCES OF TWO AMERICAN ANTI-VIVISECTIONISTS IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES."

BY PHILIP G. PEABODY.

With an Appendix by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c. Apply to PHILIP G. PEABODY, 15 Court Square, Boston, Mass.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY.

By Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition, by E. C. Walker; Motherhood in Freedom, by Moses Harman; The Greatest Sin (an Allegory), by E. B. Kerr; and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom, by Oscar Botter. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN.

By E. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.; The New Martyrdom, by Lillian Harman, and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE.

By E. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strasburg Geese, by C. W. Coolidge; A Traveler's Tale, by E. B. Kerr; The Cat's Story, by Emile Zola. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

1001

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.
If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

HILDA'S HOME.

A STORY OF WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

With Macaulay, Rosa Graul would say: "The cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty." Hence she has no fears that under Freedom the Home and the Family would cease to exist, or that woman would be less loving and lovable, or that man would be less manly and honorable. On the contrary, she maintains that only in the soil and atmosphere of freedom is it possible for true womanhood and manhood to live and flourish.

420 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

One of the best short works on the subject. A charming little gift book. "Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it."

DAINTILY PRINTED. PREPAID, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES.

BY E. C. WALKER.

Contents—Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Conciality of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What Is She? What Will She Be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistake; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Lover: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections Upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love and Life." Price 15c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD.

AN OUTLINE OF PRACTICAL CO-OPERATIVE INDIVIDUALISM.

BY HENRY OLERICH.

Regarded by many persons as a more interesting and consistent economic reform novel than Bellamy's "Looking Backward."

Bound in red silk with gold title. Nearly 450 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, $1.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

BY JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents—Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff or Protection; War Punishments; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

519 pages. Cloth binding somewhat damaged, and reduced from $1.50 to 50c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY, AND THE STATE.

BY FREDERICK ENGELS.

Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans.

217 pages; bound in cloth. Price 50c; postage 5c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STORY OF IJAIN;

OR, THE EVOLUTION OF A MIND.

By Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Stuart Ross), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. Price $1; postage 5c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE CURSE OF MATERNITY.

From the French of Henry Fevre. Together with How to Escape the Curse, by Jonathan Mayo Crane; Woman's "Duty" to Bear Children, by E. C. Walker; True and False Morality, by C. L. James; and Love's Law, by William Francis Barnard. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE.

By John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention, by Mariette; Reminiscences of Berlin Heights, by A. Warren, and The Sexes and Love in Freedom, by Oscar Botter. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN.

By Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Vclept Society, by Moses Hull; Virgin Soil, by George Egerton, and Normal Sexual Action, by Ernest Wilde. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A Discussion of Freethought and Free Love. By Orford Northcote. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Martian. By M. Harman. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Moral. By A. F. Thisfall. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. by E. C. Walker. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE COMING WOMAN, by Lillie D. White. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

2nd 1017

X
Per
Jan
1904 - Je. 1907

RBR
E
f#808
Jan. 1904 -
June 1907

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

PRICE 5 CENTS. CHICAGO, ILL., JAN. 7, E. M. 304. [C. E. 1904.] WHOLE NO. 1002

TOWARD THE LIGHT

This old gray world is weary of the struggle and the strife,
The shell-torn fields of battle and the waste of human life;
And she trembles to her center at the bugles' brassy blare,
She shudders when he thunder of the cannon thrills the air.

This old gray world is weary of the arrogance of might,
Of wealth that bind men captive, and knows no law of right;
Of millions of her children born to misery and toil—
Robbed by deeds and charters of their birthright to the soil.

This old gray world is weary of the ignorance that rules,
That robs mankind of liberty, and makes men helpless tools;
She is weary of intolerance, the bigotry that binds
The feet of searching Science, and the eyes of Reason blinds.

But the list'ner at he portal of the new-born century hears
A whisper and a promise come drifting down the years—
The whisper of a promise, a prophecy of peace,
When men shall be as brothers, and war's red wrath shall cease.

The dreamer look far-sighted across the sea of Time:
He sees the end of ignorance, the abolishment of crime;
He sees the golde dawning of a better, brighter day—
Mankind no longer shackled beneath a despot's sway.

Then, grand old world, be patient; you've struggled through the years
Toward the daylight's glimmer, through bloody sweat and tears;
Behind the distad hilltops the sun of Freedom gleams
With comfort for thy children, with healing in its beams.

Robert T. Whitelaw.

TIE THREE QUESTIONS.

It once occurred to a certain king that if he always knew the right time to begin everything, if he knew who were the right people to attend to and who to avoid, and, above all, if he always knew what was the most important thing to do, he would never fail in any o his undertakings.

And this thought having occurred to him, he had it proclaimed throughou his dominions that he would give a great reward to any one who would teach him how to know the right time for every actin, and who were the most necessary people, and how to be sure what was the most important thing to do.

And learned men came to the king, but they all answered his questions in different ways.

In reply to th first question, some said that to know the right time for every action one must draw up, in advance, a table of the days, months and years, and strictly follow this table. Only thus, said they, could everything be done at its proper time. Others declared that it was impossible to decide beforehand the right time for every action, but, not letting oneself be absorbed in idle pastimes, one should always attend to all that goes on, and then do what is most needful. Others, again, said that, however attentive the king might be to what was going on, it was impossible for one man to decide correctly the right time for every action, but that he should have a council of wise men who would help him to fix the proper time for everything.

But then again, others said, there were some things which could not wait to be laid before the council, but about which one had to decide at once whether it was or was not time to begin them. But to know that one must know beforehand what is going to happen. Only magicians could know that; and, therefore, in order to know the right time for every action one must consult the magicians.

Equally various were the answers to the second question. Some said the people the king most needed were his councilors; others, that he needed the doctors most; while some said that the warriors were the most necessary.

To the third question, as to what was the most important thing to do, some replied that the most important thing in the world was science. Others said it was skill in warfare, and others again that it was religious worship.

All the answers being different, the king agreed with none of them and gave the reward to no one. But, in order to find the right answers to his questions, he decided to consult a hermit widely renowned for his wisdom.

The hermit lived in a wood, never went out anywhere and received only common folk. So the king put on simple clothes, and, before reaching the hermit's cell, dismounted from his horse and, leaving his bodyguard behind, went on alone.

When the king approached the hermit was digging some beds in front of his hut. Seeing the king, he greeted him and went on with his digging. The hermit was thin and weak, and each time he stuck his spade into the ground and turned a little earth he breathed heavily.

The king went up to him and said:

"I have come to you, wise hermit, to ask you to answer me three questions. What time must one use and not neglect, lest one repent it? Who are the people one most needs? To whom should one, therefore, pay most attention and to whom less? And what affairs are the most important and should be first attended to?"

The hermit listened to the king, but answered nothing. He just spat on his hands and recommenced digging.

"You are tired," said the king. "Let me have the spade. I'll work a while for you."

"Thanks," said the hermit, and, giving the spade to the king, he sat down on the ground.

When he had dug two beds the king stopped and repeated his questions. The hermit again gave no answer, but rose, stretched out his hand for the spade and said:

"Now you have a rest. Let me work a bit."

But the king did not give him the spade and continued digging. One hour passed, and another. The sun began to sink behind the trees and the king at last stuck the spade into the ground and said:

"I came to you, wise man, for an answer to my questions. If you can give me none tell me so, and I will go home."

"Here comes some one running," said the hermit. "Let us see who it is."

The king turned round and saw a bearded man come running out of the wood. The man held his stomach with his hands, but blood was flowing from under them. When he reached the king the bearded man fell fainting on the ground and only moaned feebly. The king and the hermit unfastened the man's clothing. There was a large wound in his stomach. The king washed it as best he could and bandaged it with his handkerchief and with the hermit's towel. But the blood would not stop flowing and the king again removed the bandage, soaked with warm blood, and washed and rebandaged the wound. When the blood at last ceased to flow the man revived and asked for something to drink. The king brought fresh water and gave it to him.

Meanwhile the sun had quite set and it grew cool. So the king, with the hermit's help, carried the wounded man into the hut and laid him on the bed. Lying on the bed, the man closed his eyes and was quiet. But the king was tired with his walk and with the work he had done that he crouched down on the threshold and also fell asleep as soon as that he slept all through the short summer night.

When he awoke in the morning it was long before he could make out where he was or who was that strange bearded man lying on the bed and gazing intently at him with glittering eyes.

341002

"Forgive me!" said the bearded man in a weak voice, when he saw that the king was awake and looking at him.

"I do not know you and have nothing to forgive you for," said the king.

"You do not know me, but I know you. I am that enemy of yours who swore to revenge himself on you because you executed my brother and seized my property. I knew you had gone alone to see the hermit and I resolved to kill you on your way back. But the day passed and you did not return. So I came out from my ambush to find out where you were, and I came upon your bodyguard, and they recognized me and wounded me. I ran away from them, but should have bled to death had you not dressed my wound. I wished to kill you and you have saved my life. Now, if I live, and if you wish it, I will serve you as your most faithful slave and bid my sons do the same. Forgive me!"

The king was very glad to have made peace with his enemy so easily, and not only forgave him, but said he would send his servants and his own physician to attend him and promised to restore his property.

Having taken leave of the wounded man, the king went out into the porch and looked round for the hermit. Before going away he wished once more to ask for an answer to the questions he had put. The hermit was outside on his knees sowing vegetable seeds in the beds that had been dug before.

The king approached him and said:

"For the last time, I beg you to answer my questions, wise man."

"Why, you have been answered," said the hermit, crouching on his thin legs and looking up at the king, who stood before him.

"Answered? What do you mean?" asked the king.

"Why, of course," replied the hermit, "if you had not pitied my weakness yesterday and had not dug these beds for me, but had gone back alone, that man there would have attacked you and you would have repented not having stayed with me. So the most important time was when you were digging the beds, and I was the most important man, and to do me good was your most important business. Afterward, when that man ran to us, the most important time was when you were attending to him, for, if you had not bound up his wounds he would have died without having made peace with you. So he was the most important man, and what you did for him was your most important business. Remember, then, there is only one time that is important—now. It is the most important time because it is the only time when we have any power. The most necessary man is he with whom you now are, for no man knows whether he will ever have dealings with any one else. And the most important affair is to do him good, because for that purpose alone was man sent into this life."—Leo Tolstoi.

THE UNIVERSALITY OF NATURAL LAW.

In regard to nature, events apparently the most irregular and capricious have been explained, and have been shown to be in accordance with certain fixed and universal laws. This has been done because men of ability, and, above all, men of patient, untiring thought, have studied natural events with the view of discovering their regularity; and if human events were subjected to a similar treatment, we have every right to expect similar results. For it is clear that they who affirm that the facts of history are incapable of being generalized, take for granted the very question at issue. Indeed, they do more than this. They not only assume what they cannot prove, but they assume what in the present state of knowledge is highly improbable. Whoever is at all acquainted with what has been done during the last two centuries, must be aware that every generation demonstrates some events to be regular and predictable; so that the marked tendency of advancing civilization is to strengthen our belief in the universality of order, of method, and of law. This being the case, it follows that if any facts, or class of facts, have not yet been reduced to order, we, so far from pronouncing them to be irreducible, should rather be guided by our experience of the past, and should admit the probability that what we now call inexplicable will at some future time be explained. This expectation of discovering regularity in the midst of confusion is so familiar to scientific men that among the most eminent of them it becomes an article of faith.—T. H. Buckle.

DEPORTATION FOR POLITICAL HETERODOXY.

By the arrest and threatened deportation of John Turner, an Englishman who is alleged to entertain Anarchistic notions, the "act to regulate the immigration of aliens," which became a law on March 3, 1903, has been brought prominently into public notice. The law in question provides that no person who disbelieves in organized government, or who is affiliated with any organization entertaining or teaching such unbelief, shall be permitted to enter the United States; or if an alien have landed the law directs that he may be deported within the period of three years thereafter in case the Secretary of Commerce shall be satisfied that such alien has entered the country in violation of the act. The method of procedure prescribed is a secret inquiry by a board of three immigration officers, and the decision of the majority is final unless reversed by the secretary.

This process is identical with the "administrative process" of Russia, the "lettres de cachet" of ante-revolutionary France, and the "star chamber" practice of the Tudor and Stuart regimes in England. No appeal to a court of law is allowed. In a case arising under the contract labor law in 1894, the court held that it had no jurisdiction; a writ of habeas corpus was issued, but though the prisoner was found innocent of the crime of being a contract laborer (or an unbeliever in organized government), the court could not discharge him or give him his liberty because this statute gave exclusive authority to review such cases to the Secretary of the Treasury.

If for no other reason than that it introduces a tyrannical method of procedure, abhorrent to the spirit of our institutions, the law ought not to stand. Its arbitrariness recalls that of the fugitive slave and the early sedition laws. Its enforcement must inevitably be unequal. How is the government to ascertain the truth about the hundreds of thousands of aliens who came to the United States in the course of the prescribed three years period of limitation? Are all of them to be detained until the boards of inquisition shall have passed upon the orthodoxy of their political beliefs? If not, prosecutions must necessarily be sporadic and taken against selected victims; and such selections would usually be influenced either by the malice of informers or by the whims of the inquisitors.

And how are the beliefs of men to be ascertained? With regard to a few persons of international repute we know their opinions on government through their published writings. In the case of a Tolstoi or a Prince Kropotkin proofs would not be needed, for such men would admit the heterodoxy of their views on the existing order of society; it follows, then, that the law would be most effective to exclude some of the best of the human race—men of unblamable lives, who would not hurt a fly. Unknown scalawags, however, who would not scruple to swear falsely about their political opinions, would be admitted. The law thus punishes veracity and puts a premium on lying. By a singular slip the law excludes from its operation persons convicted of murder or other felonies if it appear that the crimes have been done from "political" but not otherwise immoral motives, even though the offenders be Anarchists. On the other hand, any alien, whatever be his beliefs, though they be the most strictly orthodox, may be denied entry if the inquisitors be satisfied that he is affiliated with a society of unbelievers. If such a one were discovered reading Proudhon's "Property Is Theft" at any time within three years after landing, and this discovery should satisfy a board of official ignoramuses of his affiliation with Anarchists, he might willy-nilly be deported from this country!—Philadelphia Record.

RELIGION AND WAR.

Whatever religion may be in the ascendent, the influence of its ministers is invariably strengthened by a long and dangerous war, the uncertainties of which perplex the minds of men, and induce them, when natural resources are failing, to call on the supernatural for help. On such occasions the clergy rise in importance, the churches are more than usually filled, and the priest, putting himself forward as the exponent of the wishes of God, assumes the language of authority, and either comforts the people under their losses in a righteous cause, or else explains to them that those losses are sent as a visitation for their sins and as a warning that they have not been sufficiently attentive to their religious duties; in other words, they have neglected rites and ceremonies, in the performance of which the priest himself has a personal interest.—Thomas Buckle.

THE DEIFICATION OF THE STATE.

The newest deity turned out at the god foundry is organized government. We have not attempted yet to make his cult universal, but that will come later. We are trying it now on foreigners, and are hopeful of results that will warrant its extension to include the native-born. Already one man is in jail for denying the government god; and a man in jail, I apprehend, is a sight calculated to encourage every worshiper of the deity and all supporters of the law. The unthinking may ask why it should be more necessary to compel belief in organized government than in organized charity, organized labor, organized religion or any other form of organized graft. I make no such inquiry; I don't need to, for I recognize the tendency of mankind to deify institutions and enforce conformity by the strong arm of the law, and one institution answers the purpose as well as another. Organized religion has had its day in the pantheon; organized labor is getting there.

Some Freethinkers, in hectoring the believers in a state-defended religious creed, ask why the creed needs protection of the law against denial and ridicule provided it be true; and they (the Freethinkers) argue in derision that so safeguarding the multiplication table has not been found essential to keeping it whole and unreviled. But let them wait; the multiplication table may yet have its innings. If the day comes when all other creeds are exploded, the belief compellers will cheerfully unite on the legally crystallized dogma that two times one is two. And doubt not that scoffers will be found. I am myself already prepared to launch a heresy against it, and declare the statement that "two times one is two" to be rank nonsense and calculated to provoke "inextinguishable laughter." For why, the real truth obscured by this absurdly phrased formula is that one two times is two. It is futile to minify the differences in the two ways of stating the proposition; they are irreconcilable. And now if the error of Servetus, who held Jesus Christ was son of the eternal God, while Calvin declared that Jesus was the eternal son of God, was grave enough to bring the heretic to the stake, when it is probable that Jesus Christ was neither the one nor the other—if that slight disparity of statement could lead to fatal results, why should there not be a penalty attached to contumelious reproach of the multiplication table?

Mr. John Turner is "detained" for deportation because he does not believe that organized government is the best thing that will ever happen. The law could not hold men of Mr. Turner's mind if its framers had not astutely inserted the word "organized." Everybody believes in government—self-government—and Mr. Turner, professing that belief, might have floored his inquisitors by quoting the old Anarchist who let loose the thought that the man who rules himself is greater than he that taketh San Juan hill and Santiago. It was the adjective "organized" that caught him, although, adopting the argument of Huxley in his "Administrative Nihilism," he could have maintained with success that the individual is quite as much an organism as the State.

It is as natural that official persons should wish to exclude Anarchists as that a priest should hate an Atheist. Writers whose judgment we may trust in have told us that the first government was probably set up by some ancient patriarch to protect the worship of a family or tribal spook. It is inferred that in the process of time the descendants of that patriarch were made familiar with the fact that governing a people, apart from looking after the interests of the spooks, was something of a snap in itself, and hence they became as sensitive to criticisms of government as their ancestors had been to disparaging comments leveled at the tribal deity. That feeling, which nowadays is a rather livelier sense than any anxiety that secular rulers feel about maintaining religion, has given us our beneficent statutes against treason, sedition and disbelief in organized government. So the State becomes a deity, and its overshadowing of the holy-Church has bred a variety of parasitic deities—to wit: the holy-day god, the holy-book god, the holy-man god, the sex god, and so on; and out of its loins spring also the metal god which must never be defaced, the paper god that may not be imitated and the bunting god that cannot be insulted with impunity. State and Church are the parents of all the divinities except the Goddess of Liberty, which appears to be of more obscure origin.—G. E. M. in the Truth Seeker (New York).

Many who are sundered by God are united by clergymen.

LETTER TO THE AUTHOR OF "LOVE TRIUMPHANT."

William Platt—Respected Comrade:

I have read your books with much pleasure and horror—pleasure at the lofty tone, nobility and purity of your love ideals; horror at your ghastly pictures of blood and death.

"The Child of Love and Death" is certainly the most horrible nightmare that ever galloped rampant over a poet's pillow. I would not suppress freedom of thought, however expressed, but I would feel I was doing a kindness to one whom I could persuade not to read that mad clatter of your mad Pegasus.

In spite of this, however, your books contain much that is beautiful. I am glad you wrote them, even though I cannot follow all the way. Your pathway, like the Christian's road to heaven, is too straight and narrow for ordinary feet to follow. You make no allowance for mistakes, ignorance, inexperience or human folly. Your lover is too merciless and unforgiving when he says:

"When once a man or woman has cast his or her fate with another woman or with another man—when once the twain have gone as one flesh, heart to heart—then in taste, decency and honor is all other flesh forbidden to them. . . . All spirituality cries out to us that if we have failed we have failed—there must be no continuation of experiments."

If the attraction felt between a man and woman were an infallible evidence of the love that endures we might more reasonably oppose a continuation of experiments. But it is not. The first passionate attraction, however strong it be, may prove the very opposite of love, and the real soul mate or "twin soul" be found in mature years after many "experiments" perhaps. You prove this quite conclusively by having your lovers meet and express their love only in death, or they die before discovering their mistake, as in "That Rare Thing—A Marriage." You show much wisdom in not putting them to the test of life.

For my part, I do not wish to found a religion based on love, sex, passion, woman or motherhood. These are all facts in Nature's forces more or less beautiful, but they are facts—nothing more. Some of our enthusiastic worshipers of sex, passion, etc., would re-establish a sort of phallic religion. I will have none of it. What do we—rationalists, who have, presumably, outgrown worship of all gods, wooden or divine—want of a religion or worship of any kind?

Regard women as human beings and motherhood as one of the joys of life, but look upon neither as divine or glorified. I think "it is sweet to see a mother suckling her child." The pains of maternity are more than repaid by its joys. But let us not build altars or burn incense at the shrine of motherhood.

You carry your ideals so high they topple over of their own weight, falling from the sublime to the ridiculous. It may be sublime to suffer for one we love when the loved one is benefited thereby, but I think any sensible girl would have more respect for the lover who would light a lamp or candle when he wishes to gaze upon her pictured charms in the night, instead of burning a whole box of matches, letting each one "scorch his fingers." If a lamp or candle is too prosaic he might use the light of the moon or stars. He could hurt his eyes by straining them and it would be more romantic.

Constancy in love is an admirable thing, and if a man chooses to live unmarried for the memory of a girl who once "cuffed him on the head," no one should object, but I would not recommend it as a principle or a standard of love.

With best wishes for your happiness and prosperity and the Triumph of Love, I am respectfully yours,

LILLIE D. WHITE.

Lake Charles, La.

THAT EDITORIAL "WE."

Stranger (to the hotel clerk)—"Can you give us a comfortable room and a good dinner? We have traveled all day and are very tired and hungry."

Clerk—"Certainly, sir. But where is the other party?"

Stranger—"Other party! Why, we have just registered our name. There is no other party."

Clerk—"Oh, I beg your pardon, sir. I didn't know you were an editor."—Ex.

Peace hath her battlefields where they who fight win more than honor, vanquish more than might, and strike against a fiercer foe than one who comes with battle-ax and bow.—Edwin Arnold.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

MOSES HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 360 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Denied Entry as Second-Class Mail Matter by the United States Postoffice Department.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One copy, one year.....$2.00 · One copy, six months.....$1.00
Two copies to one address, one year.. 3.25 · Two copies to one address, six mos.. 1.10
One copy, three months.....50 cents · Single copies.....5 cents

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire notify us if you wish to continue to receive Lucifer.

EASTERN REPRESENTATIVE:
E. C. WALKER, 244 WEST 143D STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Lucifer and its literature can be obtained in San Francisco at the book store of Robert C. Ross, 1201 Market street, opposite City Hall.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

THIRD SERIES: VOL. VIII. NO. 1.

"LOVE IN FREEDOM; WOMAN AND LAW."

My fourth lecture in San Francisco was thus entitled. The following paragraphs are taken from the introductory to that address:

The word most worthy of honor in the English language is Freethought, and the next most worthy of honor is Freelove.

Freethought takes precedence simply because the more inclusive, the more general.

Roger Bacon—I think it was—said: "Cogito, ergo sum." (I think, therefore I am.)

The best proof if not the only proof that we live is that we think.

"As a man thinketh, so is he," saith the proverb. Thought is the man; thought is the woman.

To be useful, to be effective, thought must be free—free to express itself in word and in act. Thought that is denied free expression in word and act is barren thought, bound thought, enslaved thought, aborted or abortive thought—thought strangled in the borning or before birth.

Robert Ingersoll, the great agnostic Freethinker, said: "Failure seems to be the trademark of Nature. Why? Because Nature has no design, no intelligence. Nature produces without purpose, sustains without intention and destroys without thought. Man has a little intelligence and he should use it. Intelligence is the only lever capable of raising mankind."

"True, O King!" But I would like to ask if man himself is not a part of Nature, and if human intelligence is not a part of Nature's intelligence?

Man is said to be a microcosm, the universe in miniature, and that whatever exists in the macrocosm, Nature, exists also in man, the microcosm. If "Nature has no intelligence," where does man get his intelligence? Where do the beaver, the ant, the bee get their intelligence?

Whether there be "design" in Nature or not, there certainly is adaptation—adaptation of means to ends. The chief end or purpose in Nature, so far as we can see, is "to keep the ball of life rolling"; to keep alive the genera and species of animate and vegetable forms, with less regard for the fate of the individual units. Hence Nature is lavish in the production of life-germs; countless millions of these germs are produced that fail to get themselves organized—millions to one that lives long enough to reproduce its kind.

Why such waste of productive energy? Why so many failures and so few successes?

On the surface it would appear to be lack of thought, lack of intelligent design, lack of prevision or intelligent looking ahead.

This lack of Nature in its cruder forms, the amorphous rock, the crystal, the vegetable, the simpler animal forms, is now supplied, or corrected, to some extent by human intelligence, by natural intelligence incarnated or materialized in the human brain—as witness the improvement in vegetable and animal forms by artificial selection and by limiting the number of germs produced by each parent organism.

BOUNDARIES OF FREETHOUGHT.

Two weeks ago in this hall I listened with much interest to a lecture upon "Bishop Montgomery and Rationalism." This was the first of a series of lectures entitled "Freethought," by Arthur Morrow Lewis, an English Freethinker of the materialistic or "Positivist" school. This course of lectures is designed, so far as I can understand, to show the antagonism existing between theology as taught by the champions of the Church, Catholic and Protestant, and the deductions of physical science as taught by Darwin, Huxley, Tyndall and others.

At the close of this well-reasoned lecture, when questions were in order, I asked the speaker:

"What are the limitations of Rationalism or Freethought? Does Freethought exclude Spiritualism and Theosophy? Does it exclude the land question, or freedom of unoccupied land? Does it exclude the money question, or freedom to issue one's own notes of credit? Does it exclude freedom of trade? Does it exclude freedom of the affections, involving freedom of motherhood?"

In his reply Mr. Lewis said it would require several lectures to answer these questions, and intimated that some of them were not pertinent to the subject of the lecture just delivered.

It was because of his failure to even attempt an answer to these questions that this series of lectures was planned. If Mr. Lewis had adhered to the traditions of Freethought and had made his platform free to affirmative criticisms, then this lecture course, of which to-day's lecture is the first, would probably not have been considered necessary.

* * *

As I see it, there are no limitations to Rationalism—no boundaries to Freethought. Its scope includes all subjects of human interest. Freedom of thought involves and includes all other freedoms, such as are free land—freedom to use unoccupied land; free money—freedom to issue notes of credit or coinage by the individual citizen, without penalties of any kind so long as no deception or fraud is used; free trade—freedom to trade with all the world without danger of fine or imprisonment for so doing; free manhood, and especially free womanhood and motherhood, since without free womanhood and motherhood we can never have free manhood.

Men are as women make them. "Like mother like son" is more often true than "Like father like son." When the son is more like the father than like the mother it is because, by psychic impression, the mother has built him so—or, perhaps, because with the mother's assistance the child has built itself thus.

* * *

The first and chief mission of Rationalism or Freethought is to destroy ignorance and superstition, by which word I mean belief in the supernatural. Of all superstitions the worst are those that cluster around sex, because it is through sex that human beings are born into the world.

"Sex contains all," says Whitman.

Sex contains all forms of organized life, as the acorn contains the oak.

Sex reform is the basis, the chief cornerstone of all other reforms, because men make and unmake institutions. Institutions do not make men. The way to get better institutions, then, is to get better men. To get better men we must have free, intelligent, self-respecting, self-reliant, self-responsible motherhood.

Herbert Spencer, lately deceased, said of the English reformers: "Most Liberals are simply Tories of a new type." While this may have been said mainly of the English political reformers, might it not apply with equal pertinence to reformers on all lines of thought, and to American radicals as well as to their British cousins?

As between the materialism of Mr. Lewis, of Robert Ingersoll, of the English, French and German physicists, on the one hand, and the materialism of the Roman Catholic Church (so ably combated by Mr. Lewis), and of the many Protestant sects, I very much prefer the former. It is largely owing to the work of materialistic Freethinkers that persecution for disbelief in dogmatic theology has gone out of fashion. But while freely and gladly acknowledging the good done by this phase of modern Freethought, I must protest against the assumption made by some of our radical reformers that materialistic Freethought is all there is of Rationalism. I am not willing to accept materialistic agnosticism as the whole of Freethought. In the philosophic or scientific sense I claim to be a Materialist myself, but I recognize that the materialism of agnosticism is, in the first place, a somewhat violent reaction against the materialism of gnosticism. First and foremost it is a revolt against the materialism of those who claim to know all about material hells and heavens in the unseen world by those who are inclined to deny the existence of such heaven, with its jasper walls, its gold-paved streets, its golden thrones, harps, etc., and its hell of literal fire, fed by material brimstone, its "never-dying worm" and all the rest of horrible inventions of ignorant primitive men. And while I claim to be a Materialist, this philosophy is not with me a finality. Materialistic science is comparable, I think, to the primary school, the kindergarten, the portico or ante-chamber to the cosmic university.

As the name indicates, materialism deals with things material, things physical, things that appeal to the physical senses—the eye, the ear, the touch, the taste, the smell. To me the things that are seen, heard, tasted, smelt and felt through the medium of the five physical senses are few and small as compared with the things that do not appeal to these senses, but are cognized by what may be called the psychic senses—telepathy, clairvoyance, clairaudience, intuition, psychometry, etc.

At this stage of human evolution, however, I think it rash and unphilosophic to dogmatize. I claim to be an inquirer only, an investigator, a pupil in the primary classes or grades, and honestly confess that I know very little in any line of thought or discovery. Hence I earnestly court criticism from all who, like myself, confess they do not know it all.

* * *

These may not be the exact words of the introductory remarks at last Sunday's meeting, but they represent fairly well the ideas. After talking an hour or more on the subject of "Love in Freedom and Woman and Civil Law," the audience was invited to ask questions, to which brief answers were given. Six or seven short addresses, mainly in sympathy with the main address, were made. More of these short addresses would have been made and replied to, but the janitor refused to give us light, claiming that the afternoon meetings were not entitled to electric lights in that building. Next Sunday the subject will be, "Motherhood in Freedom—Woman, Man's Savior." Evidently much interest is felt in this line of reform by many earnest and cultured women and men in San Francisco.

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 21, 1903. M. HARMAN.

THE FINAL OUTCOME OF POSTAL CENSORSHIP.

Lucifer is feeling the beneficent hand of government laid heavily upon its shoulder, one of its recent editions having been excluded from the mails, while second-class rates have been taken away from it altogether. If things go on at this rate the leading function of the postoffice will soon be that of preventing the transmission of the mails.—Americus in Free Society.

HOW TO HELP TO CIRCULATE LUCIFER.

We hope the friends of Lucifer will do all they can to extend its circulation. For this reason we make the price of $2.25 for two copies to one address. The extra 25 cents merely pays for extra time, trouble and paper.

"Nora: A Doll's House," and "Ghosts," by Henrik Ibsen, bound together in olive cloth, with red lettering. Containing sketch of the life of the author. 108 pages. With Lucifer one year, $2.25.

LAW-DEFYING OFFICERS OF THE LAW.

All the civilized world knows that on Wednesday, Dec. 30, there occurred in Chicago one of the most terrible theater fires on record, in which 582 persons perished. But many will be surprised to learn that this great loss of life was due to the gross neglect of precautions against fire by the theater management, a neglect sanctioned by the officials who were paid by the people to see that all possible means of safety were secured to spectators in theaters. It transpires that all the theaters are offenders, and therefore all the inspectors of theaters were guilty of neglect of duty. If reports are correct, the disaster might as easily have occurred in the Auditorium or any other of the alleged fireproof playhouses. Of little avail is it to the dead, the injured and their mourning families that the structure was sufficiently fireproof to preserve the building and the seats when the blaze from the combustible material on the stage was sufficient to burn and stifle all the occupants of the theater. A more sweeping indictment of the officers of the law could not be made by any Anarchist than that contained in the following editorial from the Chicago American:

"In this city of Chicago, in the third year of the twentieth century, it is calmly testified by the Commissioner of Buildings that there is in the whole city not one theater that complies with the provisions of the law intended to secure public safety. Not one theater of the total of thirty-six; not one of the theaters that nightly entertain somewhere near 40,000 people.

"He says this deliberately and adduces the proof. There it stands in this most amazing document, with the specifications in the case of each law-breaking theater, officially certified to. Nor is it in one particular only that these theaters violate the law; not one nor two, but from six to a dozen in each instance—absolute violations of the law that imperil every night thousands of lives. He says it, this commissioner, and he has visited every theater and made tests and examinations, and he officially declares the truth of his statement.

"What do we have law for? What do we have officers of the law for? What do we have government and courts for?

"In thirty-six places 365 nights in the year the law is openly and defiantly violated, and the Commissioner of Buildings walks about and says it is so and has been so this long time.

"If the public officers that year after year we elect in our blind confidence and good nature will not enforce these laws are there any laws they will enforce, or is there any duty they will perform, or have they any use in the world except to draw their salaries?"

Since the above extract was printed the Mayor has confessed that all the theaters of Chicago are unsafe by ordering them closed until the appliances for safety are provided.

Well may we repeat the question, "If the public officers that year after year we elect in our blind confidence and good nature will not enforce these laws, are there any laws they will enforce, or is there any duty they will perform, or have they any use in the world except to draw their salaries?"

There can be no excuse for the existence of government better than the necessity of protecting life. And if the elected officers fail, as in the matter of the theaters of Chicago, of what use can they be anywhere? LILLIAN HARMAN.

LUCIFER UNDER THE BAN.

Our contemporary, Lucifer, which lately has been annoyed considerably by the postal authorities, is now suffering additional persecution. The issue of Dec. 17, the first three pages of which contain a report of the John Turner meeting at Cooper Union in New York, and in the rest of whose pages are only two very short articles on the sex question, has been denied the mails, and the second-class mail matter privileges of the paper have been taken away altogether.

If the publishers of Lucifer are prosecuted for this issue it will be hard to find a judge or a jury who will be able to detect any obscenity in it, and only a diseased and perverted libertine could perhaps find the articles "suggestive" and "lascivious." Nevertheless, the radical press is hampered by the tyrannical whims of meddlesome and arrogant officials, who with impunity trample upon the so-called constitutional right of free speech and press. How such despotism is to be resisted so long as the "American sovereigns" look with equanimity upon the gross encroachments of government we do not know.—Free Society (Chicago).

We will give a copy of Dr. Foote's "Home Cyclopedia," price $2, with Lucifer one year for $3. This is a family guide book of medical, social, and sexual science, containing 1,248 pages, with 400 pictures, eighty in color. Send for circulars.

A CO-OPERATIVE LABOR CURRENCY.

Glad to see in Lucifer of Nov. 19 a short article on "A Mutual Credit Currency," taken from the Cincinnatian, my old-time Grange and co-operation friend. Their plan is excellent and is helping along like dozens more springing up here and there, all going to prove that, as to buying money of the banker, "we don't have to." A Rochdale store has just been established here in San Diego, with over 200 members. This, too, helps to open eyes and fill pockets.

However, the ultimate must be found in a strictly just and even co-operative exchange of goods and labor such as I established in Denver, Feb. 4, 1886, before "Looking Backward" came out and three years before the promulgation of De Bernardi's "Labor Exchange." The child was too feeble to live alone in the cold world, which insisted it had been born fifty or a hundred years ahead of its time. Yet had its originator been untrammeled so as to give the infant proper care it would have grown faster. Three months only could be given it then, during which many intelligent people, farmers, housekeepers, printers and editors, took hold and used the beneficent idea of an exchange of our surplus without legal tender. However, no one was found courageous enough to adopt the foundling when its mother was obliged to leave the city for her farm home. Afterward, at Loveland, Colo., more than $1,000 worth of business was done, as shown by the books, but on Dec. 4, 1894, a home-made money, based on labor and its products, was issued to keep account of values and no books were kept. Business was brisk among the members until overwork again removed the manager, and all was still.

Since, in the intervening years, business has been done wherever depositories could be had and the manager was able to be at the front; in Denver and in Fort Collins, and now this last summer in San Diego. A little paper was started, called Co-operative Exchange. Four depositories were established in a small way, teaching exchange principles as we went. Again overwork has brought illness—nerve exhaustion—and enthusiasm has to be held in check. Illness laid its hand on all the workers, and we wait, meantime, having had fruits, clothing and services at our command sufficient to convince the skeptical that courage and perseverance will yet allow us to provide one another with the comforts of life without "bankers' money," or "rent, interest and profits."

The public mind is opening fast to the generous propositions derided twenty years ago. The logic of events none can withstand. The editors of Lucifer were among those who gladly espoused the idea of exchange, and even yet are using with me whenever possible the labor tender. Health is coming my way again, the people are learning, and, "in honor preferring one another," we will soon be "keeping store" far above the merchant's motto, "Buy cheap and sell dear." Let us, once for always, secede from the competitive grab-game for dollars and co-operate as producers and consumers.

ALBINA L. WASHBURN.

1461 Sixth street, San Diego, Calif.

THE FAILURE OF PROHIBITIONS.

Shallow people, possessed with zeal for any particular cause, make it a great merit to run to and fro after special prohibitions that shall fix the case and emasculate sin out of our houses and streets. Alas, gentlemen, the civilized world has been overwhelmed with prohibitions for many hundred years. . . . The true friends of the Sabbath and its purifying and elevating influences, and of the many excellent physical and other reforms that mark the present age, are not necessarily those who complacently put themselves forward and seek to carry the good through by penalties and stoppages and arrests and fines. The true friends of elevation and reform are the friends of the fullest rational liberty. For there is this vital and antiseptic power in liberty, that it tends forever and ever to strengthen what is good and erase what is bad.

For the city or State to become the overseer and dry nurse of a man and coerce him, . . . into how he must behave himself, and when and whither he must travel and by what conveyance, or what he shall be permitted to use or dispose of on certain days of the week, and what forced to disuse, would be to make a poor thing of a man. . . . The citizen must have room. He must learn to be so muscular and self-possessed, to rely more on the restrictions of himself than any restrictions of statute books or city ordinances or police.—Walt Whitman.

FREETHINKERS AND CREMATION.

The late editor of the Freethought Magazine was a good type of a certain class of Freethinkers who have mentally evoluted to a well-defined point and then suffered from a species of arrested development. George Macdonald in the Truth Seeker gave a well-balanced and, on the whole, impartial sketch of the man who has recently passed from among us. Mr. Green's action in cutting Lucifer from his exchange list showed very plainly that he was not keeping up with the procession, so to speak. And in the last scene of all he evidently preferred to follow the orthodox fashion of earth burial in preference to cremation, for if it were otherwise he would have left a hint to that effect.

In the matter of cremation Mr. Green did not materially differ from quite a number of those who hold radical social and economic views, but who on this subject are neutral. It goes to show what a grip ancient and time-honored custom has on so many people and what a large number among us are yet loath to discard the Christian custom of earth burial for the now unquestionably better method of cremation.

No doubt two-thirds of the heterodox are believers in this reform, but they all should be. That they are not arises from the fact that during life we are too busy to think of death and the aftermath; too many die who have never uttered a wish one way or the other, and as a necessary consequence the nearest of kin, often orthodox Christians who are following the dead hand of custom, consign the body to the grave and to the worms without a moment's deliberation. This should not be the case. We should all bestir ourselves and see to it that our Liberal friends and neighbors are on record in black and white on this subject.

It might not be out of place to mention that all the cremation societies of the United States issue certificates on the partial payment plan which are good everywhere; that is to say, if some one in Chicago held a paid-up certificate for one cremation, and should die in Portland or New York City, it would be honored for one cremation at either of those crematories.

WALTER BREEN.

"WHO IS THE ENEMY?"

Hugh O. Pentecost writes thus to Edwin C. Walker about the latter's new work, "Who Is the Enemy: Anthony Comstock or You?" "Your pamphlet is a strong discussion of the question at issue that one could give to a conservative friend with some hope that he might read it through."

Dr. R. W. Shufeldt, biologist, author of several scientific works and of more than seven hundred articles on medicine, travel, science, sexual problems and other subjects, writes to E. C. Walker: "I thank you very much indeed for the copy you sent me of your valuable pamphlet, 'Who Is the Enemy: Anthony Comstock or You?' I have read it from cover to cover with the utmost satisfaction and unqualified approval. It is one of the best and strongest things you have put out, and I am with you solid in both the letter and spirit of it. I prize the copy most highly." Ask for table of contents and specimen pages of "Who Is the Enemy?" or send 20 cents to this office for the pamphlet.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SEND 10c IN STAMPS FOR THREE NUMBERS, OR 50c FOR PROFESSOR ALLEN HADDOCK,

HUMAN NATURE.

It is a monthly magazine, now in the fifteenth year of publication. It is Unique, Eclectric and Scientific. It treats of Phrenology, Psychology, Health, Sociology and all subjects which pertain to the welfare of humanity.

The character of men and animals is in accordance with their physical organization. This is determined by size of body and brain, shape of head, texture, temperament and facial expression.

HUMAN NATURE illustrates these principles by pictures and pen, and teaches its readers how to read character. Its ethics are ennobling; its style, while strong, is sprightly, and its literary standard high. You need HUMAN NATURE. Address

TWELVE MONTHS' SUBSCRIPTION TO
PHRENOLOGIST,
1020 MARKET ST., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

A BARGAIN.

FOR SALE—The Brodhead Windmill plant, at Brodhead, Wis., is for sale cheap. It consists of a well-equipped foundry, machine shop and wood shop. The cause is poor health, old age, and inability to run it. It is located in as fine a country as can be found west of the lakes. It fell into my hands through a bankruptcy sale, and therefore I can sell for less than the tools cost. Inquire of

S. O. BISHOP, Brodhead, Wis.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 61, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We cannot sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 30c each, two for 50c. Address EDWIN C. WALKER, 244 W. 145th St., New York, N. Y.

WANTED—300 women to study medicine or midwifery. Next term begins January 1, 1904. College of Medicine and Surgery, 245 Ashland Blvd., Chicago, Ill. DR. FLORENCE DRESSLER, Secretary. (Dept. A.)

VARIOUS VOICES.

We are always glad to receive calls from friends visiting the city. Take the Lake street elevated, stop at Ashland avenue, walk one block east, then one block north. Or take Fulton street electric car west and stop at St. John's place, alighting in front of our house. The Lake street electric and Paulina street cars also pass within a block of our residence.

Carl Nold, St. Louis: It looks as if free press and free speech will receive many a blow yet before that sleeping mule, Labor, will wake up and do some kicking.

Philip G. Peabody, Boston, Mass.: Of course, I am willing to pay $2 a year for Lucifer, and think your intention to raise the price is wise. What kind of transportation would we have if such persons as run the postoffice were given power to run the railroads?

A. A. Cowles, Cleveland, O.: I have not received the last two Lucifers. As my subscription is paid till next May, I cannot divine the reason of its non-appearance. I sincerely hope you are not in trouble. If I had more time I could write a great deal in favor of Socialism. Surely the abolishment of the profit system and the turning of competition into channels other than an unequal contest for the things which are necessary to life and comfort will be a blessing to all mankind. Some forms of tyranny may appear, but we shall be better able to cope with the tyrant after the advent of the co-operative commonwealth. And in that glad time the teachings of Lucifer will bear fruit prolifically. All hail the co-operative commonwealth.

Philip G. Peabody, Boston, Mass.: I write to say that Lucifer for Dec. 10 is the last number that has reached me. The advertisements in Lucifer, concerning which there has recently been some discussion, have not the slightest interest for me; but the reading matter I greatly desire and need. I am a college graduate, having spent four years at Columbia College, in New York, where I graduated in 1877; I am also a lawyer and have studied medicine, although I never practiced as a physician; but I consider myself to have received more useful, valuable and intellectual education and moral improvement from your wisdom, as so generously dispensed in Lucifer, than from four years of tiresome and costly foolery in Columbia College. If Harvard is any better my son, recently graduated there, should get the benefit of it; but I fear colleges are all much alike, so far as useful tendency toward honor and real manliness is concerned; and as regards due respect for the rights of others, I fear all colleges, certainly Harvard, are worse than useless, judging from the conduct of their students. As I say, I desire greatly the literary part of Lucifer and respectfully ask for an extra copy of the number of Dec. 17.

J. M. Crane, New York: I have just received your letter telling me that Lucifer has been held up at the postoffice as "unmailable" and that second-class rates have been denied to it because it contains advertisements of books sold by its editor and publisher. To declare it unmailable, it seems to me, is not only unjust, but also is in violation of the spirit of the constitution, which professes to guarantee a man security for his life and property and deprive him of neither without a trial by jury. I do not think a jury has decided that Lucifer is unmailable. It is at present the only paper for which I pay subscription. I have taken it for many years and I regard it as a powerful engine for the uplifting of humanity. No other paper has done so much to enlighten the people on the most important of all social problems, the sane and rational relation of the sexes. The suppression of such a paper is a blow at the welfare of society and of generations yet unborn. Some way surely ought to be open to secure a reversal of the tyrannous and retrogressive ruling against it. The excuse that it contains too much of the editor's own advertising, it seems to me, is a mere pretext to deprive it of second-class rates. Many of the magazines of the country contain a greater proportion of advertisements of the private business of their editors. The paper must not stop. It is too valuable to lose. I will gladly pay the extra cost of postage to get it regularly as before, and I think almost every other subscriber will be glad to do likewise. In this world of darkness let us rally around the Light-Bearer.

Liberty, which is the nurse of all great wits.—Milton.

WHO IS THE ENEMY?

Well, who is the enemy? You have done a great deal of fussing about Comstock. Why not fuse a little about yourself? Walker presses the question where it belongs. Why should Comstock answer? You should answer. Comstock is only the fat on your neck. It is waste time worrying about Comstock the man. Get after Comstock the symptom. But Comstock the symptom is you. You might as well think you can destroy a theology you hate by swearing at a church steeple as think you can get rid of Comstock by making him the target of your impolite vocabulary. Comstock is stuck tight there in your own negligence, in your own obtuseness, in your own indisposition to nurture the liberties of your inheritance. You went to a meeting the other night to see Comstock. What good did that do you? You might have stayed at home and seen yourself and known the real Comstock better. The foundation fault is yours. You think sex is dirty. You rarely allude to it except in averted phrases. When you have got to say something about sex you look around for some word that will not say it too clearly. That is the Comstock in your own blood. That is the Comstock upon whose degeneracy the Comstock of the Sunday school and the mails relies for his sanctions. Before you can get rid of Comstock you have got to get rid of that thing in yourself.—Horace Traubel in the Conservator.

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

THE LIBERAL MAIL-ORDER JEWELER.

Now permanent at No. 110 N. Kensington Ave., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 20 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's Line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Thebes in the Crucible," free.

J. H. GREER, M. D.,
32 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.

Office Hours—9 a. m. to 6 p. m.; Wednesdays at 1 Saturdays, 9 a. m. to 9 p. m.; Sundays, 9 a. m. to 12 m.
Telephone, Randolph 42.

DR. OGILVIE A. RICE,
DENTIST.
1356 MILWAUKEE AVE., COR. WESTERN, CHICAGO.
Telephone West 141.

PHILIP G. PEABODY,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
15 COURT SQUARE, ROOM 61.
BOSTON, MASS.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

KAREZZA.

SCIENCE OF MARRIAGE.

A godsend to every wife—a joy to every husband.

This work brings peace into homes disrupted by inharmony in the sexual relations. Dr. A. B. Stockham advises a practice which leads to individual liberty and to deeper love between husband and wife.

Dr. F. G. Welch: "After a personal trial of its teachings, I want to thank you for a great service to humanity."

Rev. George R. Stanshaw: "Out of a beautiful and ennobling experience, I can say, I KNOW."

Gives a high ideal of the marital relation and teaches control of the Fecundating Power.

J. A. Smalley, M. D.: "I have received more actual benefit from the practice of KAREZZA teachings than from all other books on Sexual Science."

A. B. Franklin, M. D.: "KAREZZA does more than any other single thing to make marriage a perpetual courtship."

LEVANT CLOTH. POSTPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MEN, WOMEN, AND CHANCE.

BY WILLIAM PLATT.

Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. Price 75c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

SONGS OF A CHILD,
AND OTHER POEMS.

By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. Price $1.50; postage 12c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

WOMAN AND HER RELATION TO THE CHURCH, OR CANON LAW FOR WOMEN.

BY HARRIET M. CLOSE.

A succinct statement of the position to which women were doomed by the Church Fathers and authorities. Every woman should possess a copy. Price, 10c.
M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; OR THE PRICE OF VIRTUE.

By Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood, by Lucinda B. Chandler; Life's Gifts, by Olive Schreiner, and Marriage—What It Was and Is, and Will the Coming Woman Marry? Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD OWN

TOKOLOGY.

A COMPLETE HEALTH GUIDE.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

Teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions.

Treats of diseases of women and children; contains practical teachings on Change of Life, limiting offspring, etc.

Lizzie N. Armstrong writes: "If I knew I were to be the mother of innumerable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of Tokology."

Dr. C. B. Willis: "Tokology is doing more for women than all other books put together."

CLOTH, PREPAID, $2.25; LEATHER, $2.75.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES.

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

Contents—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only"; Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen"; What Are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist; Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women. With Appendix: The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 15c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

A treatise on Sexual Science and Marriage, rich in thought and strong in expression. Emphatically a book for the thinker.

Carpenter holds that woman's freedom is based upon economics; she must be independent financially that she may not be forced to sell herself in or out of marriage. He also makes a strong plea for a motherhood of freedom and thoughtful preparation.

AMERICAN EDITION, CLOTH, PREPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM.

THE RELATIONSHIP OF EACH TO HUMAN LIBERTY.

BY E. C. WALKER.

The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organization and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. Price 5c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

CREATIVE LIFE.

A BOOK FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

A timely and important message not found in text books. Every girl seeks and should have this true, plain and practical knowledge. One writes: "Thank you, thank you, dear Doctor, for the plain but beautiful thoughts. Womanhood, motherhood and life have new meanings. You ennoble your theme." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

A NOVEL BY GEORGE N. MILLER.

FORTIETH THOUSAND.

"The Strike of a Sex" is a fascinating novel bearing upon the sexual relations. It is a bold protest against the customary life of most married people, and at the same time a prophecy of happier conditions between man and wife. Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW.

A PRIMER OF SEXUAL RATIONALISM.

BY E. C. WALKER.

"Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes."

Paper covers; 42 large pages. Price 10c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

"PERSONAL EXPERIENCES OF TWO AMERICAN ANTI-VIVISECTIONISTS IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES."

BY PHILIP G. PEABODY.

With an Appendix by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c. Apply to PHILIP G. PEABODY, 15 Court Square, Boston, Mass.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY.

By Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition, by E. C. Walker; Motherhood in Freedom, by Moses Harman; The Greatest Sin (an allegory), by E. B. Kerr, and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom, by Oscar Rotter. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN.

By E. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.; The New Martyrdom, by Lillian Harman, and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE.

By E. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese, by C. W. Coolridge; A Traveler's Tale, by E. B. Kerr; The Cat's Story, by Emile Zola. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

1002

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

HILDA'S HOME.

A STORY OF WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

With Macaulay, Rosa Graul would say: "The cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty." Hence she has no fears that under Freedom the Home and the Family would cease to exist, or that woman would be less loving and lovable, or that man would be less manly and honorable. On the contrary, she maintains that only in the soil and atmosphere of freedom is it possible for true womanhood and manhood to live and flourish.

426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

One of the best short works on the subject. A charming little gift book.

"Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it."

DAINTILY PRINTED. PREPAID, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES.

BY E. C. WALKER.

Contents—Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What Is She? What Will She Be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections Upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love and Life." Price 10c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD.

AN OUTLINE OF PRACTICAL CO-OPERATIVE INDIVIDUALISM.

BY HENRY OLERICH.

Regarded by many persons as a more interesting and consistent economic reform novel than Bellamy's "Looking Backward."

Bound in red silk with gold title. Nearly 450 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, $1.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

BY JOHN E. KELSO.

Contents—Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff or Protection; War Punishments; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

309 pages. Cloth binding somewhat damaged, and reduced from $1.50 to 50c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY, AND THE STATE.

BY FREDERICK ENGELS.

Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans.

217 pages; bound in cloth. Price 60c; postage 5c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STORY OF IJAIN;

OR, THE EVOLUTION OF A MIND.

By Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Stuart Ross), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. Price $1; postage 5c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE CURSE OF MATERNITY.

From the French of Henry Fevre. Together with How to Escape the Curse, by Jonathan Mayo Crane; Woman's "Duty" to Bear Children, by E. C. Walker; True and False Morality, by C. L. James; and Love's Law, by William Francis Barnard. Price, 25c.; M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE.

By John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention, by Mariette; Reminiscences of Devils Heights, by A. Warren, and The Sexes and Love in Freedom, by Oscar Rotter. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN.

By Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yclept Society, by Moses Hull; Virgin Soil, by George Egerton, and Normal Sexual Action, by Ernest Wilcox. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of Freethought and Free Love. By Orford Northcote. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. By M. Harman. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Moral. By A. F. Tindall. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM, by E. C. Walker. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE COMING WOMAN, by Lillie D. White. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

PRICE 5 CENTS. CHICAGO, ILL., JAN. 14, E. M. 304. [C. E. 1904.] WHOLE NO. 1003

THE FUGITIVE WIFE.

PART FIRST: MARRIAGE.

The following excerpts are taken from a booklet by Warren Chase entitled "The Fugitive Wife: A Criticism on Marriage, Adultery and Divorce," published in Boston in 1861. Probably but few copies of this work are in existence at the present time. In a later issue, possibly next week, we will publish more from the same source.

It may be well to introduce this subject by a poem; and I have none by me more appropriate than the following from the pen of Dr. Watts, the inspired psalmist, written in the year 1701, and, I believe, one of his most truthful and sacred psalms.

Say, my Love, and teach my song,
To whom my sweetest joys belong.
And who the happy pairs,
Whose yielding hearts and joining hands
Find blessings twisted with their bands,
To soften all their cares?

Not the wild herd of nymphs and swains,
That thoughtless fly into the chains,
As custom leads the way;
If there be bliss without design,
Ivies and oaks may grow and twine,
And be as blest as they.

Not sordid souls, of earthly mold,
Who, drawn by kindred charms of gold,
To dull embraces move;
So two rich mountains of Peru
May rush to wealthy marriage, too,
And make a world of love.

Not the mad tribe that hell inspires
With wanton flames; those raging fires
The purer bliss destroy;
On Etna's top let furies wed,
And sheets of lightning dress the bed,
To improve the burning joy.

Not the dull pairs, whose marble forms
None of the melting passions warms,
Can mingle hearts and hands;

Logs of green wood, that quench the coals,
Are married just like stoic souls,
With rulers for their bands.

Not minds of melancholy strain,
Still silent, or that still complain,
Can the dear bondage bless;
As well may heavenly concerts spring
From two old lutes, with ne'er a string,
Or none besides the base.

Nor can the soft enchantment hold
Two jarring souls of angry mold,
The rugged and the keen;
Samson's young foxes might as well
In bands of cheerful wedlock dwell,
With firebrands tied between.

Nor let the cruel fetters bind
A gentle to a savage mind,
For Love abhors the sight;
Loose the fierce tiger from the deer,
For native rage and native fear
Rise and forbid delight.

Two kindred souls alone must meet—
'Tis friendship makes the bondage sweet,
And feeds our mutual loves; [sweet.
Bright Venus, on her rolling throne,
Is drawn by gentlest birds alone,
And Cupids yoke the doves.

In the June of 1859 the scribes of Chicago furnished the daily papers of that city with an interesting item of news by announcing that a fugitive wife escaped from one of the villages on Lake Superior, in Michigan, had been legally seized and returned with the officer, via Detroit and the next boat, to her legal and proper owner. The papers stated that she had left her home and husband and several small children and fled on the steamer to that city, where dispatches had arrived before her, enabling the officers to be in readiness to arrest her on the arrival of the boat; that she had come in company with a gentleman of her acquaintance, and probably at his expense, which rendered her crime, and his for assisting the fugitive, extremely aggravating. I felt confident that most persons who read this item of the city news were pleased with the report of the capture of the fugitive and the one who assisted her, and of their return, via Detroit, to the place from which she had fled. I never heard of the persons or the circumstance after, and soon forgot the names, but the incident opened to my mind a broad field for reflection and instituted a search after justice, consistency and rights.

I knew we had a national fugitive-slave law, which was considered by most people in the free states to be very cruel and by many unjust, and only defended and justified by its friends by the necessity for it and the demands of the constitution; but I did not know we had state fugitive-wife laws, by which they could be caught and returned to their owners as chattel slaves are, although I knew many wives were as effectually enslaved and controlled as the black chattels of Georgia. I knew most humane persons considered that a negro who displayed sufficient skill and energy to escape from slavery and reach a free state or Canada was entitled to his or her liberty, and that it was almost or quite barbarous to return such persons; but I was hardly prepared to believe the people so heartless, cruel, almost barbarous as to return a woman of their race and color to a tyrant who had treated her so cruelly that it had forced asunder the strongest ties in her nature and compelled her to leave even her children and flee for life to escape the grave, as I know some have. When a mother leaves her children it is prima facie evidence to me that the cause was more potent than a mother's love and must be nearly equal to death itself; for even death seldom does it. I can perceive how a woman might leave her husband for want of love on his or her part; and, if none but the two were interested, this would be good and sufficient reason for separation. But when she leaves children, and leaves them with the man she could not live with, and trusts him to select another to govern and guide them, certainly there must be a power stronger than that maternal love which God has planted deepest in the woman's nature. It is simply ridiculous to talk of psychology, seduction, free love or fascination as a cause. These are all insignificant. It must take years of cruelty and suffering to produce such effect and result. It seems to me more and more, on reflection, that a law is more cruel that returns a wife to her master than that which returns a slave to the owner. In each case death will be a release, and oftener a desirable one to the wife than the slave; and we have more suicides by wives than by slaves to escape cruelty.

Had the case above referred to been a solitary one, or even one of a single hundred, and never to be repeated, I would have taken no notice of it, but devoted my time and pen to other subjects, perhaps not more congenial to the public mind than this. But, while we of the free states are complaining of being compelled by Congress to execute cruel fugitive-slave laws, and are enacting such as no constitution of state or nation requires to return the wife who escapes from a cruelty often as brutal as that of most slave masters, it is certainly a fit subject of criticism.

It is true we have statutes in most of the states to protect the wife against physical abuse of the husband, with the whip or fist, but none to protect her against a personal abuse, often worse than a severe whipping. Our marriage laws and public opinion put the body of the wife into the care and keeping of the husband, provided he does not beat her, and leave her no escape from the worst of cruelty but to run away, and then we catch and return her. The very crimes (for they are crimes) which thousands of husbands perpetrate weekly or daily upon their wives would, any one of them, if perpetrated upon a single woman who could defend herself with the law, send the man to the penitentiary for a term of years, if not for life. Yet, when she complains, she gets no sympathy from her church or pious neighbors, except "Wives, submit to your husbands." The law has no remedy, and all that is left is escape, if she can, and be caught if she must.

I know very well this is not the condition of all wives, but only those who are merely legal wives. There are many whose lives are mated to their husbands and who physically and mentally harmonize and blend with them and join voluntarily in all the relations of social and sexual life; but, by long and extensive observation, I am compelled to believe that these are the exceptions and that the rule is the other way, and that a majority are unhappy often when their husbands are contented. It has long been well known that hundreds of young wives go annually to the graveyards, as effectually killed by their husbands as if they had been pounded to death, many of them leaving no word of complaint or even of warning to their old companions.

There is scarcely a neighborhood in the Christianized part of our country that has not been visited with cases of domestic trouble within the last few years—deaths as above, separations, runaways or suicides; and, instead of condemning and punishing to prevent, the wise legislators should search for the causes and try to remove them. Add to these the terrible effects of forced relations, of unhappy marriages, in producing and bringing up children, and we have a picture that ought to make any Christian blush or hide his head in shame, if he or his religion has sustained the barbarous features of our present marriage laws to this time. The scribes of the press and the pharisees of the pulpit are continually harping upon the beauties and blessings of marriage and married life, and thus alluring and enticing the young and ignorant into it; but they seldom give the other side and thus warn them against the terrible risk and danger of an uncongenial mating. The jokes and jests, ridicule and contempt of old and young, rich and poor, run freely against the single who reach or cross the age of thirty; and if there is one thing more odious in the public mind than another at this time it is free love; and yet, if it has any legitimate meaning, it must be the love of single persons or those not bound by law or church to love any one. The love of all single persons, if they have love at all, must be free, and they are free lovers, except so far as the church may claim a right to direct their love to God or Jesus. Fanaticism and public prejudice take great liberties with language and often pervert it to their uses, as they have in the use of free love, applying it to the sexual passion, which man has in common with animals, if not with plants, and which we never think of calling love when it prompts the male to pursue the female among the deer, sheep or swine, and which is no more appropriate among our race than theirs. If I can understand the term love and apply it to manifestations of feeling I cannot find it below the human kingdom, nor ever manifested in that kingdom in or through the sexual passions. I suppose both men and women love each other; if so, it is not the same that draws only the opposite sexes together. Some persons talk of several kinds of love—some good, some bad, etc. I know nothing of it.

> "I would not call that love
> Which could be poisoned, marred, or stained,
> Which could by any wealth be bought,
> By any power be chained."

To me "Love is to the human heart what sunshine is to flowers." I have no fear of it in or out of marriage, free or not—if, indeed, it could be other than free, which I doubt. I wish every man loved every woman as well as the most loving husband does his wife, and every woman loved every man as well as the most loving wife does her husband; then we should have a world of love and loving beings, and certainly no one would knowingly injure any other; for love worketh no injury.

HER WOMAN'S HEART FOR ME.

Oh, like a queen's her happy tread,
And like a queen's her golden head!
But oh, at last, when all is said,
Her woman's heart for me!

We wandered where the river gleamed,
'Neath oaks that mused and pines that dreamed,
A wild thing of the woods she seemed,
So proud and pure and free!

All heaven drew nigh to hear her sing,
When from her lips her soul took wings;
The oaks forgot their pondering,
The pines their reverie.

And oh, her happy queenly tread,
And oh, her queenly golden head!
But oh, her heart, when all is said,
Her woman's heart for me!

—William Watson.

Marriage is a lottery in which men stake their liberty and women their happiness.—Mme. de Rieux.

THE DAILY DREADFULS.

The absolute unreliability and dishonesty of the daily press was demonstrated again last week.

A shell manufactured for the use of the United States navy exploded at the Midvale steel works, and the newspapers straightway discovered and announced an Anarchist plot to destroy the guns of our ships by so preparing the shells that they would prematurely explode. The impossibility of tampering with such closely guarded munitions of war was no check on the imaginations of the reporters, and the carelessness of a workman was promptly turned into a gigantic conspiracy to demolish the guns and war vessels of the nation. Columns were written, with scare heads, "ingenious theories" were spun, and innumerable "it is said" and "it might be" and "it is probables" were used to give the whole tissue of lies an air of plausibility. The impression was conveyed that the country is full of desperate criminals calling themselves Anarchists, united in secret societies and plotting to kill and burn and destroy everything and everybody. The columns of lurid slush were telegraphed over all the land.

The next day the chief of ordnance at Washington, Admiral O'Neill, denied that there was any suspicion of a plot, declaring that such tampering with shells was out of the question and the allegations preposterous, and placing the responsibility where it belonged—on the heedlessness of workmen.

To offset their columns of lying reports the press gave us the denial three inches of space in obscure corners, where not one out of a hundred readers of the papers will see it. The unthinking will conclude that the country is in danger, that the anti-Anarchy law is necessary to the perpetuity of our institutions, and that the best thing to do is to send Mr. Turner back to England and allow a law to remain on our statute books which denies freedom of thought and entrance at our ports to such men as Herbert Spencer, Count Tolstoi, Elisee Reclus, Auberon Herbert, and others who believe that government of man by man is immoral. Had it not been for the Chicago theater fire, which occupied their space and provided a fresh horror, the newspapers doubtless would have persisted in their villainous course of exploiting an Anarchist plot to make piquant reading in the daily cent's worth of sensationalism.—Truth Seeker.

WOMAN AND THE RELIGION OF THE FUTURE.

The problem which both Roman Catholic and Protestant churches in this country face now with respect to their women is, Will the women continue to be conservative? For they are receiving the scientific education which Maurice saw that they must have before they could ever be anything else than religionists of an emotional, mystical type. Higher criticism of the Bible is taught at Smith and Bryn Mawr, as well as at Harvard and Johns Hopkins. Nothing that is destructive of the old and constructive of the new in matters of philosophy, theology and ethics is wanting now in the curricula of the best women's colleges. To imply that the influence of our educational institutions for men or for women makes against essential religion or against the spiritual life would be unfair, but no one aware of the facts of to-day can deny that there is a gulf between the universities and colleges, on the one hand, and the churches, on the other hand, viewed broadly, in their attitudes toward the origins and ultimates of life, literature and liturgy. The point is that when the ecclesiastic and conserver of the traditions and the customs of the past comes to deal with the educated woman of to-day and to-morrow he may not find her the unreasoning, credulous adherent of institutional religion and orthodoxy that he has found woman in the past to be.—Harper's Weekly.

"WHO IS THE ENEMY?"

Hugh O. Pentecost writes thus to Edwin C. Walker about the latter's new work, "Who Is the Enemy: Anthony Comstock or You?" "Your pamphlet is a strong discussion of the question at issue that one could give to a conservative friend with some hope that he might read it through."

Dr. R. W. Shufeldt, biologist, author of several scientific works and of more than seven hundred articles on medicine, travel, science, sexual problems and other subjects, writes to E. C. Walker: "I thank you very much indeed for the copy you sent me of your valuable pamphlet, 'Who Is the Enemy: Anthony Comstock or You?' I have read it from cover to cover with the utmost satisfaction and unqualified approval. It is one of the best and strongest things you have put out, and I am with you solid in both the letter and spirit of it. I prize the copy most highly." Ask for table of contents and specimen pages of "Who Is the Enemy?" or send 20 cents to this office for the pamphlet.

TRAINING A CHILD TO THINK FOR ITSELF.

The following story of experience in child-culture is given by "A Stepmother" in Good Housekeeping. Very few stepmothers are equally patient and thoughtful; and the same is true of mothers. Indeed, many are so overwhelmed with housework and the care of numerous children that it would be impossible for them to devote much time to the development of the expanding mind, as did this stepmother. Yet there is much that can be learned and utilized in the way of training our children to think and to act for themselves, and it is encouraging to find such articles as this in the conventional magazines.

The care of a "seemingly deficient child" devolved upon me when he was three years old. Up to that time he had not been taught even the most elementary points in the care of his body or personal cleanliness. He would sit for hours silent and motionless, not so much from imbecility as from mental indolence, apparently.

My first effort was to arouse the brain. He "needed to be talked to," one observing old lady said. I talked to him; told him incidents; called his attention to anything likely to interest him, and at last decided it was a case of prenatal influence which could eventually be overcome by patient and persistent effort.

As he grew he seemed to be wholly devoid of moral perception, absolutely ignorant of the difference between right and wrong. He had no desire to be bad, fortunately, but if he had had such tendencies, he had no restraining conscience. Lacking this, there was danger of his leaning too heavily on my dictum, and leaving all responsibility on my authority. Hence, there was need of guarding myself as closely as I watched him, and I was especially careful never to give an express command, but in all cases to say, 'Think a bit, would it be best to do this way?' This I did to develop a power to judge of the relation of cause to effect.

When he went to school I obeyed my invariable rule never to criticise a teacher in a child's presence, and when he complained, as he sometimes did—though I was overjoyed to see that he thought enough to care—I would say, "Your teacher never means to be unjust, and is mistaken perhaps." He grew to be reasonable in that way.

Once I observed him sitting quiet and growing alarmingly pale. I waited to learn the cause. He was a nervous child and sympathy or questions would often make him sick when otherwise he would have been quite well. So I always waited, but without his cognisance watched him very closely. Suddenly he said, "Do you think it fair for teacher to mark me a dead failure in arithmetic when every example gave a correct answer?"

"No," I replied, "but do you think your teacher really intended to be unfair?"

He answered promptly, "No, I don't really think she did, but I think she was wrong."

"So do I," I said. "Now let's try to think it out."

So he told me this, "I did every example and got the right answers, but I did them by your method and because the class used a different method she marked me a failure."

Instantly I got my clew and suggested to him how the mistake might have occurred. He was so reasonable he acquiesced at once, and when I said, "I'll explain to your teacher," he was perfectly satisfied. The result was the teacher saw it as we did, was convinced of her mistake and paid him a high compliment.

In his school I kept him back one year in the intermediate department, and after he went into the grammar school was also able to duplicate a year in one of the rooms, but I did not do this without his consent.

I said, "I'd rather you should stay back a year if you are willing, but I know how attractive promotion looks to you boys, and I won't insist." He stayed back, and one night after consulting me concerning a puzzling problem in his arithmetic, he closed his book, saying, "I think I can safely say I understand every example as far as I have gone, and now I'm glad I duplicated this year."

Not being familiar with the then current method of "doing examples," I had no temptation to do the work for him. I could only point out the principle; and he, grasping that, could apply his own method. Thus it happened that at final examinations he ranked No. 1 in his room and came to me in wondering amazement, saying: "I don't understand it! I've never ranked higher than fourth in my class during the term, there being three pupils who always stood higher than I, yet now in final examination I get ahead of those three."

"Well," I replied, "you now see the advantage of my constantly 'dinging' at you to think."

"Yes," he said, "I guess that's the explanation." And it was. Had he been what we call a "bright boy" I naturally should have trusted to his native intelligence as most people do, but realizing his mental needs, I struggled toward the development of dormant faculties.

When the time came for him to go into "the master's room," finding myself unwilling to subject him to the influence of a man whose moral character did not command my respect, I moved out of the district, and he passed to association with a noble man who advanced him rapidly, and finally advised him to "jump a year" and enter the high school. This he did, ranking fourth in a class of seventy. Yet he was what is usually called a dull boy, and but for careful development would probably have been actually what many called him—imbecile. He was not, in any sense, bright, active or quick-witted. Neither was he fond of books.

In his earlier childhood I spent hours playing hide-the-thimble, or toss and catch, with him, because when looking for any lost article he seemed absolutely incapable of judging what might be a possible place for it, but drifted about vaguely and gazed at the ceiling for what was probably on the floor. I shed tears of joy the first time I ever saw him play with playthings. He was then eight years old and was led into it by an older boy, but he was really playing. He seemed to lack the power of imagination which made toys interesting. He'd get his toys out when told to do so, but no play was spontaneous. Therefore, I have said, I played with him, and believing that "catching" was one of the best ways to develop a quick eye and promptly responsive muscles, I played toss and catch with him.

Such was his habit of silence that he once said to me, "I wish I had the 'gift of gab.'" Then I told him to cultivate it, and told him how. His success may be guessed when I say that in a western town, before he was twenty-one, he figured as "the boy preacher" in a denomination famed for rejecting written sermons.

But the one thing I like best to remember, now that he has "passed on," is this. When past thirty, he said to me in the presence of others, "I can never thank you enough for not allowing me to carry my hands in my pockets." His mature judgment approved seeming intolerance and his manly, voluntary avowal was a source of great pride and gratification to me. My "non compos" boy was now a man, and one friend who knew him from the first said, "You'll never call your life a failure when you look at that boy."

A QUEST FOR LOVE.

My soul wants love. My soul reaches for it and demands it. But my soul never gets it, not just the love it wants. And I am glad. For if it did my soul would stop growing and working and living. For growth and work and life are all a quest for love.

My mind wants love. The best there is, it wants. Nothing is good enough for it. Always there is something to be desired in every love it gains. And so, in divine discontent, it searches further, further, always further. And I am glad, for search means growth and work and life.

My body wants love. Just as my mind and my soul do—the best love. And I do not say no to my body any more than I do to my mind and my soul. I work, knowing that all the love I make my body beautiful enough to gain I may have. Love comes, just the love I willed to come. And my body dies. But I do not cry. It has served its purpose in living. It has given to the world the children of my mind and soul—the children of my body.—Grace Potter in the Conservator.

Every great reform which has been effected has consisted, not in doing something new, but in undoing something old. The most valuable additions made to legislation have been enactments destructive of preceding legislation; and the best laws which have been passed have been those by which some former laws were repealed.—Thomas Buckle.

Sunday school teacher: "Well, who was sorry at the return of the prodigal son?"

Little girl: "The fatted calf."—Ex.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

MOSES HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 300 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Denied Entry as Second-Class Mail Matter by the United States Postoffice Department.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One copy, one year	$2.00	One copy, six months	$1.00
Two copies to one address, one year	2.25	Two copies to one address, six mos.	1.15
One copy, three months	.50 cents	Single copies	.5 cents

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire notify us if you wish to continue to receive Lucifer.

EASTERN REPRESENTATIVE:
E. C. WALKER, 244 WEST 143D STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Lucifer and its literature can be obtained in San Francisco at the book store of Robert C. Ross, 1203 Market street, opposite City Hall.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

THIRD SERIES. VOL. VIII. NO. 2.

WHAT OUR SUBSCRIBERS SAY.

A friend in New York writes:

"The paper, paying third-class postage, should be issued not oftener than fortnightly. As a weekly, your folding, wrapping, and stamping work is double what it would be if the paper were a fortnightly, and your postage bill is doubled."

This opinion has been expressed by others also. The expense of mailing is quite small, but the item of postage is very large. It was impossible to consult the editor, he being so far away, before settling the questions of price and frequency of issue, and it was necessary to take decisive action. But I knew that nothing short of absolute necessity would induce him to consent to giving up the weekly issue. And only failure of attempt to continue the weekly publication would demonstrate its impossibility. As a matter of fact, the only objection he had to my management, when last heard from, was my failure to issue the paper the week succeeding the official seizure of No. 1000. He could not approve the non-appearance of even one issue. When Lucifer fails to make its weekly appearance it will be because its editor, Moses Harman, is convinced that it is impossible to continue its publication.

Continuing, our friend says:

"You would not have much trouble in getting 5 cents per copy if it were an eight-page fortnightly, but you practically cut off retail sales when you charge 5 cents for the old four pages. Even as it is, you have not graduated evenly. Two dollars a year is an increase, of course, but $2.25 is a decrease. You are telling your readers that you must double your price because you have to pay third-class postage, but in the same breath you say that if two of them are so fortunate as to live near the same office you will actually reduce the subscription."

It is hard to suit all parts of the country in regard to price of paper. We are told by news dealers in San Francisco that they cannot sell a paper for less than 5 cents a copy. As to the price of $2.25 for two copies to the same address, it simply did not occur to me that two subscribers would economize by having their papers sent to the same address, and so far none have done so. My idea was that some of our friends might be willing to help to circulate sample copies of the paper if they could get an extra copy at a small increased cost. Several have already ordered an extra copy for that purpose. It has been our custom to send out several hundred free sample copies each week, but with the greatly increased cost of postage we can send out but few, so we wish to let those of our friends who are willing to help circulate the paper have copies for that purpose at as low a price as possible. A western subscriber tells of his work in distributing literature as follows:

"You will find inclosed $2.25, for which please send me two copies of Lucifer for a year, and begin with this week's edition, so I will receive three copies. I have a list of names and addresses, and as soon as I read my papers I wrap them in one-cent wrappers and send them to these addresses. I have been doing this for years. So far as I know, neither Lucifer nor Free Society nor The Demonstrator have got a subscriber from this source, but I am not discouraged, for I know by experience that you have to punch a farmer pretty hard in the ribs if he is dead asleep before he will awaken. I have just bought one dollar's worth of 'Realism in Literature and Art,' by Clarence Darrow, and am sending them to these addresses. You see, I am trying all kinds of schemes to awaken these people who are 'dead asleep in Jesus.' Religion, no matter what name you call it, has been and is to-day the greatest curse of the human race. I had the blues when I felt almost certain that Lucifer had been denied the second-class mail privilege, and I think a good many of your other subscribers felt about the same way."

A. A. Cowles, of Cleveland, writes:

"I am willing to pay $5 a year if necessary to keep Lucifer afloat. I think most of your subscribers feel just as I do; all of which goes to show that it does not pay, financially, to be a radical. But the radical cannot help being as he is. He cannot be conservative till his opinions have been accepted by the majority and have become conservative."

A friend writes from Connecticut as follows:

"I am sorry and indignant because of the action of the postoffice department; but suppose nothing can be done to change it. You may count on me as long as you publish the paper, and I am able to pay the price, whether it be one, two, three, or more dollars. And in order to help as much as possible in the matter of postage you may send me all the papers at one time that you can for 1 cent. Of course I want the paper, but if you can send four papers for 1 cent, just wait until there are four successive issues and send them together. I mail all my papers to different friends, after reading, and if any of them want it they can subscribe for themselves. I sincerely hope that the paper will be kept going by those who like it, without any help from those other persons who cannot appreciate the value."

It would cost two cents to send four copies, so we will mail fortnightly to this friend.

★ ★ ★

We hope that our subscribers will bear in mind that we want to hear from them as soon as possible; those who cannot pay the added subscription price, as well as those who can. It is essential that we should know as early as possible what we can depend on.

As has been previously stated, there is no surplus in the business of publishing Lucifer to pay the increased cost. If all our subscribers, or even the greater number of them, feel that it is worth while to pay double what they have paid heretofore, the paper will live and grow. The enemies of the paper were in a position to know, through their inspection of Lucifer's cash-book, how difficult it would be for us to continue the paper. But they did not realize, perhaps, that it might be possible for the friends of Lucifer to keep it alive in spite of the obstacles thrown in our way. We do not know who these enemies are, for certainly not all who are connected with the postoffice department are its enemies—we have reason to realize the contrary. But it is also evident that some person or persons have determined that Lucifer shall be suppressed. Lucifer's editor has given his time, at publication office and in prison, for twenty years, that Lucifer might live. Will its friends help him to sustain it now?

LILLIAN HARMAN.

THE STROKE OF THE CENSOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Jan. 5, 1904.

For all that happens to us, all that occurs to us, there is an adequate, a compelling cause. Nothing happens, in the old meaning of chance-work, and while we ourselves would have ordered things differently we recognize the folly of complaining—the waste of time, of strength and of temper that would be involved in a wordy controversy with the agents of the Modern Inquisition called the postal censorship of press and mails. With like training and with similar hereditary leanings we, too, would be suppressors of thought, of speech, of press and mails.

Lillian's statement in No. 1001 leaves me little to say in regard to the situation. This is written Jan. 5, current calendar. What that situation may be when these lines shall meet the eye of the reader, ten days or two weeks hence, it would be idle to conjecture. As Lillian has pointed out, the "postoffice business" seems conducted on principles wholly different from those recognized by men conducting any other kind of legitimate business. And while our government seems a paternalism so far above the plane occupied by the subject or citizen that it does not need to observe the common rules of transacting business, its methods are less straightforward and more perplexing than those of some other paternalisms that we are in the habit of denouncing as autocratic or despotic.

For instance, in Russia the censor gets in his work before instead of after a book or paper is offered for transmission through the public mail. Then if the censor sees anything objectionable in such book on paper he draws a blue line through the part objected to; thus warned, the publisher knows what to expect should he persist in using the government mail without expurgating the clause or clauses condemned by the censor. The result is that few people are fined, imprisoned or deported in Russia because of violations of postal regulations, whereas in free America people are constantly getting into trouble because they do not and cannot know whether what they write and publish will be condemned or not until they send it through the mail, or offer to do so, and then it is often too late to escape punishment.

In another respect our governmental methods are peculiar. "The law of contract" implies that when a man bargains for an article of any kind, a book or paper for instance, it is the business of the administrators of justice to see that the purchaser is not defrauded. In the case of the censored book or paper the United States government itself defeats the law of contract by withholding the book or paper for which the purchaser has paid his money.

If any person should deposit or offer to deposit in the mail-bags an explosive, or other material that might injure the bags or the carriers, then there would be just cause for official interference. Or, if the purchaser finds that what he contracted for was not sent at all, or a very different article substituted therefor, then, on the theory that the government should take paternal care of its citizens, there would be reason for a postal censorship, but usually there is no complaint made by the purchaser of the condemned literature, and hence it would seem a point well taken that if our government wishes to have the obligation of contract respected and honored it should not itself set a bad example by defeating the fulfillment of contracts between buyer and seller.

★ ★ ★

In regard to changes announced in the statement published in No. 1001—the advance in price of Lucifer, the offer to send two copies to one address for $2.25, etc.—will just say that I approve them all. The increase in cost of publication, added to the 1 cent postage now demanded for each copy of the paper, instead of 1 cent per pound, makes the advance in price absolutely necessary. Whether our old friends want Lucifer at the new price is a question for themselves alone to decide. Whether new subscribers can be obtained at double the old price is a problem yet to be solved.

With Lillian, I say we will do all we can to make the paper worth the advanced price. If we are to judge from the utterances of some of our old-time readers and helpers, Lucifer has always been well worth $2 per year. Several possible methods of improving the paper have been suggested. To what extent these plans can be carried out will depend in great measure upon the responses we get to the announcement of the increase in price.

Since the new trouble with the postoffice department has overtaken us it has been a serious question with me whether I should not at once drop my work in California and return to Chicago. Now that the matter seems settled, for a time at least, I have decided to remain on the Pacific Coast till May or June, if no fresh complications arise, and for these among other reasons:

First—I find the climate of California admirably well suited to cure my chronic ailments—so far as yet tried. The temperature of San Francisco varies little from 60 degrees Fahrenheit, winter or summer, so I am told. Since I came here, near two months ago, there have been a few rainy days and a few foggy mornings, but most of the time the sun has shone clear and bright, with but few days or nights cold enough to feel the need of fire in living rooms, stores or workshops. Grass is as green as in May or June in Chicago. Flowers and garden vegetables flourish in the open air—except, perhaps, a few of the more tender varieties. As yet I have seen neither ice nor snow and but very little frost; very little wind that could be called rough or disagreeable. However it may be in summer, San Franciscans certainly do not need to leave their city on account of climate in winter.

Second—I find this city a better field for propaganda work in Lucifer's central reform than any I have ever before found. More people in proportion to population appear to be waking up to see the necessity of agitating for freedom of motherhood—free, intelligent, self-reliant, self-respecting, self-responsible motherhood—than I have ever met before. Besides many shorter public talks, I have advertised and delivered five addresses to audiences variously estimated at from one hundred and fifty to two hundred and fifty people, with the interest constantly on the increase. At our last meeting, Jan. 3, without any suggestion from me, a motion was made to form an association to continue the educational work on the same radical lines to which my talks have been devoted, after I shall have left the city. Fourteen of those present gave their names as members of such association, and from indications many more names could have been obtained had time and daylight permitted. The meeting had begun at 2:30 p. m. and had continued without recess till 5:15.

Third—Notwithstanding the fierce competition of radical reform journals of all kinds, I find this city and its suburbs a very promising field in which to canvass for new subscribers for Lucifer, and now that the censors of speech and press are unusually active it would seen very important that as many new additions as possible should be made to our subscription list.

★ ★ ★

Professor Allen Haddock, the phrenologist of the Pacific Coast, has shown himself a friend and brother in more ways than one. In the January number, under the head "The Literary Grotto," appears this paragraph:

"Lucifer, Moses Harman, editor and publisher, 500 Fulton street, Chicago. If you believe that your mother was and is the best friend your ever had (not excepting your dog), and if you would chastise a man who insulted your sister; if you are not afraid to read good sense, upon all sorts of radical subjects, expressed in choice, forcible English—then, in that case, subscribe for and read Lucifer."

Professor Haddock is a fine delineator of character; seems to have achieved success in a financial way—as his location on one of the best business blocks of the city, 1020 Market street, would indicate. Send for his magazine—only 50 cents per year—and call on him when in San Francisco.

★ ★ ★

Of the well-known public speakers and editors who have welcomed me to California I would mention Henry Harrison Brown, editor of Now, a monthly journal devoted to what is called New Thought, with its publishing house located at 1435 Market street. Mr. Brown holds meetings every Sunday evening at Memorial Hall, Odd Fellows' Building. He is an attractive and forceful speaker and is drawing full houses.

Mrs. R. S. Lillie holds meetings every Sunday evening in the same building, and also speaks each Sunday forenoon in Oakland, just across the bay. She is one of the best speakers on the Spiritualist rostrum, if I may be allowed to judge from a somewhat extended observation, East and West. On last Sunday evening Mrs. Lillie asked her audience to name a few subjects for her use as texts. Several subjects were named; among the rest I suggested "Responsibility of Motherhood." Each of the subjects was handled in a clear, logical and forceful manner, and none of them with greater clearness and fearlessness than was the motherhood question. If Mrs. Lillie had been a constant reader of Lucifer she could not have placed our pivotal thought in stronger light. Woman and man must stand together in the work of human redemption from the effects of the ages-old enslavement of womenhood and motherhood, and especially must woman awake to a sense of her responsibility in the creation of new human beings. Only thus can woman or man be saved.

On more than one occasion, so I am told, Mrs. Lillie has spoken of me personally and of my work in terms of high commendation.

At my first public meeting in this city Dr. York, one of the best known lecturers and writers on Freethought subjects in all the West, was chairman, and introduced me to the audience in a brief speech, in which he spoke in high praise of the work I have been instrumental in doing for human emancipation. Dr. York is now active in arranging for a Paine memorial meeting in this city for the 29th of this month. The committee of arrangements consists of Dr. York, S. H. Tarr, Charles T. Spradling, C. V. Cook, and one or two others whose names I do not now recall.

Of those who have extended hospitality to me at their homes in San Francisco, grateful mention should be made of Rosa Fritz, Casmira V. Cook, Mrs. and Mr. S. Silberberg, Mrs. and Mr. A. Howe, Mrs. and Mr. H. M. Morse, Mrs. and Mr. Nevins, "The Now Folk" and S. H. Tarr.

Of friends who have contributed their time, labor and material, none deserve more honorable mention than Brothers Heller and Holt, photographers, who have finished up several dozen cabinet photographs of my personal phiz, also one dozen of large-size pictures, and have donated them to the cause for which Lucifer stands pledged. As these pictures were made here, those of our friends who may wish to possess one are requested to order from me direct, instead of sending to the Chicago office. Price of the cabinets, 25 cents; of the large-size pictures, the artist's price is 75 cents each. For the next few weeks my address will be care E. M. Dewey, 1014 Fourteenth street, East Oakland, Cal.

While remembering all who have extended hospitality of any kind to me here in California I must not forget to acknowledge receipt of a New Year's present from an eastern friend, E. W. Langley, who, when sending money for books and for a photo, inclosed something to help pay the necessary expenses of my western trip.

M. HARMAN.

FRIENDSHIPS BETWEEN MEN AND WOMEN.

"Of friendships of young women with men it is difficult to speak at once plainly and sanely," says John Oliver Hobbs. But why should this be so? Is not the trouble in the minds of those who speak and listen, and not in the conditions discussed? "Life would be intolerable if girls could not be on frank and uncouettish terms with men of their own age, or by some years their seniors," our writer continues. And it is true that life is made "intolerable" in just this way for many girls and women by their suspicious, meddling and gossiping neighbors; yes, and by their nearest and dearest, also. But this condition is changing, we are told. "The idea that, because two young people may have a great deal in common, they must also be in love, is happily dying out. No one is hurt, no one is compromised when a friendship does not lead to marriage. Parents and guardians are beginning to see that, in any event, it is desirable that girls and their male admirers should become well acquainted with each other, because neither friendship nor marriage can be satisfactory unless it rests upon a true knowledge of character. Unhappy love stories are commoner among those girls who have been sheltered from male companions and influence than among those who are daily mingling in the society of their brothers, and their brothers' male acquaintances and friends. The same rule applies with equal force in the case of men who do not know many women. Each sex requires the assistance, the magnetism, and the inspiration of its opposite, and it is only by being thrown together in healthy association that either can attain its full development."

LILLIAN HARMAN.

"Nora: A Doll's House," and "Ghosts," by Henrik Ibsen, bound together in olive cloth, with red lettering. Containing sketch of the life of the author. 108 pages. With Lucifer one year, $2.25.

HOW TO HELP TO CIRCULATE LUCIFER.

We hope the friends of Lucifer will do all they can to extend its circulation. For this reason we make the price of $2.25 for two copies to one address. The extra 25 cents merely pays for extra time, trouble and paper.

We will give a copy of Dr. Foote's "Home Cyclopedia," price $2, with Lucifer one year for $3. This is a family guide book of medical, social, and sexual science, containing 1,248 pages, with 400 pictures, eighty in color. Send for circulars.

VARIOUS VOICES.

We are always glad to receive calls from friends visiting the city. Take the Lake street elevated, stop at Ashland avenue, walk one block east, then one block north. Or take Fulton street electric car west and stop at St. John's place, alighting in front of our house. The Lake street electric and Paulina street cars also pass within a block of our residence.

Fred Ulmer, Silver City, Idaho: I read in No. 1001 the unpleasant news of an attempted suppression of your worthy paper. Lucifer is a paper that I want above all others, and I would not like to see this malicious undertaking succeed.

May Hurd, Wellesley, Mass.: "What can't be cured must be endured," so I enclose $1.25, to go with $1 sent not long since, for Lucifer for one year, from 990 to 1042; and if you can, please send me the one copy per week between 990 to 1001. I'll do missionary work with the papers.

Mrs. M. E. H., New York City: My answer to your question, "What Say You?" I wish above all things to have Lucifer live, and gladly send another dollar to pay for this year's subscription. I would rather pay $3 a year for Lucifer than for any publication at that price that I ever saw. Long may it wave! I am with you always for free thought, free speech, free press and free women. Am much interested in all your father writes from California. I spent five happy years there, and have been homesick ever since I came East. Hope your father will remain until the severe weather here is over.

Edward Wenning, Cincinnati, O.: I am very sorry to note, on receipt of your Dec. 31 issue, that the postoffice department has denied you second-class rates, and also that it has declared Dec. 17 issue unmailable. I regard both decisions as very unjust and unwarranted, which decisions I hope the department will speedily rectify. I have gladly received and read Lucifer for several years, and have always paid for my subscriptions most willingly. I want the paper so much that I shall also pay the new rate of $2. I sincerely hope you will be able to continue publishing the paper, for I consider it in the highest degree pure, wholesome, sane and beneficial. I have paid up to No. 1062, but I shall nevertheless enclose $1 herewith as a voluntary addition to what I have previously paid, so as to figure at $2 for the balance of the time due me.

H. W. Hunt, Federalsburg, Md.: The last copy of Lucifer to reach me, Dec. 31, came to hand last night. I was not surprised at the news it brought. Indeed, for some time past I have known that it was only a question of a few days until Lucifer would be struck down. With Comstock on the right hand and Madden on the left, Truth is crucified between two thieves, as of old, and no one raises a hand in her defense. The real truth of the matter is that this "land of the free and home of the brave" is fast becoming the most tyrannical country on the face of the globe. The tyrant Majority acknowledges no allegiance to right and yields to no authority save that of the Boss, who, with lies in his mouth, treason to all good in his heart and gold in his pocket, created him. "They who would be free, themselves must strike the blow," is as true now as it was in days of old. The practical question is, What is to be done in the present emergency? For my part, I must acknowledge that the question is a puzzling one to solve. Yet, so far as I see it now, my advice would be to keep the price of the paper the same as it is now, and publish it once in two weeks, and ask the subscribers to pay the postage of a cent each. I do not know whether my plan would cut the expense account down half. If it would, I think the proceeding might be a good one, as it appears to me that many people would take Lucifer, at $1 a year, once in two weeks, who could not well pay the extra dollar for the other week. My plan now must be considered on its merits, and pass for what it is worth. I merely offer it as a suggestion. I think I shall be content with any plan that the friends of Lucifer may see fit to adopt. One thing more I can say here, and that is that I prefer quality to quantity in a paper, and my plan would give the editors time to make a good paper and give us a good equivalent for our money, and thus hit both Madden and Comstock at the same time.

O. M., La B., Wisconsin: Reading in last week's Lucifer of your persecution, I was unable to immediately send the extra dollar then, but it is now ready. As I most always keep my paper paid up a year ahead of time, this dollar will pay it up to the first part of January next, 1905. I am sorry the paper had to raise the price. Now, don't think I am selfish and do not give you sympathy, for both your father and yourself have my best feelings. My second sympathy is for those that are unable to pay the $2 per year and will have to drop it. I consider Lucifer a "Light-Bearer" in many homes, and before I see it go to the wall will pay $3 per year for its support. I think it is now the time for your friends to come forth with the extra dollar. Your father should be supported by those that call themselves his friends. This is his life-work, to keep Lucifer going, and in his age to take away his work is to ruin him, and I do not think he would long survive the shock.

J. S. H., Sheridan, Wyo.: Lucifer of Dec. 31 comes to me with a 1-cent stamp on. This was no surprise to me, as I had been expecting it for some time. The policy of the capitalistic class is, and has been for some time, to curtail the liberties of the individual by attacking those who cannot resist, especially those who in any manner oppose existing conditions. By continuing this course the people will become used to submission, and this can be continued until they are deprived of all of their liberties. They figure on the fact that the common people have so little surplus that they cannot afford to spare money to fight these attacks, and the American people soon become used to anything. The Appeal to Reason was too strong for them, and Wiltshire abandoned the fight and went to Canada to enjoy the freedom he could not have in a republic. I also think they are using good policy (from their standpoint) against Socialism, for if people see that there is no freedom for any independent thought when the State has control they will prefer even the competitive system, with all of its disadvantages, for the sake of retaining at least a part of their individual freedom. I cannot assist in circulating your paper, as I am a single man, and, having no relatives of the "feminine persuasion" and not circulating much in female society, have but little opportunity; call it to the attention of my gentlemen friends whenever I have an opportunity. I take the liberty of inclosing $2, which I want used to pay postage on the paper as far as it will go. I hope the vacation will do Mr. Harman much good, and trust Lucifer may survive the cowardly attacks of its enemies, mainly the Church.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

TRUE MANHOOD.

AN INVALUABLE GUIDE TO HEALTH, STRENGTH AND PURITY.

BY E. B. SHEPHERD.

WHAT EVERY FATHER WANTS HIS BOY TO KNOW.

The Christian Endeavor World: "Its suggestions are wise and ennobling." Dr. Stockham, author of Tokology, says: "TRUE MANHOOD explains the transition from boyhood to manhood, giving knowledge of priceless value." Levant cloth, 328 pages. Prepaid $1. STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

JUST OUT.

PARENTHOOD.

By Alice B. Stockham, M. D., author of "Tokology" and "Karezza." Highest ideals for best offspring. Vital and important subjects discussed, including new philosophy of the Creative Energy. G. O. Hunt says: "Many sentences of PARENTHOOD should be graven in gold and handed down to posterity." Prepaid, 25c.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

SONGS OF A CHILD,
AND OTHER POEMS.

By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. Price $1.50; postage 12c.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

ISOLA; OR, THE DISINHERITED.

A drama in six acts. By Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1; postage 7c.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

KAREZZA.

SCIENCE OF MARRIAGE.

A godsend to every wife—a joy to every husband.

This work brings peace into homes disrupted by inharmony in the sexual relations. Dr. A. B. Stockham advises a practice which leads to individual liberty and to deeper love between husband and wife.

Dr. F. G. Welch: "After a personal trial of its teachings, I want to thank you for a great service to humanity."

Rev. George R. Ranshaw: "Out of a beautiful and ennobling experience, I can say, I KNOW."

Gives a high ideal of the marital relation and teaches control of the Fecundating Power.

J. A. Smalley, M. D.: "I have received more actual benefit from the practice of KAREZZA teachings than from all other books on Sexual Science."

A. R. Franklin, M. D.: "KAREZZA does more than any other single thing to make marriage a perpetual courtship."

LEVANT CLOTH, POSTPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MEN, WOMEN, AND CHANCE.

BY WILLIAM PLATT.

Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. Price 75c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

WOMAN AND HER RELATION TO THE CHURCH, OR CANON LAW FOR WOMEN.

BY HARRIET M. CLOSE.

A succinct statement of the position to which women were doomed by the Church Fathers and authorities. Every woman should possess a copy. Price, 10c.
M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; OR THE PRICE OF VIRTUE.

By Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Witehood, by Lucinda B. Chandler; Life's Gifts, by Olive Schreiner, and Marriage—What It Was and Is, and Will the Coming Woman Marry? Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SEND 10c IN STAMPS FOR THREE NUMBERS, OR 50c FOR TWELVE MONTHS' SUBSCRIPTION TO

HUMAN NATURE.

It is a monthly magazine, now in the fifteenth year of publication. It is Unique, Eclectic and Scientific. It treats of Physiology, Psychology, Health, Sociology and all subjects which pertain to the welfare of humanity.

The character of men and animals is in accordance with their physical organization. This is determined by size of body and brain, shape of head, texture, temperament and facial expression.

HUMAN NATURE illustrates these principles by pictures and pen, and teaches its readers how to read character. Its ethics are ennobling; its style, while strong, is forcible, and its literary standard high. You need HUMAN NATURE. Address

PROFESSOR ALLEN HADDOCK,
PHRENOLOGIST,
1020 MARKET ST., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

A BARGAIN.

FOR SALE—The Bradhead Windmill plant, at Bradhead, Wis., is for sale cheap. It consists of a well-equipped foundry, machine shop and wood shop. The cause is poor health, old age, and inability to run it. It is located in as fine a country as can be found west of the lakes. It fell into my hands through a bankruptcy sale, and therefore I can sell for less than the book cost. Inquire of

S. O. BISHOP, Bradhead, Wis.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 62, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We cannot sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 20c each, two for 35c. Address EDWIN C. WALKER, 244 W. 143d St., New York, N. Y.

WANTED—100 women to study medicine or midwifery. Next term begins January 1, 1904. College of Medicine and Surgery, 245 Ashland Blvd., Chicago, Ill. DR. FLORENCE DRESSLER, Secretary. (Dept. A.)

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

THE LIBERAL MAIL-ORDER JEWELER.

Now permanent at No. 110 N. Kensington Ave., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 20 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's Line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Theism in the Crucible," free.

J. H. GREER, M. D.,
52 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.

Office Hours—9 a. m. to 6 p. m.; Wednesdays at 1 Saturdays, 9 a. m. to 8 p. m.; Sundays, 9 a. m. to 12 m.
Telephone, Randolph 42.

DR. OGILVIE A. RICE,
DENTIST,
1550 MILWAUKEE AVE., COR. WESTERN, CHICAGO.
Telephone West 141.

PHILIP G. PEABODY,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
15 COURT SQUARE, ROOM 61,
BOSTON, MASS.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD OWN

TOKOLOGY.

A COMPLETE HEALTH GUIDE.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

Teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions.

Treats of diseases of women and children; contains practical teachings on Change of Life, limiting offspring, etc.

Lizzie N. Armstrong writes: "If I knew I were to be the mother of lamentable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of Tokology."

Dr. C. B. Willis: "Tokology is doing more for women than all other books put together."

CLOTH, PREPAID, $2.25; LEATHER, $2.75.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES.

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

Contents—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only"; Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen"; What Are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women. With Appendix: The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 15c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

A treatise on Sexual Science and Marriage, rich in thought and strong in expression. Emphatically a book for the thinker.

Carpenter holds that woman's freedom is based upon economics; she must be independent financially that she may not be forced to sell herself in or out of marriage. He also makes a strong plea for a motherhood of freedom and thoughtful preparation.

AMERICAN EDITION, CLOTH, PREPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM.

THE RELATIONSHIP OF EACH TO HUMAN LIBERTY.

BY E. C. WALKER.

The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only sufferers or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organization and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. Price 5c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

CREATIVE LIFE.

A BOOK FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

A timely and important message not found in text books. Every girl seeks and should have this true, plain and practical knowledge. One writes: "Thank you, thank you, dear Doctor, for the plain but beautiful thoughts. Womanhood, motherhood and life have new meanings. You ennoble your theme." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

A NOVEL BY GEORGE N. MILLER.

FORTIETH THOUSAND.

"The Strike of a Sex" is a fascinating novel bearing upon the sexual relations. It is a bold protest against the customary life of most married people, and at the same time a prophecy of happier conditions between man and wife. Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW.

A PRIMER OF SEXUAL RATIONALISM.

BY E. C. WALKER.

"Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes."

Paper covers; 42 large pages. Price 10c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

"PERSONAL EXPERIENCES OF TWO AMERICAN ANTI-VIVISECTIONISTS IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES."

BY PHILIP G. PEABODY.

With an Appendix by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c. Apply to PHILIP G. PEABODY, 13 Court Square, Boston, Mass.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY.

By Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition, by E. C. Walker; Motherhood in Freedom, by Moses Harman; The Greatest Sin (an allegory), by R. B. Kerr, and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom, by Oscar Rotter. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN.

By R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.; The New Martyrdom, by Lillian Harman, and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE.

By R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese, by C. W. Coolridge; A Traveler's Tale, by R. B. Kerr; The Cat's Story, by Emile Zola. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

1003

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

HILDA'S HOME.

A STORY OF WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

With Macaulay, Rosa Graul would say: "The cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty." Hence she has no fears that under Freedom the Home and the Family would cease to exist, or that woman would be less loving and lovable, or that man would be less manly and honorable. On the contrary, she maintains that only in the soil and atmosphere of freedom is it possible for true womanhood and manhood to live and flourish.

426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

One of the best short works on the subject. A charming little gift book.

"Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it."

DAINTILY PRINTED. PREPAID, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES.

BY E. C. WALKER.

Contents—Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What Is She? What Will She Be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections Upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love and Life." Price 15c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD.

AN OUTLINE OF PRACTICAL CO-OPERATIVE INDIVIDUALISM.

BY HENRY OLERICH.

Regarded by many persons as a more interesting and consistent economic reform novel than Bellamy's "Looking Backward."

Bound in red silk with gold title. Nearly 450 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, $1.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

BY JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents—Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff or Protection; War Punishments; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

519 pages. Cloth binding somewhat damaged, and reduced from $1.50 to 50c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY, AND THE STATE.

BY FREDERICK ENGELS.

Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans.

217 pages; bound in cloth. Price 60c; postage 5c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STORY OF IJAIN;

OR, THE EVOLUTION OF A MIND.

By Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Stuart Ross), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. Price $1; postage 8c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE CURSE OF MATERNITY.

From the French of Henry Fevre. Together with How to Escape the Curse, by Jonathan Mayo Crane; Woman's "Duty" to Bear Children, by E. C. Walker; True and False Morality, by C. L. Jennie; and Love's Law, by William Francis Barnard. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE.

By John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention, by Marlette; Reminiscences of Berlin Heights, by A. Warren, and The Sexes and Love in Freedom, by Oscar Rotter. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN.

By Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yclept Society, by Moses Hull; Virgin Soil, by George Egerton, and Normal Sexual Action, by Ernest Wiese. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of Freethought and Free Love. By Oxford Northcote. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. By M. Harman. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Moral. By A. F. Tindall. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. By E. C. Walker. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE COMING WOMAN, by Lillie D. White. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

PRICE 5 CENTS. CHICAGO, ILL., JAN. 21, E. M. 304. [C. E. 1904.] WHOLE NO. 1004

THE FUGITIVE WIFE.

Extracts From a Criticism on Marriage, Adultery and Divorce, Published by Warren Chase in 1861.

PART SECOND: DIVORCE.

Where the laws of marriage or divorce began, I know not; but in some form they are older than civilization or Christianity. The law of divorce is as old as the law of marriage, and has varied with it in all ages, and among different nations and sects; but I will not begin back of Christian authority, nor with any which some Christians will not recognize. The law of divorce, which, according to the Bible, God gave to the Jews, through Moses, may be found in Deuteronomy, chapter twenty-fourth, and is as follows: "When a man hath taken a wife and married her, and it come to pass that she find no favor in his eyes, because he hath found some uncleanness in her" (in Cottage Bible, that the Jews held, a man might put her away for almost any cause, however trifling) "then let him write her a bill of divorcement, and give it in her hand, and send her out of his house; and when she is departed out of his house she may go and be another man's wife." Verse fifth: "When a man hath taken a new wife he shall not go to war, neither shall he be charged with any business; but he shall be free at home one year, and shall cheer up his wife which he hath taken."

What a singular divorce law God established, giving the power all into the hands of the husband, without judge or court, priest or church, and not even requiring him to consult the wife in the matter, and saying nothing about her right to divorce her husband! I fear he was a partial God, if not a tyrannical one. I do not believe in his law of divorce, even though he is accepted by Christians as King of kings and Lord of hosts. This one-sided divorce law, which does not regard woman, except as a slave, I cannot accept.

Following the authority which the Church must accept, I take next the New Testament, and Jesus, who did not set an example of marriage nor recommend it, and even went so far as to say it was not established in the other life, or kingdom of heaven, which he commanded his followers to labor and pray for the establishment of on earth—which, of course, would exclude it here among those who followed his example or precept. But whether he would have them Shakers or Freelovers I leave for each one to decide; but, if I can understand language, and he is reported correctly, I do not agree with him on the subject of marriage. Paul, who is next in authority, is more explicit, but in very good agreement with Jesus, and was evidently a "crabbed old bachelor," or discarded lover, and he carried out Jesus' precept and example perfectly in his life.

Of divorce, Jesus admits but one cause, and that the one adopted by some of the states and churches of our country—namely, adultery. But they entirely overlook the meaning which he gave, so explicitly, of adultery; for if they would take his explanation of adultery and let the wife have it as an excuse for a divorce, nine out of every ten wives would be entitled to a bill in all the Christian churches of our country, and perhaps nearly as many not included in them; and there would be no need of this or any other treatise on the subject; for the marriage laws would be loosened by a divorce law that would open the gate to nearly all who now suffer by them; for, of course, the adultery of the heart would be crime enough for a divorcement among Christians.

Robert Dale Owen, in his controversy with Horace Greeley on the subject of divorce, very properly says, after quoting Jesus on adultery, "The fair inference seems to be, that the proper cause for divorce is, not the mere physical act of infidelity, but that adultery of the heart which quenches conjugal love; thus destroying that which, far more justly than your cohabitation till death, may be regarded as 'the very essence of marriage.'"

It is not probable that Jesus would have given the matter of divorce unto the Jewish churches, for he had not much confidence in them; and as he had no church and set up no ecclesiastical authority, he must either have left it with the married parties or the civil law. If Jesus' plan of divorce would leave the business to the civil law and to the woman equally with the man, it certainly would be a great improvement on the Jewish mode, and would be also on some of our statutes.

Mr. Owen further says, "That the language of Jesus, fairly construed, designates the proper causes of divorce to be that infidelity of the heart which defeats the true purpose of marriage." If this be correct, it certainly has not been incorporated into any law of divorce with which I am now acquainted.

Following still in the line of lineal Christian descent and valid authority, I come to the old mother church, with her Catholic authority, vulgarly called Roman. This Church pretends to have been built on the rock Christ Jesus, and to have the keys and seal of St. Peter, and to do on earth only what God approves in heaven; bind what no man or power of men can unbind; to seal as God seals, with an everlasting covenant. Fortunately for thousands of poor souls, in marriage she only binds for this life, and lets death be the end of the servitude—otherwise there would be some miserable hells eternal. This Church seals the marriage union with the seal of the Church, and no man can break it; so they have no divorce law but death, which all Christians acknowledge as a divorce established by God for all who want it—and thus to thousands of miserable wretches for whom Church and State have no mercy death becomes a blessing and not a curse, though brought into the world by the fall of man. But the Catholic law was not adapted to all conditions and persons. "Necessity is the mother of invention," and Henry VIII. found a way to get a divorce and not abrogate the Christian authority by setting up a new Church and appointing new bishops with power to do what he wanted done. He was fortunate in finding a Cranmer and plenty of Bible for a Catholic Episcopal Church, with a power to divorce kings at least. So it was found that the Catholic seal could be broken, even if the old Church could not or would not do it.

Many persons are shocked at the immoral tendencies of changes, and those who advocate them, and believe the system they defend and live up to is the standard of morals and essential to a secure state of society. Especially is this so with the advocates of marriage without divorce, or a very limited divorce law; but the practical results of more liberal systems have been to lessen vice and immorality and insecurity for adults and children. Although I do not believe that divorce should be confined to adultery as a cause, yet, as I define adultery, it certainly should be a cause for divorce, especially when often repeated in violation of the wife's person, against her desire, her health or happiness; and more especially still when it brings undesired maternity and crowds unwelcome children into being.

The oldest and most absolute and arbitrary system of marriage made the wife a slave and fully at the mercy and control of her husband, giving her no voice or control of herself or offspring. From that we have emerged a little, and allowed her to have a voice in making the contract and little or no control of herself or the affairs of her life and home afterwards; have made arbitrary systems of divorce without consulting woman or her interests, in some cases not granting her divorce at all, but always releasing the husband, if from any physical defect the wife cannot admit of that sexual relation for which marriage seems to be mainly established and sustained among Christians.

In the most advanced nations the laws have taken the subject of divorce from the husband and placed it in the courts, under restrictions which have not been made with reference to the interests of the wife. The arbitrary power has only changed hands from the husband to the courts; and as men only compose the courts, both as judges and juries, they alone make the statutes and regulate the laws of divorce, of course we need not expect much amelioration for the wife. We find her chances and interests but little better than under the old system. If the husband can prove his wife has been with another man with such chance as he would improve with another woman for the gratification of his passions—even though she never had a lustful feeling in her life—it will be good ground for divorce for adultery.

PAINE MEMORIAL MEETING.

When Thomas Paine was asked why he was going to France and leaving America, where liberty was triumphant, where freedom of the press and speech were guaranteed by the Declaration of Independence, he replied: "Where liberty is not, there is my country." He went to France to take part in the French revolution. If he were alive to-day he would find his services needed, as they were over a century ago.

In the city of Philadelphia, where he was present at the reading of the Declaration of Independence in the state house square on July 8, 1776, an old painting represents him standing with Robert Morris and an Indian.

There used to be hundreds of Paine admirers of the author of the "Rights of Man," but they have died and but a handful remain to do honor to him who battled for the rights of all mankind and suffered the penalty of ungrateful posterity.

The Paine Memorial Association will celebrate his birthday in the lodgings where Paine ate his crust and in the lonely garret where he watched the spider spin his web that suggested to him the idea of his famous bridge, which was the original suspension bridge and the father to all subsequent ones, including the latest, just opened in New York. It was in this garret that Paine entertained Washington and Robert Morris and discussed the finances of the revolution over a homely lunch of bread and cheese. Here his present disciples will read a chapter or two from the original edition of "Rights of Man." We will conclude the services by proceeding to Independence Square and planting a hickory nut from a tree growing upon his grave at New Rochelle.

Glad to have any communications from Luciferites, and especially Moses Harman, who has suffered for defending the rights of women and men. Fraternally yours,

JAMES B. ELLIOTT.

Secretary Paine Memorial Association, 3515 Wallace Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

ARE WIVES "SUPPORTED"?

The work that women do in the house is not properly valued.

For, in very truth, a woman almost always works harder in her domestic sphere than a man in his shop or his business. An "eight hours' bill," forsooth! If ever a law is passed forbidding everybody to labor for more than eight hours daily, I see nothing for it but polygamy, relays of wives to do (in eight-hour shifts) for each household all that now is done by one. Eight hours! How many a poor mother would be only too thankful if she could be clear-quit with twice that number of hours out of twenty-four! John or Tom goes to his factory or business for eight or ten hours, then for the next fourteen or sixteen hours he refreshes himself with food, fun and sleep. But what is Mrs. John doing? She must rise early in the morning to get breakfast for "the bread-winner," who "keeps" her; then she must wash and dispatch to school the four or five noisy youngsters, darting here and there like eels; and dress one or two babies, and look after them constantly, and make beds, and sweep and scrub, and cook a dinner, and serve table when it is eaten, and then clear away; and prepare the evening meal, and serve it, and clean after it; and mend piles of old clothing, and make new—perhaps little frocks like a dressmaker, and trousers like a tailor, out of bigger ones; and do the laundry-work for the household, say six or eight persons; and bear and give birth to children—that "labor" so severe that it stands in the parlance of every nation as the very type of the primal curse—and suckle and tend them in endless succession, lying awake at night, not for one year, but year after year, with the ever-new baby who needs feeding and soothing. It cannot all be done, perhaps; it can hardly all be done thoroughly and completely. But the very impossibility of one woman successfully accomplishing the work of housemaid, cook, nurse to babies, needle-woman, sick-nurse, laundress, and mother, only worries her who is expected and tries to do it all; and she toils on from early morn to midnight, without rest or recreation, and sinks, worn out at last, to a sleep of a few hours, broken and fitful because of the baby at her side.

Well, is this woman "kept" by her husband? The idea is quite funny—only it is tragic, too. This lot of unrelieved labor is the lot of the poor man's wife who has a large family. Well, thank God! there are compensations in it. If the husband now and then gives a word of love and appreciation, and little arms are fondly thrown round the wearied shoulders, life is not all bitter. But it is obviously ludicrous to talk of women of this rank as maintained by their husbands in any other sense than that in which all laborers are "kept" by those who take the fruit of their toil, and return them in exchange the bare means of living.

Among people a little better off, the tale is not very different. Generally where the wife is allowed one servant the mistress herself does part of the housework, and her needle is hardly ever out of her active right hand except when the hand is filled instead with a duster, a rolling-pin, or a baby. The wife of many a poor curate, struggling professional man, semi-successful author, head-clerk or shopkeeper works nearly as hard and quite as long each day as a workingman's wife. The middle-class woman's labor may be expended in somewhat different ways from that of the workingman's wife, because the employer (her husband) needs different services—his children's clothing kept "genteel," his home refined, and his table varied and agreeable. But none the less the work is incessant, wearing to the muscles and trying to the nerves.

Wives in even a somewhat richer class, too—say, those of men making several hundreds a year—earn their living as hardly as their husbands, generally. There is so much to arrange, and so much to do by the mistress, even when servants are kept. The mistress is always on duty, always pursued by her responsibilities. Complete absorption and complete repose are the true law of work. The housekeeper never has the pleasure of either. Her work is perhaps all trifling, all petty, yet all needful and incessant. It is only when sickness or death takes her hand from the rudder, and the good ship of home staggers in breakers of discomfort in consequence, that her work in the household is at all understood by husband and sons. In short, matronage is a profession for women, a business, in which most of us are employed. I claim that the woman's work in the house is as important to the community as that of the man outside, and deserves as much credit, and establishes an equal claim for fair wages. As far as the work goes, hers is generally the more laborious, because the more incessant and the less interesting. When I say this, I speak of that which I do know. I have a profession, and I am a housewife—and I know well which is the most vexatious, the least agreeable, and the most unending class of duties. It is the "woman's work" which is never finished, is not pleasant to do, is done for no pay, and is regarded as nothing. The "man's work" is often a deep interest to do; it brings consideration and recognition; and by it I can earn in a few hours the value of my board and lodging for a week. In the home a woman works hard day after day without ever by law establishing her right to anything beyond a bare maintenance from her employer. If she receives more, it is by grace; and her husband thinks that he "keeps" her, and, consequently, that her dress, her amusements, and the like, are his generous gifts, that he may withhold at his good (or bad) pleasure.—Mrs. Florence Fenwick Miller in the Lancaster Guardian.

AN APPEAL TO THE CLERGY.

At the present time the chief means of transmitting to men the truth revealed to you by God consists in propounding this truth to ignorant adults and to unreasoning children who will accept everything.

This teaching generally begins with the so-called Scripture history, consisting of selected passages from the Bible—those Hebrew books of the Old Testament which, according to your teaching, were dictated by the Holy Ghost, and are therefore not only undoubtedly true, but also sacred.

This Scripture history begins with an account of how God, who had been living eternally, six thousand years ago created from nothing heaven and earth; how he next created animals, fishes, plants, and finally man, Adam, and his wife, made out of a rib of Adam. Then it is related that, being afraid of this man and his wife eating an apple which had the magic property of giving power, he forbade them to eat this apple; how, in spite of this prohibition, the first human beings ate this apple and were consequently ejected from Paradise; and how for this disobedience all their progeny were cursed and the earth itself was cursed so that since then it produces weeds. Then is described the life of Adam's descendants, who became so depraved that God drowned not only all of them, but also all the animals, and left alive only Noah and his family and the animals taken into the ark. It is then described how, amongst all men, God chose out Abraham and made an agreement with him according to which Abraham was to recognize God as God, and in token of this to perform circumcision, while God undertook in return to furnish Abraham with a great progeny and to patronize him and his descendants. Then it is narrated how God, patronizing Abraham and his descendants, performed in their interests most unnatural deeds called miracles, and did the most dreadful cruelties. With the exception of silly stories sometimes innocent, such as the visiting of Abraham by God and two angels, Isaac's marriage, etc. but sometimes immoral, as the swindling practiced by God's favorite, Jacob, the cruelties of Samson, the cunning contrivances of Joseph—the whole of this history, beginning with the plagues sent by Moses on the Egyptians, and the murder by an angel of all their first-born, down to the fire which consumed 250 rebels, and Korah, Dathan and Abiram, and the destruction in a few minutes of 14,700 people, and down to the foes who were sawn asunder with saws, the priests executed by Elijah for not agreeing with him, and the boys who were cursed by Elisha for laughing at him, and torn and eaten by bears—the whole of this history is a series of miraculous events and awful atrocities committed by the Jewish people, by their leaders, and by God himself.

But this does not exhaust your teaching of the history which you call sacred. Besides the history of the Old Testament you instruct children and unenlightened people in the history of the New Testament in such a way that the chief significance of the New Testament is made to lie not in its moral teaching, not in the Sermon on the Mount, but in the harmony of the Gospel with the history of the Old Testament, in the fulfillment of the prophecies, and in miracles: the moving star, the angels' song, the conversation with the Devil, the turning of water into wine, the walking on the water, healings, raisings of men from the dead, and lastly, the resurrection of Christ himself and his flight into the sky.

If all this history of the Old and New Testaments was propounded as merely a story, still scarcely any teacher would have courage to relate it to children or to adults whom he wished to enlighten. But the narrative is propounded to people incapable of criticising, as the most trustworthy description of the world and its laws, as the most authentic teaching about the life of men of bygone days, about what should be regarded as good and bad, about the essence and qualities of God and about the duties of man.

We speak of harmful books! but does there exist in the Christian world a book which has done more harm to men than this dreadful book called the Scripture history of the Ancient and New Testaments? Yet all people of the Christian world pass in their childhood through this study of scriptural history, and this same history is propounded to all unenlightened adults as the first essential foundation of knowledge, as the sole eternal truth of God.—Leo Tolstoi.

The desolating hand of power.—Hallam.

COMSTOCKISM IS THE REAL ENEMY.

The Connecticut doctor who once and again kicked Anthony Comstock downstairs is not altogether unworthy the gratitude of his countrymen. Outside Comstock's circle of supporters, the only persons who will regard the act with disfavor are those who hoped that the job of kicking Comstock would fall to them. But praiseworthy as we must regard the conduct of this doctor, the way Anthony has turned the incident to account by advertising his injuries just at the time his annual meeting is due shows that he will never take a kick for a hint; he is not to be put out of business in that way. Likewise, if he were kicked off the earth we should still have his graft among us, and that is worse than he is. Comstockism is the thing to kick, and it can be reached without soiling a boot on the person of Comstock. It can be exterminated by a popular revolt against every law that is not essential to the protection of personal rights.

There are people who would kick Comstock, but who would not kick at all against the legislation that gives to him and other parasites, like the secretary of commerce and labor and variously enumerated assistant postmasters, their power to harass.

The question that Mr. E. C. Walker asks in the title of his pamphlet, "Who Is the Enemy: Anthony Comstock or You?" goes direct to the root of the matter. Every man who has not registered his protest against the Comstock law and the other laws of its kind, littered by the same breed of elected incompetents, is to blame for the abuses they legalize.

I attempt this observation for the purpose of calling the reader's attention to Mr. Walker's pamphlet and advising him to read it. The price is only 20 cents. The work is a complete analysis of the Comstock idea, showing its results in the past and its dangers as regards the future, and it points out how the carelessness and indifference of the people generally are responsible for the existence of the abuses and brutalities that a few are elected to suffer. Everybody knows Mr. Walker to be a radical, but he is a perfectly sane one who makes no reckless statements nor advances fallacious arguments. As president of the Liberal Club and as the pusher of everything that carries Liberalism with it in New York, I regard him as the most useful man now living. He is also one of the clearest thinkers and writers, and he is afflicted with none of that physical and mental indolence which prevents many of us from doing our best. A part of his reward should be a wide circulation of this pamphlet, "Who Is to Blame: Anthony Comstock or You?"—G. E. M., in Truth Seeker.

FROM THE PEN OF A PROMINENT SOCIALIST.

The poor, unfortunate lackies of the present capitalist administration are now "star actors" in a role of censorial vileness against Lucifer, published at 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill., a journal that promulgates ideas that are absolutely indispensable for the advance of the human race. Have compassion on them, truly they know not what they do. For proof of this, we only have to consider the fact that their actual compensation is neither increased nor diminished in the least—their actions being entirely regulated by the powers whose duty is to look after the interests of the present dominant class in society.

There are two grades of lackies—Big Lackies and little lackies. The Big Lackies know well (for they possess all the institutional knowledge there is; otherwise a large B and L would not be appropriate at all) that the safety and perpetuity of their masters' position depends entirely upon the continued ignorance of the common people. Therefore, any medium that lets in the true light upon any one or all of the different problems of life that give the dominant class a special privilege must be suppressed if possible. Hence the little lackies get their orders, and the individual or individuals who are battling for truth and justice get the inconvenience.

That such conduct will react for all time to the detriment of these poor servants of iniquitous masters, who know only brute force and the abuse of power, is an established scientific fact. To be remembered with disrespect and abhorrence is what unites any soul with discord and inharmonious effects so long as that soul possesses any degree of individuality.

To be remembered with ardent and universal affection is what unites the mundane defects of a great and noble soul with the Omniscient. Such will be the fate of the editor of Lucifer and his co-workers.

ALBERT STROUT.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

MOSES HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 509 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Denied Entry as Second-Class Mail Matter by the United States Postoffice Department.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One copy, one year.....$2.00 One copy, six months.....$1.00
Two copies to one address, one year.. 3.25 Two copies to one address, six mos.. 1.75
One copy, three months.....50 cents Single copies.....5 cents

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire notify us if you wish to continue to receive Lucifer.

EASTERN REPRESENTATIVE:
E. C. WALKER, 244 WEST 143D STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Lucifer and its literature can be obtained in San Francisco at the book store of Robert C. Ross, 1203 Market street, opposite City Hall.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

THIRD SERIES. VOLUME VIII. NO. 3.

This issue has nothing from the editor because copy failed to reach the office in time.

FOR FREE SPEECH.

The editor of the San Francisco Star, James H. Barry, says in his issue of Jan. 9: "Lucifer is the name of a paper published at Chicago. It is largely devoted to a serious, decent discussion of the problems of marriage, divorce and sex. Its editor is Moses Harman, a good man whom we admire for his devotion to the right as he sees it, and for his willingness to suffer financial loss, and even imprisonment, for the right to freely speak and print his views. With those views we have but little agreement, but that is mere intellectual difference, which in no way hinders our admiration for the spirit of the man.

"Lucifer is the most recent victim of the press censor of our imperialized postoffice department. A recent issue was held in the Chicago postoffice. No notification was sent to the acting publisher, Mr. Harman's daughter, and she first knew of it through the complaints of subscribers. In answer to her inquiries, the postmaster informed her that the edition was in violation of section 497 of the postal laws and regulations, but gave no other clew by which the puzzled woman could ascertain what her offense had been, whether in reading matter or advertisements, or how she could avoid it in subsequent issues.

"The section in question forbids the mailing of obscene matter or lottery advertisements. The paper contained absolutely nothing that could be classed under either head. Some clew to the action of the department may be had, however, if it is known that the larger part of the paper was taken up with a report of the mass meeting in New York to protest against the arbitrary deportation of John Turner, the English labor leader, with whose wrongs the readers of the Star are familiar. Lucifer's offenses are that it is not respectful to those who attempt to exercise arbitrary power, and that it is financially weak. So it is selected for suppression instead of the more powerful dailies and weeklies which have also dared to stand for real Americanism.

"Lucifer has also been informed that its privilege of entry to the mails as second-class matter has been revoked, this action likewise being without explanation.

"The powers that be at Washington are strenuous and brave only against the weak and helpless. This is true in all matters, [illegible] whether of international relations or domestic affairs. The weak nations and the weak journals have no rights; the strong may do as they please.

"Mr. Harman is now in San Francisco. To-morrow (Sunday) afternoon, at 2:30, he will lecture at 909 Market street, in Justice Hall, on 'Evolution.' No admission charge will be made."

★ ★ ★

The Milwaukee Advance, Robert Schilling's paper, gives space to the entire explanation of the difficulty with the postal department which was published in Lucifer No. 1001. It heads the article, "Another Infamy Perpetrated by the Postal Authorities. Suppressing Reform Papers Without Trial. Attempt to Choke Off Lucifer, an Honest Reform Paper, by Robbing It of Second-Class Mail Privileges."

★ ★ ★

In the suppression of the issue of Dec. 17 the New York Truth Seeker sees an attempt to stop the dissemination of information regarding the Turner case. It says:

"After several attempts at exclusion by the postoffice authorities, which have been met and thwarted by the publishers, Lucifer, the Chicago radical paper, has been denied second-class rates in the mails, and must have a stamp on every copy. Why pound rates are withheld is not stated by the Chicago officials, but the intimation that Lucifer violates section 497 of the postal laws leads to the conclusion that somebody has detected an impure thought in Lucifer. Mrs. Lillian Harman, who conducts the paper in the absence of her father, the editor, declares that there is not a word in the number complained of to which a prude could object. Lucifer combines with the advocacy of Social Freedom a disbelief in organized government, and the number siezed contained a report of the Turner mass meeting in New York. As the censors have not deigned to enlighten anybody about the matter complained of, the public will draw its own inference as to the animus of the proceeding."

★ ★ ★

While Turner, who has committed no offense whatever, except that of landing in New York and advocating trades unionism, is quietly waiting for the hearing of his case before the Supreme Court, for his defense before which the American Freethinkers are making every preparation, at a great outlay of both time and money, the publishers of Lucifer in Chicago have come to the end of their many persecutions by their publication being finally barred from the United States mailing privileges as second-class matter. The final decision of the postoffice authorities is one of the most stultifying and disgraceful that can be conceived. Every objection made by the postoffice on grounds relating to the subscription list and the advertising matter having been successfully met by the publishers of Lucifer, they were astonished to find that the issue of Dec. 17 had not reached their subscribers. A letter of inquiry brought a curt note from the postmaster stating that the issue had been held as unmailable for breach of section 497 of the postal laws. By reference to the act itself it was found that section 497 relates to "obscene" publications; and here comes in the absurd and disgraceful part of the matter. Uncle Sam says he will not permit obscene matter to be sent through his postoffice to corrupt the minds of his children, and yet, though his postal officials deprived Lucifer of second-class mailing privileges on this ground, they informed the publisher that the paper would be carried if he paid ordinary full rates! The right to stop objectionable matter going through the mails should never be allowed to be exercised unless the postal authorities immediately begin a criminal prosecution against the sender of the objectionable matter. That would be a test of the legality of the decision. At present the postmaster is an autocrat from whose decisions, childish and vicious as they often are, and are especially in this case, there is no appeal.—Secular Thought (Toronto, Canada).

HOW TO HELP TO CIRCULATE LUCIFER.

We hope the friends of Lucifer will do all they can to extend its circulation. For this reason we make the price of $2.25 for two copies to one address. The extra 25 cents merely pays for extra time, trouble and paper.

We will give a copy of Dr. Foote's "Home Cyclopedia," price $2, with Lucifer one year for $3. This is a family guide book of medical, social, and sexual science, containing 1,248 pages, with 400 pictures, eighty in color. Send for circulars.

GEORGIA REPLOGLE.

To give the name of a person as the heading of an article usually means that the words to follow will comprise an obituary statement of the good qualities of that person. It is not the case in this instance. Georgia Replogle still lives, and I think that we who appreciate the work she has done should give expression to that appreciation before it is too late. I am reminded of my sins of omission by the following paragraph which I find in Liberty:

"Liberty desires to call the attention of its friends to the distressing situation of Georgia and Henry Replogle, the former publishers of Egoism, than whom there have been no more faithful workers for the cause of Anarchism. For many months Georgia Replogle has been seriously and sufferingly ill, and her illness has necessitated heavy expenditures, which the arduous toil of Henry Replogle, himself in poor health, has been insufficient to meet. Their present condition is painful and perilous in the extreme. They have not authorized this journal to appeal on their behalf, but it takes the responsibility of doing so. The gratitude that all Anarchists must feel toward these clear-sighted and untiring champions of liberty should find immediate expression in the form of money contributions, which may be sent to Georgia Replogle, Box 1207, Denver, Colo. And sympathetic letters from earnest friends, whether accompanied by money or not, would surely carry cheer and comfort to a home now buried in the darkness of depression."

When I first heard of Georgia Replogle she was living in Liberal, Mo., the town founded by G. H. Walser, in which there was to be permitted no church, no saloon and no unconventional views or actions in regard to the relations of the sexes. E. C. Walker had visited the town, and it was, if my memory is correct, in discussions with him that Georgia and Henry received their first ideas regarding radicalism. They were very much in earnest and made no effort to conceal their opinions, and the attempt was made to force them to leave the town. A great deal of bitterness developed, as is often the case in a small community. The story of their experiences, as Georgia afterward told it to me, is interesting, but I cannot go into details now. When I was sixteen years of age they came to our home and helped for a few weeks in the publication of Lucifer. It was at one of the most important periods in my life, and I shall never forget the long walks and talks with Georgia between the printing office and home. I think she was only twenty-two at that time, but I felt all the admiration and affection that a young girl can feel for an older woman. I do not remember that she gave me advice, but I am sure that the talks we enjoyed have had much influence on my life. I did not think she was beautiful, and I have never seen a woman who dressed more plainly. Indeed, her greatest fault was her indifference to her own personal welfare. To accomplish her work was the important thing, no matter whether hungry or cold or tired. I think that in those days, as well as later, it was her stoical indifference to her physical well-being that undermined her health. They bought a few pounds of second-hand type and a little hand-press and went back to Liberal and issued a small paper in spite of renewed persecution. Later they went to California and there again issued a paper, which, like the proverbial good, died young, they being obliged by failing health to give it up after several years' publication.

Georgia has always done what she could to help others. A greater-hearted woman it has never been my good fortune to meet. I hope that in her hour of need she may receive a return in kind of what she has given. But no charity do I bespeak. Let those only give who feel that in doing so they are giving her a portion of the reward well earned.

LILLIAN HARMAN.

"DARE TO STAND ALONE."

I honor any man who in the conscientious discharge of his duty dares to stand alone; the world, with ignorant, intolerant judgment, may condemn, the countenances of relatives may be averted, and the hearts of friends grow cold, but the sense of duty done shall be sweeter than the applause of the world, the countenances of relatives or the hearts of friends.—Charles Sumner.

"Nora: A Doll's House," and "Ghosts," by Ibsen, bound together in olive cloth, with red lettering. Containing sketch of the life of the author. 196 pages. With Lucifer one year, $2.25.

PROSECUTIONS FOR BLASPHEMY IN ENGLAND.

There have been few cases of prosecution for blasphemy in our country in comparison with those in England. Many people will be surprised to learn that men have been sent to prison for publishing and selling Shelley's "Queen Mab," and that there was a time when it required courage to publish or sell that work. Now it can be procured of any publisher or bookseller. To-day it requires courage to frankly discuss the questions relating to sex, but some day it will be as freely discussed as "Queen Mab" is now freely sold.

The would-be suppressors of thought and speech refuse to read the history of the past and to learn its lesson. Always there have been attempted suppressions and always have the attempts failed. Although they have succeeded in silencing individuals by imprisonment and death, the ideas advocated by these individuals have lodged in the minds of others and have lived. "Blasphemy" was considered by our ancestors a far greater crime than is the so-called "obscene" discussion of the sex question in our day, and it will not be long before those who discuss the latter question will be as free from prosecution and persecution as are those who at present in this country discuss questions of religion.

The following incomplete list of prosecutions and imprisonments in England for "blasphemy" is taken from the Truth Seeker of Bradford, England:

1794—Simmons, for "Age of Reason," two years; Crosby, for "Age of Reason," two years.
1797—John Davies, for "Scripturian's Creed," one year; John Gratton, for "Christian Mysteries," heavy fine; Thomas Williams, three years' imprisonment.
1812—D. T. Heaton, prosecuted seven times, pillory inflicted and £2,800 literature destroyed.
1813—George Houston, two years and fine £200.
1817—William Hone, his political parodies prosecuted as blasphemous: Shelley deprived of his children on account of his infidelity; Richard Carlile, nine and a half years' imprisonment and fines amounting to £2,000; Retchford, six months for report of Carlile's trial.
1818—James Williams, six months; Joseph Russell, six months; James Tucker, six months.
1819—John Cahuac, heavy fine for Palmer's "Principles of Nature."
1820—Thomas Davison, two years; Joseph Swann, four and a half years; Thomas Tyler, three months.
1821—Jane Carlile, two years for Sherwin's "Life of Paine"; Mary Ann Carlile, two years.
1822—Mrs. Susan Wright, two and a half months; Samuel Waddington, one year for "Principles of Nature"; Humphrey Boyle, twenty-three months; Charles Trust, six months and £20 fine for "Principles of Nature"; Joseph Rhodes, two years; Joseph William Trust, two years; William Holmes, two years; John Barkley, six months; William Rance, one year; Charles Sanderson, one year; Turner, one year; Atkinson, one year.
1822—Robert Wedderburn, two years for blasphemous speech; William Tunbridge, two years; James Watson, one year for "Principles of Nature," and several other prosecutions; John Jones, six months for Carlile's "Letter to Walt"; William Clark, four months for "Queen Mab."
1824—William Campion, three years; John Clarke, three years; William Haley, three years; T. R. Perry, three years; Richard Hassell, two years; T. Jefferies, eighteen months; W. Cochrane, six months; J. Christopher, six months; M. J. O'Connor, six months; James Affleck, three months for "Queen Mab."
1827-31—Robert Taylor, three years for blasphemous discourses.
1840—John Cleave, four months for Haslam's "Letters to Clergy"; Abel Heywood, committed for trial, but prosecution abandoned; Henry Hetherington, several prosecutions.
1841—Moxon, the publisher, the last prosecution for "Queen Mab."
1842—Charles Southwell, one year and £100 fine for "Oracle of Reason"; G. J. Holyoake, six months; George Adams, one month; Mrs. Harriet Adams, one month.
1843—H. Robinson, twelve months; James Finlay, three months.
1844—Matilda Roalfe, two months.
1846—Thomas Paterson, fifteen months.
1857—Mrs. Emma Martin, six months; Thomas Pooley, twenty-one months (five months only served, owing to exertions of Buckle, Mill, etc.).
1878—Annie Besant, deprived of her child for publishing an atheistical work and associating with an infidel author (Bradlaugh).
1882—Henry Seymour, for blasphemous placard.
1883—G. W. Foote, one year for Freethinker; W. J. Ramsey, nine months for Freethinker; H. A. Kemp, three months for Freethinker.

LILLIAN HARMAN.

The Diety, it seems to me, was very unkind to Adam and Eve when he denied them the pleasures of courtship.

VARIOUS VOICES.

We are always glad to receive calls from friends visiting the city. Take the Lake street elevated, stop at Ashland avenue, walk one block east, then one block north. Or take Fulton street electric car west and stop at St. John's place, alighting in front of our house. The Lake street electric and Paulina street cars also pass within a block of our residence.

A. E. A., New York: Too bad the postoffice department has been annoying you. Lucifer has always been put at too small a price. What it takes for its mission is of too great an importance to be cheap. I inclose $4 to pay subscription for two years. I hope that the postal authorities have got through annoying Lucifer. May the trials and persecutions bring out Lucifer's friends and be an immediate benefit.

G. J. Lambrigger, Niobrara, Neb.: I missed Lucifer three weeks ago and was satisfied that you had got into the toils of the censor. I will pay the difference in subscription price, but would suggest that you change the paper from a weekly to a monthly. I am getting two monthlies that I have been trying for four years to stop coming to me, and I have not paid one cent in all that time, but they are still coming. They are friendly to the administration. You can see what discrimination is made.

J. R. Price, M. D., Athens, Tex.: We are here in Texas and miss Lucifer, although the sun does pour out his effulgent rays so abundantly that coats are unnecessary. This is indeed a beautiful climate; the soil fertile for all kinds of fruits and vegetables, as well as cotton and corn. The people are simple natives of the country, unable to lift themselves out of the ruts that they were born in. The people are very religious, not pious. I asked one pastor if he held prayer meetings. "Not now, as the members who pray are sick."

H. W. Booser, Grand Rapids, Mich.: It grieves me deeply that an ignorant, ungrown set of people must hold the power over their betters in intelligence, and that in this reign of the brute in man our beloved Lucifer must suffer. I think that if every Lucifer that is issued were to be mailed by the subscriber to some one who he or she may think might possibly be interested, this would certainly aid to increase the subscription list, and all of us can do so much. I hope time will yet mete out to you the success you deserve.

John Borthwick, Ontario, Cal.: I note the contents of last Lucifer with sadness because of the intolerance manifested by the postal officials. However, when it is a case of war for a just liberty, I cannot do anything else than stand by you as a subscriber, and the cost in money is not the first consideration. I hope every subscriber will regard the matter as a suppression of their own individual liberty, and an attack on dearly bought freedom of society, so far as it yet exists. Eternal vigilance is necessary at every step of progress.

E. Bordwell, Nebraska City, Neb.: About fifteen years ago I happened to read in the Twentieth Century an article on the prosecution of M. Harman for sending Lucifer through the mails. I sent for a sample copy, liked it, subscribed for it, and have taken it ever since, paying therefor all that was asked, and have always had full worth of my money. It goes into my home and is as welcome and necessary there as any other paper we get. I can scarcely believe that such a paper can be barred from the mails by any law. Some men may have the power to do it, but I hardly believe there is a law that has the power. Would like to see it tried if there is any way to get at it.

T. F. Lee, Lakeport, Cal.: Inclosed find $1 to help pay for the increased price of Lucifer. Individual liberty is a thing of the past. No doubt there is a fiend behind this government that is determined to crush out the life, energy, enthusiasm and hope of the individual; it may be ecclesiastical, it may be bull-headed willfulness, or it may be ignorance pure and simple. At any rate, all combined powers seem to be bent upon the determination to crush out any respect for the individual. The person who will not allow his thoughts to run in the channel marked out by the stronghold of combined power is called upon to halt, and every means of conveying his thoughts are taken away from him, and this without any redress or any possible show to compel a cause for action; all effort seems to be done in the most blinding and bewildering way possible. But then, governments in the past have grown up, ripened and gone down, and had to begin with the individual—its seed—again. A progressive government must have progressive individuals, for as the units are, so will be the nation. But why talk? Tyrants do not want to progress.

J. V. Carter, Indian Territory: Would you care to know why I like Lucifer? Because of its teachings on the sex question. I was raised in a home that was anything but a home, and the jealousy of my father toward my stepmother robbed our home of peace and love. There are no pleasant recollections of childhood for me. Now, I believe Lucifer's mission is to make men reason. Why, until I read Lucifer I thought that women had no rights that were not granted by their husbands. Since reading your paper my mind is broader and more liberal; and as to my relations with my wife, we are sweethearts and our children have never heard us quarrel—in fact, we never quarrel. Of course I do not approve of every word written by the various correspondents, but I am sure that Lucifer's mission is a good one.

Albert Strout, Spokane, Wash.: Lucifer No. 1001 came to my desk this week with a one-cent stamp attached. I hastened to the editorial page to ascertain the cause. When I discovered that the United States postoffice department had refused to fulfill its mission—serve the people—I simply injected a little more Socialist determination into my work—and remarked to those present that the last vestige of private capitalism must be abolished before the people will be protected against such outrages. Inclosed find $2 for my renewal. My experience of a year and a half with the business end of The New Time of this city has taught me the value of renewals. So allow me this opportunity to request all readers of Lucifer to help the cause by renewing their subscriptions at once. It is now that Lucifer needs assistance, not to-morrow, for to-morrow will never put in its appearance.

Paul L. Sautter, Philadelphia, Pa.: I most assuredly will keep up my subscription if the price is raised to 5 cents a copy. I consider Lucifer the brightest and most original paper that I read, and would not lose it at any price. I sincerely hope that this persecution will soon cease. I send my copy to a friend in New York every week, and he enjoys reading it, although very conservative in his opinions on every question. I hope the editor is enjoying his stay in the West, and desire to see him gain strength and energy, so that he can complete his book on the Postal Inquisition. I am anticipating its appearance with the greatest of interest, and will try to secure a few readers for it. Make Lucifer better than ever. As contributors, I enjoy reading Adeline Champney, E. C. Walker and others. Why doesn't Mr. Walker write more for the paper?

[Mr. Walker has not lost interest in Lucifer and its work, but says, when he is asked to write, that his time is so fully occupied that he cannot devote any to writing for Lucifer.—L. H.]

Joshua Harman, Jacksboro, Texas: I see that they are trying to suppress Lucifer. I have been thinking that, as I am old and suffering physically, I would discontinue taking Lucifer for a while. But this attempted suppression has decided me to renew my subscription, so I inclose $2 for another year. Our forefathers fought for liberty in the revolutionary war, and I am not willing to lose our liberty without a tremendous fight for it. We are not willing to lie down and let our bosses ride over us rough shod.

[The writer of the foregoing is a younger brother of the editor of this paper. Both grew to manhood in the Methodist faith. Moses received his education in a Methodist college and intended to become a preacher of that sect. His study of the Bible and of books favoring religion, and his own thought on the subject, caused his reason to reject the Christian religion before he had read a work in opposition to that religion. His brother Joshua remained in the faith of his youth until some time after Moses started the publication of this paper. It was a source of pain to Joshua that his brother should do such heretical work, and he offered him a sum of money to desist from it. Moses offered to read anything in favor of religion if Joshua would read what he sent him on the other side. The agreement was made, and "The Age of Reason" sent to Joshua. Thus it came about that, like their namesakes of old, Joshua followed Moses out of the land of darkness and superstition toward the Promised Land, freedom of thought and action, which is a better goal than that sought by the Israelites of old and the attainment of which does not necessitate the slaughter of those already there.—L. H.]

THE LOGIC OF CONVENTIONAL MORALS.

"Divorce: A Peril to the American Home," is the title of an article contributed by the Hon. Frederick H. Gillett to a current magazine. The honorable gentleman wants jurisdiction over divorce taken away from the state courts and relegated to national tribunals. Having expressed this desire, he adds: "My own opinion and wish would be to go a step further, and imbed in the constitution a limitation of divorces to a few causes, not including desertion, which is so often collusive, and a provision that if remarriage is allowed at all, it shall not be granted to the party for whose fault the divorce is decreed. Of course, there is much force in the argument that to grant divorces without the possibility of remarriage is to insure illicit indulgence. But, on the other hand, experience has proved that allowing remarriage is a constant provocation to divorce, and to me that seems the greater evil."

The Truth Seeker's comments (which to me appear to bear the "earmarks" of the editor's observant brother George) follow: "If homes are what Mr. Gillett wants, why does he object to divorced persons trying to establish them legitimately? A person who has failed with one married partner might succeed gloriously with another. Mr. Gillett proposes a queer morality when he says that 'illicit indulgence' is a less serious evil than the separation of a husband and wife who cannot live happily together. Probably this Massachusetts moralist would regard seduction as a minor evil compared with breaking off an engagement."

ONE GRATEFUL SON.

"This," said the guide, "is the grave of Adam." With reverential awe the wealthy merchant tailor, on his first trip to the Orient, drew near and cast a lotus blossom on the tomb. "Erring ancestor," he murmured, "I should be the last man on earth to revile your memory. To your sin I owe my prosperity."

"WHO IS THE ENEMY?"

Hugh O. Pentecost writes thus to Edwin C. Walker about the latter's new work, "Who Is the Enemy: Anthony Comstock or You?" "Your pamphlet is a strong discussion of the question at issue that one could give to a conservative friend with some hope that he might read it through."

Dr. R. W. Shufeldt, biologist, author of several scientific works and of more than seven hundred articles on medicine, travel, science, sexual problems and other subjects, writes to E. C. Walker: "I thank you very much indeed for the copy you sent me of your valuable pamphlet, 'Who is the Enemy: Anthony Comstock or You?' I have read it from cover to cover with the utmost satisfaction and unqualified approval. It is one of the best and strongest things you have put out, and I am with you solid in both the letter and spirit of it. I prize the copy most highly." Ask for table of contents and specimen pages of "Who Is the Enemy?" or send 20 cents to this office for the pamphlet.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

TRUE MANHOOD.

AN INVALUABLE GUIDE TO HEALTH, STRENGTH AND PURITY.

BY E. B. SHEPHERD.

WHAT EVERY FATHER WANTS HIS BOY TO KNOW.

The Christian Endeavor World: "Its suggestions are wise and ennobling." Dr. Stockham, author of Tokology, says: "TRUE MANHOOD explains the transition from boyhood to manhood, giving knowledge of priceless value." Levant cloth, 328 pages. Prepaid $1. STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

JUST OUT.

PARENTHOOD.

By Alice B. Stockham, M. D., author of "Tokology" and "Karezza." Highest ideals for best offspring. Vital and important subjects discussed. Inclosing new philosophy of the Creative Energy. G. G. Hunt says: "Many sentences of PARENTHOOD should be graven in gold and handed down to posterity." Prepaid, 25c. STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

SONGS OF A CHILD,
AND OTHER POEMS.

By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. Price $1.50; postage 12c. STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

ISOLA; OR, THE DISINHERITED.

A drama in six acts. By Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1; postage 7c. STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

KAREZZA.

SCIENCE OF MARRIAGE.

A godsend to every wife—a joy to every husband.

This work brings peace into homes disrupted by inharmony in the sexual relation. Dr. A. B. Stockham advises a practice which leads to individual liberty and to deeper love between husband and wife.

Dr. F. G. Welch: "After a personal trial of its teachings, I want to thank you for a great service to humanity."

Rev. George R. Ranshaw: "Out of a beautiful and ennobling experience, I can say, I KNOW."

Gives a high ideal of the marital relation and teaches control of the Fecundating Power.

J. A. Smalley, M. D.: "I have received more actual benefit from the practice of KAREZZA teachings than from all other books on Sexual Science."

A. B. Franklin, M. D.: "KAREZZA does more than any other single thing to make marriage a perpetual courtship."

LEVANT CLOTH. POSTPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MEN, WOMEN, AND CHANCE.

BY WILLIAM PLATT.

Contains two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. Price 75c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

WOMAN AND HER RELATION TO THE CHURCH, OR CANON LAW FOR WOMEN.

BY HARRIET M. CLOSZ.

A succinct statement of the position to which women were doomed by the Church Fathers and authorities. Every woman should possess a copy. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; OR THE PRICE OF VIRTUE.

By Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood, by Lucinda B. Chandler; Life's Gifts, by Olive Schreiner, and Marriage—What It Was and Is, and Will the Coming Woman Marry? Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SEND 10c IN STAMPS FOR THREE NUMBERS, OR 50c FOR TWELVE MONTHS' SUBSCRIPTION TO

HUMAN NATURE.

It is a monthly magazine, now in the fifteenth year of publication. It is Unique, Eclectic and Scientific. It treats of Phrenology, Psychology, Health, Sociology and all subjects which pertain to the welfare of humanity.

The character of men and animals is in accordance with their physical organization. This is determined by size of body and brain, shape of head, texture, temperament and facial expression.

HUMAN NATURE illustrates these principles by picture and pen, and teaches its readers how to read character. Its ethics are ennobling; its style, while strong, is sprightly, and its literary standard high. You need HUMAN NATURE. Address

PROFESSOR ALLEN HADDOCK,
PHRENOLOGIST,
1020 MARKET ST., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

A BARGAIN.

FOR SALE—The Brodhead Windmill plant, at Brodhead, Wis., in for sale cheap. It consists of a well-equipped foundry, machine shop and wood shop. The cause is poor health, old age, and inability to run it. It is located in as fine a country as can be found west of the lakes. It fell into my hands through a bankruptcy sale, and therefore I can sell for less than the tools cost. Inquire of F. O. BISHOP, Brodhead, Wis.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 65, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We cannot sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 20c each, two for 30c. Address EDWIN C. WALKER, 244 W. 143d St., New York, N. Y.

WANTED—100 women to study medicine or midwifery. Next term begins January 1, 1904. College of Medicine and Surgery, 245 Ashland Blvd., Chicago, Ill. DR. FLORENCE DRESSLER, Secretary. (Dept. A.)

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

THE LIBERAL MAIL-ORDER JEWELER.

Now permanent at No. 110 N. Kensington Ave., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 20 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's Line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Thelem in the Crucible," free.

J. H. GREER, M. D.,
52 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.

Office Hours—9 a. m. to 6 p. m.; Wednesdays and Saturdays, 9 a. m. to 8 p. m.; Sundays, 9 a. m. to 12 m.
Telephone, Randolph 42.

DR. OGILVIE A. RICE,
DENTIST.
1356 MILWAUKEE AVE., COR. WESTERN, CHICAGO.
Telephone West 143.

PHILIP G. PEABODY,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
10 COURT SQUARE, ROOM 61.
BOSTON, MASS.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD OWN

TOKOLOGY.

A COMPLETE HEALTH GUIDE.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

Teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions.

Treats of diseases of women and children; contains practical teachings on Change of Life, limiting offspring, etc.

Lizzie N. Armstrong writes: "If I knew I were to be the mother of innumerable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of Tokology."

Dr. C. B. Wills: "Tokology is doing more for women than all other books put together."

CLOTH, PREPAID, $2.25; LEATHER, $2.75.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES.

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

Contents—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only"; Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spotting of the Heathen"; What Are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women. With Appendix: The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 10c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

A treatise on Sexual Science and Marriage, rich in thought and strong in expression. Emphatically a book for the thinker.

Carpenter holds that woman's freedom is based upon economics; she must be independent financially that she may not be forced to sell herself in or out of marriage. He also makes a strong plea for a motherhood of freedom and thoughtful preparation.

AMERICAN EDITION, CLOTH, PREPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM.

THE RELATIONSHIP OF EACH TO HUMAN LIBERTY.

BY E. C. WALKER.

The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is bigotly opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only rebelling or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organization and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. Price 5c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

CREATIVE LIFE.

A BOOK FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

A timely and important message not found in text books. Every girl seeks and should have this true, plain and practical knowledge. One writes: "Thank you, thank you, dear Doctor, for the plain but beautiful thoughts. Womanhood, motherhood and life have new meanings. You ennoble your theme." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

A NOVEL BY GEORGE N. MILLER.

FORTIETH THOUSAND.

"The Strike of a Sex" is a fascinating novel bearing upon the sexual relations. It is a bold protest against the customary life of most married people, and at the same time a prophecy of happier conditions between man and wife. Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW.

A PRIMER OF SEXUAL RATIONALISM.

BY E. C. WALKER.

"Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes."

Paper covers; 42 large pages. Price 10c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

"PERSONAL EXPERIENCES OF TWO AMERICAN ANTI-VIVISECTIONISTS IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES."

BY PHILIP G. PEABODY.

With an Appendix by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c. Apply to PHILIP G. PEABODY, 15 Court Square, Boston, Mass.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY.

By Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition, by E. C. Walker; Motherhood in Freedom, by Moses Harman; The Greatest Sin (an allegory), by E. B. Kerr, and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom, by Oscar Rotter. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN.

By E. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.; The New Martyrdom, by Lillian Harman, and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE.

By E. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strasburg Geese, by C. W. Coolridge; A Traveler's Tale, by E. B. Kerr; The Cat's Story, by Emile Zola. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

1004

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

HILDA'S HOME.

A STORY OF WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

With Macaulay, Rosa Graul would say: "The cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty." Hence she has no fears that under Freedom the Home and the Family would cease to exist, or that woman would be less loving and lovable, or that man would be less manly and honorable. On the contrary, she maintains that only in the soil and atmosphere of freedom is it possible for true womanhood and manhood to live and flourish.

426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

"Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it."

DAINTILY PRINTED. PREPAID, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES.

BY E. C. WALKER.

Contents—Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What Is She? What Will She Be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections Upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love and Life." Price 15c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD.

AN OUTLINE OF PRACTICAL CO-OPERATIVE INDIVIDUALISM.

BY HENRY OLERICH.

Regarded by many persons as a more interesting and consistent economic reform novel than Bellamy's "Looking Backward."

Bound in red silk with gold title. Nearly 450 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, $1.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

BY JOHN H. KELSO.

Contents—Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff or Protection; War Punishments; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

519 pages. Cloth binding somewhat damaged, and reduced from $1.50 to 50c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY, AND THE STATE.

BY FREDERICK ENGELS.

Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans.

217 pages; bound in cloth. Price 60c; postage 5c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STORY OF IJAIN;

OR, THE EVOLUTION OF A MIND.

By Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Stuart Rose), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. Price $1; postage 5c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE CURSE OF MATERNITY.

From the French of Henry Fevre. Together with How to Escape the Curse, by Jonathan Mayo Crane; Woman's "Duty" to Bear Children, by E. C. Walker; True and False Morality, by C. L. James; and Love's Law, by William Francis Barnard. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE.

By John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention, by Marlette; Reminiscences of Berlin Heights, by A. Warren, and The Sexes and Love in Freedom, by Oscar Rotter. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN.

By Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yclept Society, by Moses Hull; Virgin Soil, by George Egerton, and Normal Sexual Action, by Ernest Wiese. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of Freethought and Free Love. By Oxford Northcote. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. By M. Harman. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Moral. By A. F. Tindall. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. By E. C. Walker. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE COMING WOMAN, by Lillie D. White. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

PRICE 5 CENTS. CHICAGO, ILL., JAN. 28, E. M. 304. [C. E. 1904.] WHOLE NO. 1005

THE PIVOT OF SPENCER'S SOCIAL PHILOSOPHY.

In the preface to "The Factors of Organic Evolution" Herbert Spencer, discussing the question whether or not acquired qualities are inherited, says:

"I will add only that, considering the width and depth of the effects which acceptance of one or other of these hypotheses must have on our views of Life, Mind, Morals, and Politics, the question, Which of them is true? demands, beyond all other questions whatever, the attention of scientific men."

It is not surprising that Spencer attached so much importance to this question, for his own theories as to the future of society must be valued to a great extent according to the answer that is given. Let us see first what are his theories on this subject.

In the first place he draws attention to the fact that the human race is at present very badly fitted to its environment. Most wild animals are almost perfectly fitted to the environment in which they live, because it has remained practically unchanged from time immemorial, and there has been any amount of time for evolution to bring about adaptation to environment. Consequently animals are quite happy for most of their lives, for happiness accompanies the performance of functions to which one is perfectly adapted. Not so with man. Within very recent times there has been a complete revolution in his modes of life. He used to be nomadic, largely occupied in fighting and hunting, and more accustomed to occasional great efforts than to steady industry. Now, however, he has very little scope for hunting, fighting is dying out, and a wandering life has been replaced by a settled one, occupied in steady application to agriculture or industry. The result is that the instincts of our ancestors, which we have still to a great degree, are quite unsuited to our surroundings. Young men are chained to desks and counters, or have to cram for examinations, when nature is urging them all the time to go out and hunt, or fish, or fight. Sometimes a war breaks out, and then the young American or Australian throws down his books, or gives up a good job, and goes off to fight the Filipinos or the Boers, and endure dreadful hardships for a wretched pittance. This chance is gradually disappearing, however, as the percentage of people who ever see a war is constantly decreasing, and the average Achilles or Cœur de Lion has to submit to the irksome task of measuring linen or planting potatoes. Thus a large proportion of the people are unhappy, having to spend their lives in the constant discharge of functions to which they are not adapted.

This is very unfortunate, but Spencer says it will cure itself, because the qualities which we acquire by our efforts are transmissible to our descendants. In his opinion every man who makes an effort to stick to his books or his shop, when he would like to be out hunting or fishing, is making it easier for his children to live according to modern conditions. Spencer believes that if each generation does its irksome work, and transmits to the next an increased adaptation to such work, the work will gradually get less irksome, and at last a generation will arise which will study Euclid and measure cloth with as great delight as a cat shows in catching mice, or a duck in swimming in the water.

Such a change alone would transform a miserable world into a fairly happy one. But there is more to follow. Spencer thinks that there will in the future be an extraordinary increase of sympathy in the world. In the past we have been going through the militant stage of society, in which much cruelty was necessary. Thus men remained callous and brutalized, because every day they had to do and witness cruel things. Moreover, our ancestors lived largely by hunting, which is also a cruel occupation. In such a soil the precious flower of sympathy could not grow. Now, however, peaceful industry and co-operation have replaced violence, and the gentle emotions of sympathy and pity can live where they must have died in a more savage age. Moreover, it is supposed that the effects of sympathy can also be accumulated by inheritance, and that in consequence the world will become more sympathetic from age to age, until at last altruism is as easy and natural as egoism is now. At the same time, however, there will be constantly less demand for sympathy with suffering, as people get constantly better adapted to their environment and suffer less. Finally, the upshot will be that competition in altruism will become as keen as competition in egoism is now, and the virtuous man will be he who gives up an opportunity of sacrificing himself in order that someone else may have the pleasure of doing so instead.

At this stage I had better explain that I am not joking. Those who have read only the tame Utopias of More, Bellamy, and Morris will refuse to believe that the grave Herbert Spencer has ever said anything like this. But it is true. Let any doubter read the "Data of Ethics," especially the chapter on "Conciliation," and he will soon be convinced that Herbert Spencer has said all that I have attributed to him. In fact, such ideas run through all his writings on social problems.

Everything rests on one assumption, however. It must be supposed that our habits and customs, acquired during our lives, can be transmitted by heredity to our descendants. Without this accumulation by heredity, each man would start just where his father did, and the world would only get the advantage of good habits and virtuous efforts during the life of the individual in whom they were manifested.

Now this latter view is the one which has come to be held by most living biologists who are either in middle life or in the younger generation. The inheritance of acquired characters, once taken for granted by everybody, is now considered by a majority of competent observers to be as mythical as the sea serpent. Should the new view prove true, then it is clear that there is only one way to improve the raw material of the race. If we can only transmit what we have inherited, then it will be necessary that only those of good heredity should be parents, or at least that they should leave more offspring than those of inferior heredity. That means that we must rely on selection and rejection, and not on the accumulated effects of conduct and habit.

But that is not all. If the belief in the inheritance of acquired qualities must be abandoned, that only means that we are deprived of a certain way of making progress. Now, however, biology has thrown another shell into the progressive camp. Not only does it say that selection is necessary to progress, but it adds that without selection we must actually go back. In chapter 2 of "Social Evolution" Bejamin Kidd says:

"Recent biological researches, and more particularly the investigations and conclusions of Professor Weismann, have tended to greatly develop Darwin's original hypothesis as to the conditions under which progress has been made in the various forms of life. It is now coming to be recognized as a necessarily inherent part of the doctrine of evolution that if the continual selection which is always going on amongst the higher forms of life were to be suspended, these forms would not only possess no tendency to make progress forward, but must actually go backward. That is to say, if all the individuals of every generation in any species were allowed to equally propagate their kind, the average of each generation would continually tend to fall below the average of the generation which preceded it, and a process of slow but steady degeneration would ensue."

Here, then, is an apparent deadlock between biology and the aspirations of social reformers. If the views I have quoted are correct, everything depends on selection and rejection. But at present natural selection is practically the only form of selection that exists among the human race, and natural selection implies a struggle for existence in which some succeed and others fail. It means heavy infant mortality, hunger, disease, and many other very unpleasant things. But the exact aim of most social reformers is to abolish these very things; to do away with starvation and early death, and give everybody a chance of living and flourishing. Thus it appears that the great aim of social reformers is to produce conditions under which the race would deteriorate.

Benjamin Kidd has pointed this out with great force, and has pronounced Socialism, Communism, and all other economic changes of that kind utterly impracticable. He says we must have natural selection, and must therefore have a competitive struggle under which many will go to the wall. Any nation that adopted Socialism would, in his opinion, rapidly degenerate, and be extinguished in the struggle for existence.

There is one way of escape, however. Natural selection is not the only possible form of selection. Artificial selection is also possible. Nay, artificial selection has been practiced for ages by breeders and gardeners, and with such success that they have produced far more wonderful results than natural selection ever produced within a similar period of time. If, then, we can apply artificial selection effectively, it is clear that we can dispense altogether with natural selection, and can accordingly go ahead with Socialism and Neo-Malthusianism.

But what form of artificial selection is it to be? Breeders employ many forms—infanticide, emasculation, killing and eating the unfit in youth, and so on. But these methods are too drastic for modern civilization. We must also reject all proposals to have parents pass a medical examination, or any other examination, as such things could only be made effective by an amount of interference with the individual which would be intolerable.

It is the glory of Moses Harman to have suggested the only form of artificial selection practicable for the human race. This is to leave every woman free on all occasions to choose the father of her child, the assumption being that in a majority of cases she would select a man above rather than below the average. An automatic method of selection would thus be created, without interfering with the liberty of any one. Men would, of course, have a like freedom, but selection by women could manifestly be far more rigorous, for the work of parenthood would require a much smaller percentage of the men of the community than of the women. If this plan were adopted, careful selection would soon be inculcated as a moral duty, and the spirit of emulation would lead women to strive against each other to produce the best possible children by selecting the best possible fathers.

With this method of artificial selection available, we need not mind if the doctrine of the inheritance of acquired qualities is finally rejected by science. R. B. KERR.

Broadly considered, the minds of intelligent men fall into three groups : (a) The objective mind, which only clearly appreciates things by the sense of sight; this may with equal propriety be called the visual mind; (b) the mathematical mind, the rarest and most wonderful attribute of man; and (c) the Spencerian mind. This means that the mind of Herbert Spencer was not only out of the common, but that it had something peculiar in itself. It is very difficult to define what is meant by a philosophic mind, and yet we all appreciate the kind of mind that is intended by the phrase. No one would venture to deny that Herbert Spencer would be classed as a philosopher, but we should at once deny that he had any claims to be considered as a biologist; yet he wrote a remarkable work, "The Principles of Biology," and propounded views which demanded and received the consideration and commendation of the greatest among contemporary biologists, Charles Darwin. No one who studies Spencers' "Principles of Biology" can deny that they betray ignorance of very simple botanical and zoological facts, yet his great skill in recognizing the bearing of the leading facts of evolution is expressed by his terse and surviving phrase, "survival of the fittest." Many brilliant minds have evolved theories and left them to be proved by the plodding labors of painstaking men, and we frequently find ourselves in doubt as to which should be accorded the greatest meed of praise, the enunciator of a great problem or he who solves it. However, it is certain that although Herbert Spencer was in no sense a biologist, yet it is evident to all who read the "Origin of Species" and the "Descent of Man" that Darwin had a very great respect for Herbert Spencer, and speaks of him as "our great philosopher." It is also obvious that no two men could be found whose minds worked in such opposite ways, for Darwin had an eminently objective mind. Thus, in considering natural selection, especially in relation to "the degree organization tends to advance," after discussing the matter from the Spencerian standpoint, he writes: "But as we have no facts to guide us, speculation on the subject is almost useless." One mind cannot move without facts, and the other is ready to frame hypotheses and point to conclusions, often startling and alluring, and in many instances borne out by subsequent work, but by the zeal and labors of other workers. Herbert Spencer won our admiration in the early struggles of the doctrine of evolution, when bigotry and prejudice attempted to strangle it. Huxley was its doughty champion among the biologists, and Spencer showed, from the standpoint of philosophic thought, that its principles were unassailable. They have prevailed, and he lived to see evolution calmly acclaimed in the strongholds of its most determined assailants.—British Medical Journal.

The test of a theory is that it shall account for and satisfy the facts. This has been first done in the history of human reason by the theory of evolution, which long lay in the realm of hypothesis, glimpses of it caught by the Roman Lucretius, and by other poets from time to time, and as modern science began to grow, and facts and powers of Nature to be carefully observed and compared, one after another scholar made suggestive contributions, unknowing to what edifice, until there was gathered so much material that when the master came with the secret command, and outlined first and then filled in the detailed plan, the structure grew to sight and revealed itself a majestic home of all human knowledge. Goethe studying the morphology of plants, Laplace and others presenting the nebular hypothesis, the significant words of Lamarck in respect to the development of animal life, gave some of the material. It was Lamarck that enabled Emerson to anticipate Darwin in his famous lines,—

> And striving to be man, the worm
> Mounts through all the spires of form,— and gave Darwin himself the impulse which led that great investigator to devote patient decades of years to the observation and correlation of multitudes of facts in their relations and sequences.

But before Darwin had filled out his scheme of zoological evolution, Herbert Spencer, in his "Principles of Psychology," had stated the doctrine of evolution as the universal plan of all things, as it stands to-day. That an evolution by natural selection, the survival of the fittest, the influence of environment and of heredity co-working or defeating each other, might be and was wrought out in respect to vegetable and animal life, and could have so remained as special and limited, is quite plain. But Spencer, building on an immense accumulation of facts, from particulars launched to universals, showed with magnificent comprehension that this evolution, this growth, is always and everywhere the principle of Nature, energy forever proceeding in one course, "integration of forces from indefiniteness, simplicity and homogeneity to definiteness, complexity and heterogeneity," as it has been stated almost in his own words; that is, from the protoplasm, or undifferentiated matter, through the monad, a simple cell, up to the great animal creation and man himself, who reasons of all;—from the atom up through the entire complexity of words.

But we cannot here discuss the vast field of Spencer's philosophy. Its radical ideas, its system of the universe as the endless evolution of life, without exceptions, have been indicated. He extended his application of this philosophy to the realms of ethics, showing how they have evolved in a double way, through the experience of the race and the intuitions of the individual,—a solution which put an end to the tedious quarrel of the intuitionists and the experientialists. He took it through the development of society, not as separate groupings here and there, but generalizing inclusively the whole social advance of the world of man as a whole. What Tennyson wrote in his lines:—

> "Yet I doubt not through the ages one increasing purpose runs,
> And the thoughts of man are widened in the process of the suns."

was a poetic expression of what Spencer's sociology shows to be universal truth. Despite wars and follies, crimes and superstitions, the world-view exhibits this as truth, and Spencer demonstrates it as the present phase of a plan bigger than all the theologies and creeds since man began to make them.

In political principle Spencer was an individualist of the radical sort—in fact, an Anarchist. He desired to see the interference of government reduced to its lowest terms. Particularly he desired to see the hands of government lifted from education. In this he was himself one of those elements which he himself characterizes as conflicting with the universal plan, at least for the time of their action, but which will be found in the ultimate as contributive to its working out in a more perfect way the evolution of ideal society. When the ethical end of this great comprehension of forces shall have developed, the inescapable result is the entire recognition of each individual right on an equal plane with every other individual right—or Anarchy; that is, society without what is now known as government, the basis of which is limitation, whereas the end of evolved society is liberation. And a liberator is what Spencer has been. He has opened to the thought of the world, through the gateway of science, the free road to the finest dreams and loftiest longings of the human soul.—Springfield Daily Republican.

Herbert Spencer had more readers in America than in Great Britain, and his works were translated into almost all the European languages. No one ever was more thoroughly dedicated to the pursuit of truth. For some years he was not only dedicated, but self-sacrificed to it. The scantiness of Milton's payment for "Paradise Lost" is a byword. Herbert Spencer's early works required for their publication the aid of friends, and it is strange to compare his wages with those of the writers of second-rate novels. Spencer is entitled to rank among discoverers, for he treated the mental development of men on the principle of evolution some years before the appearance of the "Origin of Species." As a moral philosopher, he dealt with the moral and social nature of men by a method derived from his study of biological science. If the results of that method leave something to be desired when it is applied to the spiritual and esthetic elements of humanity, it was in itself sound as well as an antidote to chimeras and fallacies. Spencer was a thoroughgoing Freethinker. He came at a time when the old traditions and sanctions had been destroyed or undermined by science and criticism, while nothing had yet come to take their place. But he was not destructive. On the contrary, he was a builder of morality and society on a biological foundation, and his work, if it is not destined to be final, will certainly be lasting.—Professor Goldwin Smith.

Herbert Spencer died from "senile decay." He had been obliged to husband his health and strength for more than forty years, and the wonder is he lived so long.

It was natural that Herbert Spencer should order his bodily remains to be cremated. No doubt this will act as an incentive or an encouragement to others who are able to make stipulations on such matters.

Herbert Spencer's three executors show how the "wind blew" intellectually. All three of them, we believe, are Freethinkers. Dr. Duncan helped in the compilation of "Descriptive Sociology"; Dr. Charlton Bastian is one of the "spontaneous generation" heretics, and the author of what the pious folk call a "materialistic" book on the Brain; and the Hon. Auberon Herbert is well-known as a pronounced philosophical Individualist (or Anarchist) after Spencer's own heart.

The simplicity of Herbert Spencer's character was manifest in the requests he made with regard to his funeral; first, that no flowers should be sent; second, that no one should wear mourning.

Steadily always did Herbert Spencer refuse what are called "honors." He declined to be nominated as lord rector of St. Andrew's University in 1872; he refused the degree of LL. D. offered him by that university and also by Cambridge; he refused a fellowship of the Royal Society; and he ignored Emperor William's effort to fasten on him the Order of Merit.

Herbert Spencer began his literary career by writing for the Nonconformist. That paper was conducted by the Mialls and really had some grit in it. It upheld the true Nonconformist standard of absolute separation between Religion and the State. Afterwards, when Spencer gave up engineering for ever, he became sub-editor of the Economist at £150 a year. The Economist is still living and has a good reputation. But it never had, and never will have, another sub-editor like Herbert Spencer.

Herbert Spencer wished that Mr. John Morley should be present at the funeral ceremony and deliver a valedictory address. Mr. Morley was holidaying in Sicily, and when a telegram reached him, after inevitable delay, he had to express his great regret at his inability to attend. The remains of Herbert Spencer were cremated at Golder's Green, the ashes being afterward interred at Highgate Cemetery.—Freethinker (London).

What the world owes to Spencer chiefly is the destruction of old prejudices and traditions, the forcing of educators to make allowances for youthful immaturity in the bringing up of children. He did what he could to introduce a more rational consideration of things, particularly in the sphere of religion. . . . His argument that force never disappears, but is only transferred, is now a commonplace scientific axiom; but in his day it was the height of impiety. Herbert Spencer was an Englishman to the manner born—cold, self-contained, rather narrow in his point of view toward foreigners. For him it was most remarkable that he ever undertook to travel to America. The reason is probably to be found in the enthusiastic reception accorded by America to his work. . . . He looked upon mankind as the highest form of specialization in nature, and would hear nothing of restricting the liberty of the individual more than was absolutely necessary for the cohesion of society.—Scientific American.

Long before any of his contemporaries had seized its universal import, Herbert Spencer grasped a great, light-giving truth —the truth of evolution; grasped it so that it became bone of his bone and flesh of his flesh, and, with a pertinacity of which the history of successful thought gives few examples, had applied it to the whole of life, down to the minutest details of the most various sciences. Who, since he wrote, is not vividly able to conceive of the world as a thing evolved from a primitive fire mist, by progressive integrations and differentiations, and increasing in heterogeneity and coherence of texture and organization? Who can fail to think of life, both bodily and mental, as a set of ever-changing ways of meeting the "environment"? Who has not suddenly at some time grown grave at the thought that the parents' sinful or virtuous habits are inherited by the children, and destined to accumulate from generation to generation while the race endures?—Professor William James.

Herbert Spencer was not the least—perhaps he was the greatest—of that famous Victorian quartet that did more than any other four men of their era to revolutionize the world's thinking with respect to some of its greatest interests. With Darwin, Tyndall, and Huxley, he helped to break down the old conservatism and conceptions of the meaning of life and destiny, establishing new standards and giving new interpretations to old phenomena which have been and still are working their way into general acceptance by their inherent strength and vitality. They have changed the world's idea and the world's attitude toward theology, physical and social science, and the origin and end of man.—Boston Transcript.

FEDERATION MASS MEETING IN TURNER CASE.

A mass meeting has been called by the Federation of Labor next Sunday at 2 p. m. at Handel Hall to protest against the imprisonment on Ellis Island, New York, of John Turner, the English labor leader, who is held charged with being an Anarchist. The speakers are to be Judges Tuley and Dunne, Dr. Emil G. Hirsch, Clarence S. Darrow, Mayor Jones of Toledo, Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell, Thomas I Kidd, and Barney Cohen.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

MOSES HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 300 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Application Filed for Entry at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One copy, one year.....$2.00 One copy, six months.....$1.00
Two copies to one address, one year.. 2.25 Two copies to one address, six mos. 1.15
One copy, three months.....50 cents Single copies.....5 cents

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire notify us if you wish to continue to receive Lucifer.

EASTERN REPRESENTATIVE:
E. C. WALKER, 244 WEST 143D STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Lucifer and its literature can be obtained in San Francisco at the book store of Robert C. Ross, 1203 Market street, opposite City Hall.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

THIRD SERIES. VOLUME VIII. NO. 4.

THE POSTAL DEPARTMEET ORDERS A REHEARING.

Just as the copy for this week's Lucifer is almost ready to send to the printers the following letter is received:

"Chicago, Jan. 23, 1904.

"Publisher Lucifer the Light-Bearer, Chicago, Ill.—Sir:

"I am authorized by the department to accept from you under the provisions of section 441, P. L. & R., an application for the readmission of your publication to the second class of mail matter.

"On filing this application you will bring to this office your mailing list, subscription orders, and other evidence you may have in your possession to sustain your claim to the second class privilege. Respectfully,

"F. E. COYNE, Postmaster."

It is probable that this issue of Lucifer will reach its subscribers without the 1-cent stamp attached as for the last three issues. This will not mean that the right to mail at the second-class rate has been restored to Lucifer, but that, pending examination of evidence, Lucifer will be mailed without stamps by our depositing money to cover postage at the rate of 1 cent a copy should the decision be against us. This presumption is based on our previous experience in applying for the second-class rate. I will immediately furnish the required evidence, and it would seem that there is no reason why Lucifer should not be readmitted.

Dr. Pfeiffer was sent to Washington on behalf of Lucifer's subscribers by the Free Speech League of New York. He said that his representation of the case was favorably received by the officials, and he promised a report of his interview for publication in Lucifer. Unfortunately a cold taken while on the way to Washington developed into a severe case of pneumonia, and not only was he unable to write the report, but his physician forbade him to even talk. He had told Dr. Foote, before becoming unable to speak, that my statement which should have reached Washington on Dec. 12 had arrived a day too late. I had waited as long as possible in order to learn what the rulings in regard to advertising were, and, failing to learn, had mailed my letter on the 10th. On learning this, I sent another statement to the department, and now receive the information that the case is to be reopened. Will perhaps be able to give further information next week.

The hearty thanks of all Lucifer's friends, as well as of its editor, are due to the Free Speech League. And in no way can we show our gratitude more effectively than in becoming members of this league.

LILLIAN HARMAN.

LIMITATIONS OF FREETHOUGHT.

My second lecture course in San Francisco continues to be fairly well attended, notwithstanding the very unfavorable weather of the past two Sundays. On last Sunday the subject was "The Limitations of Freethought." This title was selected partly because of what I considered the failure of the Materialistic Freethinkers of San Francisco to maintain meetings in accord with the logic and traditions of Freethought. The course of lectures given by Mr. Lewis, a young English lecturer, on "Modern Science vs. Theology," also on "Socialism vs. Present Systems of Economics," while very interesting and well reasoned out, did not and do not fulfill the requirements of Freethought, as I understand that term. In part also this theme was chosen because of a criticism made by a prominent Freethinker that in my lecture entitled "Ingersoll on the Sex Question" I had wandered from my subject and had said very little about Ingersoll.

With this preliminary I proceed to quote a few paragraphs from the address of Sunday, Jan. 17:

"We will speak out, we will be heard,
Though all Earth's systems crack.
We will not bate a single word,
Or take a letter back.

"Let liars fear, let cowards shrink,
Let traitors turn away.
Whatever we have dared to think,
That dare we also say."

Thus sings the poet-philosopher Lowell. With all due respect I would amend by saying, "Whatever we have dared to think, that dare we also do!"

Freethought, freedom of thought, involves, includes, demands freedom of expression, whether that expression take the form of spoken words, written or printed words, pictures, images or acts—so long as the words and images are not libelous or slanderous, and so long as the acts are non-invasive and non-suppressive of the equal rights of others.

Spencer's formula, "Each has the right to do as he pleases, so long as he does not invade the equal rights of others," would seem to cover the ethical problem as nearly as words can take the axiomatic form of expression.

If freedom of expression be a necessary part of freedom of thought, then Freethought involves and includes "free platform," free arena, free forum, and hence the lecturer or editor who does not extend the right and privilege of free platform, free criticism—affirmative criticism as well as negative and interrogative—cannot claim to be a logical Freethinker.

Judged by this standard, Robert G. Ingersoll was not a model or ideal Freethinker. His was not a free platform. The meetings I attended at which Ingersoll was the orator were not Freethought meetings. They would more correctly be called anti-theologic meetings, Shakespearean meetings, or something of that sort. As with the average clergyman, it would seem that Ingersoll—or his managers—preferred that nothing be said or done at his meetings that would weaken the impression made on the hearers by himself. There was no chance for comparison of ideas from different minds. For instance, in regard to the right to issue notes of credit on paper, or to coin pieces of metal of uniform weight, shape and fineness to represent value—that is, the right to do as the citizen pleases in the matter of increasing the circulating medium, so long as neither fraud nor compulsion is used—in this regard Robert G. Ingersoll was not a Freethinker. No freedom of action, as the logical sequence of freedom of thought, is permitted by the political party with which the greatest of Agnostic orators was long closely allied. To the close of his life he stood solid with the enemies of freedom and justice, in regard to issue and control of the volume of currency; stood solid with the party of monopoly, the party that advocates and practicalizes privilege for the few and slavery for the many, in one of the ways now most effective in securing such privilege, such slavery. Garfield, himself a member of the same despotic political organization, uttered a great truth when he said, "He who controls the currency of a nation controls the liberties of that nation"—or words to that effect.

FREEDOM OF MONEY—

Ingersoll defended the party that stands most clearly identified with the policy of giving control of the volume of money into the hands of a few men, the banker class, whose interest leads them to limit debt-paying money to an amount less than one-tenth of the debts of the country, so that when a concerted demand for the payment of debts is made the debtor class may be "held up" and robbed by the creditor class; robbed of their accumulations, their houses, lands, goods and chattels—often for a small fraction of their cost value, their real value.

Time was when such robbery was very dangerous business to the robbers, but now it is perfectly safe, even respectable and honorable, thanks to the laws and customs upheld by such Freethinkers as Robert G. Ingersoll and thousands more who are Anarchists and heretics in regard to belief in and obedience to Jehovah, the God of the Jews and Christians, but who are still devout believers in and obedient servants to the God Plutus—the money of privilege, the orthodox god of the orthodox political party, or parties, that now rule and rob this country, this miscalled land of the free, just as similar orthodox parties rule and rob the people of every land now called civilized, through the superstitious belief in the necessity for money of privilege, money of "government."

FREEDOM OF TRADE.

Under scientific Freethought, which includes free, non-invasive action, no man would or could be fined or imprisoned for violation of tariff laws, because there would be no laws to prevent freedom of trade between man and man, between nation and nation. Ingersoll was a champion of the high tariff laws of the Republican party. In his last political campaign for McKinley's election Ingersoll made free use of the old stock arguments in favor of this engine of political and economic despotism and robbery, and therefore in regard to freedom of trade he was not a logical Freethinker.

FREEDOM OF LAND.

In order to be a good champion of Republican politics Ingersoll was necessarily a defender of our present robber land system—a system by which land can be monopolized and held out of use by any man who has money or a legislative "pull"—held out of the reach of millions of homeless people who would gladly draw their sustenance direct from Mother Earth if not practically denied that right by law-protected robbers. Therefore on the subject of man's "inalienable right" to a share of the soil Ingersoll was not a Freethinker, but a defender of one of the worst superstitions that ever cursed mankind—the superstition that land is, or may be, an article of trade, of commerce, allied to the superstition that human bodies are articles of barter, of commerce, of speculative greed, both of which superstitions are traceable to theology.

He who owns the soil, the ground, from which man must draw his sustenance, owns the liberties of his fellow man.

FREEDOM OF THE AFFECTIONS.

While there is little or no evidence that Ingersoll repudiated his anti-Freethought principles in regard to money, land and trade, it is gratifying to know that in his last public address—"What Is Religion?"—his attitude was that of a logical Freethinker in regard to Freedom of the Affections, including Freedom of Motherhood—as when he said:

"Science, the only savior of mankind, must make woman the owner, the mistress of herself—must put it into the power of woman to decide whether she will or will not become a mother."

Does this mean simply, as was contended by a prominent Agnostic of this city not long since, that science must put it into the power of woman to prevent conception whenever she thinks maternity undesirable? That is to say, must woman have a negative choice only in the matter of bringing children into the world?

If so, how much better is this power of choice than that now exercised by the "spinster," or "old maid," of conventional society? Cannot, or should not, the self-owning woman have the right to make a second, a third or fourth choice—any number of choices, in fact—in regard to fatherhood for her prospective children if she finds her first choice unsatisfactory and maternity undesirable with such fatherhood?

What sort of freedom of thought or of action would it be if a woman who had once under compulsion chosen bread as her only food for life should tire of the monotony of bread alone and should desire a change to apples—if then this woman should be told that she need not eat bread if she loathed it, but she must never, never think of eating apples or any other kind of food—what sort of self-ownership would such freedom as this imply?

That Ingersoll did not mean any such negative choice is shown by his next paragraph, wherein he said:

"This is the solution of the whole question [of ethical and economic reform]. This frees woman. The babes that are then born will be welcome. They will be clasped by glad hands to happy breasts. They will fill homes with light and joy."

Would results such as these be possible if only a negative choice—the knowledge of how to prevent conception when once married—should be allowed to woman?

Elsewhere in his writings Ingersoll says, "Woman should have a divorce for the asking"—without being obliged to tell why she wants divorce. In thus saying the great Anarchist in religious matters comes very near taking Anarchistic ground in the realm of the affections also.

It is because I love and honor the memory of Ingersoll for what he did to destroy theologic superstition that I object to the policy of making him a model to be imitated in all respects.

The very worst thing that can happen to any forward movement is the deification or canonization of its leaders.

★ ★ ★

Among the critics who spoke after the close of the lecture were two or three who charged Ingersoll with dishonesty—moral or intellectual, or both. In my reply to these I took the ground that, with his training as a lawyer and politician, it was very hard for Ingersoll to be a consistent or logical Freethinker, but that I refuse to sit in judgment upon his motives. His acts and arguments I may condemn, as I would expect all Freethinkers to do if my record were of like character, but of the motives behind the acts of Ingersoll or any other man I confess my ignorance, and am always in favor of giving the accused the benefit of all possible doubts.

Much of the address was devoted to a consideration and presentation of the life-work and tragical death of that noble martyr, Ida C. Craddock.

The formation of an association to continue the Free Platform meetings in San Francisco is progressing satisfactorily.

Next Sunday will close the lecture course now advertised. Whether any more will be delivered or attempted in this city by myself, is yet to be determined. Having been asked to lecture in Oakland on the work to which Lucifer is mainly devoted I shall probably accept the invitation. Therefore my address for a few weeks longer will be care E. M. Dewey, 1054 (not 1014) East Fourteenth street, Oakland, Cal. M. HARMAN.

A WEE PROTEST.

The following is handed in by my little daughter. The copy for Lucifer is sent down to the linotype office Sunday evening. There being no delivery on Sundays, I send her to the substation for the mail, as important matter frequently comes in late, and this being such a cold day she was moved to make this protest.

L. H.

"Notice.—The subscribers to Lucifer who have any copy to send will please mail it so as to reach here before Sunday, as it is too cold for me to go to the postoffice.

"VIRNA WALKER."

PAINE MEMORIAL BANQUET.

A banquet and celebration will be given under the auspices of the American Secular Union and Freethought Federation on Jan. 29, 1904, at 7:30 p. m., at the Hull House, 335 South Halsted street, in commemoration of the 167th anniversary of Thomas Paine and the 80th anniversary of the birth of Judge C. B. Waite. Tickets may be obtained of E. C. Reichwald, 141 South Water street.

The greatest evil of our times is the prevailing cowardice. We do not dare to assert our opinions, to bring our outward lives into harmony with our inward convictions.—Max Nordau.

VARIOUS VOICES.

We are always glad to receive calls from friends visiting the city. Take the Lake street elevated, stop at Ashland avenue, walk one block east, then one block north. Or take Fulton street electric car west and stop at St. John's place, alighting in front of our house. The Lake street electric and Paulina street cars also pass within a block of our residence.

Clara J. L. Pierce, Brockton, Mass.: The increased price is none too much for Lucifer. I hope always to be a subscriber. Lucifer has done much good in my family and among my friends.

Mrs. S. M. A.: Inclosed find $1, for which please send me Lucifer for another year. I am not able to pay more. If I were, I would gladly do it. My husband would not let me have the dollar if he knew I was going to send it for Lucifer. I am deeply interested in it and will not do without it if I can get it for $1.

G. A. F. de Lespinasse, Orange City, Iowa: Inclosed find $5. This is toward buying stamps to mail Lucifer—passive resistance against the powers that be. If it can't be mailed any other way, put it in an envelope and mail as a letter. If the rest of your subscribers also put their shoulders to the wheel more or less according to ability Lucifer can give its would-be suppressors the "merry ha-ha!"

Oscar Rotter, New York City: I was sorry to learn of Lucifer's latest trouble with our "free government" of our "free American people." The main difficulty is with the people, the "citizens" who neither care for nor want freedom. They have to be shaken up to get them out of their indifference. I am glad to see organized labor gradually become interested in the John Turner affair and the principle involved in it. Inclosed find $2.50 to pay for my arrears and a year's subscription to Lucifer.

H. C. Roberts, Bennington, Kan.: There must be no wavering now on the part of those who stand for the principles for which Lucifer has so long and valiantly contended. Lucifer must continue to appear weekly, no matter at what financial cost to its patrons and subscribers. The interference with the legitimate interests of the common people, while immunity is given to the rich and powerful corporations of the parasitic class, should be a striking object lesson of the intolerance and inefficiency of arbitrary government of man by man.

R. N. Douglass, Postville, Iowa: For the inclosed stamps send me "Who Is the Enemy?" The extra stamps are to pay our Uncle Sam for bringing my Lucifer to me. I am unable to call to mind the article in Lucifer which Uncle Sam objects to, and yet it seems to me that I have read every article in every number. If you have a copy I wish you would mark it and send it to me. If you can't send it by mail, send it by express, and if you are unable to do that I will go down to Chicago and get one.

[We are unable to comply with this request for the reason that we have not been told which is the offending article. The edition was confiscated with no explanation further than that it contained something "unmailable."—L. H.]

E. L. Small, North Truro, Mass.: I have been a subscriber to your interesting little paper ever since the Walker-Harman prosecutions in Valley Falls. But for those prosecutions I should likely never have subscribed for it. The advertisements are the least interesting part of the paper, which I want in order to keep posted as to what is going on in the world of thought. Inclosed find $1 to apply on extra subscription cost. I pay it rather than be deprived of Lucifer, but I do not feel pleasant toward the administration that thus robs me and my friends. I suggest that you insert a request to all friends to write the congressmen from the districts in which they reside protesting against this outrage. Keep the request standing from week to week. "Voting with the postage stamp," the Rural New Yorker calls it.

Daniel Devroey, Green Bay, Wis.: Find inclosed $2 for subscription for another year, and to help it to turn a little more light on the important subjects it deals with. It is to be hoped that the United States officials may profit by this light and that it will enable them to see their way more clearly. It is light that we need, but it seems that the officials do not want us to have it. The late Pope Leo said a little over a year ago in his encyclical letter that Socialism was a bad thing, as it made people too smart; and so they think such papers as Lucifer give too much light and should be suppressed. Twice in the past have I signed protests against the imprisonment of Moses Harman—when he was incarcerated in Kansas, not because he was a bad man, but because he published a paper that helped people to see more clearly. The more enlightened we become the earlier present evil conditions will come to an end.

W. P. Ward, Erick, Okla.: It is too bad that the people who support the postal system are denied the right to receive a paper that they want without paying excessive postage. I have always voted and worked with the Republican party, but with these repeated wrongs such as inflicted upon your worthy paper I believe I shall be driven from its ranks. Herewith find $2 renewal of my subscription to Lucifer.

MARRIAGE LAWS AND CRIME.

Marriage and divorce laws are receiving considerable attention, now, in this nation. There is just cause why all frills should be removed from marriage laws. Hill-El, the leading teacher in the age that produced some of the original writers for the New Testament, held liberal ideas about divorce. If you will read the Lord's Prayer and apply it to other parts of the New Testament you will find that the model, for a Jesus Christ taught there should be no marriage nor giving in marriage on earth.

Marriage laws cause crimes. Hill-El said a just cause for a man to divorce his wife was established if she did not cook his meat properly. Moses also made a law that made it quite easy for a man to divorce himself from his wife. Numerous causes are given now by the seekers for divorces, among which have appeared: "Abused his wife's pies"; "Wedded life is too dull—A 19-year-old bride wearies of peaceful domestic life"; "Helps wife wed another—An ex-husband is best man when wife marries another man"; "Goes home to mother too often, cause of a plea for divorce"; "She loved man her husband shot to death," etc.

Turn to the cry of distress among some who want to meddle with other people's business, but which is none of their business—e. g., wives murdered, husbands killed by wives. Much better would be the results if divorces were as easy for both sexes (if marriage laws are to be) as made by Moses for men, according to the Bible.

I hope this subject may not be allowed to rest at present, because horrible crimes are caused by the marriage laws and lack of equal and just divorce laws in all states.

AUBIN F. HILL.

SPENCER'S SENSE OF THE INCONGRUOUS.

Herbert Spencer's sense of humor was imperfectly developed, but he had a keen eye for the "incongruous." Speaking of war as it is conducted, though not with reference to benevolent assimilation, he said: "A people which gives to its soldiers the euphemistic title of 'defenders of their country,' and then exclusively uses them as invaders of other countries—a people . . . that within its bounds forbids prize fights, but beyond its bounds frequently takes scores of lives to avenge one life—a people which at home cannot tolerate the thought that inferiority shall bear the self-inflicted evils of inferiority, but abroad has no compunction in using bullet and bayonet for the conquest of the uncivilized, arguing that the inferior should be replaced by the superior—such a people must think crooked about the ultimate principles of right and wrong."

If any part of Mr. Spencer's estate were situated in this country, there is one of his executors who could not come here to settle it. The executor is the Hon. Auberon Herbert, the Anarchist whom Huxley, in his essay on "Government," acknowledged by name as his friend. Mr. Spencer probably did not see the humor, and possibly missed the "incongruity," of appointing as his executor a man who cannot enter the country where his writings were first welcomed. And here arises a question.

If men not well disposed toward organized government are to be pushed back into the sea when they touch our shores, why should the writings of such men be admitted to the country and distributed by the government through the mails? For, after all, it is not the men who are regarded as dangerous, but their ideas. I suppose the secretary of labor and commerce has given some thought to the difficulties he would meet in detaining an idea at Ellis Island, and deporting the same on the vessel that brought it over.—G. E. M. in Truth Seeker.

MARRIED IN PIQUE, BUT ESCAPED.

In the Supreme Court of New York the other day an interlocutory decree of marriage annulment was granted nullifying the marriage of Herbert P. Ingalls and Mina Dalton. It is said by lawyers that this decree is unique in that the ground on which it is granted is that Miss Dalton became Mr. Ingalls' wife out of pique and without the slightest intention of bestowing upon him more than a platonic friendship.

It appears that Mr. Ingalls and Miss Dalton met in the winter of 1900 and the former became fascinated. He sued for Miss Dalton's hand, but she refused him courteously but firmly. As the repulsed suitor left her presence he said: "You don't think you love me now, but search your heart carefully. My proposal holds good. If you ever change your mind about it just send for me." A year passed without a word. Then, one day, the telephone bell rung in Mr. Ingalls' office. It was Miss Dalton. "I've changed my mind," she said, "come to me at once." Ingalls got in a cab and started for Miss Dalton's home. Her welcome was cordial, but her manner constrained. "I will now marry you if you still wish it," she said, "but I cannot give you my love. You understand?"

He said he did, but he evidently did not. In the same cab in which he came they were driven to a near-by church and the ceremony was performed. But the chilliness of his bride became uncomfortable and after thirty-six days of it he kicked over the traces, called a family council and demanded an explanation.

"You shall have it," said the bride. "I married this man out of pique. I love another. We quarreled and I in anger allowed this man Ingalls to marry me. But I told him I could not love him. He should have known what that meant. He said he understood."

The disgusted bridegroom moved that night, and his wife went on the stage. Finally she again met the man—H. W. Mercer—a quarrel with whom had been responsible for her pique and her marriage. Hence the suit for divorce, followed speedily by the announcement of the engagement.

If flighty girls are to be allowed to make ducks and drakes of the marriage laws in this fashion, how can we expect them to be respected?—Editorial in Boston Traveller, Jan. 19.

"WHO IS THE ENEMY?"

Hugh O. Pentecost writes thus to Edwin C. Walker about the latter's new work, "Who Is the Enemy: Anthony Comstock or You?" "Your pamphlet is a strong discussion of the question at issue that one could give to a conservative friend with some hope that he might read it through."

Dr. H. W. Shufeldt, biologist, author of several scientific works and of more than seven hundred articles on medicine, travel, science, sexual problems and other subjects, writes to E. C. Walker: "I thank you very much indeed for the copy you sent me of your valuable pamphlet, 'Who Is the Enemy: Anthony Comstock or You?' I have read it from cover to cover with the utmost satisfaction and unqualified approval. It is one of the best and strongest things you have put out, and I am with you solid in both the letter and spirit of it. I prize the copy most highly." Ask for table of contents and specimen pages of "Who Is the Enemy?" or send 20 cents to this office for the pamphlet.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

TRUE MANHOOD.

AN INVALUABLE GUIDE TO HEALTH, STRENGTH AND PURITY.

BY E. B. SHEPHERD.

WHAT EVERY FATHER WANTS HIS BOY TO KNOW.

The Christian Endeavor World: "Its suggestions are wise and ennobling." Dr. Stockham, author of Tokology, says: "TRUE MANHOOD explains the transition from boyhood to manhood, giving knowledge of priceless value." Levant cloth, 328 pages. Prepaid $1. STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

JUST OUT.

PARENTHOOD.

By Alice B. Stockham, M. D., author of "Tokology" and "Karezza." Highest ideals for best offspring. Vital and important subjects discussed. Including new philosophy of the Creative Energy. G. G. Hunt says: "Many sections of PARENTHOOD should be graven in gold and handed down to posterity." Prepaid, 25c.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

SONGS OF A CHILD,
AND OTHER POEMS.

By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. Price $1.50; postage 12c.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

1903.A.; OR, THE DISINHERITED.

A drama in six acts. By Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1; postage 7c.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

KAREZZA.

SCIENCE OF MARRIAGE.

A godsend to every wife—a joy to every husband.
This work brings peace into homes disrupted by inharmony in the sexual relation. Dr. A. B. Stockham advises a practice which leads to individual liberty and to deeper love between husband and wife.
Dr. F. G. Welch: "After a personal trial of its teachings, I want to thank you for a great service to humanity."
Rev. George R. Stanbaw: "Out of a beautiful and ennobling experience, I can say, I KNOW."
Gives a high ideal of the marital relation and teaches control of the Procreating Power.
J. A. Smalley, M. D.: "I have received more actual benefit from the practice of KAREZZA teachings than from all other books on Sexual Science."
A. B. Franklin, M. D.: "KAREZZA does more than any other single thing to make marriage a perpetual courtship."
LEVANT CLOTH, POSTPAID, $1.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MEN, WOMEN, AND CHANCE.

BY WILLIAM PLATT.

Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. Price 75c.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

WOMAN AND HER RELATION TO THE CHURCH, OR CANON LAW FOR WOMEN.

BY HARRIET M. CLOSE.

A succinct statement of the position to which women were doomed by the Church Fathers and authorities. Every woman should possess a copy. Price, 10c.
M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; OR THE PRICE OF VIRTUE.

By Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood, by Lucinda B. Chandler; Life's Gifts, by Olive Schreiner, and Marriage—What It Was and Is, and Will the Coming Woman Marry? Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SEND 10c IN STAMPS FOR THREE NUMBERS, OR 50c FOR TWELVE MONTHS' SUBSCRIPTION TO

HUMAN NATURE.

It is a monthly magazine, now in the fifteenth year of publication. It is Unique, Eclectic and Scientific. It treats of Physiology, Psychology, Health, Sociology and all subjects which pertain to the welfare of humanity.
The character of men and animals is in accordance with their physical organization. This is determined by size of body and brain, shape of head, texture, temperament and facial expression.
HUMAN NATURE illustrates these principles by picture and pen, and teaches its readers how to read character, its ethics are ennobling; its style, while strong, is sprightly, and its literary standard high. You need HUMAN NATURE. Address

PROFESSOR ALLEN HADDOCK,
PHRENOLOGIST,
1020 MARKET ST., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

A BARGAIN.

FOR SALE—The Brodhead Windmill plant, at Brodhead, Wis., is for sale cheap. It consists of a well-equipped foundry, machine shop and wood shop. The cause is poor health, old age, and inability to run it. It is located in as fine a country as can be found west of the lakes. It fell into my hands through a bankruptcy sale, and therefore I can sell for less than the tools cost. Inquire of
S. O. BISHOP, Brodhead, Wis.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 63, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We cannot sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Comstocks. Two styles, 30c each, two for 50c. Address EDWIN C. WALKER, 244 W. 143d St., New York, N. Y.

WANTED—100 women to study medicine or midwifery. Next term begins January 1, 1904. College of Medicine and Surgery, 245 Ashland Blvd., Chicago, Ill. DR. FLORENCE DRESSLER, Secretary. (Dept. A.)

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

THE LIBERAL MAIL-ORDER JEWELER.

Now permanent at No. 110 N. Kensington Ave., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 20 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's Line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Thelem in the Crucible," free.

J. H. GREER, M. D.,
52 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.
Office Hours—9 a. m. to 6 p. m.; Wednesdays and Saturdays, 9 a. m. to 3 p. m.; Sundays, 9 a. m. to 12 m.
Telephone, Randolph 42.

DR. OGILVIE A. RICE,
DENTIST.
1356 MILWAUKEE AVE., COR. WESTERN, CHICAGO.
Telephone West 141.

PHILIP G. PEABODY,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
13 COURT SQUARE, ROOM 61.
BOSTON, MASS.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD OWN

TOKOLOGY.

A COMPLETE HEALTH GUIDE.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

Teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions.

Treats of diseases of women and children; contains practical teachings on Change of Life, Suckling offspring, etc.

Lizzie N. Armstrong writes: "If I knew I were to be the mother of innumerable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of Tokology."

Dr. C. B. Wills: "Tokology is doing more for women than all other books put together."

CLOTH, PREPAID, $2.25; LEATHER, $2.75.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES.

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

Contents—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only"; Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spelling of the Heathen"; What Are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women. With Appendix: The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 15c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

A treatise on Sexual Science and Marriage, rich in thought and strong in expression. Emphatically a book for the thinker.

Carpenter holds that women's freedom is based upon economics; she must be independent financially that she may not be forced to sell herself in or out of marriage. He also makes a strong plea for a motherhood of freedom and thoughtful preparation.

AMERICAN EDITION, CLOTH, PREPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM.

THE RELATIONSHIP OF EACH TO HUMAN LIBERTY.

BY E. C. WALKER.

The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organization and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. Price 5c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

CREATIVE LIFE.

A BOOK FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

A timely and important message not found in text books. Every girl seeks and should have this true, plain and practical knowledge. One writes: "Thank you, thank you, dear Doctor, for the plain but beautiful thoughts. Womanhood, motherhood and life have new meanings. You ennoble your theme." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

A NOVEL BY GEORGE N. MILLER.

FORTIETH THOUSAND.

"The Strike of a Sex" is a fascinating novel bearing upon the sexual relations. It is a bold protest against the customary life of most married people, and at the same time a prophecy of happier conditions between man and wife. Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW.

A PRIMER OF SEXUAL RATIONALISM.

BY E. C. WALKER.

"Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes."

Paper covers; 42 large pages. Price 10c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

"PERSONAL EXPERIENCES OF TWO AMERICAN ANTI-VIVISECTIONISTS IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES."

BY PHILIP G. PEABODY.

With an Appendix by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c. Apply to PHILIP G. PEABODY, 15 Court Square, Boston, Mass.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY.

By Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition, by E. C. Walker; Motherhood in Freedom, by Moses Harman; The Greatest Sin (an allegory), by R. B. Kerr, and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom, by Oscar Rotter. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN.

By R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? by R. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.; The New Martyrdom, by Lillian Harman, and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE.

By R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese, by C. W. Coolridge; A Traveler's Tale, by R. B. Kerr; The Cat's Story, by Emile Zola. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

1005

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

HILDA'S HOME.

A STORY OF WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

With Marse Ray, Rosa Graul would say: "The cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty." Hence she has no fears that under Freedom the Home and the Family would cease to exist, or that woman would be less loving and lovable, or that man would be less manly and honorable. On the contrary, she maintains that only in the soil and atmosphere of freedom is it possible for true womanhood and manhood to live and flourish.

426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

One of the best short works on the subject. A charming little gift book.

"Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it."

DAINTILY PRINTED. PREPAID, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES.

BY E. C. WALKER.

Contents—Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What Is She? What Will She Do? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections Upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love and Life." Price 15c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD.

AN OUTLINE OF PRACTICAL CO-OPERATIVE INDIVIDUALISM.

BY HENRY OLERICH.

Regarded by many persons as a more interesting and consistent economic reform novel than Bellamy's "Looking Backward."

Bound in red silk with gold title. Nearly 450 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, $1.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

BY JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents—Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff or Protection; War Punishments; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

519 pages. Cloth binding somewhat damaged, and reduced from $1.50 to 50c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY, AND THE STATE.

BY FREDERICK ENGELS.

Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans.

217 pages; bound in cloth. Price 60c; postage 5c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STORY OF IJAIN;

OR, THE EVOLUTION OF A MIND.

By Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Stuart Rose), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. Price $1; postage 8c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE CURSE OF MATERNITY.

From the French of Henry Ferre. Together with How to Escape the Curse, by Jonathan Mayo Crane; Woman's "Duty" to Bear Children, by E. C. Walker; True and False Morality, by C. L. James; and Love's Law, by William Francis Barnard. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE.

By John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention, by Mariette; Reminiscences of Berlin Heights, by A. Warren, and The Sexes and Love in Freedom, by Oscar Rotter. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN.

By Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Xclept Society, by Moses Hull; Virgin Soil, by George Egerton, and Normal Sexual Action, by Ernest Winse. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A Discussion of Freethought and Free Love. By Orford Northcote. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. By M. Harman. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Moral. By A. F. Tindall. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM, by E. C. Walker. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE COMING WOMAN, by Lillie D. White. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

PRICE 5 CENTS. CHICAGO, ILL., FEB. 4, E. M. 264. [C. E. 1904.] WHOLE NO. 1006

ASSARKHADON, KING OF ASSYRIA.

The Assyrian King Assarkhadon conquered the kingdom of King Lailie, destroyed and burned all the towns, took all the inhabitants captive to his own country, slaughtered the warriors and kept King Lailie himself in a cage.

Lying on his bed at night King Assarkhadon thought how best to execute Lailie, when suddenly he heard a rustling near his bed, and, opening his eyes, saw an old man with a long gray beard and mild eyes.

"You wish to execute Lailie?" asked the old man.

"Yes," said the King. "But I cannot decide how to execute him."

"But Lailie is yourself," said the old man.

"That's not true," replied the King. "I am I, and Lailie is Lailie."

"You and Lailie are one," said the old man. "It only seems to you that you are not Lailie, and that Lailie is not you."

"What do you mean by 'it only seems'?" said the King. "Here am I, lying on a soft bed; around me are obedient men-slaves and women-slaves, and to-morrow I shall feast with my friends as I did to-day, while Lailie will sit like a bird in a cage, and to-morrow he will be impaled, and, with his tongue hanging out, will wriggle till he dies, and his body will be torn in pieces by dogs."

"You cannot destroy his life," said the old man.

"And how about the 14,000 warriors I have killed, and with whose bodies I built a mound?" said the King. "I am alive, but they no longer exist; that shows that I can destroy life."

"How do you know they no longer exist?"

"Because I do not see them. And the chief thing is that they were tormented, but I was not. It was bad for them, but well for me."

"That, also, only seems so to you. You tortured yourself, but not them."

"I do not understand," said the King.

"Do you wish to understand?"

"Yes, I wish to."

"Then come here," said the old man, pointing to a large font full of water.

The King rose and approached the font.

"Strip and enter the font."

Assarkhadon did as the old man bade him.

"Now, as soon as I begin to pour this water over you," said the old man, scooping up water into a jug, "dip your head under water."

The old man tilted the jug over the King's head, and the King dipped his head under water.

And as soon as King Assarkhadon dipped under water he felt that he was no longer Assarkhadon, but some one else. And, feeling himself to be that other man, he saw himself lying on a rich bed, beside a handsome woman. He had never seen her before, but he knew she was his wife. The woman lifted herself and said to him:

"Dear husband Lailie, you were tired by yesterday's work and have slept longer than usual, and I have guarded your rest, and have not roused you. But now the princes await you in the great hall. Dress and go out to them."

And Assarkhadon, understanding from these words that he is Lailie, and not feeling at all surprised at this, but only wondering that he did not know it before, rises, dresses and goes into the great hall, where the princes await him.

The princes greet their King Lailie, bowing to the ground, and then they rise, and, at his word, sit down before him, and the eldest of the princes begins to speak and says that it is impossible to endure all the insults of the wicked King Assarkhadon, and that it is necessary to make war on him. But Lailie disagrees with him, and gives orders that envoys shall be sent to Assarkhadon to remonstrate with him, and he dismisses the princes from the audience. Afterward he appoints men of note to act as ambassadors and impresses on them what they are to say to King Assarkhadon.

Having finished this business, Assarkhadon, feeling that he is Lailie, rides out to hunt wild asses. The hunt is successful. He kills two wild asses himself, and, having returned home, feasts with his friends and watches a dance of slave girls. The next day he goes into the courtyard, where he is awaited by petitioners, suitors and prisoners brought for trial, and there he decides the cases submitted to him. Having finished this business, he again rides out for his favorite amusement—hunting. And again he is successful, this time personally killing an old lioness and taking her two cubs. After the hunt he again feasts with his friends and is entertained with music and dances, and the night he spends with the wife he loves.

So he lives for days and weeks, awaiting the return of the ambassadors he had sent to that King Assarkhadon, who used to be himself. The ambassadors only returned after a month had passed, and they return with their noses and ears cut off.

King Assarkhadon had ordered them to tell Lailie that what had been done to them—his ambassadors—would be done to himself also, unless he immediately sent a certain tribute of silver, gold and cypress wood, and unless he came himself to make obeisance to him.

Lailie, formerly Assarkhadon, again assembles the princes and consults them as to what he should do. They all, with one accord, say that it is necessary to make war against Assarkhadon, without waiting for him to attack them. The King agrees, and, taking his place at the head of the army, he starts on the campaign. The campaign lasts seven days. Each day the King rides around the army and rouses the courage of his warriors.

On the eighth day his army meets Assarkhadon's army in a broad valley by the side of a river. Lailie's army fights bravely, but Lailie, formerly Assarkhadon, sees that the enemy swarm down from the mountains like ants, overrunning the valley and overwhelming his army; and, in his chariot, he flings himself into the midst of the battle, hewing and felling the enemy. But the warriors of Lailie are but as hundreds, while those of Assarkhadon are as thousands; and Lailie feels that he is wounded and that they have taken him prisoner.

Nine days he, with other captives, travels, bound and guarded by the warriors of Assarkhadon. On the tenth day he is brought to Nineveh and placed in a cage. Lailie suffers less from hunger and from his wound than from shame and impotent anger. He feels that he is unable to avenge himself on his enemy for all that he suffers. The one thing he can do is not to give his enemies the pleasure of seeing his sufferings; and he firmly resolves to endure courageously, without a murmur, all they can do to him.

For twenty days he sits in his cage awaiting execution. He sees his relations and friends led to execution. He hears the groans of those who are executed. Some have their hands and feet cut off, others are flayed alive, but he shows neither disquietude nor pity nor fear. He sees the wife he loved bound and led away by the eunuchs. He knows she is being taken as a slave to Assarkhadon. And he bears that, too, without a murmur.

But now two executioners open his cage door, and, having strapped his arms tight behind him, they led him to the place of execution, which is soaked with blood. Lailie sees a sharp stake, dripping with blood, from which the corpse of one of his friends has just been wrenched, and he understands that this has been done that the stake may serve for his own execution. Lailie is stripped of his clothes. He is startled at the leanness of his once strong, handsome body. The two executioners seize that body by its lean thighs; they lift him up and are about to let him fall upon the stake.

"This is death, destruction," thinks Lailie, and, forgetful of his decision to remain bravely calm to the end, he sobs and prays for mercy. But no one listens to him.

"But this cannot be," thinks he. "Surely I am asleep. It is a dream." And he makes an effort to rouse himself. "Surely I am not Lailie, but Assarkhadon."

"You are both Lailie and Assarkhadon," declares a voice, and he feels that his execution has begun. He cries out, and at the same moment lifts his head out of the font. . . . The old man stands over him, pouring on to his head the last drops from the jug.

"Oh, how terribly have I suffered! And for how long!" said Assarkhadon.

"Long!" replied the old man. "You have only dipped your head under water and lifted it again. See, the water is not yet all out of the jug. Have you now understood?"

Assarkhadon did not reply, but only looked at the old man with terror.

"Have you now understood," continued the old man, "that Lailie is you, and the warriors you put to death were you also? And not the warriors only, but the animals you slew when hunting and ate at your feasts were also you. You think life dwells in you alone, but I have drawn aside the veil of the delusion, and have let you see that by doing evil to others you have done it to yourself also. Life is one in them all, and you have in yourself but a portion of this common life. And only in that one part of life that is in you can you make life better or worse, can you increase or decrease it. You can only improve life in yourself by destroying the barriers that divide your life from that of others, and by considering others as yourself—and loving them. To destroy the life that dwells in others is not in your power. The life of those you have slain has vanished from your eyes, but it is not destroyed. You thought to lengthen your own life and to shorten theirs, but you cannot do this. Life knows neither time nor space. The life of a moment and the life of a thousand years, your life and the life of all the visible and invisible beings in the world are equal. To destroy life, or to alter it, is impossible, for life is the one thing that exists. All else but seems to us to be."

Having said this, the old man vanished.

Next morning King Assarkhadon gave orders that Lailie and all the prisoners should be set at liberty and that the executions should cease.

On the third day he called his son Assurbanipal and gave the kingdom over into his hands, and he himself first went into the desert to think over what he had learned. Afterward he began to go about as a wanderer through the towns and villages, preaching to the people that all life is one, and that men only harm themselves when they wish to do evil to others.—Leo Tolstoi.

"Why do married people live longer than unmarried people?" "They don't—it only seems longer."

"WHO IS THE ENEMY?"

Hugh O. Pentecost writes thus to Edwin C. Walker about the latter's new work, "Who Is the Enemy: Anthony Comstock or You?" "Your pamphlet is a strong discussion of the question at issue that one could give to a conservative friend with some hope that he might read it through."

Dr. R. W. Shufeldt, biologist, author of several scientific works and of more than seven hundred articles on medicine, travel, science, sexual problems and other subjects, writes to E. C. Walker: "I thank you very much indeed for the copy you sent me of your valuable pamphlet, 'Who Is the Enemy: Anthony Comstock or You?' I have read it from cover to cover with the utmost satisfaction and unqualified approval. It is one of the best and strongest things you have put out, and I am with you solid in both the letter and spirit of it. I prize the copy most highly." Ask for table of contents and specimen pages of "Who Is the Enemy?" or send 20 cents to this office for the pamphlet.

A STORY WITH A SANE MORAL.

Current fiction seldom contains a moral worth the effort expended in drawing it. Conventional writers have not emancipated themselves from the general principle that the boy who goes fishing or in swimming on Sunday, or on any day without the approval of his parents, will defraud the electric chair by dying a watery death. And if children must honor their parents that their days may be long in the land, grown-ups are equally bound to knuckle under to their neigbbors if they would get the best results. Nonconformity is penalized by all but the best authors; the mediocre ones cannot afford to be unorthodox. I read a story by Mary Hallock Foote about a young man and woman who lived in the mountains somewhere near Wardner or Hope, Idaho, without being married to each other in the customary manner. And what happened? A landslide covered them up. Nature felt the shock again, as she did, if Milton tells the truth, when Adam and Eve fell from grace some years previously, and groaned throughout her works. It always happens that way—in fiction. Some radical writers, Grant Allen for instance, are so influenced by their "inner heritage" that they must bring their rebels against custom to some deplorable end. If the contempt and disgust of rational beings could strangle these libelers of nature, they would write but one story each of that kind.

In a late number of Harper's Magazine is a pleasing narrative by Margaret Deland that furnishes a remarkably gratifying variation from the stereotyped moral. You might say that the moral of it is deliberately evaded by the author. The story tells about a war widow, who lived by herself in a rural community, drawing her rations from a little land and a cow and some hens, and a pension of $36 quarterly from the government. Without the pension she would be unable to purchase anything. There comes back to town a poor, harmless, male individual, of good family, a visionary, impracticable man, who thinks he is an inventor, but is in error regarding that matter. He had gone away to make his fortune, but returns so poor that the townspeople propose sending him to the almshouse. The man cannot bear the thought of this, first, because of the humiliation, and second, because he wants to perfect an invention he has partly worked out. His eyes are failing and blindness is not far off. The widow contemplates giving him a room in her house and broaches the subject to a neighbor. The neighbor is thrilled by the immorality of the proposition, and makes the widow see how bad the thing would look. Then the widow, resolved to have her way and also circumvent the gossips, goes and tells the man she will marry him, an arrangement that would solve all his problems and bring him perfect joy. But before they take the fatal step the woman learns that by marrying she forfeits her pension, without which both would have to go over the hill.

The reader will see that the situation here becomes strenuous. If she broke her promise of marriage, the man would be plunged in deepest woe; she had not the heart to do that. If she married him she would lose her income and be unable to feed him; and if she took him without marrying him her reputation would be gone. It is easy to see how Mrs. Deland would solve the problem if she were a conventional fictionist. She would marry the couple and send them to the poorhouse in the same box wagon. But that does not happen in this instance. The widow executed a little thinking, and, having reached a determination, she takes her man by the hand, and, past the grinning Reubens at the village tavern and past the whispering gossips of a sex similar to her own, she brings him straight to her house and pushes him in. The result of her thinking had been that neither her own reputation nor the good opinion of the people of Jonesville was worth one hundred and forty-four dollars per annum. Such is the glorious ending of the story. There was never anything like it in fact or fiction. It is inspiration.—G. E. M., in Truth Seeker.

MAKE 'EM TO ORDER.

An Austrian scientist has discovered that fair-haired women contract the happiest marriages, because blondes make more submissive wives than brunettes. Note the quiet assumption that the undisputed dominance of the male is the sheet anchor of successful matrimony. All the same it is a great discovery. Blondes make the best wives, and blondes nowadays may be chemically manufactured, therefore nuptial happiness is within the reach of all. Hail peroxide! the elixir of life!—The Worker (Brisbane, Australia).

THE DOCTRINE OF EVOLUTION.

From a sermon by the Rev. Newton Mann on "Causes of Modern Transformation of Religious Thought."

The one philosophical theory which has struck most directly at the root of the traditional theology is that of evolution. As a speculative hypothesis it has been set forth in one form and another from ancient times; in Christendom always stigmatized as atheism, and in times of persecution punishable as damnable heresy. Among the first to find from observation evidences to support such a theory and make it something more than an hypothesis, was the great Descartes; but he lived in the seventeenth century, and wrote in the time of Galileo, when it was all one's life was worth to breathe such a thought, and he was not a man to expose himself to martyrdom. So he covered his exposition of the dangerous doctrine by a pretended declaration of his belief that Adam and Eve and the progenitors of all other species of living things that now exist, together with the earth and the heavens, were made out of hand in one memorable week, as the Church had always taught. Having said this much to satisfy the priests, he cautiously outlined his conception of how the world might have been brought to its present shape, together with all that exists, by a process of evolution out of primitively diffuse and relatively formless matter. There can be no doubt of what was his real belief. His contemporary, Spinoza, who knew well what it was to suffer for the truth, but who never could be turned from the utterance of his honest convictions, had the same fore-gleams of the coming revelation, which he unhesitatingly declared.

But the new truth was not to be fully evolved out of the consciousness of even the greatest genius; nor compassed by the knowledge of the seventeenth century; it needed the confirmation of biological science, and it took biology yet a hundred and fifty years to get sufficiently on its feet to consummate the task. In fact the word "biology" was not invented till the beginning of the nineteenth century, when two Frenchmen, Lamarck and Treviranus, separately and independently hit upon it and brought it into use. At the same time they each propounded for the first the main thesis of the doctrine of evolution. Even then, so subversive the doctrine was of preconceived opinions, so radical and far-reaching, that to men of science it seemed visionary, as to churchmen it was ungodly. For a half-century again it slept, only revived now and then by the voice of some lone champion whose ineffective word but served to mark the stages of a dream. All at once toward the end of the fifties the great awakening came. In 1857 appeared Herbert Spencer's "Progress; Its Laws and Cause," in which he gave a philosophical statement of evolution and made it the basis of his thought. In 1859 Darwin published "The Origin of Species," the first great book of biological evidences for a theory which in one form and another had been floating in the brains of philosophers from time immemorial. It was the most effective book of science ever published. Issued in no haste, the careful, conscientious results of years of observation and study made in many lands and on many seas, it was such a mass of testimony as no rational mind could resist. No doubt was left that in the vegetal and the animal world new species arise through the gradual modification of existing species, according to laws some of which we can trace. Other works followed from the same indefatigable hand, the result of kindred investigations, till, in "The Descent of Man," we have the highest terrestrial creature linked with other life in orderly succession from the simplest thing that lives. Other keen observers joined in the work,—Haeckel in Germany; Wallace, Huxley, in England; Marsh in America,—and, speedily, concurring evidence from every field of inquiry piled up in overwhelming measure. On this secure basis arose a new philosophy, synthetic, cosmic, worked out into a vast generalization, covering the whole process from the formation of worlds out of the primordial nebula down through the measureless geological cycles, the simple ever giving place to the complex, life proceeding, when it has arrived, from humblest forms up through the long spiral of existence to organisms marvelous in construction in which life sublimes into self-consciousness, becomes a living soul. It made evolution the method by which all things in the heavens and on the earth have come to be what they are, and pass to what they shall be. "The stars that blossom in the fields of night" have their season of growth, of glory and of decay, as have the flowers in our gardens; and man, who gazes on those far-shining orbs, computes their distance, weighs and measures them,—he, too, has grown from something that was not man. This creature, intelligent, social, sympathetic, has been evolved from creatures which were nothing of the kind. Of the later part of this process history and archeology are the record, and clearly indicate a passage by irregular and intermittent steps from stage to stage, from a predatory into a rude social state, and so by degrees in the course of ages to civilization and refinement. All this Spencer expounds in his system of philosophy, which for clearness of statement, profundity and breadth of view, must, I think, be ranked among the greatest of the works of men. Fechner and Mill, whose thinking had run along other lines, with an open-mindedness and a frankness most creditable to them, gave in their adhesion to the new thought, and with notable rapidity it came into acceptance with the best minds on both continents. With his love of things definite and comprehensible, Spencer made application of the theory of development mainly in the realms of biology and sociology, where he escaped metaphysical speculation and came down to the solid ground of fact.

From these sure bases the new thought pushed itself everywhere, and shortly the sciences one and all were found to be charged with it, paleontology especially yielding the most confirmatory illustrations of evolution in actual course of progress. For example, Marsh found in Wyoming and elsewhere fossil remains showing in a regular series, spaced by long ages, the ancestry of the modern horse, beginning with an insignificant creature called the Eohippus, about the size of a rabbit, with parting toes, on the point of one of which on each foot the animal supported itself. This first horse, first so far as traced, is found in deposits of what is known to geologists as Eocene Tertiary. In a later division of the Eocene it becomes the Orohippus, about as large as a fox. In the Miocene the animal is further modified, and has become as large as a sheep. Growth and modification of the skeleton, especially the bones of the feet, continue through the Pliocene, the Quaternary and the Recent periods, eventuating in the horse as we know it. An evolution as striking may be traced through fossil forms of many other orders of life.

The nebular hypothesis of the formation of suns and worlds is one of the early evolutionary conceptions, having been first thought out by the immortal Kant. His "General History and Theory of the Heavens," in which he developed that now accepted hypothesis, was published anonymously in 1755. So little interest was excited by this announcement of the most prodigious conception in physical things that ever had entered the mind of man that the fact of Kant's authorship of it has been largely overlooked, the credit going to La Place, who forty years later brought his immensely greater mathematical knowledge to bear on the subject. But even as set forth by La Place it rested mostly inert till, in 1862, Herbert Spencer incorporated it into his system of evolutionary philosophy, of which, indeed, it is the most magnificent illustration. By this hypothesis and its implications the development of the universe involves all space and all time, infinite extension and infinite duration, a beginningless, endless process, in its entirety utterly beyond comprehension. What we can survey in space is but a sample, a fragment—what we can in a manner trace in time, even in geological or astronomical ages, is but a moment, of that illimitable thing and process which we call creation.

The theory of evolution, of course, controverts the cosmological theory presupposed in the Bible, and substantially adhered to in the Church and out of it down to modern times. Descartes dared to set it forth only as an hypothesis, protecting himself by hypocritically disavowing belief in it. When the rise of rationalism stayed the fury of persecution, and men could speak their honest thought without fear of the stake, the teachers of evolution were still generally considered presumptuous heretics audaciously seeking to drive God out of his universe. Finding out in some little measure how things are made was supposed to eliminate the Maker! It was dangerous, therefore, to pursue these studies. The Church set herself tooth and nail against the new learning; Science was a suspect, and got into the schools only under restrictions. Thus the doctrine of evolution was kept from currency for two hundred years after Descartes in a manner promulgated it.—Unity (Chicago).

Thou wilt rue a thousand speeches, and but one silence.—Elizabeth Gibson.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

MOSES HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Application Filed for Entry at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One copy, one year	$2.00	One copy, six months	$1.00
Two copies to one address, one year	2.25	Two copies to one address, six mos.	1.15
One copy, three months	.50 cents	Single copies	.5 cents

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire notify us if you wish to continue to receive Lucifer.

EASTERN REPRESENTATIVE:
E. C. WALKER, 244 WEST 143D STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

THIRD SERIES. VOLUME VIII. NO. 5.

A MEETING OF PROTEST.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 26.

After consultation with friends, late in the week, it was decided to change the program for the last lecture advertised as a Freethought course at Pythian Castle, this city. Instead of "A Review of the Two Lecture Courses" it was thought best to organize a meeting of "protest" against the arbitrary and despotic use—or rather abuse—of power by the postoffice department at Washington.

Notwithstanding shortness of notice and lack of advertising, the meeting was a gratifying success, the hall being well filled with women and men who by their earnest words and cheers of sympathy showed that they recognized the necessity of standing together and demanding—not "petitioning"—that these abuses of power should cease, and that a return be made to the principles of liberty and equity voiced by the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States—namely, that "Congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of speech or of press, nor preventing the free exercise thereof."

The chairman of the occasion was Brother T. C. Deuel of Fullerton, Cal., well known to many of our readers, especially to our Kansas readers. Brother and Sister Deuel were on a visit to friends in Oakland and came over the bay to attend our meeting.

The first speaker, after the opening address by myself—in which opening I gave a brief account of my own experience with the American Inquisition in Kansas, also of the prosecutions against Mrs. Craddock, Ezra H. Heywood and D. M. Bennett—the first speaker was Dr. Wetzel, now of San Francisco, but, like Brother Deuel, "formerly of Kansas." When Daughter Lillian and E. C. Walker were incarcerated at Oskaloosa, in that state, for alleged violation of its marriage laws, Dr. Wetzel took considerable interest in their case, and now recalls having received a letter from Mr. Walker dated "County Jail, Cell No. 2," sometime in the winter of 1886-7.

The next address was by an old-time reform worker and lecturer on the Spiritualist platform, Mrs. Scott Briggs, now of this city. The third was by Mr. Arthur S. Howe, well known as a Freethinker and worker for equal rights. He is the chief organizer of the new movement to establish in San Francisco a permanent "Free Platform" for the discussion of all subjects of human interest.

Hoping to get a synopsis of these three short addresses for next Lucifer, I will say no more of them for the present.

After these three, and perhaps a few others had spoken, it was thought best to present something in the shape of a resolution to be voted upon, before those who should be called away would have left the hall. The following is a copy of the protest presented and unanimously voted for—very few declining to vote and none voting in the negative:

"Whereas, the postoffice department has denied the privilege of second-class mail to several journals, on technical grounds merely, thereby violating the constitutional guarantee of freedom of speech and of press—notably to the paper called Freedom, edited and published by Helen Wilmans of Seabreeze, Fla., and to Lucifer the Light-Bearer, published by Moses Harman of Chicago, Ill.; therefore be it

"Resolved, That we, citizens of San Francisco and vicinity, do hereby protest against such discrimination, such assumption of authority over the rights of the citizen, and that we pledge our best efforts to secure the early repeal of the postal laws that put it in the power of the administration to deny equal rights to all the citizens of our common country."

On motion it was further resolved that a copy of this protest be forwarded to the President of the United States and another copy to the member of congress from this congressional district.

After the adoption of the resolution of protest the speaking continued till a late hour, many going away before the adjournment because of previous engagements.

As before intimated, the meeting was really an impromptu affair, and would doubtless have been much better attended had it been properly advertised and planned. Among those who came late was Mrs. Lockwood Nevins, who is one of the best-known organizers and speakers of the Socialist party in California. On being called to the platform Mrs. Nevins made a strong plea, from the standpoint that an injury to one is the concern of all. If possible a synopsis of Mrs. Nevins' talk will appear in Lucifer.

* * *

Among those who were specially invited to take part in the meeting, but whose previous engagements did not permit them to come, were Professor Haddock, editor of Human Nature, a monthly journal published in this city, and James H. Barry, editor and publisher of the San Francisco Star. The following note, sent by a special messenger, was received just before the meeting opened:

"San Francisco, Jan. 23, 1904.—Mr. M. Harman—My Dear Sir: Let me say, in response to your kind invitation, that I would deem it an honor to be present at your meeting of protest in behalf of free speech and a free press, without which liberty is dead. I send you these few lines to express my sincere regret that I cannot personally be with you to-day to lift my voice in behalf of Freedom's holy cause—for which I know you have battled manfully and suffered much. Your fight is my concern as well as yours, and should be considered the concern of every true man and woman. Very sincerely yours,

"JAMES H. BARRY."

In Lucifer No. 1004 appeared an extract from a recent issue of the Star, an editorial entitled, "For Free Press." In his issue of Jan. 23, Mr. Barry again alludes to the same subject in these words:

"Some weeks ago we told our readers of the persecution of Lucifer, a Chicago weekly published by Moses Harman, by the postoffice department. This paper has always been a thoughtful, decent publication, for thoughtful, decent men and women. The charge made against it is utterly without foundation, and yet, without opportunity for defense, it is denied the privilege of entry to the mails as second-class matter. Mr. Harman is still in San Francisco, and will speak next Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, at a meeting of protest to be held at Pythian Castle, 909 Market street."

It will doubtless be remembered by some of Lucifer's readers that the editor of the Star was himself a victim of persecution at the hands of the enemies of freedom of speech. He was arrested, tried and condemned to imprisonment because he had freely and justly criticised the acts of certain judges in this city. I have spent some time in looking up the record of this memorable case, and expect soon to devote a column or two of Lucifer's space to showing how one brave man can and did triumph over tremendous odds when he has justice, truth and right on his side.

While giving credit for editorial mention I wish to thank Brother F. P. Cook for several good notices in his paper, The Truth, a small but well filled weekly devoted mainly to local matters pertaining to the various Spiritualist societies of this city. In his issue of Jan. 12 the editor says:

"The Hall of Justice, 909 Market street, was filled on Sunday afternoon, to hear Moses Harman's address on 'Psychic Impression—How It Evolves.' Many spiritualistic and liberal thinkers took part in the free discussion which followed the lecture. The chairman of the afternoon was H. W. Bracken, while A. S. Howe acted as secretary. The list of liberal thinkers who want a platform for free thought and discussions is growing. Are you one?"

On next Sunday in the same hall, at the usual hour, 2:30 p. m. the new society—which I think might well be named the "San Francisco Society of Anthropology"—will hold its first meeting as such. The first or leading address will be made by Mr. A. S. Howe, who will probably be the first president of the society.

* * *

And now, having reproduced several editorial notices more or less commendatory in character, it is perhaps but just and fair that the other side be heard. There is published in this city a paper called the San Francisco News Letter, by a man named Frederick Marriott. In his issue of Dec. 5, 1903, Mr. Marriott said:

"Mr. Harman, the notorious Chicago Anarchist and Free-lover, is still in San Francisco preaching the gospel of the rightcousness of debauching homes by making the cravings of man's lowest nature the highest standard of conduct in the family life and of the conventions of society, and of destroying law and order in the State by obliterating every restraining influence and legislative enactment, including the abolition of courts and all machinery that is intended to draw a line beyond which a man may not be free to go in pursuit of whatever his passions, his appetites and his wants may crave. Boldly and defiantly this reptile preaches his isms, and tries to persuade men and women that they are not honestly bound to observe their marriage vows; that it is their right and their duty to yield obedience to and promptly heed the voice of their animal desires, without any reference whatever to obligations imposed at the marriage altar; and more, he holds that the young and old, the married and single of both sexes, should cultivate such a spirit of individual independence and freedom of personal action that no legal obligation or social conventions would deter them from following the lead of every inclination of mind or body.

"Of course, this miserable moral monstrosity advocates the doctrine of Anarchism. He would educate the young and the old down to that level of criminality where schemes and plans and machinery are formulated and put in motion to overthrow and overturn all law and all order that is maintained by State or community, to the end that every man and every woman and every child may be free to do exactly what he or she might be pleased to do. Harman's 'Advanced Thought' should be called 'Harman's Plan for the Social and Political Damnation of Humanity.' And would you believe that this advocate of the development of the evil in man because he thinks evil is capable of giving more pleasure than good, is nearly, if not quite, three score years and ten, is deaf as a post, lame in one leg, and without one redeeming characteristic as a man? Still, he draws crowds, but then the snake den in the zoo does the same. The police must be blind to tolerate his presence."

It is said that William Lloyd Garrison, in his paper, The Liberator, used to publish, under the general head "The Opposition," articles similar in character to this News Letter editorial. To these he would make no reply. Why, then—it may be asked—why take up valuable space in printing attacks unworthy of notice?

Wendell Phillips answered this question when he said, "The community that will not hear its meanest and most hated member is simply a gang of slaves," or words to that effect.

I have been advised not to notice this vituperative attack because Mr. Marriott is not considered a man of good moral character or standing in this city. To this my reply has been that I decline to sit in judgment upon any man. Let all be heard. This man voices the judgment of not himself alone but of many who sit in high places. To give him and them a hearing will perhaps help them to see themselves as others see them.

* * *

On landing in San Francisco Nov. 9—nearly three months ago—I did not expect to remain here more than two months at the outside. I had been led to suppose that the climate of the metropolis of the West Coast was not so good, as a winter resort for chronic invalids, as Los Angeles, San Diego, or many other places that were named. Experience thus far has convinced me that San Francisco has an almost ideal winter climate. It has not seemed winter at all—almost perpetual spring, without the disagreeable changes so common to the spring months in Illinois and other middle or eastern states. There have been a number of wet days, but the rain and fogs are not cold, and the winds not piercing as are the winds of March, and even of April and May often, in the states just mentioned. I have deferred going southward in California largely because of reports of terrible drouth almost everywhere in southern California. In fact, I found the climate of San Jose, only fifty miles south, not so pleasant as that of this city, on account of lack of rain.

Another and perhaps the chief reason for prolonging my stay in this city has been the belief that I could do better work for Lucifer here than elsewhere in this state. This city is the storm center of thought, of reformatory agitation, for the Pacific Coast; hence, while the suppressors of speech and press are unusually active it would seem that I should work where there is a prospect of doing most good in the way of working up a counteracting public sentiment. Whether I have done anything worth while in this line is mainly a question for the future to decide.

In my next letter I hope to be able to state with some approach to certainty what my next move will be. Meantime my address will remain as before, at 1054 Fourteenth street, East Oakland, Cal., care E. M. Dewey.

M. HARMAN.

THE CONFLICT BETWEEN THE CHURCH AND SCIENCE.

Since the days of Columbus and Copernicus, of Kepler and Newton, no greater and more radical changes have been made in the thoughts of men than those effected by researches of the natural scientists in our own generation. The whole conception of creation, of its author, and of men, as developed from Biblical premises, has been shown to be the fantastic work of imagination. The Church has instinctively felt that the whole trend of scientific research is fatal to its philosophy, and for this reason is on principle opposed to independent investigation. The Roman Catholic Church burned at the stake a Giordano Bruno and imprisoned a Galileo for their scientific opinions, and the Protestant Church, with its sterile dogmatism, has been equally hostile to the advance of science. Yet, notwithstanding all this, the natural sciences have step by step undermined the fundamental assumptions of theology. It is now almost an axiom that a miracle never did take place and never will take place. The supernatural is purely the product of a vivid imagination. Even if there is a God, he is not above his laws in nature. It is high time that we radically changed the whole character of modern culture and education, based as they are on Biblical premises. The study of the dead languages and of a subjective philosophy must give way to an investigation of the living truths of nature. Popular education must be established on the basis of a knowledge of the laws of nature. Modern biology, and especially the Darwinian theory, have entirely changed the old views that man is the center of creation, and that all things exist only for him. It is now even possible to trace back men and animals to a common ancestor, and it is accordingly just as rational to claim immortality for the latter as for the former. How ridiculous that the soul of a genius, who if his later years had entered upon his second childhood and whose soul was accordingly not worth preserving, should be regarded as immortal! And mankind can only progress by setting aside all ideas of the supernatural. The charge is frequently made against the natural sciences that they have robbed men of their ideals, and in the place of immortality and the hope of heaven, given only factories and the social evils. This charge is false; for just in proportion as men give up faith in the beyond will they labor for the good things of this earth. It is this aspect of things that awakens the feeling of fraternal love and co-operation among men, as is seen by the phenomenal blessings that resulted from the French Revolution. The keynote of modern thought must be the realization of the highest good that the earth affords.—Professor Ladenburg of the University of Breslau.

HOW FREE ARE WE?

Lucifer, published in Chicago, is the latest paper to be barred from the mails by our censorious postoffice department.

Wilshire has been compelled to go to Canada to publish his magazine from the same cause.

Helen Wilmans is refused mail service by the postoffice, even though the courts did not sustain the charges against her.

John Turner languishes in a government prison awaiting deportation for the crime of making trades union speeches, he being an Englishman.

It is time we became thoroughly aroused and ask ourselves whether a free press and free speech shall be preserved.

"Liberty cannot be given, it must be taken."—Vaccination (Terre Haute, Ind.).

VARIOUS VOICES.

We are always glad to receive calls from friends visiting the city. Take the Lake street elevated, stop at Ashland avenue, walk one block east, then one block north. Or take Fulton street electric car west and stop at St. John's place, alighting in front of our house. The Lake street electric and Paulina street cars also pass within a block of our residence.

O. B. U., McGregor, Minn.: As our subscription has expired and Lucifer has to fight or take a back seat I would be glad to help wage the battle, but I am nearing my three score and ten, and in our financial weakness we must be left behind if the price is advanced.

Adler Jorgenson, Lewiston, Mich.: I'm sorry to learn of the latest attempt to suppress Lucifer; but will say that if the price were raised to $3 a year I would continue taking it. Inclosed find $5. Out of this you may add $1.25 to my original subscription of $2, and the remaining $3.75 I will donate to M. Harman for his western trip.

Huldah G. Hencock, Vineland, N. J.: I am again in Vineland, after about one year's absence, and now renew my subscription to Lucifer, which is the bread of life to me. I wish I could find some way to help you to help Lucifer. You have a grand helper in W. F. Barnard, whose article in Free Society I have just been reading. There is no evading the sex problem.

Jacob B. Daisy, Charleston, Ill.: I want Lucifer very badly, but cannot pay $2 a year, as I am a very poor man and crippled with rheumatism. I cannot learn what is transpiring by reading the lying daily papers and the weeklies copied from them. I cannot see why the laboring men and women support such papers. As P. T. Barnum said, the American people love to be humbugged better than any people on earth, and he was doing his share like the daily papers are now.

One of the best-edited papers in Chicago is Lucifer, a paper devoted to discussion of some of the most vital questions in life. Recently Lucifer was denied second-class privileges because its publisher used about one short column to advertise books bearing on social and economic subjects. Of course this was a trumped-up charge. The reason for the hold-up was because the postal censor, Madden, is a Catholic and is intolerant of any but the opinions of his sect.—Henry E. Allen, in Galesburg (Ill.) Labor News.

Marion Carter, Lockport, N. Y.: I have hoped that you would have no more trouble in publishing and sending Lucifer to its subscribers, but we can never tell just what those in power will do. I have been a reader of Lucifer many years. I cannot remember when Mr. Carter first subscribed for it. He said he would take it as long as he lived if it was published. I have taken it ever since his death, and hope to take it as long as I live, and am willing to pay $5 a year if necessary. Your generous offer to send two copies to one address for $2.25 will give your old subscribers a chance to extend the circulation and keep one for themselves. I hope the editor's California trip will be of great benefit to him. I read every week in the Philosophical Journal of San Francisco the good work and success he is having, and wish him and his daughter success and happiness.

James W. Adams: My introduction to Lucifer was to ask why its publishers were being prosecuted in the federal courts. When sample copies arrived I was so thoroughly inoculated with the virus of Godism and Grundyism that my modesty was so rudely shocked I hid them lest my wife and daughters be contaminated by their foul presence. I could not summons the moral courage to read one copy at a sitting. It required effort to read the three copies. The worst over, it did not require extraneous aid to force me to the conclusion that they were persecuted for no other reason than that of publishing the truth. From that moment my sympathies were enlisted to such an extent that I became a subscriber, and my interest in Lucifer and its work has never wavered. During these years I have closely scrutinized its columns and did not find anything that could be construed as a tendency to inflame passional desire, or could evoke the flush of shame upon the face of a man or woman who had outgrown slavery to preconceived opinions.

True, irrelevant matter has been lugged into discussions, untenable positions bolstered up, many commonplace events mentioned, but these, no matter how worded, did not provoke the ire of the powers that be. It was the publication of unpalatable truths: truths that exposed the skeleton in so many family closets. While it is true that many of us are incapable of expressing ideas clearly and concisely, the fact remains that no other journal dares to publish the truth pertaining to the relation of the sexes; nor whose publishers and contributors are more devoted to principle, or care less for the censure or applause of the world. We are so far above the ordinary standard that we are naturally misunderstood by those with whom nature was chary in the bestowment of brains, and those whose perceptive and reflective faculties are benumbed by contact with fashionable assumptions and crime breeding hypocrisies. Repressive measures never did serve the purpose intended by their promoters. Exasperating as they are to us as individuals, they furnish the needed incentive to actual and persistent resistance to encroachments upon the right to do our thinking, and our work in our way.

Amicus, Massachusetts: I could but smile when I read, on page 23 of No. 1004 of Lucifer, your notice of Congressman Gillett's "Divorce: a Peril to the American Home," and the Truth Seeker's comments thereon. Gillett has the same quality of audacity in discussing divorce that old-maid schoolmarms have in telling parents how to bring up children. The fact is Gillett is a bachelor. He knows as little about the need for easy divorce as a spinster pedagogue does about the care of a nursing bottle. Last month a Washington correspondent of the Indianapolis Journal wrote the following: "He [Secretary of the Navy Moody], Representative Gillett of Massachusetts, and General Crozier, chief of ordnance, United States army, keep bachelors' hall in an unpretentious house on K street. These three notables are said to be sworn misogynists. The woman who captures Secretary Moody will be assured a brilliant social rule."

Mrs. M. C. Shay, Tampa, Fla.: In my last copy of Lucifer (Jan. 21) a sad case is told of one who is suffering—Georgie Replogle. I fear there are many such cases. For such I offer land to make a free home, but as yet get no help or encouragement. I am sorry. I feel sure if the matter was taken up it would prosper and be a great blessing to the worthy poor. I know something of persecution and no help to earn money. I have always been a worker. Some of my land was taken for the railway. When they refused to pay me I asked their attorney if the railroad could make me pay if I took their property. He said that was different; I was not a wealthy corporation. I think you ought to test the postmaster's right to refuse mail privilege. I think a clever lawyer could make him pay damages. I made the railroad pay. It would be an easy matter to prove that Lucifer is not an obscene paper. There is more obscene matter in our common Bible than I find in Lucifer. I have been a reader for more than seven years.

F. L. P., West Virginia: I am a native of Ohio and am here teaching school. I have been aiding Lucifer in a small way for several years, and hope, as I am only 23 years of age, to be able after a time to help considerably. I am a firm believer in absolute freedom of speech, press, trade, love, and economic exchange. I am a Neo-Malthusian, and have spent nearly all of my salary for the last few years above living expenses in sending Dr. Foote's "Borning Better Babies" to thinking people. I regard Lucifer as better worth $3 than $3 papers are worth 50 cents. There are two points upon which I differ from some leading radicals, the first being the consistency of applying the term Anarchy to our belief, and the second in regard to voting at political elections. I believe in disregarding bad laws, but it is much better to repeal them. If we were all united in a strong society of our own, we would then be ready to cast our political influence with the better and against the worse, and in some cases this would determine the election. I think Louis F. Post is a vastly better man than Roosevelt and even better than Bryan. I ordered some books from you recently, including "Marriage and Morality," by Lillian Harman, and was surprised to learn that it was out of print. It was the finest booklet on the subject that I ever saw. I have often quoted, and with good effect, the statement that "it should not be necessary to get a license to do that which is right, and it should not be possible to obtain a license to do that which is wrong." If you have it reprinted I think I can disseminate a large number.

GOVERNMENTAL EVOLUTION.

At first we had the feudal barons erecting strong castles on the main roads, and in a rough fashion levying tribute on caravans of merchants who passed their way. They charged what the traffic would bear; for if they charged the merchants too much, the latter would either turn the stream of traffic to another highway or else it would be suspended, in either case the barons' business would suffer. At that period it was customary to endow a shrine or monastery with a portion of the net surplus, so that the clergy, those good brethren of the noble barons who held the keys to the Elysian portals, would remember them in their prayers after death. At that period if any one dared give voice to an idea which was criticised by the rulers he was promptly "hanged, drawn and quartered," and his body consigned to burial in unconsecrated ground.

A little later we find the Hanseatic League and other companies of merchants uniting for purposes of protection, which forced the noble barons into having a "community of interests," and with a view of more scientifically gathering taxes a king was set up in business, who with the help of these noble lords undertook the government of the common people. This system would doubtless have continued in vogue forever, had not some colonial farmers stirred up a revolution on one continent, and an equally discontented set done likewise elsewhere, and after having decapitated the king, several nobles, clergy and other superior people, caused this system of government to be discontinued. At that period a reformer was locked up in a bastile for life if he was so fortunate as to have influence, or hung if he had none.

Next came an epoch when certain peoples designated by election which set of people they desired to have tax and rule them. One could no longer be held up on a highway and robbed of half of one's goods by force of arms; this method was crude, and the question of physical danger was always present; now the merchant is held up more scientifically by means of "smokeless rebates" and other methods which are far surer than of old. This was the era of the postoffice and press censorship, when the life of the small reform paper was in constant danger. A uniform code of thinking was in vogue, and if the superior people who ruled could only succeed in having a law passed that there should be no press criticism of any nature the millennium would be ushered in. In this era it was not thought best to kill or imprison people who were social radicals, but society every once in a while would rise up on its hind feet, and cooperately starve them into submission by either boycotting their business or, if an editor, by denying him the use of the mails.

WALTER BREEN.

If all mankind minus one were of one opinion, and only one person were of the contrary opinion, mankind would be no more justified in silencing that one person than he, if he had the power, would be justified in silencing mankind.—J. S. Mill.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

TRUE MANHOOD.

AN INVALUABLE GUIDE TO HEALTH, STRENGTH AND PURITY.

BY E. B. SHEPHERD.

WHAT EVERY FATHER WANTS HIS BOY TO KNOW.

The Christian Endeavor World: "Its suggestions are wise and ennobling." Dr. Stockham, author of Tokology, says: "TRUE MANHOOD explains the transition from boyhood to manhood, giving knowledge of priceless value." Levant cloth, 328 pages. Prepaid $1. STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

JUST OUT.

PARENTHOOD.

By Alice B. Stockham, M. D., author of "Tokology" and "Karezza." Highest ideals for best offspring. Vital and important subjects discussed, including new philosophy of the Creative Energy. G. G. Hunt says: "Many sentences of PARENTHOOD should be graven in gold and handed down to posterity." Prepaid, 25c. STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

SONGS OF A CHILD,
AND OTHER POEMS.

By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. Price $1.50; postage 12c. STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

ISOLA; OR, THE DISINHERITED.

A drama in six acts. By Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1; postage 7c. STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

KAREZZA.

SCIENCE OF MARRIAGE.

A godsend to every wife—a joy to every husband.

This work brings peace into homes disrupted by disharmony in the sexual relation. Dr. A. B. Stockham advises a practice which leads to individual liberty and to deeper love between husband and wife.

Dr. F. G. Welch: "After a personal trial of its teachings, I want to thank you for a great service to humanity."

Rev. George B. Bradshaw: "Out of a beautiful and ennobling experience, I can say, I KNOW."

Gives a high ideal of the marital relation and teaches control of the Procreating Power.

J. A. Smalley, M. D.: "I have received more actual benefit from the practice of KAREZZA teachings than from all other books on Sexual Science."

A. B. Franklin, M. D.: "KAREZZA does more than any other single thing to make marriage a perpetual courtship."

LEVANT CLOTH, POSTPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MEN, WOMEN, AND CHANCE.

BY WILLIAM PLATT.

Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. Price 75c. STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

WOMAN AND HER RELATION TO THE CHURCH, OR CANON LAW FOR WOMEN.

BY HARRIET M. CLOSZ.

A succinct statement of the position to which women were doomed by the Church Fathers and authorities. Every woman should possess a copy. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; OR THE PRICE OF VIRTUE.

By Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood, by Lucinda B. Chandler; Life's Gifts, by Olive Schreiner, and Marriage—What It Was and Is, and Will the Coming Woman Marry? Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SEND 10c IN STAMPS FOR THREE NUMBERS, OR 50c FOR TWELVE MONTHS' SUBSCRIPTION TO

HUMAN NATURE.

It is a monthly magazine, now in the fifteenth year of publication. It is Unique, Eclectric and Scientific. It treats of Physiology, Psychology, Health, Sociology and all subjects which pertain to the welfare of humanity.

The character of men and animals is in accordance with their physical organization. This is determined by size of body and brain, shape of head, texture, temperament and facial expression.

HUMAN NATURE illustrates these principles by picture and pen, and teaches its readers how to read character. Its ethics are ennobling, its style, while strong, is sprightly, and its literary standard high. You need HUMAN NATURE. Address

PROFESSOR ALLEN HADDOCK,
PHRENOLOGIST,
1020 MARKET ST., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

A BARGAIN.

FOR SALE—The Brodhead Windmill plant, at Brodhead, Wis., is for sale cheap. It consists of a well-equipped foundry, machine shop and wood shop. The owner is poor health, old age, and inability to run it. It is located in as fine a country as can be found west of the lakes. It fell into my hands through a bankruptcy sale, and therefore I can sell for less than the tools cost. Inquire of

S. O. BISHOP, Brodhead, Wis.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

for Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 61, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We cannot sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 25c each, two for 50c. Address EDWIN C. WALKER, 244 W. 143d St., New York, N. Y.

WANTED—100 women to study medicine or midwifery. Next term begins January 3, 1904. College of Medicine and Surgery, 245 Ashland Blvd., Chicago, Ill. DR. FLORENCE DRESSLER, Secretary. (Dept. A.)

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

THE LIBERAL MAIL-ORDER JEWELER.

Now permanent at No. 110 N. Kensington Ave., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 20 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's Line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Thelem in the Crucible," free.

J. H. GREER, M. D.,
52 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.

Office Hours—9 a. m. to 6 p. m.; Wednesdays and Saturdays, 9 a. m. to 8 p. m.; Sundays, 9 a. m. to 12 m.
Telephone, Randolph 42.

DR. OGILVIE A. RICE,
DENTIST.
1556 MILWAUKEE AVE., COR. WESTERN, CHICAGO.
Telephone West 141.

PHILIP G. PEABODY,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW,
13 COURT SQUARE, ROOM 31,
BOSTON, MASS.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD OWN

TOKOLOGY.

A COMPLETE HEALTH GUIDE.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

Teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions.

Treats of diseases of women and children; contains practical teachings on Change of Life, limiting offspring, etc.

Lizzie N. Armstrong writes: "If I knew I were to be the mother of honorable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of Tokology."

Dr. C. B. Willis: "Tokology is doing more for women than all other books put together."

CLOTH, PREPAID, $2.25; LEATHER, $2.75.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES.

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

Contents—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only"; Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen"; What Are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women. With Appendix: The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 15c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

A treatise on Sexual Science and Marriage, rich in thought and strong in expression. Emphatically a book for the thinker.

Carpenter holds that woman's freedom is based upon economics; she must be independent financially that she may not be forced to sell herself in or out of marriage. He also makes a strong plea for a motherhood of freedom and thoughtful preparation.

AMERICAN EDITION, CLOTH, PREPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM.

THE RELATIONSHIP OF EACH TO HUMAN LIBERTY.

BY E. C. WALKER.

The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organization and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. Price 5c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

CREATIVE LIFE.

A BOOK FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

A timely and important message not found in text books. Every girl seeks and should have this true, plain and practical knowledge. One writes: "Thank you, thank you, dear Doctor, for the plain but beautiful thoughts. Womanhood, motherhood and life have new meanings. You ensoule your theme." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

A NOVEL BY GEORGE N. MILLER.

FORTIETH THOUSAND.

"The Strike of a Sex" is a fascinating novel bearing upon the sexual relations. It is a bold protest against the customary life of most married people, and at the same time a prophecy of happier conditions between man and wife. Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW.

A PRIMER OF SEXUAL RATIONALISM.

BY E. C. WALKER.

"Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes."

Paper covers; 42 large pages. Price 10c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

"PERSONAL EXPERIENCES OF TWO AMERICAN ANTI-VIVISECTIONISTS IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES."

BY PHILIP G. PEABODY.

With an Appendix by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c. Apply to PHILIP G. PEABODY, 15 Court Square, Boston, Mass.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY.

By Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition, by E. C. Walker; Motherhood in Freedom, by Moses Harman; The Greatest Sin (an allegory), by R. B. Kerr, and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom, by Oscar Rotter. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN.

By R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.; The New Martyrdom, by Lillian Harman, and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE.

By R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese, by C. W. Coolridge; A Traveler's Tale, by R. B. Kerr; The Cat's Story, by Emile Zola. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

1006

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

HILDA'S HOME.

A STORY OF WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

With Macaulay, Rose Graul would say: "The cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty." Hence she has no fears that under Freedom the Home and the Family would cease to exist, or that woman would be less loving and lovable, or that man would be less manly and honorable. On the contrary, she maintains that only in the soil and atmosphere of freedom is it possible for true womanhood and manhood to live and flourish.

426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

One of the best short works on the subject. A charming little gift book.

"Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it."

DAINTILY PRINTED. PREPAID, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES.

BY E. C. WALKER.

Contents—Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Variclists; The New Woman; What Is She? What Will She Be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love; Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections Upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love and Life." Price 15c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD.

AN OUTLINE OF PRACTICAL CO-OPERATIVE INDIVIDUALISM.

BY HENRY OLERICH.

Regarded by many persons as a more interesting and consistent economic reform novel than Bellamy's "Looking Backward."

Bound in red silk with gold title. Nearly 450 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, $1.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

BY JOHN R. KELSO.

Contents—Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff or Protection; War Punishments; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

519 pages. Cloth binding somewhat damaged, and reduced from $1.50 to 50c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY, AND THE STATE.

BY FREDERICK ENGELS.

Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages: The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans.

217 pages; bound in cloth. Price 60c; postage 5c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STORY OF IJAIN;

OR, THE EVOLUTION OF A MIND.

By Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Stuart Ross), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. Price $1; postage 5c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE CURSE OF MATERNITY.

From the French of Henry Fevre. Together with How to Escape the Curse, by Jonathan Mayo Crane; Woman's "Duty" to Bear Children, by E. C. Walker; True and False Morality, by C. L. James; and Love's Law, by William Francis Barnard. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE.

By John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention, by Marietta; Reminiscences of Berlin Heights, by A. Warren, and The Sexes and Love in Freedom, by Oscar Rotter. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN.

By Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yclept Society, by Moses Hull; Virgin Soil, by George Egerton, and Normal Sexual Action, by Ernest Wisne. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of Freethought and Free Love. By Orford Northcote. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Marxian. By M. Harman. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Moral. By A. F. Thodall. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM, by E. C. Walker. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE COMING WOMAN, by Lillie D. White. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

PRICE 5 CENTS. CHICAGO, ILL., FEB. 11, E. M. 304. [C. E. 1904.] WHOLE NO. 1007

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY.

BY JONATHAN MAYO CRANE.

Why do people wear clothes?

"To keep themselves warm. Ask us something hard," replies the Cheerful Idiot,

"Because Eve ate the apple," answers the Theological Student, unaware of the fact that the Bible does not tell what the "forbidden fruit" was.

"Clothing," remarks the Professor, "is designed not only to protect the body from extremes of heat and cold but it is also intended to conceal certain parts of the body which decency requires us to keep covered. Therefore clothing is necessary to preserve modesty and enable us easier to repress our animal propensities. It is clothing that distinguishes man from other animals. It is the badge of our moral natures. It is necessary for the preservation of morality and the advancement of civilization. Some savages wear little or no clothing, but all such people are little above animals in their ideas of modesty and morality."

The Professor voices the generally prevailing sentiment regarding the reason why people wear clothes. By millions of persons nudity is considered immodest and the concealment of portions of the body with clothing is regarded as necessary for purity of thought and the repression of sexual attraction. But, paradoxical as it may seem, an examination of the facts in the case will prove that the wearing of clothes—this intentional concealment of parts of the human body—has exactly the opposite effect. It follows, then, if thoughts concerning the sexual relations are immodest, the wearing of clothes stimulates immodesty.

"Modesty," says Dr. Havelock Ellis, "may be provisionally defined as an almost instinctive fear prompting concealment, and usually centering around the sexual processes." He refers here particularly to sexual modesty, for there are other forms of modesty which are closely allied to bashfulness, coyness, reserve and diffidence. For instance a modest man is one who shrinks from notoriety or publicity. What I intend to discuss particularly is sex modesty, which is expressed better by the French word pudeur, and not so well indicated by the English word pudicity, derived from the Latin word pudeo, which means "I am ashamed." A person may be ashamed of his horse, of his country, etc., but the meaning of pudeo is sexual shame; hence we have the word pudenda, meaning the sexual organs, indicating that these organs are shameful or are the seat of shame. From this word pudeo we also have the word impudent, which in its primary sense means shameless but is now used almost exclusively in the sense of immodest, with no reference to sex, or as a synonym for audacious, over-bold, too forward, or of the more slangy expressions cheeky, fresh, nervy or full of gall.

In whatever sense the word modesty is used it indicates a shrinking or reluctant impulse which can hardly be said to amount in all cases to fear. In other words, it is a sensitive regard for the opinions of other persons. But even this definition is not exact, for a person may have a feeling of modesty when absolutely alone. There are many persons who cannot look upon their own nude bodies without a feeling of shame—a feeling of self-disapproval. So it would seem that modesty implies a repugnance to disapproval, whether it be self-disapproval or disapproval likely to be incurred from others. At bottom, however, it is a repugnance toward self-disapproval, for often we may see modest persons bravely and voluntarily enduring the disapproval of others, but their ability to do so comes from their own self-approval. In fact, such persons are the most genuinely modest, because they are pure-minded. Hence the saying, "To the pure all things are pure."

The common idea that clothing is essential to modesty is disproved by the fact that there are many races of people who go absolutely naked and yet are extremely modest. Somerville, in the Journal of the Anthropological Institute, 1897, page 394, says: "The New Georgians of the Solomon Islands, so low a race that they are ignorant of both pottery and weaving and wear only a loincloth, have the same ideas of what is decent with regard to certain acts and exposures that we ourselves have."

Klemm says of the Naga women of Assam: "Of clothing there was not much to see, but in spite of this I doubt whether we could excel them in true decency and modesty. . . . The Naga women only cover their breasts. They declare that it is absurd to cover those parts of the body which everyone has been able to see from their births, but that it is different with the breasts, which appeared later, and are, therefore, to be covered. . . . In the presence of strangers the Naga women simply cross their arms over their breasts, without caring much what other charms they may reveal to the observer."

It may be that the maternal instinct in woman prompts her involuntarily to conceal her breasts. Although a partial or almost complete exposure of the breasts is permitted by the decollete costumes of fashionable ladies in so-called civilized countries, nevertheless the instinct to cover the breast seems to be stronger and more quickly asserted than the instinct to conceal any other part of the body. Gessner tells of a woman, clothed only in a chemise, who, on being surprised by the unexpected appearance of a man, quickly caught up the front of the garment and covered her breast and face with it, leaving exposed all of her person below. And he asserts that this instinct to cover the breasts is primary and that the covering of the pubic region is the result of second thought. This primary instinct, however, he argues, is not the result of a feeling of shame, but is a natural impulse for the protection of the maternal fount. Hence he deduces the idea that the sense of shame is not innate, but is acquired. This opinion seems to be shared by Stendhal who, in "De l'Amour," chapter xxvi, says: "It is clear that three parts of modesty are taught." And he adds: "The evil of modesty is that it constantly leads to falsehood."

It must be apparent to any observer that nakedness is not necessarily associated with a feeling of shame. Every mother knows how natural it is for children to expose their persons and how difficult it is to teach them that they must keep some parts of their persons concealed. Children are natural logicians and they see no reason why one part of the body should be concealed more than another. To tell them that to expose their persons "is naughty" or "isn't nice" does not appeal to their logical minds; they want to know why it is "naughty." And it is that word "why" which is a terror to all conventional people. Yet that word "why" is the symbol of intellectual progress, the key note of the desire for knowledge. The independent mind asks why one thing should be permitted and another forbidden. Those enslaved by tradition and convention say:

"Ours not to question why;
Ours but to do and die."

That ideas of modesty are not innate, but are the result of education and environment, is shown by the fact that these ideas vary in different countries and in different periods of time.

"A woman in some parts of Asia," von Humboldt says, "is not permitted to show the ends of her fingers, while an Indian of the Caribbean race is far from considering herself naked when she wears a 'guajuco' two inches broad. Even this band is regarded as a less essential part of dress than the pigment which covers the skin. To go out of the hut without being painted with arnotta is to transgress all rules of Caribbean decency."

In Tahiti, Lubbock says, a person not properly tattooed would be "as much reproached and shunned as if with us he should go about the streets naked." In fact, tattooing has almost universally preceded the wearing of clothes by men and women. Darwin, in "The Descent of Man," says: "Not one great country can be named, from the polar regions in the north to New Zealand in the south, in which the aborigines do not tattoo themselves." Herodotus says tattooing was practiced by the ancient Assyrians, Britons and Thracians. Westermarck, in his "History of Human Marriage," says no exposed part of the human body, except the eye ball, has escaped tattoo marks. The Abyssinian women tattoo their gums. The Mundrucus of Brazil tattoo even their eyelids. Some of the Sandwich Islanders tattoo the ends of their tongues.

If we can discover the reason for the almost universal prevalence of the custom of tattooing, we may infer why men and women began to wear clothing in countries where the climate is not severe enough to require covering for the body. Some ethnographers think the tattoo is of religious origin. Professor Gerland holds that the tattoo marks originally were figures of totem animals, though they are no longer so. Westermarck says: "An assumption of that kind is not permissible in a scientific investigation." In other words, proof is required, rather than a mere assumption. Totemism, it may be remarked, is a sort of primitive animistic religion universally prevalent among savages. (See "Totemism" and "Animism" in the Encyclopaedia Britannica.) Continuing, Westermarck says: "Even in those rare cases where a connection between tattooing and totemism undoubtedly exists, we can not be sure whether this connection is not secondary. At present tattooing is everywhere regarded exclusively, or almost exclusively, as a means of decoration, and Cook states expressly that, in the South Sea Islands, at the time of their discovery, it was in no way connected with religion. Nor can I agree with Mr. Spencer that tattooing and other kinds of mutilation were practiced originally as a means of expressing subordination to a dead ruler or a god. Equally without evidence is Mr. Colquhoun's opinion that the custom originated in the wish either to make a man more fearful in battle, or to render the body invulnerable by the tattooing of charms on it. . . . I do not deny, either, that men may sometimes paint their bodies in order to inspire their enemies with fear in battle, or that the use of red ochre and fat is good as a defense against changes of weather, flies and mosquitoes. Nevertheless, it seems to be beyond doubt that men and women began to ornament, mutilate, paint and tattoo themselves chiefly in order to make themselves attractive to the opposite sex—that they might court successfully, or be courted. It is noteworthy that in all parts of the world the desire for self-decoration is strongest at the beginning of the age of puberty."

When Mertens asked the natives of Lukunor what was the meaning of tattooing, one of them answered: "It has the same object as your clothes—that is, to please the women."

Facts seem to prove that sexual selection, which plays such an important part in evolution and the perpetuation of life, originated modesty. If this theory is true, modesty must be found in other animals besides man. It has been observed that birds of prey hide themselves to drink, because they are obliged to plunge their heads under water. Birds of gay plumage evince a sense of shame after moulting. Coquetry, which is a form of modesty, is a common occurrence among dogs and many other animals.

"It is hard to find all the causes of modesty and shame," remarked Stanley Hall and Allin in the American Journal of Psychology, 1857, page 13, "but it is certain that very much of what is best in religion, art, and life owes its charm to the progressively widening irradiation of sexual feeling. Perhaps the reluctance of the female first long-circuited the exquisite sensations connected with sexual organs and acts to the antics of animals and human courtship, while restraint had the physiological function of developing the colors, plumes, excessive activity and exuberent life of the pairing season. To keep certain parts of the body covered irradiated the sense of beauty to eyes, hair, face, complexion, dress, form, etc., while many savage dances, costumes, and postures are irradiations of the sexual act."

Who that has seen a cake walk given in first-class style has failed to notice its sexual significance? There is the proud strutting of the buck negro, almost in imitation of the barnyard rooster, the turkey gobbler or the fiery stallion. His female mate exhibits the coquetry, coyness and alluring advances and retreats which Audubon so well described in a passage regarding the courtship of skylarks.

So with regard to the decoration of the body, as by tattooing, painting, or the wearing of fine clothes, men and women seem to be impelled by a natural impulse to make themselves attractive. That this is part of the natural function of sexual selection is proved by the facts that children pay more attention to their personal appearance after reaching the age of puberty, and that the gay plumage of birds and the handsome coats of other animals are means to attract the opposite sex. Grant Allen, in "The New Hedonism," says:

"Every lovely object in organic nature owes its loveliness direct to sexual selection. The whole aesthetic sense in animals had this for its origin. Every spot on the feathery wings of butterflies was thus produced; every eye on the gorgeous glancing plumage of the peacock. The bronze and golden beetles, the flashing blue of the dragon-fly, the brilliant colors of tropical moths, the lamp of the glow-worm, the gleaming light of the firefly in the thicket, spring from the same source. The infinite variety of crest and gorget among the iridescent humming-birds; the glow of the trogon, the barbets among the palm-blossoms; the exquisite plumage of the birds of paradise; the ball-and-socket ornament of the argus pheasant; the infinite hues of parrot and macaw; the strange bill of the gaudy toucan, and the crimson wattles of the turkey, tell one story.

"The sun-birds deck themselves for their courtship in ruby and topaz, in chrysoprase and sapphire. Even the antlers of deer, the twisted horns of antelopes, and the graceful forms or dappled coats of so many other mammals have been developed in like manner by sexual selection. The very fish in the sea show similar results of aesthetic preferences. The butterfly fins of the gurnard and the courting colors of the stickleback have but one explanation.

"I need not elaborate this point; Darwin has already made it familiar to most of us. Throughout the animal world, almost every beautiful hue, almost every decorative adjunct is traceable in these 'lower' passions. Animals are pleasing to the eye just in proportion to the amount of aesthetic selection that their mates have exercised upon them; and they are most pleasing of all when most sexually vigorous, especially at the culminating point of the pairing season. Tennyson's familiar lines gain a new meaning when we read them thus, as illustrating the persistent thread of connection between the aesthetic sense in man and animals:

"In the spring a fuller crimson
Comes upon the robin's breast;
In the spring the wanton lapwing
Gets himself another crest;
In the spring a livelier iris
Changes on the burnished dove;
In the spring a young man's fancy
Lightly turns to thoughts of love.

"Oddly enough, the same thing is true, against all probability, in the world of plants." And it is the same with fruits, he says. And then he adds significantly: "The coarse Puritan brain, accustomed to envisage sex as something to be ashamed of, will object at once in its prurient way: 'How horrid to think that in fruit and flower certain minds can see nothing but underlying sexuality!' In sober truth, the horridness lies all the other way—in looking upon sex, the mother of all things, as gross and degraded."

These quotations fairly prove, it seems to me, that natural decoration is due to sexual selection, the most beautiful creatures being the most successful in securing mates, thereby giving beauty to their offspring as an inheritance. In most animals and birds, however, the males are the most gaily decorated. Why, then, is it that among the human societies, females are considered the most vain and fond of fine apparel?

Investigation proves that women are not, by nature, more vain and fond of fine attire than men are. Among savage and barbarous peoples men are more given to decoration and adornment of their persons than women are. This is due to the fact that the men do the courting and therefore they seek to make themselves attractive to the women. In civilization, however, the women are economically dependent upon men and it is to their interest to secure husbands; hence they bedeck themselves in finery in order to make themselves attractive to men. It is no refutation of this opinion to call attention to the fact that women who are economically independent and those who care nothing for men—such as "bachelor girls" who are celibates from choice—are also "good dressers." This seemingly incongruous fact is due to natural imitation and a love of beauty, which, as Grant Allen has shown, is the inherited result of selection on the part of their ancestors.

Instead of the custom of wearing clothes originating from a sense of shame at the exposure of the person, it appears that the sense of shame is due in great measure to the wearing of clothes. H. Crawford Angus, who spent many years in Central Africa, writes: "It has been my experience that the more naked the people and the more to us obscene and shameless in their manners and customs, the more moral and strict they are in matters of sexual intercourse." He describes the ceremony of initiating girls at puberty and adds: "The whole matter is looked upon as a matter of course, and not as a thing to be ashamed of or to hide, and being thus openly treated of and no secrecy made about it, you find in this tribe that the women are very virtuous. They know from the first all that is to be known, and cannot see any reason for secrecy concerning natural laws or the powers and senses that have been given them from birth."

Clement of Alexandria, one of the fathers of the Christian Church, wrote in his "Pædagogus," near the end of the second century: "Women will scarce strip naked before their own husbands, affecting a plausible pretense of modesty, but any others who may wish may see them at home shut up in their own baths. . . . The ancient athletes," he continues, "ashamed to exhibit a man naked, preserved their modesty by going through the contest in drawers; but these women, divesting themselves of their modesty along with their chemise, wish to appear beautiful, but contrary to their wish are simply proved to be wicked." Quoting this passage from Clement, Count Casanova, a century ago, remarked that "modesty, which seems so much more deeply rooted in women, only resides in the linen that covers them, and vanishes when it vanishes." The same idea is given expression by Chaucer, in his "Wife of Bath's Prologue," where he says:

"He sayde a woman cast hir sham away,
When she cast of hir smok."

As late as the middle of the seventeenth century nudity was common among the people of some parts of Ireland and with it was associated no thought of shame. Fynes Moryson, in his "Itinerary," part iii, book iii, chapter v, speaking of a visit to Cork in 1617, says: "I have seen with these eyes, young maids stark naked grinding corn with certain stones to make cakes thereof."

He tells of a Bohemian baron, just come from the north of Ireland, who "told me in great earnestness that he, coming to the house of Ocane, a great lord among them, was met at the door with sixteen women, all naked excepting their loose mantles; whereof eight or ten were very fair, and two seemed very nymphs; with which strange sight his eyes being dazzled they led him into the house, and then, sitting down by the fire with crossed legs like tailors, and so low as could not but offend chaste eyes, desired him to set down with them. Soon after Ocane, the lord of the country, came in, all naked excepting a loose mantle, and shoes, which he put off as soon as he came in, and entertaining the baron after his best manner in the Latin tongue, desired him to put off his apparel, which he thought to be a burthen to him, and to sit naked by the fire with this naked company. But the baron . . . for shame durst not put off his apparel."

That nudity is more chaste and less stimulating to the sexual passions than a partly draped human form is attested by the pictures and statuary in any art gallery. Wives of missionaries among savages, at first shocked by the scanty garments of the natives, soon become accustomed to it and go among them with no feeling of shame. Their own moral teaching, however, makes them oftentimes insist that the savages shall wear clothing, and thereby they unwittingly arouse a sense of shame where none existed before.

Nakedness must appear quite natural where all go nude. Wallace, in his "Travels on the Amazon," says: "There is far more immodesty in the transparent and flesh-colored garments of our stage dancers than in the perfect nudity of these daughters of the forest."

Rowley, in his "Africa Unveiled," says: "When the sight becomes accustomed to the absence of raiment, your sense of propriety is far less offended than in England, where ample clothing is made the vehicle for asserting defiance, if not of actual law, yet of the wishes and feelings of the more virtuous part of the community."

Captain Snow, after his experience among the Fuegians, wrote: "More harm, I think, is done by false modesty—by covering and partly clothing—than by the truth in nature always appearing as it is. Intermingling with savages of wild lands who do not clothe gives one, I believe, less impure and sensual feelings than the merely mixing with society of a higher kind."

Havelock Ellis, "Psychology of Sex," vol. ii, page 37, says that "modesty is in its origin independent of clothing, that physiological modesty takes precedence of anatomical modesty, and that the primary factors of modesty were probably developed long before the discovery of either ornaments or garments."

The truth of this observation depends on what Dr. Ellis means by the word modesty. The word as generally used is vague and almost impossible to define because modesty is an expression of a composite of numerous and complex emotions and it is perhaps impossible, or almost so, to identify all of these emotions. Undoubtedly self-consciousness is the base of the feeling of modesty, as it is of all other feelings. Feeling of any kind implies consciousness of that feeling and at the same time consciousness of self. So, although self-consciousness is the common starting point of all our feelings, this fact sheds no light on the psychological process by which our feelings are differentiated or diversified. This differentiation is due to the fact that all organisms tend to adapt themselves to their environments and that this tendency to adaptation is modified and greatly influenced by, and has its root in, the still stronger tendency to continue existence—the desire to live, the struggle for existence.

Sensation undoubtedly exists before consciousness, but feeling implies a consciousness of sensation. When the legs of a frog are cut off the muscles may be made to contract by the application of electricity to the nerves or by pricking the muscles with a needle. Physiologists call this reflex action, but the reflex action would not occur if the nerves were not sensitive to the stimulus applied. It cannot be said, however, that the legs of the frog feel the pain, for that would be the same as saying that the frog's legs are conscious. The photographer's dry plate is sensitive to the stimulus of light, but the dry plate does not feel. This carries sensation back to matter and force. Force sets matter in motion; therefore matter is sensitive to force.

With the consciousness of sensation come the feelings of pleasure and pain. Admitting that sexual selection is a dominating factor in the evolution of the species, it follows that there must be an impulse in sexed organisms to render themselves sexually attractive. When intelligence is associated with this impulse the creature discovers that sexual desire is stimulated to a degree by obstacles to its gratification. This is shown in many instances by an apparent reluctance on the part of the female, and right there seems to be the origin of modesty.

The natural reluctance, originating as a stimulant of sexual desire, sometimes becomes intensified into a genuine repugnance to sexual association. Where this repugnance is overcome by force the offspring tend to inherit the repugnance. But associated with the feeling of repugnance is also the inherited desire. The conflict of these two feelings tends to develop modesty still further. Thus it is known that there are many persons who have strong sexual desire associated with a notion that there is something wrong in gratifying it or in even harboring the desire. This, I think, explains what Dr. Ellis means by physiological modesty, the primary factors of which "were developed long before the discovery of either ornament or garment." In other words, modesty originally was mere reluctance, probably at first due to lack of desire, but afterwards utilized to stimulate desire.

Primitive man undoubtedly had his residence in the tropical regions, where clothes were unnecessary. Long after he had discovered the attractiveness of decorations, perhaps first by

CONTINUED ON PAGE 46.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

MOSES HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Application Filed for Entry at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One copy, one year	$2.00	One copy, six months	$1.00
Two copies to one address, one year	2.25	Two copies to one address, six mos.	1.15
One copy, three months	.50 cents	Single copies	.5 cents

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire notify us if you wish to continue to receive Lucifer.

EASTERN REPRESENTATIVE:
E. C. WALKER, 244 WEST 143D STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

THIRD SERIES. VOLUME VIII. NO. 6.

CALIFORNIA NOTES.

One of the noteworthy events of my sojourn in San Francisco has been the Paine memorial meeting at Scottish Hall, on Friday, January 29. The large hall was well filled even to the galleries, with an attentive, well-behaved and enthusiastic audience. The programme was a long one, including speeches, recitations, music and platform dancing. The chairman was Dr. John Wetzel, of this city; the chief speakers were Arthur M. Lewis, Mrs. R. S. Lillie and Dr. York. A leading feature of the occasion was a rousing protest against the imprisonment and threatened deportation of John Turner. If possible I will get a copy of the resolutions for publication in Lucifer.

On the afternoon of Sunday, Jan. 31, another Paine meeting was held, in Justice Hall, Pythian Castle, at which the subject was "The Influence of Thomas Paine on the Twentieth Century," the leading speaker being Arthur S. Howe of this city.

This was the first meeting, as such, of the newly formed Free Platform Club, of which club I have spoken in previous Lucifers. At the close of the exercises in honor of the name and work of Paine, the meeting had a session for the more perfect organization of the club. The name selected is the Freethought Association. Meetings are to be held regularly every Sunday at 2:30 p. m. The meeting next Sunday will be opened with an address by Dr. John Wetzel. Seats and discussions free to all.

THE POSTAL CENSORSHIP.

The following is a synopsis of the speech made by Mrs. Scott Briggs at the meeting of protest held at Justice Hall, San Francisco, January 24:

"Many years ago George Francis Train published a paper in New York City. For publishing matter taken from the Bible he was arrested and imprisoned on the charges of blasphemy and obscenity. At this trial for blasphemy, which lasted several weeks, the sessions were called 'Train's matinees.' At the last session the judge asked the women to retire, as he was going to take up the subject of obscenity. As the women were leaving, one of them turned to the judge and said, 'To the pure all things are pure.'

"Mr. Train has passed on; at least, has left his mortal body. He may be with us now. When people leave the mortal it does not follow that they leave earth's conditions. They are still interested in friends and what is going on here. I knew Train well; he would shake hands with me after he had given up doing so with others, for, said he, 'you visited me in prison, and attended my trial.'

"He loved children, who gathered around him in the park, where he fed the birds, and talked to the children. A grand and spiritual man, much better than those who persecuted him.

"Ida Craddock—that brave, pure woman who wanted to make the race better—was hounded to her death by those who were far beneath her, for writing and publishing two small pamphlets called 'The Wedding Night' and 'Right Marital Living'—pamphlets which if read before marriage and lived up to, would soon show an improved humanity. That one should be imprisoned, as she was, for any offense, in such vile dens, filled with vermin; not a hook or nail on which to hang a garment; plumbing out of order; the cot having an iron bar across it so that one could not be comfortable in any position—should call for indignation meetings throughout our land.

"I corresponded with her before and after her incarceration, and have not presented the case to you in half its hideousness, as she detailed it to me. A pure woman who would have been a savior to humanity if allowed to continue her work—called to by higher intelligences.

"With a true knowledge of the laws of our being, the sex act which begets an immortal soul, entered into with a loved one for that purpose, or to quicken the spiritual, the intellectual, and to round out a grander manhood and womanhood—should not be looked upon as obscene, but as a sacramental act. When thus understood, men and women will not debase themselves as now, wasting their life forces, but will retain these forces to build up a better physical, intellectual and spiritual condition for themselves as well as to beget children who are worth raising—welcome, desired, love children.

"Not numbers but quality is needed, President Roosevelt to the contrary notwithstanding."

Several other addresses were made at the same meeting, synopses of which I hope to get for publication.

* * *

And now, after a very pleasant stay of nearly three months in San Francisco, I will probably start for Los Angeles within a week or ten days of this date, stopping at San Jose, Barstow and other intermediate points.

Having enjoyed the hospitality of friends in various parts of the city and at Oakland, I have made my headquarters for some weeks at the Hotel Argyle, McAlester street, opposite the City Hall. This hotel was chosen because of its central location, its cheerful, sunny, airy rooms, and now having been the guest of its gentlemanly proprietor, Mr. W. E. Brown, for several weeks, I can cordially recommend the Argyle to our friends and to the traveling public.

My address is still 1054 East Fourteenth street, Oakland, Cal.

M. HARMAN.

AN OPEN LETTER.

To the Editor of the San Francisco News Letter:

Your article of Dec. 5, ultimo, I have tried to read carefully. I have a fellow sympathy for you because only a few years ago I entertained substantially the beliefs you have expressed.

You place great stress on the restraining power of law and especially in the marriage relation. I once looked upon divorce as a contrivance of the devil, and, like you, I denounced such writers as M. Harman, Dr. Juliet Severance, Drs. Greer and Foote, and the scores of others who have had the courage to speak out against a public sentiment that is now so well known to set at defiance the laws of generation, if not justice, truth and mortality. I have no desire to enter into a controversy with you, because I judge from your article that intolerance is your predominating characteristic, and intolerance is always a sign of ignorance and weakness.

I have known Editor Harman for twelve years or more, and during this time he has been an earnest, serious student along the lines of race development. For more than a quarter of a century this thinker and writer you have debased yourself by calling "a reptile," has stood in the focus of public censure and abuse until at last there are millions who have come to see that he was right while the multitude was wrong. In fact, public sentiment has so radically changed that your article is now an anbmaly.

Before you again begin your ravings against a writer who has probably spent more years than you have hours in the study of social science, I ask you to consider the following question: Is there any other reasonable basis for marriage except love? When you come to decide this question intelligently—in the light of the largest measure of human happiness and race development, then I believe your better nature will prompt you to take your pen in hand and write Editor Harman a note worded something as follows:

"My Dear Harman: In my recent criticism of your life work I must have been insane. For the wrong I have done you I can never fully atone—for we cannot obliterate the impressions our thoughts have made—would to God that I could do so. You have accomplished more for race culture in your brave stand for woman's emancipation from sex slavery than the Church has ever done. I honor you for your long life of self-sacrifice and devotion to an ideal. Forgive me for my bigotry and intolerance. Since reading Grant Allen, Edward Carpenter, J. William Lloyd, Dr. Alice Stockham and other writers I have made the discovery that I was wrong and that you are right. Forgive me the wrong I have done you and may blessings come like snowflakes down upon your head. Fraternally, ———."

May this rough outline merely serve you as a suggestion.

HENRY E. ALLEN.

THE LAW AGAINST ANARCHISTS.

The morning after President McKinley was assassinated, there came a quick cry from the people all over the country against the liberty of speech. This impatient cry has since assumed definite expression in a law enacted by Congress against the admission into this country, among others, of persons who advocate the overthrow of organized government. As formulated, the law leaves to the American citizen all the freedom of speech which he has hitherto enjoyed, but it denies the same freedom to an alien seeking shelter on our shores.

Some weeks ago, John Turner, an Englishman, upon his arrival here, was seized by our government and sent to Ellis Island, where he is now detained as a prisoner. The objection against John Turner is that he advocates the abolition of all established governments, and is a believer in the Anarchist theory of society. A mass meeting was held the other day in Cooper Union, to protest against this action of the United States Government.

We have no sympathy with the propaganda of Anarchism. We believe in law and order at any price. Bad laws, or a wretchedly incompetent government, even, would not, in our opinion, justify a return to the wild and lawless state of barbarism. Of course the Anarchists do not advocate barbarism, but it would be difficult to preserve the benefits of civilization without an association of some kind. It is not sensible to go too far, under the plea that we are only following the logic of liberty to its conclusion. Even liberty has its limitations. "The excess of civilization," said the French philosopher, "is barbarism." It was our own Emerson who said "All appetites are in excess;" and he could easily have added that all suffering is born of the exaggerated appetites of men. It would be foolish to argue that there can be no intemperance in liberty. That will depend upon what we mean by liberty. We are free to think and speak and act as we choose, provided there is a limitation upon our freedom; provided we do not prevent others from doing the same. The freedom of all, then, is a restraint upon the freedom of the individual. It could not very well be otherwise, unless we go back to the woods and throw civilization to the dogs. To protest against this social restraint upon our individual freedom—is to ask for too much freedom, or, as Emerson would say, "It is to have our appetites in excess."

But our government has erred, from the best motives, we are sure, for we are not of those who think that patriotism consists in always finding fault with one's country—our government has erred in seeking to exclude from the country, by force, an alien, for the opinions which he holds and the frankness with which he gives expression to them. What is John Turner's crime? He does not believe in government. But if we can allow people to deny God, why not extend the same courtesy to those who deny the king or the Republic? Would not the government become fearfully despotic, if it could suppress all criticism of itself? It is true of government as it is of men, that "he who will have no judge but himself, condemns himself." No one should be at liberty to preach violence as a means of making converts. Such a course would be the negation of liberty. But to suppress intellectual opinions, about or against the government, and the free expression of them, is a species of violence. If a government resorts to violence, it is sure to set a bad example to the people. Not only is it true that persecuting a cause helps to popularize it, but it also encourages the spirit of persecution. If gentleness and justice in rulers beget gentleness and justice in the people, violence in governors provokes violence in the governed. Nihilism is a child of Russian despotism. The best remedy for the evils flowing from liberty is—more liberty. We do not believe in the papacy any more than John Turner does in government, and we should both be free to say so as long as neither of us advocates that either the papacy or the government should be forcibly deprived of its right to exist. We do not exclude the Turk nor the Russian for believing in the divine right of kings. Why should we deny the same asylum to an Englishman who believes in no government?

But this extreme and regrettable action on the part of our government is the effect of the violence and bloodshed indulged in by certain anarchists, who under the least provocation lose their heads, and forget that to kill in the name of liberty is not any the less a crime. To murder the representatives of the people, not in open war, but in secret and without warning, because they do not agree with us, is intolerably stupid as well as wicked. The cause of civilization is compromised by people whose appetites are in excess. They help to bring about a reversion of feeling in the minds of the people against the sacred cause of liberty. They alienate the sympathies of the friends of progress, and give to the croakers and charlatans, to the reactionists and conservatives, an opportunity to step in and block the movement of ideas.

We earnestly hope that our country will not follow the example of Russia. She is too great and too strong to be either fearful or suspicious. It is one of the glories of England, that during her South African war, pro-Boer meetings were held in London, at which the government was openly and vigorously denounced. It is also one of the glories of America, that during the war against the Filipinos, our people were at liberty to hold meetings to criticize the administration and to express sympathy with our enemies. Such freedom of speech would be impossible in Russia or Austria, or even in Germany. Only a government conscious of its strength could be so generous. Let not America lower herself in the esteem of her loyal children. It is suicidal to make war upon the liberty of speech. It is folly to persecute opinions.—Liberal Review.

WHO SHOULD DO THE CHOOSING?

If I have read Lucifer intelligently for the past seven or eight years, the prevailing opinion among sex reformers in regard to heredity and race improvement is that woman is the race builder, the race preserver, the transmitter of qualities; that she is the soil from which springs the race and from which the race receives its character, while man acts simply as a fertilizer for the "seed of the woman," an agent through which is begun the process of quickening, unfolding and developing the life which already existed in the seed, somewhat as the rain and sun act upon the grain in the soil of Mother Earth.

It seems to me an incongruity that, side by side with the contention that the mother, and not the father, transmits character to the child, we have Lucifer's proposed remedy for race deficiency—viz.: That woman be freed from all legal, social and religious interference in the matter of selecting a father for her child. Why not, instead, guarantee the man freedom from all restraint in the selection of a mother for his child, if it is from her, and not him, that the child is to receive the qualities that make for its own happiness and the betterment of society? It certainly will not be denied that the human male is equally interested with the female in the happiness and well-being of his progeny, and would be quite as likely as she to be governed by such desiderata in the choice of a sex-mate. If the mother is the soil whose character predetermines the strength or weakness, the perfection or imperfection of the fruit, then it would seem that any sort of a quickening agent, or father, would answer the essential purpose, but that the main care should be to select the right kind of soil, or mother, from which to grow this fruit.

I am only a student, and would be pleased to have some teacher clear up this incongruity of doctrine. If it is to the mothers we must look for race qualities, it would seem to be the proper thing for the man to seek out the woman who would be most likely to transmit desirable qualities to his children, and beget children of no other. On the other hand, if the traits and qualities of the father are going to prevail in the offspring, then Moses Harman is right in contending that the remedy for the manifold defects of our race is that woman be absolutely untrammeled in deciding what man may be the father of her children, and in refusing to bear children to one who is not her choice. If, however, it be granted that, as a rule, the child partakes equally of the traits, tendencies and qualities of both parents, then—what?

J. L. HICKS.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY.

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 45.

daubing his face and body with clay and the blood of animals or of his slain human foes, he began to deck himself with the feathers of birds and the tails and hides of animals. Originally it is likely that he wore the hides of animals to make himself appear brave or terrible like the animals from which the hides were taken. He had no thought at that time of clothing his body from a sense of shame. But he must have discovered that the hides made him uncomfortably warm, and therefore he ventured into colder climates where the hides actually served for clothing.

Custom long continued acquires the force of an imperative law. In climates where clothing was necessary to keep the body warm it often came to be believed that clothing was the proper covering for the body and that there was something disgraceful in being seen in a primitive state of nakedness. There have been found some exceptions to this rule, however. There are some Eskimo tribes which wear abundant clothing and yet men, women and children expose themselves naked in their huts with no feeling of shame.

The close association of clothing with modesty is shown by the fact that no matter how scanty it may be its removal causes, among some peoples, a sense of shame. The Andamanese women who wear merely a tail of leaves suspended from the back of the girdle are so modest that they will not renew them in the presence of one another. In ancient Samoa, Turner says, the only necessary garment for a man or women was an apron of leaves, but they possessed so delicate a sense of propriety that even while bathing they wore a girdle of leaves or some other covering round the waist. On the other hand, among the Maoris, whose climate makes abundant clothing necessary, men and women, boys and girls, with no feeling of impropriety, strip themselves and swim together. Among the Japanese, also, until quite recently, it was a common thing for men and women to bathe together in a state of complete nudity. Western influence has checked this custom to a great extent, but it still prevails in many parts of Japan.

Captain Hunter, speaking of a Port Jackson woman who was absolutely nude, said: "There is such an air of innocence about her that clothing scarcely appears necessary."

H. H. Johnston observes of the Wachaga tribe: "We should be apt to call, from our point of view, their nakedness and almost unconsciousness of shame indelicate, but it is rather, when one gets used to it, a pleasing survival of the old innocent days when prurient thoughts were absent from the mind of man."

With all her own exalted notions of personal modesty, what refined and cultivated American woman would approve of the suggestion to drape Powers' statue of the Greek Slave?

In his work on "Wild Races of Southeastern India," page 349, Lewin says: "True modesty lies in the absence of thought on the subject."

The young girl who enters a hospital to become a trained nurse soon learns to assist in surgical operations performed by male physicians where the secret parts of the patient are exposed to view, and yet no thought of shame enters her mind. In her own personal conduct, however, she may be, and in fact almost invariably is, as strict an observer of the conventional code of modesty as any other young woman. So it is with many women who pose as artists' models. They have no thought of immodesty in the presence of the artist alone, but if a stranger should enter the room the model would endeavor to conceal herself. Before the stranger entered the room her nudity was a matter of which she was barely conscious, or at least to which she gave no thought of possible impropriety. The entrance of the stranger aroused her consciousness of her nudity and awakened her dormant sense of shame. But if exposure of the female person to a person of the opposite sex is in itself shameful, why should she feel no shame when posing for the artist and yet be overcome with confusion when she became aware that another man was looking at her? Is it not because with the arousing of her consciousness of her nudity there are many other complex emotions aroused which whelm her with confusion?

There was no immodesty in her posing for the artist. On the contrary there was absolute modesty, because modesty is a state of the mind, and is perfectly consistent with nudity so long as no feeling of impropriety is associated with the nudity. She had become accustomed to posing for the artist and had become convinced that he entertained no disrespect for her on account of her nakedness. With regard to the opinion of the stranger, there was in her mind a feeling of uncertainty, to say the least, if not a positive conviction that he would regard her as immodest. Her modesty asserted itself, therefore, in the form of fear of his disapproval.

Strange as it may seem, this reluctance to being seen naked may exist among women who make no pretense to chastity. It is not uncommon among professional prostitutes. Lombroso, in "La Donna Delinquente," says prostitutes often make greater resistance to physical examination by physicians than is shown by respectable women. Yet it cannot be said that the prostitute therefore is more modest than her respectable sister, for, as I have said, modesty is a state of the mind, and excessive prudishness almost invariably is an indication of immodest thoughts. Dr. Holder mentions the reluctance to examination by physicians shown by women of the Crow tribe of Indians in Montana and adds: "Their modesty would not be so striking were it not that, almost to a woman, the females of this tribe are prostitutes."

It seems to me, however, that modesty is hardly the proper word to use in this instance. These women certainly have little modesty, but in place of it is an unreasonable prudishness. Somewhat related to it is the feeling of reluctance which many educated and refined women feel towards discussing sexual matters with their daughters and giving information concerning their natural functions. This feeling is inherited to some degree and is due in part to false education. It is gratifying to know that this false notion of modesty is fast disappearing among sensible women and that there is an increasing sentiment among them in favor of giving their daughters full instructions regarding their natural functions. In fact, prudishness on such matters between mother and daughter has come to be regarded by many sensible people as being as absurd as the custom of a generation ago of avoiding the use of the word "leg," always calling it a "limb."

Dr. Helen Kennedy, after a study of 125 American high school girls, wrote: "Thirty-six girls in this high school passed into womanhood with no knowledge whatever, from a proper source, of all that makes them women. Thirty-nine were probably not much wiser, for they stated they had received some instruction, but had not talked freely on the matter. From the fact that the curious girl did not talk freely on what naturally interested her, it is possible she was put off with a few words as to personal care, and a reprimand for her curiosity. Less than half of the girls felt free to talk with their mothers of this most important matter."

With such false education, or lack of education, in girlhood, is it any wonder that so many women, sensible in other matters, regard prudishness as essential to modesty?

Lack of space in this little pamphlet necessarily compels a very superficial consideration of the phenomena of modesty, prudishness and shame. I have mentioned only some of their most apparent phases. That there is anything vile or unclean in the normal exercise of the sexual functions seems to me to be utterly repugnant to reason and the facts in nature. Out of this notion of vileness arises, not charming and captivating modesty, but its base counterfeit, prudishness. Genuine modesty is a factor which gives to love a great part of its piquancy and charm. It is as admirable in both woman and man as prudishness is disgusting and hideous. Stendhal, in "De l'Amour," says:

"It is modesty that gives to love the aid of imagination and, in so doing, imparts life to it. . . . To a timid and tender woman there ought to be no greater torture than to allow herself in the presence of a man something which she thinks she ought to blush at. I am convinced that a proud woman would prefer a thousand deaths. A slight liberty taken on the tender side by the man she loves gives a woman a moment of keen pleasure, but if he has the air of blaming her for it, or only of not enjoying it with transport, an awful doubt must be left in her mind. For a woman above the vulgar level there is, then, everything to be gained by very reserved manners. The play is not equal. She hazards against a slight pleasure, or against the advantage of appearing a little amiable, the danger of biting remorse, and a feeling of shame which must render even the lover less dear. An evening passed gaily and thoughtlessly, without thinking of what comes after, is dearly paid at this price. The sight of a lover with whom one fears that one has had this kind of wrong must become odious for several days. Can one be surprised at the force of a habit the slightest infractions of which are punished with such atrocious shame?

"As to the utility of modesty, it is the mother of love. As to the mechanism of the feeling, nothing is simpler. The mind is absorbed in feeling shame instead of being occupied with desire. Desires are forbidden, and desires lead to actions. It is evident that every tender and proud woman—and these two things, being cause and effect, naturally go together—must contract habits of coldness which the people whom she disconcerts call prudery. The power of modesty is so great that a tender woman betrays herself with her lover rather by deeds than by words. The evil of modesty is that it constantly leads to falsehood."

Women are frequently blamed by men who cannot understand why they are reluctant to express freely their sentiments in love. This precaution is not only natural, but it meets the thorough approval of calm reason. Man is the natural wooer and it too often happens that he misrepresents his real feelings to the woman in order to win her. Where there is one man who afterwards respects the woman who shows a prompt willingness to yield to his advances, there are dozens, if not hundreds, who will despise her, or esteem her lightly, for it. Woman may have as much right as man to make the advances, yet the fact remains that the vast majority of men have no strong and lasting regard for women who are too easily won. Man, as a rule, does not appreciate a woman's love unless it requires some effort to win it. It is doubtless true also that there are some men who do not appreciate it even when they have won it through great effort. These facts have existed in nature through countless ages and from that experience repeated from generation to generation woman has acquired an inherited knowledge of the value of a show of resistance to the wooer. And that experience is still going on. Women are deceived and betrayed every day and others after them continue to give their confidence to men who are unworthy of it. Precaution, therefore, is as advisable for a woman in matters of the affections as it is natural.

In conclusion, and in support of my assertion that man is the natural wooer, I quote the following from an article on "Love and Death," written by the eminent churchman and scientist, Dr. St. George Mivart, who was excommunicated from the Roman Catholic Church, shortly before his death, by Cardinal Vaughan:

"For untold ages our animalcules lived and increased by fission in perpetual vigor, sexless and immortal. But in time some pairs would meet and blend into one, gaining strength and regeneration by this process, which is known in science as 'conjugation,' and which in the initiation of the sexual process, or first incarnation of Aphrodite. Her second came to be when the conjugating cells, at first similar, became what we call male and female. It was advantageous that there should be these two elements; one of larger bulk and quiescent habit, that seeks not, but needs to be sought; the other minute and ceaselessly active till it can find one of the larger kind wherein to merge its being secure, in the extinction of its separate self, its supreme nirvana.

"This distinction between the 'seekers' and 'sought' pervades organic nature. It is found in multitudes of fungi and myriads of sea weeds, especially in those lovely ones (the Floridae) which exhibit such complex arrangement of their sexual adjuncts. It is found in ferns, and in flowers of all kinds. It is found in conifers—fertilized in a very Danae shower of gold—whose pollen grains are wafted by the wind to the female cells tranquilly nesting amidst the fir-cones' scales. Orchids and many other flowers bribe insects, by well-filled cups of nectar, to bear unwittingly the seeker they would welcome. Amongst many lowly animals the female appears as an almost motionless parasite, while the male wanders in search of her, a restless Celebs. Amongst higher forms we see the stag pursue the flying hind, and birds seek to gain a mate by song and many a quaint display of courting plumage. It is the male which is normally the seeker, from the lowest insect to the young man, carefully appareled, who crosses the ballroom to seek the partner he desires."

A large portion of the noblest and most valuable moral teaching has been the work, not only of men who did not know, but of men who knew and rejected, the Christian faith.—Mill.

"WHO IS THE ENEMY?"

Hugh O. Pentecost writes thus to Edwin C. Walker about the latter's new work, "Who Is the Enemy: Anthony Comstock or You?" "Your pamphlet is a strong discussion of the question at issue that one could give to a conservative friend with some hope that he might read it through."

Dr. H. W. Shufeldt, biologist, author of several scientific works and of more than seven hundred articles on medicine, travel, science, sexual problems and other subjects, writes to E. C. Walker: "I thank you very much indeed for the copy you sent me of your valuable pamphlet, 'Who Is the Enemy: Anthony Comstock or You?' I have read it from cover to cover with the utmost satisfaction and unqualified approval. It is one of the best and strongest things you have put out, and I am with you solid in both the letter and spirit of it. I prize the copy most highly." Ask for table of contents and specimen pages of "Who Is the Enemy?" or send 20 cents to this office for the pamphlet.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

KAREZZA.

SCIENCE OF MARRIAGE.

A godsend to every wife—a joy to every husband.

This work brings peace into homes disrupted by inharmony in the sexual relation. Dr. A. B. Stockham advises a practice which leads to individual liberty and to deeper love between husband and wife.

Dr. F. G. Welch: "After a personal trial of its teachings, I want to thank you for a great service to humanity."

Rev. George R. Rossbew: "Out of a beautiful and ennobling experience, I can say, I KNOW."

gives a high ideal of the marital relation and teaches control of the Procreating Power.

J. A. Smalley, M. D.: "I have received more actual benefit from the practice of KAREZZA teachings than from all other books on Sexual Science."

A. B. Franklin, M. D.: "KAREZZA does more than any other single thing to make marriage a perpetual courtship."

LEVANT CLOTH, POSTPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MEN, WOMEN, AND CHANCE.

BY WILLIAM PLATT.

Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. Price 75c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

WOMAN AND HER RELATION TO THE CHURCH, OR CANON LAW FOR WOMEN.

BY HARRIET M. CLOSZ.

A succinct statement of the position to which women were doomed by the Church Fathers and authorities. Every woman should possess a copy. Price, 25c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; OR THE PRICE OF VIRTUE.

By Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Witchcraft, by Lucinda B. Chandler; Life's Gifts, by Olive Schreiner, and Marriage—What It Was and Is, and Will the Coming Woman Marry? Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

ISOLA; OR, THE DISINHERITED.

A drama in six acts. By Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1; postage 7c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 63, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We cannot sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 50c each, two for 50c. Address EDWIN C. WALKER, 244 W. 143d St., New York, N. Y.

WANTED—500 women to study medicine or midwifery. Next term begins January 1, 1904. College of Medicine and Surgery, 245 Ashland Blvd., Chicago, Ill. DR. FLORENCE DRESSLER, Secretary. (Dept. A.)

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

THE LIBERAL MAIL-ORDER JEWELER.

Now permanent at No. 110 N. Kensington Ave., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 20 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's Line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Thetans in the Crucible," free.

J. H. GREER, M. D.,

52 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.

Office Hours—9 a. m. to 5 p. m.; Wednesdays and Saturdays, 9 a. m. to 8 p. m.; Sundays, 9 a. m. to 12 m.

Telephone, Randolph 42.

DR. OGILVIE A. RICE,

DENTIST.

1556 MILWAUKEE AVE., COR. WESTERN, CHICAGO.

Telephone West 141.

PHILIP G. PEABODY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.

19 COURT SQUARE, ROOM 41.

BOSTON, MASS.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD OWN

TOKOLOGY.

A COMPLETE HEALTH GUIDE.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

Teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions.

Treats of diseases of women and children; contains practical teachings on Change of Life, limiting offspring, etc.

Linda N. Armstrong writes: "If I knew I were to be the mother of innumerable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of Tokology."

Dr. C. B. Willis: "Tokology is doing more for women than all other books put together."

CLOTH, PREPAID, $2.25; LEATHER, $2.75.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES.

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

Contents—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only"; Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen"; What Are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women. With Appendix: The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 15c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

A treatise on Sexual Science and Marriage, rich in thought and strong in expression. Emphatically a book for the thinker.

Carpenter holds that woman's freedom is based upon economics; she must be independent financially that she may not be forced to sell herself in or out of marriage. He also makes a strong plea for a motherhood of freedom and thoughtful preparation.

AMERICAN EDITION, CLOTH, PREPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM.

THE RELATIONSHIP OF EACH TO HUMAN LIBERTY.

BY E. C. WALKER.

The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organization and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. Price 5c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

CREATIVE LIFE.

A BOOK FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

A timely and important message not found in text books. Every girl seeks and should have this true, plain and practical knowledge. One writes: "Thank you, thank you, dear Doctor, for the plain but beautiful thoughts. Womanhood, motherhood and life have new meanings. You ennoble your theme." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

A NOVEL BY GEORGE N. MILLER.

FORTIETH THOUSAND.

"The Strike of a Sex" is a fascinating novel bearing upon the sexual relations. It is a bold protest against the customary life of most married people, and at the same time a prophecy of happier conditions between man and wife. Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW.

A PRIMER OF SEXUAL RATIONALISM.

BY E. C. WALKER.

"Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes."

Paper covers; 42 large pages. Price 10c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

"PERSONAL EXPERIENCES OF TWO AMERICAN ANTI-VIVISECTIONISTS IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES."

BY PHILIP G. PEABODY.

With an Appendix by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c. Apply to PHILIP G. PEABODY, 15 Court Square, Boston, Mass.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY.

By Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Tradition, by E. C. Walker; Motherhood in Freedom, by Moses Harman; The Greatest Sin (an Allegory), by E. B. Kerr, and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom, by Oscar Rotter. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN.

By E. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.; The New Martyrdom, by Lillian Harman, and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE.

By E. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese, by C. W. Coolridge; A Traveler's Tale, by E. B. Kerr; The Cat's Story, by Emile Zola. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

1007

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

HILDA'S HOME.

A STORY OF WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

With Macaulay, Rosa Graul would say: "The cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty." Hence she has no fears that under Freedom the Home and the Family would cease to exist, or that woman would be less loving and lovable, or that man would be less manly and honorable. On the contrary, she maintains that only in the soil and atmosphere of freedom is it possible for true womanhood and manhood to live and flourish.

426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

One of the best short works on the subject. A charming little gift book.

"Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it."

DAINTILY PRINTED. PREPAID, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES.

BY E. C. WALKER.

Contents—Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varieties; The New Woman: What Is She? What Will She Be? The Static Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Ophiolo of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections Upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love and Life." Price 15c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD.

AN OUTLINE OF PRACTICAL CO-OPERATIVE INDIVIDUALISM.

BY HENRY OLERICH.

Regarded by many persons as a more interesting and consistent economic reform novel than Bellamy's "Looking Backward."

Bound in red silk with gold title. Nearly 450 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, $1.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED.

BY JOHN B. KELSO.

Contents—Derivations and Definitions of Political Terms; Various Forms of Government; General Principles of Government; Origin of Government; Declaration of Independence; Articles of Confederation; Defects of the Confederation; Formation of the Constitution of the United States; Taxation; Tariff or Protection; War Punishments; Marriage; Religion; Prohibition; Money; What a Government Should Be.

519 pages. Cloth binding somewhat damaged, and reduced from $1.50 to 50c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY, AND THE STATE.

BY FREDERICK ENGELS.

Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans.

217 pages; bound in cloth. Price 50c; postage 5c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STORY OF IJAIN;

OR, THE EVOLUTION OF A MIND.

By Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Stuart Rose), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. Price $1; postage 8c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE CURSE OF MATERNITY.

From the French of Henry Fevre. Together with How to Escape the Curse, by Jonathan Mayo Crane; Woman's "Duty" to Bear Children, by E. C. Walker; True and False Morality, by C. L. James; and Love's Law, by William Francis Barnard. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE.

By John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention, by Mariette; Reminiscences of Berlin Heights, by A. Warren, and The Sexes and Love in Freedom, by Oscar Rotter. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN.

By Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yclept Society, by Moses Hull; Virgin Soil, by George Egerton, and Normal Sexual Action, by Ernest Wilson. Price, 25c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of Freethought and Free Love. By Orford Northcote. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Martian. By M. Harman. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LIBERTY: Political, Religious, Social and Moral. By A. F. Tindall. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM, by E. C. Walker. Price, 10c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

THE COMING WOMAN, by Lillie D. White. Price, 5c. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

PRICE 5 CENTS. CHICAGO, ILL., FEB. 18, E. M. 204. [C. E. 1904.] WHOLE NO. 1008

AMOR VINCIT.

BY LAURA B. EARLE.

Through devious ways and dark,
Love creeps, Love crawls or flies,
Her end alone in view.
Deceived, she turns and tries anew;
Denied, she waits another day;
Rebuffed, she smiles and wins.

A MOST UNSPEAKABLE LAW.

As soon after the assassination of President McKinley as practicable a number of the states of this Union passed laws which were directed against anarchy and Anarchists. Some of these laws were repealed practically before they were ever allowed to be printed on the statute books, the legislatures of those states having been fortunate enough to come to their senses before they allowed the foolish legislation to get imbedded in print, but some of the legislatures permitted the laws to stand, among the latter being the state of New York. And then the United States government passed a law affecting immigrants that was directed against anarchy and Anarchists, which law is still in operation. Just why the assassination of the President was an occasion for the passage of these laws it would be difficult to understand if the public were in the habit of reasoning about happenings (which it is not), for of the three assassinations of Presidents which this country has seen, not one of the Presidents was assassinated by an Anarchist. In 1865 President Lincoln was assassinated by an actor who I suppose politically was a Democrat. He was certainly a native-born American citizen. That was before anarchy was heard of. In 1881 President Garfield was assassinated by an earnest Christian Republican who believed that he was doing God's service, and the Republican party's service, because at that time it was supposed whoever was doing the Republican party's service was doing God's service, and I believe it is thought so still.

The last assassination, that of President McKinley in 1901, was accomplished, as nearly as I can find out, by a native-born American brought up in the public schools of our country, where he received part of his education, and the other part of his education was in parochial schools of the Roman Catholic Church, so he was a native-born Roman Catholic. There is no evidence whatever that he was ever associated with any group or company of Anarchists. I believe it is true that he did appear at some Anarchists' meetings and tried to make the Anarchists at those meetings believe that he was an Anarchist, but they came to the conclusion that he was not an Anarchist, but a spy of some kind that came to the meetings in order to make some kind of report. At all events, he was not associated with any group of Anarchists in this country or any other place. So he certainly was not an Anarchist. It was said at the time that he gave out that he had been instructed by Miss Emma Goldman, and you will all remember the crazy panic that struck the country as soon as Miss Goldman's name was mentioned. That was entirely untrue, as I have been carefully informed, and the probability is that the man who assassinated President McKinley never said so, and nobody knows what he did say. The assassin was immediately taken into seclusion and nobody allowed to see him, and what report came out from him was through the police. It is conceivable that the police would do all they could to associate him with the set of despised Anarchists. I repeat, it is not easy to see why special Anarchist legislation should have been framed on account of the assassination of President McKinley, but whether reasonable or unreasonable, it was done. I am going to call your attention this morning to some of this legislation. Naturally, I will take the legislation of this state, because that should be the most interesting to us.

Section 468a of our penal code reads as follows, the act being passed in 1892: "Criminal anarchy is the doctrine that organized government should be overthrown by force or violence, or by the assassination of the executive head, or of any of the executive officials of government, or by any unlawful means. The advocacy of such doctrine either by word of mouth or writing is a felony."

There is no particular penalty attached to that section, but all felonies, unless otherwise specified, are punishable by imprisonment for seven years in state's prison. On July 4, 1776, our forefathers passed a Declaration of Independence, and they immediately began to act upon this declaration here enunciated, and in an unlawful manner by force and violence they overthrew the government of England under which they were living. But to-day, in this state, the advocacy of this doctrine announced in the Declaration of Independence is a felony—at least, that is the way it looks to me. I have read this law to you twice, and I have read these passages of the Declaration of Independence twice. I want you to think about it and see if it is not a felony to advocate these principles of the Declaration of Independence. This declaration declares as soon as a government becomes destructive of the rights of the people it is the right and duty of the people to overthrow that government—naturally by force and violence and by unlawful means, because there are no lawful means of overthrowing government. I ask you to consider whether the doctrine of the Declaration of Independence to overthrow the government is not criminal anarchy under the laws of our state, and any person who preaches that doctrine is subject to arrest and imprisonment for seven years in state's prison. That is, if Emma Goldman or Benjamin R. Tucker (I speak of these because they are publicly known as Anarchists) or anybody else should stand in a hall, especially in an obscure hall behind a beer saloon, in this state, and advocate that it is the right and duty of the people to overthrow the government when it is no longer suited to their needs, that person could be arrested and tried in this state for criminal anarchy. That is the way it looks to me; if you can figure it out any other way, then do so. If that is true, then there is a result of foolish legislation.

And it is against our principles of government that a law should be passed against any belief or doctrine, because hitherto we have been supposed to be free to advocate any kind of doctrine we please. In years past no person could be put in prison except for what he did, not for what he said; some "overt act" the law said. Like the doctrine of polygamy, any person has a right to stand on a platform in this country and advocate that a man should marry as many wives as he pleases, but if he should marry more than one wife, he could be put in prison. It is not against the law to advocate the doctrine of polygamy. Only ten or fifteen years ago this doctrine of anarchy could be advocated. Now this state has gone further and says to advocate anarchy is a crime. All peoples in all ages have believed that you have the right to overthrow government by force and violence as soon as you get the power to do so, and governments have been overthrown again and again by such means; and they will continue to be overthrown in that way, I suppose. But this doctrine in this state is declared to be criminal anarchy, punishable for seven years in state's prison. They might as well pass a law making the belief that two and two are four criminal as to declare that the overthrow of government is criminal anarchy.

The following section says that any person who organizes or helps to organize an Anarchist meeting is punishable for not more than ten years or by fine of not more than five thousand dollars or both. So, if you belong to any society or group that teaches the doctrine that government may be overthrown by force and violence, and unlawfully, you are subject to ten years in prison and five thousand dollars' fine. At the very time that law was placed upon our statute books there was a Cuban junta in this city conspiring for the overthrow of the government of Spain in Cuba, by force and violence, and the present President of the United States was one of the most active participants in the overthrow by force and violence of the said government in Cuba. Under this law, if the law means anything at all, that man, instead of now being in the presidential chair, and the others like him, ought to be in state's prison.

I believe there is a perpetual Irish society in this city who are conspiring all the time for the overthrow of the English government. They try to encourage the people to rise up and overthrow that government, as the American colonists did in 1776. Now, all of those Irishmen who teach that the English government should be overthrown by force and violence are criminals under this law. One of our judges some time ago was talking to me about this law and the foolishness of it, and he said that there is no doubt in his mind that every member of this Irish society that is advocating the use of force to overthrow the English government could be sent to prison under this anarchy law. Such is the opinion of the judge, and that is why I call attention to it. He says the law can be applied to those persons.

Section 468d says: "Whenever two or more persons assemble for the purpose of advocating or teaching the doctrines of criminal anarchy" they can be fined $5,000 and sent to prison for ten years. So if two of you meet and say it can ever be proper to overthrow government by force and violence, and if there happens to be a detective around upholding this law, you are liable to punishment by imprisonment. You do not need to belong to an Anarchist group. All that is required is for two of you to get together and say it is proper for the government to be overthrown by force and violence. There seem to be two kinds of anarchy. One kind advocates the use of force and the other does not.

And then, a man who rents a hall to any of these dangerous persons, knowing the purpose of the meeting, can be sent to prison for two years and fined $2,000. Now here, in my opinion, is a law in several sections which violates one of the very first principles of our government, both state and national—namely, the right of free speech. Free speech means the right to advocate any doctrine in which one believes. It means the right that was exercised in our early days and was fought for by our forefathers. Free speech meant the right to say anything one pleased against the President or government or against the police. That right has always been supposed to be one of our choicest heritages, and it was put in the very first amendment to the United States Constitution in these words: "Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the government for redress of grievances." But here is a law which says if two of you assemble peaceably to talk about the doctrine of anarchy, you will be sent to prison, and the person who allows you to talk about that doctrine in his house will be sent to prison. If that is not a violation of the old-fashioned right of free speech, I cannot imagine anything that is such a violation.

Now look at the law passed by the United States government on March 3, 1893. It is a law governing the landing of immigrants in this country. The second section in that law says that all idiots, insane persons, epileptics, paupers, persons likely to become a public charge, those afflicted with loathsome or contagious diseases, persons who have been convicted of crime, polygamists and Anarchists shall be excluded from admission to the United States. The law was changed March, 1903, by inserting the word "Anarchists." You will see that the Anarchists are put into the company of the insane, diseased and loathsome. That includes the Prince Kropotkin who came to this country just before the law was passed and whose lectures all over the country were attended by what we call the best-educated and best-dressed people of the community. He is one of the foremost Anarchists of the world, and he could no more land in this country now than a low, diseased, insane person could land. Prince Kropotkin is distinguished in the scientific world as the author of valuable books on sociology that have nothing to do with anarchy, and he lives quietly and peaceably in England, a country that is proud of him; still, under this law, he is too dangerous and too filthy in his mind, as these other persons are in their bodies, to enter the United States. Count Tolstoi cannot land in this country because he is an Anarchist. The man who is to-day probably the most distinguished humanitarian, the most distinguished disciple of Jesus, the man who has said more on the subject of human liberty, progress and freedom than any other man living—this man cannot come to the United States; he is ranked among the diseased, immoral and criminal. His books come and we read all the anarchy he writes, but he cannot come and teach anarchy with his own mouth. Ibsen cannot come. Why? Because he said, "The State must go," but his plays come and we can stand it to go and see them. Then there is Reclus, the greatest geographer in the world; he cannot land because he, too, is an Anarchist.

John Turner, the young man who has spent the last seven or eight years in England in organizing the retail clerks into unions, cannot land in this country. Mr. Turner at his home in England is received and respected and desired, but when he set foot on the soil of this country he was arrested and thrown into prison, and is there yet, because he is an Anarchist, and because, when asked by the immigration authorities if he is an Anarchist, he was sufficiently straightforward to say, "I am an Anarchist," although he knew what the law was. Had he been sufficiently unprincipled to lie about his political and sociological beliefs, then there would have been nothing said about him, because nobody would have known whether he is an Anarchist or not.

That law also says that no person who disbelieves in or is opposed to all organized government shall be allowed to land. I saw last week in the Truth Seeker that some time ago, in a discussion between Hon. Frederic R. Coudert and Colonel Ingersoll, Mr. Coudert, who recently died, and was a Roman Catholic and a distinguished member of the New York bar, said: "When in the history of the world has thought ever been fettered? If there be a page in history upon which such an absurdity is written I have failed to find it." Well, he lived long enough to find it (but I do not know whether he found it or not), for he lived some time after the law was passed. We have found it all right, because there is a law which says a person who disbelieves in organized government shall not be allowed to land in the United States.

This United States law goes much further than our state law. The law says that if you come into the country with your mind empty on a certain subject you cannot land. That is one of the most strange laws ever passed in the history of the world. The immigrant is shut out, not because of what he believes, but for something he has not got. Nothing could be more absurd than that. Mr. Coudert said he had failed to find a law so absurd as to fetter thought. Well, here is a law more absurd; it does not fetter thought at all, but it punishes for not having a thought.

More than that, in the second paragraph of this same section it says that any person who knowingly aids or assists any such person to enter the United States, except pursuant to the rules and regulations made by the secretary of the treasury, shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned for from one to five years, or both fined and imprisoned. That is to say, if you invite into this country a person who does not believe in organized government, you will be subject to a fine of $5,000 or five years in prison. If a literary society in this country should invite any of those noted men to the United States the members of the society could be arrested and sent to prison.

Now, it is worse than that. You can believe in government, in the divine right of kings, in the divine right of the President or of the majority, but if you happen to belong to a society controlled by persons who do not believe in those things you can be prevented from landing in this country.

At the Manhattan Liberal Club, which meets every Friday evening on East Fifteenth street, and where all kinds of beliefs are discussed on the side of Liberalism, are some who go there for the purpose of upholding conservatism. If a man on the other side of the Atlantic, who does not believe in government by force, should join this society, he could not land here because opposed to organized government.

And further: I will not read you section 21, because such matter is dry and tiresome, but any alien who disbelieves in organized government can be deported from this country any time within three years after he lands. Suppose an alien from the other side should land here with the Kaiser or the Czar or the King of England in his mind, orthodox, and as stupid as they are made. Suppose after he lands here and gets a breath of what we call freedom, he gets the Emperor, Czar or King out of his brain, and he falls into the hands of one of these wicked persons who look forward to the time when war shall cease and policemen's clubs shall have been beaten into toothpicks—suppose he should begin to dream dreams that we can walk the earth without fear of being slugged by somebody in the name of government about every time we turn around; suppose he becomes the disciple of Tolstoi or Ibsen or Jesus Christ, and he says, "I would rather think than fight; I would rather do good to a man than kill him." In the meantime he has settled himself in business and married an American girl. He has not said anything about his belief to anybody, but some neighbor suspects he has lost faith in government, and writes a letter to Secretary Cortelyou or his successor in Washington, and says: "One of my neighbors who came from Russia has lost his faith in government, has become a disbeliever in organized government, and he has been here two years and eleven months." The Washington secretary orders this man arrested, and he is taken before a secret tribunal and asked, "Do you believe in government by force?" "I do not." "Then out you go. Put him on a ship and send him away." And he has not opened his mouth or done a thing.

You see what a spy and informer can do to an honest man under this law. When questioned about his belief, should he say he was an orthodox Republican or Democrat (and that might be a lie), he would not be disturbed; but if he should tell the truth he would be deported three thousand miles away from his home and family.

And, mind you, all of that power is in the hands of one man, who is at present Secretary Cortelyou. Section 38 says this law shall be enforced by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor under such rules and regulations as he shall prescribe. Another section tells how it shall be done. The secretary can send to the immigration port—New York, for example—and have the immigration commissioner select three men before whom the suspected immigrant is brought and examined. Nobody else is allowed to be present, no counsel, no friend, just himself in the secret chamber of these three men. And if they decide to deport him, he goes. If one of the three does not agree an appeal is made to the secretary in Washington, and whatever he says stands. That is what was done in the Turner case. An appeal was taken to Washington, and the next day, in the afternoon, it was dismissed. Of course I, as an attorney for Mr. Turner, knew it would be, because Secretary Cortelyou had him arrested, and the secretary would not decide against his own action.

No person in the world knows what was asked John Turner at that examination. And there is no appeal to any court. In this city an appeal was taken to a United States court on the ground that the law is unconstitutional. That is the only appeal that could be taken under the law. The habeas corpus procedure in the case of these immigrants is of no use. One judge in one case said, "The man ought to be discharged, but I cannot discharge him. I have no power to discharge him; all I can do is to send him back to the commissioner of immigration." Secretary Cortelyou has power above the circuit court or the supreme court of the United States! The power resides entirely in the secretary.

Now, did you ever hear of such a law as that in a supposed free country, placing such power in the hands of one man? In 1798 the alien and sedition laws were passed, something like this, giving power into the hands of the President of the United States—the President, mind you—to deport anybody who was supposed to be inimical to the administration then in power. What was the result of that law? The people rose in their might at the next election, overthrew that administration, and Jefferson was made President of the United States.

John Turner, down on Ellis Island, twice a day is allowed to take a walk to get air. Down in the basement of the building where he is confined, where the furnaces are, there are three steel cages or cells, in one of which Mr. Turner passes his time. The front of the cells is grated just like the animal cages in the zoo. He sits behind those bars, and a man sits near by all day long and watches him. I said, "Mr. Commissioner, Mr. Turner is a gentleman and he would not leave the island. Why not give him more freedom?" The commissioner turned to Mr. Turner and said, "You cannot have that freedom because you are an Anarchist." I said, "What injury can he do? He cannot blow up anything because he has nothing to blow up with." Mr. Turner is pleased to have the watchman sit there and keep him company and they are becoming friends. A caged animal and his keeper always become good friends. And there they are.

This most unspeakable law has been passed, this man is caged and kept there, and it has not made a ripple upon the surface of the sea of freedom. The Evening Post had an editorial about him when he was first arrested. The New York Independent had a splendid editorial about him several weeks ago, calling attention to the foolishness of the law. The Daily News of this city had a magnificent editorial on the subject. A magazine called the Outlook went so far as to say that they think the law is inexpedient. I wrote this magazine calling attention to some mistakes they made about it. No other paper, to my knowledge, has taken the matter up, except the Truth Seeker, which is a crank paper and is read by comparatively few persons. The Truth Seeker has, however, carried on a splendid crusade against the law.

On the other hand, the New York Times has opposed everybody who opposes the law, and the rest of the papers have kept silent about it. That is, in this land where we are supposed to have free thought there is a law which has taken away the right of thought in this country, and Americans do not care. The "ignorant foreigners" of whom we read in the newspapers do care, because they have filled Cooper Union full twice in protest against this law. This very protest has come from "the ignorant foreigners," as we say, who do not know what liberty is. These foreigners have come here from places where they have not had liberty, and they are as keen now for liberty as our forefathers were. So the only people among us, with rare exceptions, who hunger for liberty are the ones who came from what we call the despotic governments on the other side. Why is it that the American people are not in a ferment about such laws as these? It is because the laws are against the liberties of Anarchists. If the American people get what they want for themselves, they do not care anything about the same thing for other peoples. But let me tell you when you are not as much concerned about the rights and liberties of a thief or an Anarchist or a negro or an insane person as you are about your own, you have not love of liberty and do not know what liberty is.

This law, naturally, leads to acts of official tyranny and injustice. Some time ago some of us went out to Paterson, New Jersey, to hold a meeting, soon after the Cooper Union meeting, at which time Mr. Edward M. Shepard, Mr. John DeWitt Warner and others protested against this law. Our object in going to Paterson was to try to raise some money to carry this Turner case to the United States supreme court. The stair steps leading up to the hall where we were to speak were literally covered over with policemen. Mr. Bolton Hall, one of the party, hunted up the mayor of the city and the mayor said this: "That law has been passed by the Congress of the United States and you cannot have any meeting in this town to discuss it." You see what this law leads to! Mr. Hall said, "Do you mean you are going to prevent a meeting here called for the purpose of discussing the meaning and effect of a law?" Then the mayor said, "If you people should hold a meeting in this town you would bring about chaos. We know what we are about. Those Anarchists held a meeting in that hall not long ago, and they laughed at our policemen. I am not going to have my policemen laughed at." And the mayor continued: "I know what you people want. If you could have your way, we could not rule any more." These were his exact words. The next day the Paterson papers praised the mayor for violating the law, every law affecting the situation, for there never has been a time when it was forbidden in the United States to hold peaceable discussion. This mayor was

CONTINUED ON PAGE 54.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

MOSES HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Application Filed for Entry at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One copy, one year	$2.00	One copy, six months	$1.00
Two copies to one address, one year	2.25	Two copies to one address, six mos.	1.15
One copy, three months	50 cents	Single copies	5 cents

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire notify us if you wish to continue to receive Lucifer.

EASTERN REPRESENTATIVE:
E. C. WALKER, 244 WEST 143D STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

THIRD SERIES. VOL. VIII. NO. 7.

METHODS OF THE POSTOFFICE DEPARTMENT.

In compliance with the order received from the Postal Department we made application a few weeks ago for readmission of Lucifer to the second-class rate of postage. Since that time we have deposited money to cover the postage at the rate of 1 cent a copy (which money will be refunded if the department decides in our favor). We have just received the following letter:

CHICAGO, Feb. 13, 1904.

Publisher Lucifer the Light-Bearer, Chicago, Ill.—Sir:

I am advised by the department that it is unable to determine from the copy submitted with the application for admission of your publication to the second class of mail matter whether your publication now conforms in character to the requirements of the law. It appears to be "designed primarily for advertising purposes," which, if it be a fact, bars admission at the subsidized second-class rates.

A decision in the case will therefore be deferred to give you an opportunity to submit copies of the next two issues of the publication.

In connection with your case I am directed to ascertain and report to the department what relation, if any, the Stockham Publishing Company of 70 Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill., bears to the book-selling business of the publisher of Lucifer the Light-Bearer. It is noted that many of the publications formerly advertised for sale by this publisher are now offered in the columns of Lucifer the Light-Bearer by the Stockham Publishing Company.

Upon receipt of copies of your publication of the issues of February 4th and 11th the case will be given further consideration. Kindly send in addition thereto one copy of each issue of your publication to the superintendent second-class matter, postoffice. Respectfully, F. E. COYNE, Postmaster.

To which I have replied as follows:

F. E. Coyne, Postmaster, Chicago, Ill. Dear Sir:

Yours received, and in reply will say that there is no business connection between the Stockham Publishing Company and M. Harman. The Stockham Publishing Company has been doing business in Chicago for years; was in business before Lucifer came to Chicago. We have advertised and sold the Stockham books on commission. When we told the business manager that we could no longer do so, he authorized us to advertise some of their books, agreeing to pay for the space. This company advertises books in other papers, and I understand sells a large number. Certainly our advertising comprises a very small part of their business. If it is ruled that a firm cannot advertise in any paper which it chooses, merely because the publishers of that paper formerly advertised those books in its own name, I think the ruling will be a surprise to many and that it would be hard to convince Lucifer readers that it is not a made-to-order ruling.

Now, to put a stop to this long-drawn-out affair, if possible, the department may pass on the next issue of Lucifer, which will not contain any of our advertising. We will withdraw this bone of contention, though under protest; for if Lucifer is not allowed such advertising no other paper should be—and it is plainly to be seen that such is not the case. Lucifer is not, and never has been, published primarily for advertising purposes. It has never had a sufficiently large circulation to make the advertising "pay" to any great extent, as you have had the opportunity to know by inspection of Lucifer's cash-book.

The issues of February 4th and 11th contain exactly the same advertising—or nearly the same—as that contained in the issue submitted to you, so of course it would do no good to send them. We had supposed that the proportion of advertising of our own was sufficiently small to satisfy the department, but as it seems it is not, we will, as previously stated, take out all except advertisements paid for by the advertisers, and hope we will thereby satisfy the department.

Yours truly, LILLIAN HARMAN,
For M. HARMAN.

Before the order for application for reentry was received at Chicago I wrote to Mr. Madden, saying that we were willing to comply with the rulings regarding advertising, if we could find out what they were, and asking him to tell us what proportion of the advertising space a publisher could use for his own purposes, if he could use any. The reply was as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 30, 1904.

Mr. M. Harman, Publisher Lucifer the Light-Bearer, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.—Sir:

The department is in receipt of your communication dated the 2d instant—received at the department Jan. 25—in relation to the publication entitled "Lucifer the Light-Bearer."

In reply thereto you are informed that the question as to whether a publication is "designed primarily for advertising purposes" is one of fact, and will be determined in each case from the evidence.

It is not the province of the department, nor will it undertake to enter into details as to how a publication should be modified to meet the requirements of the law, but a decision as to its admissibility to the mails at the subsidized second-class rates of postage will be rendered purely upon the facts in the case.

On Jan. 19 the postmaster at Chicago, Ill., was authorized to accept an application for readmission of Lucifer the Light-Bearer to the second class of mail matter, under the provisions of section 441, P. L. & R., which requires a deposit of money sufficient to cover postage at the third-class rate on all mailings pending action by the department. Respectfully,

EDWIN C. MADDEN,
Third Assistant Postmaster General.

If the decision were rendered "purely upon the facts in the case," as Mr. Madden says, the decision would certainly be in our favor, for it is not true that Lucifer is published either primarily or secondarily for advertising purposes. The best of evidence was in the hands of the postal authorities when they had possession of our books, for they saw that the book sales were small and that nearly every cent received was expended in defraying the publishing expenses of the paper, which should be evidence that the paper is published primarily and altogether for the dissemination of the ideas printed in its pages.

Mr. Madden says it is not the province of the department to enter into details as to how a publication should be modified. Why not? What is the function of the postal officials if not to tell under what conditions mail will be transmitted? If a paper prints lottery advertisements its publishers are informed that they must comply with the regulations to the extent of leaving out such advertisements. If there is no definite rule in regard to advertising it is left in the power of the administration to permit papers friendly to it to do that which others are forbidden to do. Why should Lucifer be denied the right to advertise, when papers which send tons through the mails where we send pounds are permitted to be actually published for the money made by advertising? The department doubtless has the power to suppress Lucifer, but it has not the power to suppress these questions in the minds of the people.

As an illustration of how the postal system is left to the discretion of the various officials, instead of being regulated by rules that any one can know and understand, I will give our experience in regard to the premium, "The Prodigal Daughter," which we formerly gave. When the former superintendent of second-class mails, W. R. Getty, was in office here, he told me that it was admissible to advertise and give "The Prodigal Daughter" with three months' trial subscriptions, and we continued doing so up to a few months ago, when we withdrew the offer. A few subscriptions came in about the time the offer was withdrawn, and afterward as well, and the paper was sent to them. When I took the letters down to prove subscription list the last time I was told by the assistant superintendent that these names could not be counted as legitimate subscribers, and we would have to pay postage of a cent a copy on them, even if the others were admitted. So it would seem that it depends on the opinion of the official, instead of on the facts in the case, for the facts of the offer were precisely the same in both instances.

We have been informed that Mr. Madden has in his possession a number of letters demanding the suppression of Lucifer. So far as I am aware, Lucifer is not sent to any one who does not want it. Certainly it is not knowingly sent after it is ordered discontinued to any address. It would seem that those who do not desire to read it are not obliged to do so, while those who do want it should not be deprived of it because in opinion of others it should not be read. We are also informed that every issue of Lucifer is being read by the local inspector, and that any issue that he does not approve of will be suppressed, as was that of Dec. 17. As we do not know the gentleman, and are therefore unacquainted with his tastes in literature, we may not be able to please him, so we may at any time be deprived of the fruit of our labor, and our subscribers be—well, I remembered just in time of whom I was speaking. Of course, our servants never do anything that could be designated by the word I was about to use, so I must not say it. The subscribers of Lucifer may perhaps be able to fittingly characterize such suppressions.

LILLIAN HARMAN.

The court has upheld the decision of the postal department in the case of Helen Wilmans and has found her guilty of fraudulent use of the mails in claiming to heal by means of "absent treatment." The bare announcement in the dailies is all we have learned of the matter.

Photographs of Moses Harman, taken in San Francisco and contributed by the photographer to be sold for the benefit of Lucifer, may be ordered of Moses Harman. See address in another column. Price, 25 cents. (N. B.—Lucifer is not published primarily to advertise these pictures!)

The New York Truth Seeker has been denied Canadian mail privileges, and its northern subscribers must go without the paper. It may be seen from this that government control of the mails is an excellent thing—for the government. But the people? Oh, never mind the people.—Americus in Free Society.

A suspicious parent makes an artful child.—Thomas C. Halliburton.

EXPLANATORY.

It is a somewhat difficult position to have the responsibility at present thrust upon me of deciding the course to be taken and the things to be said at this critical moment, in the absence of the editor and proprietor. Of course, I try to do the best I can, but as no two brains can think exactly alike it is not reasonable to suppose that everything is as it would be were he present. When he returns he may change many things. In the meantime I can only try to manage as well as I can under the circumstances. That I do not succeed in pleasing everybody (and I would be one of the wonders of the world if I could!) is evidenced by the following letter:

"You beheaded my little effort, leaving out the best part, and failed to acknowledge the receipt of the money order. Why did you discriminate against me? Again, you treated with silent contempt my friendly address to your father and yourself, and why? If your father had been at the helm my little piece would have been welcomed."

When letters are not acknowledged as they should be it is not because I mean to treat them with silent contempt. It is simply because in trying to do at least two women's work—that is, to get Lucifer out every week, and also to do nearly all the work of a large house and household—many of the things that should be done are left undone. I am sorry, but it is a fact, nevertheless. And in editing matter for Lucifer, and particularly in the short-letter department, I must use my own judgment as to what is most important. That my opinion is not always that of the writers' may be unfortunate, and perhaps they in my position would do much better; but the conditions cannot be changed just at present.

I make this lengthy explanation, thinking that perhaps others may feel offended as this correspondent evidently does. This must be my explanation and apology to all such friends.

L. H.

Mr. M. Harman's present address is care of E. Secrest, 1011 Lincoln avenue, San Jose, Cal.

THE DISCRIMINATION OF THE CENSOR.

"Where freedom slowly crumbles down,
From President to President."

The latest move of Madden upon the free press of America is the depriving of Lucifer, of Chicago, of second-class privileges through the mails. This act was claimed to be based upon the publication by Lucifer of obscene matter; it is noteworthy, however, that the edition seized contained printed matter commenting upon the action of the government in the arrest and detention of Jorn Turner, the Anarchist, because of his political opinions. True to the cowardly policy adopted in Washington, the small publications advocating views opposite to those advocated by the administration are strangled. The large papers doing the same thing are unnoticed. No more biting criticisms could possibly be written than appear in the metropolitan dailies, but they are not molested in the least. Far indeed have we departed from the traditions of our fathers! We stand by and see the small nations of the earth oppressed: how can we say a word, when we are doing the same ourselves? And in that we have permitted the oppression of others in the name of the American people, our own liberties are being taken from us bit by bit. The beginning is being made upon papers which oppose the actions of the present administration and which have limited financial backing. As rapidly as possible the system of espionage will be extended until we shall all have to emulate Wilshire and move to a monarchy to obtain the liberty denied us in a republic. In other countries, where the people have gained, inch by inch, what measure of freedom they enjoy, they watch it jealously and do not suffer any encroachments upon it. Were it not that we already know all there is to be known, and, still worse, know that we know it, we might well profit by their example.—The Co-Operator.

LEGITIMATING THE RACE.

Adam and Eve have been married by a parson at last. It happened in Switzerland last year, and the high contracting parties were the famous Adam and Eve of the Passion Play. The marriage lines of the first Adam and Eve have never been found, but the world wags on just the same.—The Worker (Australia).

OUR POSTAL DESPOTISM.

[The following is a very imperfect synopsis of the ten minutes' talk of Mrs. Lockwood-Nevins at the "Meeting of Protest against the action of the postoffice department in denying second-class rates to certain reform papers, notably Freedom and Lucifer, which meeting was held in Pythian Castle, San Francisco, Jan. 24, 1904.]

In the early days of civilization there were no post roads nor posts. As none but the king and his courtiers could read or write, there was little need for such things, but as civilization advanced the king and his courtiers compelled the people to build roads and establish posts.

These, of course, belonged to the king. The roads were the "king's highways," used only by himself, his courtiers, his soldiers or by those who obtained the king's permission to use them.

In the course of time, however, the people wrested from the king the roads and postoffice system, claiming the right to the free use of these without paying tribute to any one.

But while the power over the roads and the postal service is no longer in the hands of the hereditary monarch, there has arisen of late years a new kind of king, the "Almighty Dollar," who now with his courtiers reigns supreme, not only in the postoffice, but in all other branches of what ought to be the people's government. Hence the suppression of reform papers, through unjust discriminations by the Postmaster General and his assitants.

As long ago as twenty years I was told that no article criticising adversely the people of wealth could be published in any paper of note in New York City.

In Healdsburg, Cal., a friend, a Freethinker, complained to me that his articles were not published as he wrote them, and that when he told the editor he would not write more for his paper if his articles could not appear as written, the editor said he was exceedingly sorry, but that the matter must pass through the hands of the censor, and when asked who the censor was he replied, "Rev. Mr. So-and-So."

It is well known in San Francisco business centers that there are never enough postoffice clerks during business hours; yet our postal rates are very high, as compared with those of other countries, where parcels are carried by post. And now the rich representatives of the Dollar King, the bankers, are not satisfied. In their late convention in this city these bankers asked that much of the business now done by the postoffice should be transferred to the express companies—one of the branches of the banking and railroad corporations.

While the postoffice department cannot afford to hire clerks enough to give the people of San Francisco prompt service, it can afford to pay the railroad companies enough money for the hire of cars to pay for the building of such cars new every year.

"We the people" established this government, but the power of concentrated wealth has established the present condition of things. What we want to learn is how to establish a system by which not wealth, but the people, shall own and operate the powers of government—for the workers, the producers, not for the privileged few. The Socialistic system, the Co-Operative Commonwealth, alone offers such a plan. All thinkers can see that public ownership under capitalistic control can only make our bondage heavier. A pointer is seen in the fact that legislators and judges—servants of corporate wealth—make the striking of government employes a crime!

A bill now before Congress proposes the purchase of the roads, making a bonded debt of $15,000,000,000, to run fifty years, on which debt the people would have to pay interest.

How like you, my friends, the idea of being taxed on everything you eat, drink or wear to pay the interest on such a debt to capitalists whose roads were never built by their own, but by the people's money?

"We the people" planted a tree, a government, and this tree, as we all know, has not grown to our liking.

We read of a tree planted, cultivated and watered carefully by a gardener, and when it failed to bear fruit the cry went forth,

"Cut it down! Why cumbereth it the ground?"

If a tree that bears no fruit should be cut down, what should be done with a tree that bears an annual crop of hunger, suffering and death for the many in order that there may be wealth, luxury and power unlimited for the few?

A MOST UNSPEAKABLE LAW.

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 53

the only anarchist in town that night, in a bad sense of the word.

It is said that an elephant is afraid of nothing but a mouse. Emerson in his essay on "Compensation" says that if government grows more and more powerful, it is because of the growth of fear that sits on its breast. But why should we be afraid or fear? For the United States government to be frightened by the presence of John Turner in this country is like an elephant being frightened by a mouse. If everything be all right in our government, why fear that John Turner could overthrow it? If the great mass of the common people are being benefited by our government, if nothing better can be thought of or spoken of than our government, then let us have it discussed, and the more it is discussed the more our sense of freedom and right will come out. What are they afraid of? If afraid, it is because they know there is something that is rotten about this government.

What is the effect of such laws as these to accomplish the purpose desired? They have a contrary effect. They make Anarchists. They turn people into Anarchists who before had no thought of being Anarchists. The Anarchist tells you that government is the government of the many for the benefit of the few. Had Mr. Turner been allowed to land and travel up and down the land, making speeches to the small audiences that he could get together, audiences of a few laboring people here and there, he would have been unheard of by the general public. But when they arrested him and put him in that cage the attention of eighty million people was called to that immigration law. And every day they hold him in prison is increasing the number of Anarchists in the United States. It is like all other attempts made by State or Church to suppress what they object to. The agitation caused is the food on which that grows that they would suppress. It is strange that they cannot learn a lesson! The more truth is opposed, the more it persists and grows. If the government is an evil you cannot prevent the people from finding it out some day or other. If you do not want government overthrown by force and violence, then let the people think and speak, because it surely will be so overthrown in time if they do not have this right of free thought and free speech.—Hugh O. Pentecost.

John Turner of England is incarcerated in a little cell on Ellis Island, New York. He has committed no crime, yet is treated worse than most criminals. Secretary Cortelyou is trying to have him sent back to England on account of his opinion that society could exist without a formal government. Whether you agree with Turner's opinions or not, help to rebuke the tyranny which would destroy free speech in America and would inaugurate a system of persecution for opinion's sake. The liberties of all are involved in this. A defense committee has been formed to carry the case to the supreme court. The eminent lawyer and champion of justice, Clarence Darrow, will act as counsel for Turner. Help the cause by sending what you can afford to the treasurer of the committee, Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., 120 Lexington avenue, New York, N. Y.—The Demonstrator.

The primitive, uncultured man worshiped external objects in love and in fear, ascribing to them quasi-human powers and feelings. There is the germ of religion.—F. Harrison.

LIBERTY OUR NATIONAL SCAPEGOAT.

A large popular error prevails in this country with regard to the status (not a misprint for statue) of Liberty. We are educated to believe that Liberty is a sort of divinity to which Americans pay homage both in their private capacity as citizens and officially through their public servants (so-called because they are masters). Ever since I reached a position where I could take notice the impression that there is a mistake somewhere has been growing on my mind. There is no character known to fiction that has been getting into disrepute faster in the past thirty years than Liberty. I have not the space nor the memory to name all the offenses she has been charged with in that period, nor the number of times she has been swatted by her adorers. It is the custom to approach her with flattery, and then, when near enough, to deliver a blow at her vitals. Our way with her is like the way of the heathen with his god. The heathen addresses fair words to his idol and tells what he expects it to do for him. He generally wants it to reward him or punish his enemies. If disappointed, he knocks the image over and drags it in the mud. If anything happens "in our midst," if somebody does a thing we might do ourselves but don't think he ought to do, we say there ought to be a law passed, there is too much liberty in this country. We get the law and Liberty gets it—in the neck. Somebody breaks the law because it is oppressive, whereupon we reaffirm that there is too much liberty, and pass another law. It is one of those endless chains, or vicious circles, or whatever you call the thing that extends itself indefinitely; and with every extension Liberty is pinched again. She is the oldest offender on the blotter. Too much liberty permits us to live over Sunday and breathe. It enables us to print our thoughts and send them everywhere—except to Canada. It separates husbands and wives who otherwise might live in the harmony of a cat and a dog in the same kennel. Too much liberty allowed disbelief in government which denies Liberty, and Congress celebrates a crime against the liberty of life and the pursuit of happiness by enacting legislation against said disbelief, which law creates more unbelievers in government and proves that the disbelief is justified. But why proceed? I have accomplished the purpose of this brief note if, by showing that all the ills we endure are attributable to Liberty and too much of it, I have started the reader on a line of thought calculated to bring him to the conclusion I have indicated, that Liberty is not the American goddess or divinity, but the local and national scapegoat that we load our sin on and drive into the wilderness. And the sins we load her with are our own offenses against her.—G. E. M. in Truth Seeker.

HUMAN PROGRESS DUE TO SOCIAL HEREDITY.

In an article in Lucifer No. 1005 on "Spencer's Social Philosophy," R. B. Kerr says: "Everything rests on one assumption. It must be supposed that our habits and customs, acquired during our lives, can be transmitted by heredity to our descendants. Without this accumulation by heredity each man would start just where his father did."

This is the vital error of his argument. Human progress does not depend upon physical heredity, but upon what may be termed social heredity. That certain tendencies and physical capabilities are transmitted by descent is true. But by far the greatest effect of the step in advance which the father and mother have made is transmitted by them to their child after the latter's birth through the force of example and teaching. While physical characteristics or improvements can be transmitted only from two persons to their offspring, the results of social advancement come to a rising generation from every one with whom they are brought in contact or who can influence their lives or thoughts.

It has the capacity for transmitting social progress which has led to the enormous differentiation in the human as distinguished from the other animals. It might be that the capacity for building dams and the knowledge how to build them is transmitted solely by heredity among the beavers, although it seems likely that even they learn from what they see of work already done. But the Brooklyn bridge was not built by inherited instincts; it is the result of social progress transmitted by mathematics and the mechanical arts.

Biology is useful in indicating the probable course of physical development, but biology is only one part of sociology. The question as to how we acquired our present physical shapes and powers is of much less importance to us than the question as to how we can improve our social relationships and thereby add to our individual happiness. The human race has apparently reached a stage in evolution where it adapts itself to environments by means of mental processes which invent external aids, rather than through changes in physical structure.

It is worth noting that from a biological standpoint Herbert Spencer at the age of eight was one of the unfit. Had he been sent to a public school and allowed to grow up with as little training as most children receive, he would probably have been an average individual. The training he received, more than his physical structure, made him a great philosopher.

New York. ARTHUR C. PLEYDELL.

VARIOUS VOICES.

We are always glad to receive calls from friends visiting the city. Take the Lake street elevated, step at Ashland avenue, walk one block east, then one block north. Or take Fulton street electric car west and step at St. John's place, alighting in front of our house. The Lake street electric and Paulina street cars also pass within a block of our residence.

Maud Starnes, Kalispell, Mont.: I hear that the postoffice authorities have been paying you particular attention, so I infer your paper is of unusual worth. I have never read it. Inclosed find $1, for which please send Lucifer to me for the length of time for which this sum will pay.

Mrs. C. S., Pomeroy, O.: Inclosed find $1.25. The dollar is to pay the extra postage and the 25 cents for extra paper under same cover. I feel certain a fair, honest investigation of the paper will only benefit it. People have been made to suffer by persecution, but a good cause always grows and flourishes on it. You have my sympathy, and so far as I am able you will have my help. I have never seen anything in Lucifer that a sensible, pure-minded woman might not safely read.

Mrs. Emma R. Slater, 232 West Seventeenth street, Los Angeles, Cal.: Can you give me the address of the lady that has founded a colony in San Luis Obispo or Kern county, California, which I have heard called the Herron Colony? I understand it is founded on Professor Herron's ideas regarding marriage, etc. I am very desirous of meeting some people who have made a study of problems that are perplexing to me.

[Perhaps some of our readers may be able to give Mrs. Slater the desired information.]

Mrs. A., Colorado: Just as soon as possible I will send on the $2 for a year's subscription to Lucifer. What with fighting the various persecutions "the powers that be" indulge in against us, Anarchists are not able to accumulate the "almighty dollar" to any great extent. I am free and always have been so. It is my idea that any woman could be equally so if she only had the desire for freedom in her own heart. I have a dear friend who is tyrannized over by a brutal husband, yet when I have presented her with copies of Lucifer she refuses to read them, all of which leads me to remark that no one can succeed unless he has allies within the breast of another.

Leo Rosenthal, Paterson, N. J.: "What is there in a name?" asked the great bard, but because of the name of your publication I long hesitated to write to you. I am not a churchman, and, as might be said, not afraid of the devil himself; but did not want to make the acquaintance of Lucifer. Having read that Mr. Madden is denying you second-class rates, I was convinced that there is something good in Lucifer. I believe that Mr. Madden is prejudiced against the tendency of your magazine rather than its name. I am anxious to make the acquaintance of Lucifer.

[Mr. Rosenthal will see, on examination of this paper and consideration of the meaning of the word Lucifer, that there is no connection between our name and the orthodox devil.—L. H.]

Mrs. M., Dakota: You will find inclosed $2 for Lucifer and "Karezza." Please begin my subscription with Jan. 1, as I want the whole year's papers. I am the Miss M. from Michigan who ordered the pamphlets from you last Spring. I got a position in a school out here through the few lines from my letter which you published in Lucifer. I have had the pleasure of meeting four noble men through the means of that little extract. And the glory of it all is that I am the wife of one of those men. If the men I have met are samples of your liberals, then for the doctrine that will make such men tact with conventional, moral men all n
even one who could equal these men would be utterly impossible for me to some life under the conventional marri live my normal, natural life and still be that seems glorious to me! I am truly g have been to me through your paper.

"My thoughts are murder to the Stat plotting against her."—Thoreau.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD OWN

TOKOLOGY.

A COMPLETE HEALTH GUIDE.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

Teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions.

Treats of diseases of women and children; contains practical teachings on Change of Life, limiting offspring, etc.

Lizzie N. Armstrong writes: "If I knew I were to be the mother of innumerable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of Tokology."

Dr. C. B. Wills: "Tokology is doing more for women than all other books put together."

CLOTH, PREPAID, $2.25; LEATHER, $2.75.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

TRUE MANHOOD.

AN INVALUABLE GUIDE TO HEALTH, STRENGTH AND PURITY.

BY E. B. SHEPHERD.

WHAT EVERY FATHER WANTS HIS BOY TO KNOW.

The Christian Endeavor World: "Its suggestions are wise and sensible." Dr. Stockham, author of Tokology, says: "TRUE MANHOOD explains the transition from boyhood to manhood, giving knowledge of priceless value."

Levant cloth, 328 pages. Prepaid $1. STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

A treatise on Sexual Science and Marriage, rich in thought and strong in expression. Emphatically a book for the thinker.

Carpenter holds that woman's freedom is based upon economics; she must be independent financially that she may not be forced to sell herself in or out of marriage. He also makes a strong plea for a motherhood of freedom and thoughtful preparation.

AMERICAN EDITION. CLOTH, PREPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

CREATIVE LIFE.

A BOOK FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

A timely and important message not found in text books. Every girl seeks and should have this true, plain and practical knowledge. One writes: "Thank you, thank you, dear Doctor, for the plain but beautiful thoughts. Womanhood, motherhood and life have new meanings. You ennoble your theme." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

A NOVEL BY GEORGE N. MILLER.

FORTIETH THOUSAND.

"The Strike of a Sex" is a fascinating novel bearing upon the sexual relations. It is a bold protest against the customary life of most married people, and at the same time a prophecy of happier conditions between man and wife. Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

SONGS OF A CHILD,

AND OTHER POEMS.

By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. Price $1.50; postage 12c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

"PERSONAL EXPERIENCES OF TWO AMERICAN ANTI-VIVISECTIONISTS IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES."

BY PHILIP G. PEABODY.

With an Appendix by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c. Apply to PHILIP G. PEABODY, 15 Court Square, Boston, Mass.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

THE LIBERAL MAIL-ORDER JEWELER.

Now permanent at No. 110 N. Kensington Ave., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 20 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's Line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Thelem in the Crucible," free.

J. H. GREER, M. D.,
52 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.

Office Hours—9 a. m. to 6 p. m.; Wednesdays and Saturdays, 9 a. m. to 8 p. m.; Sundays, 9 a. m. to 12 m.
Telephone, Randolph 42.

DR. OGILVIE A. RICE,
DENTIST.
1560 MILWAUKEE AVE., COR. WESTERN, CHICAGO.
Telephone West 141.

PHILIP G. PEABODY,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
15 COURT SQUARE, ROOM 51.
BOSTON, MASS.

1009

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

KAREZZA.

SCIENCE OF MARRIAGE.

A godsend to every wife—a joy to every husband.

This work brings peace into homes disrupted by inharmony in the sexual relation. Dr. A. B. Stockham advises a practice which leads to individual liberty and to deeper love between husband and wife.

Dr. F. G. Welch: "After a personal trial of its teachings, I want to thank you for a great service to humanity."

Rev. George R. Raushaw: "Out of a beautiful and ennobling experience, I can say, I KNOW."

Gives a high ideal of the marital relation and teaches control of the Procreating Power.

J. A. Smalley, M. D.: "I have received more actual benefit from the practice of KAREZZA teachings than from all other books on Sexual Science."

A. B. Franklin, M. D.: "KAREZZA does more than any other single thing to make marriage a perpetual courtship."

LEVANT CLOTH. POSTPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

JUST OUT.

PARENTHOOD.

By Alice B. Stockham, M. D., author of "Tokology" and "Karezza." Highest ideals for best offspring. Vital and important subjects discussed, including new philosophy of the Creative Energy. G. G. Hunt says: "Many sentences of PARENTHOOD should be graven in gold and handed down to posterity." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

One of the best short works on the subject. A charming little gift book.

"Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it."

DAINTILY PRINTED. PREPAID, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY, AND THE STATE.

BY FREDERICK ENGELS.

Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans.

217 pages; bound in cloth. Price 60c; postage 5c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MEN, WOMEN, AND CHANCE.

BY WILLIAM PLATT.

Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. Price 75c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STORY OF IJAIN;

OR, THE EVOLUTION OF A MIND.

By Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Stuart Rose), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. Price $1; postage 8c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

ISOLA; OR, THE DISINHERITED.

A drama in six acts. By Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1; postage 7c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SEND 10c IN STAMPS FOR THREE NUMBERS, OR 50c FOR TWELVE MONTHS' SUBSCRIPTION TO

HUMAN NATURE.

It is a monthly magazine, now in the fifteenth year of publication. It is Unique, Eclectic and Scientific. It treats of Phrenology, Psychology, Health, Sociology and all subjects which pertain to the welfare of humanity.

The character of men and animals is in accordance with their physical organization. This is determined by size of body and brain, shape of head, texture, temperament and facial expression.

HUMAN NATURE illustrates these principles by picture and pen, and teaches its readers how to read character. Its ethics are ennobling; its style, while strong, is sprightly, and its literary standard high. You need HUMAN NATURE. Address

PROFESSOR ALLEN HADDOCK,
PHRENOLOGIST
1020 MARKET ST., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 63, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We cannot sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Comstocks. Two styles, 30c each, two for 50c. Address EDWIN C. WALKER, 244 W. 143d St., New York, N. Y.

WANTED—100 women to study medicine or midwifery. Next term begins January 1, 1904. College of Medicine and Surgery, 245 Ashland Blvd., Chicago, Ill. DR. FLORENCE DRESSLER, Secretary. (Dept. A.)

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

PRICE 5 CENTS. CHICAGO, ILL., FEB. 25, E. M. 304. [C. E. 1904.] WHOLE NO. 1009

THE PRICE OF ENGLAND'S WEALTH.

We have fed you all for a thousand years
And you hail us still unfed,
Though not a sovereign of all your wealth
But marks the worker's need.
In the cold and wet we toil and sweat,
While you lie on a bed of wool.
If blood be the price of England's wealth,
Good God! we have paid in full.

There's never a mine blown skyward now
But we're buried alive for you;
There's never a wreck drifts shoreward now
But it's we are the ghastly crew.
Go, reckon our dead by the forges red,
And the factories where they spin,
And if blood be the price of England's wealth,
Good God! we have paid it in.

We have fed you all for a thousand years,
For that was our doom, you know,
From the day you chained us to your field
To the strike of a week ago.
You have taken our wives, our babes, our lives,
For that was your legal share;
But if blood be the price of England's wealth,
Good God! we have bought it fair.

—The Voice of Labor (Glasgow).

THE RADICALISM OF GREAT MEN.

One of the most significant facts of the age is the radicalism of those whom even the conventional world regards as its great men. Much as Mrs. Grundy hates all kinds of advanced movements, she has to accept radicals as her heroes, because there is no other material available.

When Tennyson died some years ago it was conceded by the whole press of England that there were only two men fit to succeed him as Poet Laureate. One was William Morris, the Socialist, Free Lover and street corner orator; the other was Algernon Charles Swinburne, Republican, Atheist and Free Lover. I do not know if the position was offered to either, although it was currently reported that it had been tendered to Morris, who was probably less odious to the Queen than Swinburne. In any case, neither of them was appointed, and the office was left vacant for several years.

In a recent article in the Frankfurter Zeitung, one of the best German papers, it was stated that the contemporary English writers best known in Germany were Rudyard Kipling, Jerome K. Jerome, Oscar Wilde and Bernard Shaw. Wilde wrote "The Soul of Man Under Socialism," the best short essay on Socialism ever written, and Shaw is editor of the "Fabian Essays," besides being a very energetic Secularist, Free Lover, anti-vivisectionist and anti-vaccinationist.

Kipling is very conservative, but the three other poets of the younger generation, Watson, Davidson and Le Gallienne, are more or less associated with advanced thought. Their radicalism is not very strong, but perhaps it is as strong as their poetry.

George Meredith and Thomas Hardy are usually considered the two great English novelists of the age. Both are hard to label, but very few men have done as much as they have to stir up the discussion of the sex question.

If we leave novelists out of account, I suppose the three most prominent English prose writers now living are John Morley, Frederic Harrison and Goldwin Smith. None of them is very advanced on social questions, but all are robust Freethinkers. Harrison is the head of the Positivists and Morley first became notorious by spelling the name of God with a small "g."

The two great veterans of British science are Alfred Russel Wallace, who discovered natural selection simultaneously with Darwin, and Lord Kelvin. Kelvin is conservative in most things, but Wallace is an active Socialist worker and writer.

No man has lately been more prominent in British science than Sir Oliver Lodge, who invented wireless telegraphy, and has been very active in the investigation of radium. Like Wallace, he is a Socialist, and the same is true of Havelock Ellis and Karl Pearson.

No recent English painter has been more conspicuous than Burne-Jones. Like his friend, William Morris, he was a stanch Socialist.

The most eminent men in the intellectual world of Italy are Lombroso and Ferri in science, and Gabriel D'Anqunzio in literature. All three are Socialists, and the last two are Socialist members of Parliament.

The two great minds of Russia are Tolstoi and Kropotkin. Both are Anarchists.

Norway has two great men of letters, Ibsen and Bjornson. Ibsen is an Anarchist and Bjornson a Socialist.

The only eminent man of letters in Germany is Hermann Sudermann. His views on the sex question seem to resemble those of Lucifer very closely. Germany has many good men of science, but probably the two most conspicuous are Haeckel and Weismann. Weismann is not, I think, a conscious revolutionist, although he is a great unconscious one. Haeckel is possibly the most rabid of all living Secularists.

George Brandes, the most eminent writer of Denmark, also agrees with Lucifer on the sex question and has many other advanced views.

The only recent French author of world-wide fame was Zola. He was latterly a Socialist.

I do not know much about the Belgian Maeterlinck. My impression, however, is that he is connected with advanced movements.

Canada has produced in recent times two men of international reputation—Grant Allen in general literature and George J. Romanes in science. Allen was a Secularist, Socialist and Free Lover, and the scientific work of Romanes was very helpful to Secularism.

I am sorry I cannot add to my list the men who are prominent in science and literature in the United States. Howells is a Socialist, but most of his colleagues are of a very different stamp from the intellectuals of all the other great countries of the world. They are also very unlike Franklin, Emerson, Thoreau, Whitman and the other great Americans of the past. Like the clergymen mentioned by Carlyle, they consider "the belly with its adjuncts the grand reality."

I notice, however, that throughout the world the popularly recognized writers of the rising generation are much less radical than the older men. At first sight this looks like a conservative reaction. I do not think it is, however. On the contrary, I think it is due to the fact that there is now a large and important radical press, of which polite society knows nothing, but which absorbs most of the literary talent of radicals.

A few weeks ago the Guardian, the great High Church paper of England, reviewed Robert Blatchford's book, "God and My Neighbor," which is an onslaught on Christianity. Naturally the review was not a favorable one, yet the reviewer was constrained to say of the book that "no praise can be too high for the style of its English; it ought to be a model for all who attempt popular apologetics." But "God and My Neighbor" is virtually a collection of articles from the Clarion, a paper quite ignored by conventional society.

The situation is similar in America. In each issue of Current Literature a good many pages are filled with what the editor considers the best poems in the magazines and papers of the preceding month, but it seldom happens that there is one good enough to be compared with the best of those contributed by W. F. Barnard to Lucifer and Free Society. I doubt very much if there is any other writer in America who can write the clear and virile English of the eighteenth century as well as E. C. Walker or equal Voltairine De Cleyre in elegence and grace. There may be a man somewhere in the world who comes nearer to universal knowledge than C. L. James, but certainly Mr. James is a man of wider learning than any other living author known to fame. His zeal for knowledge always reminds me of Chaucer's Clerk of Oxenforde—

"For he had geten him yet no benefice,
Ne was nought worldly to have an office.
For him was lever han at his beedes hed
A twenty bokes, clothed in black or red,
Of Aristotle, and his philosophie,
Than robes riche, or fidel, or sautrie.
. . . . . .
Souninge in moral vertue was his speche,
And gladly wolde he lerne, and gladly teche."

R. B. KERR.

THE BACK TRACKS OF EVOLUTION.

Those curious and not infrequent instances in which ancestral traits crop out in plant or animal have been noted as studied by many naturalists, says the Literary Digest. Sometimes they amount almost to the substitution of regression for progress, and seem to form distinct exceptions to the usual law of orderly development in the organic world. In an article contributed to the Review Scientifique, M. Etienne Rabaud maintains that in these occasional backward leaps, to which biologists have given the name of "atavism," evolution is by no means stultifying itself, or even yielding for the moment to some opposing and mysterious tendency, but is obeying strictly its own laws. He defines atavism as the reproduction, in an individual or a group, of characters not possessed by their immediate relatives, but by their ancestors, direct or collateral. This simple definition, we are told, embraces the half of biology. M. Rabaud continues:

"An organic form progresses or regresses. If it regresses, it inevitably assumes an ancestral form, and it assumes it because this ancestral from has existed. Regression in an organism is a tendency, a natural aptitude, however long the interruption of specific resemblance may last.

"This is the whole question and the whole explanation.

"What are the proofs of atavism? They are abundant. Is not microcephaly [abnormal smallness of head] the return of the brain to the simple formation of ancestral man? Is not polydactylism the production of one or several supplementary fingers in memory of the numerous swimming rays of the fishes? Is not polymastia a regressive form, since mammals inferior to man have several pairs of breasts? Is not the trilocular heart found in reptiles?

"And how shall we explain, except by atavism, the existence of alternate anomalies—the fact that descendants do not always inherit an anomaly from their immediate progenitors, but, on the contrary, possess some different anomaly that was present in distant ancestors? From one generation to another anomalies succeed without resemblance; but at the end of a certain time the initial anomaly reappears and the series begins in more or less complete fashion. . . .

"To sum up, the proofs of these returns to ancestral form are various, sometimes among monstrosities, sometimes among normal creatures. Probably there is not a family in which we do not find one of these singular cases of physical constitution or moral state whose model is to be sought among relatively distant progenitors, direct or collateral."

To what are we to attribute this frequent reversion to an earlier type? Naturalists, following the example of Darwin, have generally assumed a more or less mysterious tendency inherent in organic forms to return on the path of evolution as a locomotive on an up-grade might run backward if its steam should give out. M. Etienne Rabaud believes that this is a mistake, and that such a doctrine negatives the whole theory of evolution. He cites case after case of "atavism," and believes that he is able to show in each that it is due merely to adaptation; the environment in some way or degree has become primitive again, and the organism in adapting itself to the changed conditions naturally goes back to its own primitive form. In asserting this, the writer would not, he warns us, lay too much stress on the influence of the surroundings. He says:

"Let us not believe that environment is everything—that it molds to suit itself any kind of protoplasm. Let us not oppose to the omnipotence of the ancestral organism the omnipotence of present conditions. Let us keep from an exaggeration that would be an absurdity. We are confronted by two orders of things—living substance and external factors. They influence each other reciprocally, and both are indissolubly connected. Separately they are nothing. It is their union that gives them power.

"As for 'atavistic force' or 'reversive aptitude,' I find in it only a phrase on which a whole theory has been founded. . . . Certainly we do not know all about it. We cannot definitely solve all questions. Let us keep the word 'atavism' in our vocabulary, but on the condition that it shall indicate the present phenomena of adaptation, evolutionary phenomena in the real sense of the word, that consist of a formal resemblance to certain dispositions long since extinct. Doubtless a given protoplasmic form is bound to an antecedent form, since the former results from the actions and reactions of the latter with external agents. Doubtless also the succession of forms from the most ancient down to the present is uninterrupted. But from this connection it does not follow that the initial form persists in a latent state, hiding itself in the infinity of forms that are substituted for it. The initial form has disappeared in the series of successive adaptations provoked by the infinite alterations of present conditions, and if some day a form comparable with that at the starting-point should appear, we need not think that the organism has returned to this starting-point, nor that it has been attracted by it. What we observe is an analogy, not an identity. The present form would have been able to appear even if the similar ancestral form had not existed, just as all the well-known adaptive forms are produced. These are the logical and continuous development due to successive actions and reactions. If we connect them with the past, it is only by the method of development. Nothing authorizes us to assert the existence of any other bond, and, therefore, we cannot allow the strange conception of atavistic force that now tends to dominate the transformist theory. This conception is the negation of transformism. . . . It is, if I mistake not, in a weakened and modernized form, the offensive recrudescence of the old doctrine of the fixity of species."

THE ESSENTIALS OF HUMAN PROGRESS.

I have endeavored to establish four leading propositions which, according to my view, are to be deemed the basis of the history of civilization. They are: (1) That the progress of mankind depends on the success with which the laws of phenomena are investigated, and on the extent to which a knowledge of those laws is diffused; (2) that before such investigation can begin, a spirit of scepticism must arise, which, at first aiding the investigation, is afterwards aided by it: (3) that the discoveries thus made increase the influence of intellectual truths, and diminish, relatively, not absolutely, the influence of moral truths; moral truths being more stationary than intellectual truths, and receiving fewer additions; (4) that the great enemy of this movement, and therefore the great enemy of civilization, is the protective spirit, by which I mean the notion that society cannot prosper unless the affairs of life are watched over and protected at nearly every turn by the State and the Church; the State teaching men what they are to do, and the Church teaching them what they are to believe.—Buckle.

THE FATHERS AND WOMAN.

The combined influence of the Jewish writings (Old Testament) and of that ascetic feeling which treated woman as the chief source of temptation to man, caused her degradation. . . . In the writings of the fathers, woman was represented as the door of hell, as the mother of all human ills. She should be ashamed of the very thought that she is a woman. She should live in continual penance, on account of the curse she has brought into the world. She should be ashamed of her dress, and especially ashamed of her beauty.—Lecky.

THE USE AND SIGNIFICANCE OF STRIKES

Middle-class economists, as well as certain sections of the Socialist party (the Parliamentarians), frown upon the strike, declaring it to be not merely futile but productive of evil. The former point to the dislocation of trade, and hypocritically deplore the privations to which the strikers are often reduced. The latter disapprove of such action on the score of its not being sufficiently "scientific." They call it the blind, unreasoning revolt of ignorance from the inevitable. They advise the workers to confine their efforts to sending a number of self-seeking politicians to the legislature, who will make speeches—shaking their forefingers while they quiver with generous emotion—and advocate the passing of laws to remedy social and economic evils. Such laws, when the middle class graciously permit them to be passed, are generally so constructed that only lawyers benefit by them, owing to the involutions which confuse them, and the technicalities with which they bristle—witness the various "compensation" and "liability" acts.

Or, again, reformers point with pride to the factory acts, those Procrustean measures which have caused no end of mischief, and utterly failed to abolish child labor, which was the principal object for which they were enacted. Every little while the age limit is raised, but the physical deterioration of the children outstrips the legislators' action; and where the little ones are actually excluded from the mills and factories they are thrown upon the street. A walk through the principal thoroughfares of any of our large cities, swarming with wretched mites, selling matches, flowers, newspapers and the like, discovers the mockery and futility of all such legislative action.

During the Middle Ages the popular masses over the length and breadth of Europe were engaged in a prolonged contest with the ruling class, the feudal aristocracy. The ultimate result of this contest was the breaking down of the feudal system. The people—whether of the city, the plain or forest—had not by any means what we moderns term "a walkover." The struggle was cruel, bloody, and replete with suffering. They were often crushed. Almost every rising was put down with merciless rigor. Where the sword failed and cajolery proved futile, the basest treachery was employed to enable the rulers to achieve a temporary triumph.

No doubt there were pessimists and croakers in those days, to whom the struggle seemed senseless and hopeless. No doubt the rebels often were admonished to give up such useless and mischievous conduct; to submit to the inevitable, and trust to the good offices of the priest and the fatherly consideration of the baron, both of whom were heart-broken at having to maintain "law and order" in such strict fashion, but were nevertheless determined to do it—from the most exalted motives, of course.

The people fought and bled. To contemporaries they seemed to suffer defeat; but we who can look back upon those times, and comprehend the meaning of the struggle, know that the object of the struggle was gained—feudalism has disappeared.

The economic struggle now going on throughout Christendom, and which finds its acutest expression in strikes, bread riots and the like, is but the continuance, under a modified aspect, of the struggle alluded to above. It is the same contest, the same effort of the oppressed toiler to be rid of the grievous burden laid upon him by the crafty, dissimulating priest and the juggling middle-class exploiter, the successor of the feudal lord, sprung from the people and therefore doubly guilty.

The contest must continue as long as the burden is not removed. Revolt is begotten of oppression—is, in fact, its natural and inevitable outcome. Treat with kindness and consideration any domestic animal—a cat or a dog—and you will find that it seeks your society, clings to you, follows you about; take hold of it by the paw in such a manner as to convey, ever so slightly, the impression of restraint, and it will strive to get away. The harder you make your hold the more determined will be its efforts to release itself. It is the natural, spontaneous resentment of insulted liberty—the instinctive repudiation of authority and coercion evinced by all animals, and also by all children before "education" has ruined them.

Had it not been for strikes and other modes of revolutionary action, the working population of this country would still be living in the abject and miserable condition of a hundred years ago. Even when the legislature inaugurated meliorative measures it was usually done in response to direct pressure from workers politically unenfranchised.

When workers who have struck are forced to give up the struggle (as frequently happens through various causes—sheer want, inadequate organization, or the treachery of leaders), it is described as a failure because the particular object of their action has not been gained.

But this is a superficial view. No strike ever fails. In one way or another some good results follow. The temporary setback inspires them with a dogged determination to win another time; while the dearly bought victory warns the exploiters of the necessity of concessions. Such concessions are often made quietly soon after a strike. The result of the protracted and bitter duel between the ground-hog [land monopolist], Lord Penrhyn, and his slate workers—an apparent defeat for them—has not been hailed with the jubilation that might have been expected. A few superficial sneers have been visible, but the general demeanor of the ruling class is sober and subdued. They know that this great strike is already fruitful of results inimical to their interests: the land problem is nearer solution, while the grand object lesson given by the Co-operative Society in acquiring the neighboring quarry is teaching the worker some of the possibilities that lie before him.

I will state an apparent paradox: in any contest which does not end in the utter destruction of the vanquished party, it is the victor who has the least cause for jubilation. It is not the man who beats you that you need fear, but the man that you have beaten; he may be your future conqueror. Defeat makes him familiar with your power and methods, and teaches him how to improve his own preparatory to renewing the struggle.

The triumph of the workers is inevitable because they cannot be destroyed. "Victor from vanquished issues out at last." They are gradually wresting a greater and still greater measure of freedom from the ruling class. And as in former times the peasants and craftsmen risings increased in number and immensity until they developed into civil wars and conflicts between nations, so shall the labor struggle spread and develop until a time shall come when the workers of the world, realizing their solidarity of interests, will combine to seize the heritage from which they have been so long excluded—a universal revolt of Labor, which will form the dividing point between the old order and the new era coming upon us.—Alvan Marlow in the Voice of Labor (Glasgow, Scotland).

NATURE.

BY I. TURGENIEFF. TRANSLATED BY O. LEONARD.

I dreamed I found myself in a large subterranean hall, with a high vaulted ceiling. It was uniformly lighted with light that came from beneath.

In the middle of the hall sat a stately woman. Her dress was green; it was beautifully shaped. Her head rested on her arms; she seemed lost in thought.

I understood immediately that this woman was Nature herself. A feeling of awe came over me. I approached, and after bowing before her I said: "O thou mother of us all, what perplexes you now? Do you muse about the coming fates of mankind? Or how men may attain highest happiness?"

Slowly she turned her dark, threatening eyes toward me. Her lips moved and I heard her sonorous voice: "I think of how I might best give greater power of muscle to the flea's legs, that it might be able to protect itself from its enemies. The equilibrium between attack and defense is disturbed; it must be redeemed."

"What! is this all you think of?" asked I in astonishment, "are not we men your chosen and most cherished children?"

The woman wrinkled her brow and said: "All creatures are equal, all are my children; I take care of them all, and in equal manner do I annihilate them!"

"But what of goodness, reason, justice?" whispered I again.

"These are human phrases," answered the deep voice. "I know neither good nor bad. For your reason I care not. And what is justice? I gave you life and I will take it from you and give it to others: worms or men, it makes no difference. As for you, take care and protect yourself till then, and do not disturb me."

I wished to answer, but all around me the earth began to quake and rise—and I awoke.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

MOSES HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Application Filed for Entry at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One copy, one year.....$2.00 One copy, six months.....$1.00
Two copies to one address, one year.. 2.25 Two copies to one address, six mos.. 1.15
One copy, three months.....50 cents Single copies.....5 cents

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire notify us if you wish to continue to receive Lucifer.

EASTERN REPRESENTATIVE:
E. C. WALKER, 244 WEST 143D STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

THIRD SERIES. VOL. VIII. NO. 8.

WHY SUCH PERSISTEMCY?

For a score of years or more Lucifer's editors and publishers have been fighting what to the great majority seems a losing battle, an utterly hopeless conflict.

Often and often we are asked:

Why such persistence?

Why not submit to the inevitable?

Why not conform to existing laws and customs?

Why try to force evolution?

Why wear yourselves out in a hopeless endeavor to help those who are wedded to their chains?

★ ★ ★

Only a week ago I spent a day, by invitation, at the hospitable home of a very superior couple—a woman and man of culture, of refinement, of leisure, surrounded with all that would seem needful to make life enjoyable.

Both have achieved distinction in the field of literature, and, though their "years have now fallen into the sere and yellow leaf," they will doubtless be heard from again, and yet again.

Both are evolutionists of the "positivist" school, as I understood them, and neither seems to have much sympathy with Lucifer's pivotal work, that of trying to hasten human advancement through Free and Responsible Motherhood, and through intelligent direction or control of psychic impressions upon the unborn.

Speaking of the relative spheres of woman and man, "mine host" used language something like this:

"It is but natural that man should rule woman. Naturally man is head of the house, head of the family. This is shown to be nature's plan in the beginning of life itself. The male cell, the sperm cell, is active, aggressive, invasive. The sperm cell hunts for, invades, captures the germ, or female, cell—the passive, the submissive, the inert, the receptive female cell; impregnates it; dominates it; gives it life and power to grow. The male cell does the selecting, not the female cell; naturally and rightly, then, the male element governs the female in all the subsequent stages of human evolution, human association."

"Yes," I replied in substance, "such seems to have been the order of nature—in the earlier and cruder forms of organic life; also in the primitive or savage stages of human development; but how is it or how will it be as we approach the higher forms?

"How is it in the more psychic and the less distinctly physical eras of biologic evolution?

"Is it not true that the most nearly perfect specimens of the genus homo are those that combine both the feminine and the masculine traits?

"Is it not true that by psychic attraction, magnetic attraction, the female in the higher forms of life does the selecting, rather than the male?

"If the exact facts could be known, is it not very probable, to say the least, that the germ, or female, cell, in the higher forms, attracts to itself and unites with the best available sperm cell?

"If so, would it not be natural, right and proper that in all subsequent evolution and association of individuals the feminine, and not the masculine, should be the controlling factor or element?"

★ ★ ★

Speaking for myself alone, this philosophy, this biologic view of the normal relations between the feminine and masculine elements in human evolution, constitutes the chief corner stone, the underlying motive, of Lucifer's persistence in what to many people seems a forlorn hope, a useless struggle.

This philosophy, this working theory, was the key-note running through the entire series of eight lectures lately concluded by the writer of these lines in San Francisco, and the hospitable reception accorded to this series by the women and men I believe to be the advance guard of Freethought in that city and neighboring towns is beyond comparison the most gratifying feature of my westward trip hitherto. M. HARMAN.

The Voice of Labor is the title of a labor paper, with pronounced leanings toward Anarchism, issued in Glasgow, Scotland. Its neat typography and clear print lend an added pleasure to the reading of its really forceful and lucid text. Address orders to George Dallas, 2 Mitchell street, Rutherglen, Scotland.

Photographs of Moses Harman, taken in San Francisco and contributed by the photographer to be sold for the benefit of Lucifer, may be ordered of Moses Harman. See address in another column. Price, 25 cents.

WINTER GLEANINGS.

All through the winter months I have been collecting items to be used as texts when leisure should permit, but always the coveted leisure has seemed just a little ahead, never quite within reach. Among these texts is a clipping from the San Francisco Examiner, entitled "Suggestion," by Professor E. L. Larkin of Lowe Observatory. After telling his readers something of the wonders performed by suggestion in curing disease, Professor Larkin proceeds thus:

"But all benefits derived by suggestion, by those now living, are as nothing to what may be done, and will be, in prenatal 'suggestion.' Here the possibilities of complete control of unborn generations, race improvement, physically and mentally, are so great as to be almost beyond belief. It is a subject so important that statesmen will be attracted by the appeals of suggestors that national laws will be enacted on the subject. By suggestion to mothers before the birth of their children, kept up for three generations, say a hundred years, the people can be cultivated to a standard of physical and intellectual perfection the like of which has not appeared in human history."

The whole article is well worth a careful perusal, especially the part entitled "Being Born Right." But while agreeing with most that the learned professor says, I would venture the suggestion that "suggestors" should suggest to our statesmen the propriety of repeal, rather than the enactment of more "national laws," in regard to the right to be born well, and in regard to the best way to remove the obstacles that now prevent all children to be thus born, if born at all.

To begin, I would venture to suggest the repeal of the laws under which Ida Craddock was hounded to her death because she dared to suggest to prospective brides and husbands better methods of "marital living" than those based upon ignorance of sexual physiology and hygiene everywhere now prevalent.

Here is another paragraph in the same line, containing matter that, while not new, cannot be too often placed before the mind's eye:

"Look at the children now coming into the world, brought forth by poor, suffering mothers in hideous tenements in our great cities. An uncivilized woman in the jungles of Central Africa near the equator has more comfort than do the mothers where pure air is unknown. Their offspring are in many cases now known to have horrible minds. Their language and jargon at play in the seething streets are the lowest of human dialects. How all this could be changed by an intelligent application to the coming mothers of a sympathetic course of suggestion, aided by removal to the pure air and light in the country! Unless something is done human monsters with the most frightfully distorted minds will fill the city streets and sink lower than the seething millions of slaves in Rome when that city was in the apex of its apparent splendor."

PERIODICITY OF CRIME.

After devoting a paragraph or two to showing how the ignorant and unsuspecting are robbed by "hypnotists in the guise of promoters and organizers" of stock companies Professor Larkin speaks of waves of criminality recurring at long periods of time:

"All this ocean of crime now covering our country with its dark waters has its origin in suggestions given to mothers during the barbaric civil war in the sixties. Their children now—that is children of mothers whose husbands were stealing from the government them—begin robbing in gigantic proportion at from the ages of 35 to 40. Go forward to the year 1928, and vast numbers of thieves will appear, dating from the wholesale thieving during this year of 1903. What a horrible load of responsibility now rests on the shoulders of our present scoundrels. Women read the papers, and columns of crime in 'high' places pollute the very minds and being of the unborn."

The article closes with these words:

"A systematic training of the people by suggestion will be a colossal job; it must be undertaken, and that speedily. It will pay. The nation must cultivate the people with at least as great skill as that used in the improvement of horses and cattle."

To liken the possible improvement of human beings to that already achieved by breeders of horses and cattle, though useful, is apt to be carried too far. Evidently Professor Larkin would have "the nation" to treat the masses of people as the owners of live stock treat their dumb chattels.

But who or what is the nation? and where does the nation get such power over the mothers, the parents, of the on-coming generations?

Evidently the professor forgets that the nation is the people themselves, the mothers and fathers themselves, who are supposed to need training, or who must be "cultivated by the nation."

That is to say, that the people must cultivate and train the people, and as the people cannot delegate to their agents or servants powers and rights they do not themselves possess, it follows that the "elected persons"—quoting Whitman—cannot treat the people who elect them as the owners of live stock treat their chattels.

Training and cultivating the people, then, by suggestion or in any other way, must be done through voluntary methods, through methods of freedom and equal rights, and not through methods of force, of privilege or of authority. What we need from the "nation," or from the men who represent the legislative power of the nation, is not more law, but less law; not more and more paternalism in government, but less and still less paternalism in government.

PURE AIR AND MORE LIGHT.

Professor Larkin strikes a most important note in the diatonic scale of reform when he demands the removal of mothers from the "awful, stifling, suffocating heat in the crowded tenement" to the "pure air and light in the country." Whether he would have this removal effected through more law or less law does not clearly appear, but, as in the case of training by suggestion, it seems to me that what is needed is not a law to force people to live in the country, but rather an abolition of the laws that enable landholders to keep people from occupying untenanted land free of cost.

★ ★ ★

Ever since my first landing in San Francisco I have been trying to get all the information possible in regard to opportunities for obtaining homes for the homeless on cheap, healthful and productive lands, near enough to large centers of population to insure a market for surplus products. I have been invited to investigate the advantages of more than one colonization scheme, and hope soon to be able to report the result of such investigation, but for the present I would ask all who may care to correspond with liberal-minded people who are working in the interest of colonies or co-operative plans intended to practicalize Lucifer's central ideals to write to Dr. Jannay, 1010½ Washington street, Oakland, Cal., or to J. Albertus, 217 Eddy street, San Francisco.

For this week I close by quoting a paragraph or two from the San Jose Daily Mercury, telling what can be done in California on a single acre of irrigated land:

"I have been visiting a farm in the Sacramento valley which consists of one single acre of irrigated land and which makes a better home and larger net income for its owner than many of his neighbors enjoy on places of thousands of acres each. The little farm is at Orland, in Glen county, and is the property of a man named Samuel Cleek, who has grown old and gray while tilling it for the past thirty years. Mr. Cleek tells me that he has no difficulty whatever in making a comfortable living from this one acre of irrigated land. Not only so, but he is able to save an average of $400 a year besides. He has money to loan, as well as fruit, vegetables and poultry products to sell, to those who are getting poorer every year in carrying on big farms without irrigation."

The writer of this letter, William E. Smythe, can probably be reached by addressing the San Jose Daily Mercury, who will doubtless tell the inquirer how this remarkable feat in horticulture is effected. In his letter he gives the statement of the owner of this very productive acre, Mr. Cleek, showing how much ground is devoted to house, barn and other buildings, and how much to vines, fruit-trees, vegetables, etc.

In his closing paragraphs he shows the bearing of such object lessons as this irrigated and properly tended acre upon our land laws, declaring that while the trend of popular sentiment is in favor of repeal of laws that have squandered the public domain and given uncounted millions of acres to stock men and other speculators, there is at this moment a wide-spread conspiracy to prevent such repeal and to continue the policy of giving the public domain, which should be held in trust for homes for the homeless, to the worst of all monopolists—the land grabbers.

For the next two or three weeks my address will be 126 South McLaughlin avenue, San Jose, Cal. M. HARMAN.

RADIUM THREATENS CIVILIZATION!

Great disasters to civilization are predicted by the London Spectator as the possible outcome of the possible discovery that experiments with radium may lead to the transmutation of metals. As quoted by a Canadian paper, it ruminates in this wise:

"If it became possible simply and expeditiously to transmute lead and iron into gold or silver, the basis of our civilization would disappear. Wealth in kind would become the only form of riches. The stores of bullion at the banks would become simply heaps of scrap-iron. The great financial centers of the world, which owe their importance to their gold reserves, would lose the basis of their pre-eminence. A sovereign would become no more than a dishonored bank note, representing, it is true, a certain amount of labor or produce, but incapable of realization in any known value, because the basis of values had fallen. Banking would come to an end; reserves of capital would cease to have any practical meaning; all forms of investment would cease; the gold-producing countries, like the Transvaal and West Australia, would be bankrupted; and the elaborate system of commerce which mankind has built up during a thousand years would crumble about our ears, for there would be no standard, no little rod, by which to measure prices."

One must hesitate to deal seriously with that paragraph, it has so suggestively the flavor of a satire upon the "gold bug" fanatics. Yet it may be well, even at the risk of falling a victim to a subtle joke, to observe that so long as there are men to do the work that they themselves want done, and no legal obstructions are interposed between them and the natural sources of supply nor between them in their mutual trading, they will manage to get along very comfortably though gold becomes as cheap as dirt.—The Public.

THE DUTY OF THE REFORMER.

If you would wait to speak the truth until you can replace the old decaying formula by a completely elaborated system, you must wait forever; for the system can never be elaborated until its leading principles have been boldly enunciated. Reconstruct, it is said, before you destroy. But you must destroy in order to reconstruct. The old husk of dead faith is pushed off by the growth of living beliefs below.—Leslie Stephen.

It is heart-breaking to see how Kipling's high gifts fall short of noble uses, all for want of wider sympathies and a nobler ethical culture. His skill is great, but his vision is thwarted by the opportunism, the militarism, the strenuousness that are represented by the bayonet and the bullet.—Jenkin Lloyd Jones.

ANARCHY AND ANARCHISTS.

Secretary Cortelyou is attempting that for which Charles I. and Louis XVI. lost their heads.

John Turner, while peaceably addressing (on the subject of trade unions) a peaceable meeting at New York, was tapped upon the shoulder by United States deputy marshals, led from the stage, and, without trial or hearing, was imprisoned without bail until he could be forcibly deported from this country. As Liberty very truthfully remarks, this could not be done even in Germany. The warrant for this un-American act is found in a law passed by an hysterical congress after President McKinley's assassination. The evil aimed at by the law is murder. The law should be interpreted as meaning one who advocates the use of force against those in authority. Indeed, the law so reads. The real meaning of the word "Anarchist" is one who believes that the ideal form of society is that in which self-interest, guided by intelligence, is the basis of action, rather than a law made by a few, or a majority, and enforced upon all. For example, the Anarchist would disbelieve in an enforced tax in order that the children of some might have collegiate educations in high schools and state universities. Jefferson, in his ideals, was an Anarchist. He said that government was best which governed least; and Thoreau carried this to its logical conclusion by saying the ideal government was one which did not govern by force at all, and he wrote his essay on the duty of civil disobedience, showing that there are laws which, as a duty, we should resist and disobey. Herbert Spencer was an Anarchist or individualist. Tolstoi, preaching peace and liberty, could not come here under this law, but emissaries of the Czar could freely advocate among us an autocratic despotism.

One who advocates a change in or abolishment of the present form of government is by an ignorant assumption thought to be an enemy to peace and order. In the same way those who formerly thought there might be a better form of government than the absolute despotism of kings were thought to be not only enemies to peaceable society, but to God himself.

Mr. Edward M. Shepherd said in his letter written to the Turner mass-meeting in New York: "Is it credible that in our day and in our land there should be found men in places of great power who do not see that nothing is so conservative, nothing so safe, as an absolute liberty to think and to speak and to write, so long as there is no urgency or invitation to vice or to violence?"

Just as kings used to lop off the heads which spoke against kingship, so this foolish and useless law seeks to put our particular form of government beyond all criticism or discussion.

Our constitution says treason shall consist in acts of levying war against the United States. But this fool law makes it a crime for any one to talk against organized government, meaning, of course, as now organized, for no man advocates chaos. Nor will society ever submit to chaos. But there may be order and organization without a majority ruling a peaceable minority by force. Whether we believe in the Anarchistic ideal or not, the doctrine of free speech, for which so much blood has been shed, means that any man shall have a right to voice any peaceable doctrine. Riot and bloodshed may yet come to this country in an effort to adjust the economic laws which still separate the monopoly-favored few from the poor many; but the man who advocates peaceably a peaceable doctrine is responsible to no greater and no less degree than Voltaire and Rousseau are responsible for the blood of the French Revolution; Milton and Hampden responsible for the bloody overthrow of the Stuarts; and Adams and Franklin responsible for the blood of the Revolution.

If this law meant by Anarchists those who advocate the murder of rulers, it did not mean John Turner, for, like all true Anarchists, force is absolutely absent from his arsenal. Like every real Anarchist, he must sternly reprobate the use of force against others, in order to be consistent in his creed that force must not be used against him. Label a man Anarchist, and under this law, though his whole life is peace, and his whole doctrine is peace, and his every act has been and is peace, he may be hurried to an Atlantic liner—a new sort of Bastile.

Mr. Turner was, in fact, discussing trades unions. Some people do not believe in trades unions; some people do not believe in Christian Science, and some do not believe in Christianity; but if there is any topic under heaven which cannot be freely and peacefully discussed because some set of men who happen to be in power do not believe in it, then free speech is at an end and progress has stepped backward.

Again quoting from Mr. Shepherd, "Has not America, has not civilization come to everything now dear to them, to everything on which their civilization and happiness depend, through the triumph of beliefs which were once odious and once treated as criminal and for which men were deported and even burnt and crucified?"

Among the presidents of the Turner mass-meeting were Felix Adler, Carl Schurz, Charles Sprague Smith, Ernest Crosby, John De Witt Warner, and a great number of other earnest men who realize, though the masses do not, that eternal vigilance is the price of liberty. During this meeting Turner remained in his prison at Ellis Island, where he now is. He is chief organizer of the Retail Clerks' Union of Great Britain, and a member of the London Trades Council. He has delivered these same speeches all over England and says: "I came here to discuss economic questions and social problems, and I was very much surprised when the immigration officers stepped up to me while I was speaking at the Murray Hill Lyceum. They searched me and then brought me here." The Evening Post says: "The first attempt at enforcing the anti-Anarchist act passed after the assassination of President McKinley is not only ridiculous but alarming to all who hold to American ideals of personal liberty."

To show how little the world changes and how men clothed with a brief authority quickly assume the role of tyrant, I quote from that Commissioner Williams said: "We'll ship him back to England on the first British steamer that leaves this port; if the Teutonic sails first, Mr. Turner will be deported on the Teutonic; we have been laying for him to appear here for the past three months." So these precious Bastile commissioners of Secretary Cortelyou were "laying" for a peaceable trade unionist for three months. It would seem, therefore, that this Anarchist is obnoxious not because of any Anarchistic theory, because he never uttered any, but because he is an advocate of organized labor, and we may take it that his deportation is at the secret behest of those who are opposed to organized labor. If organized labor is not dull witted, it will take alarm at this attack on free speech and free institutions; it will insist that so-called "representatives" in congress must really represent the people; and it will turn to philosophical Anarchy itself as a relief from oppression by government by so-called majority.

Tyranny depends upon power, not upon the form of government; it exists in a republic, where the power is secured by a majority, as well as in a kingdom, where it is "God-given." A meeting which was to be held in Paterson, N. J., and which was to be addressed by Bolton Hall, a son of the distinguished Presbyterian clergyman, the late Rev. John Hall, and himself an eminent lawyer, was, by order of the mayor and interference of the police, not permitted to proceed. Mr. Hall stated to the authorities that the meeting had no connection with the Turner arrest except to protest against it as an invasion of the right of free speech, but the mayor and the police would not even permit the meeting to be held. Mr. Hall and others assured the authorities that they would warrant the entire peaceableness of the meeting and the true American character of its doctrine, and he pointed out the constitutional right of the people to peaceably assemble and discuss their grievances. The mayor snapped his fingers at the constitution and replied, "If you people had your way, we would not be running things," and the meeting was not held. In the days of our colonial forefathers the meeting would have been held, or there would have been blood shed.

The fact is, as those in authority grow more strenuous and militant, and expend the people's millions on battleships and world powerfulness, the people themselves grow more and more timid and less capable of self-help. The coming generations of this country seem likely to have little knowledge of what true liberty is and what their inalienable rights are. Every one ought to know that the constitution guarantees the right of the people to peaceably assemble and discuss their grievances; that this right was secured not only by the blood of the Revolution, but by oceans of blood before it; that every assemblage of citizens is just as capable of interpreting that clause of the constitution as is the Supreme Court of the United States; and that every assemblage of citizens has the same authority to enforce this constitutional right as would any body of police or soldiery. It is one of the fundamentals which comes back to the people themselves for interpretation and enforcement, and I, for one, shall not hesitate to maintain here and elsewhere that I am sorry that the mayor and police of the city of Paterson were not led out into their own square and shot, if such an extreme step were necessary on the part of the citizens to preserve their inestimable, constitutional, and elemental right. Every state in the Union has a law under which any speaker who incites to murder and riot may be arrested and punished, so that this law is absolutely unnecessary to protect any portion of the community against any incendiary utterances, but it does give the federal authorities and the central government one more excuse to invade the liberties of the people. . . .

They talk of deporting Anarchists. If they mean philosophical and peaceable Anarchists, Warren, a descendant of Warren of Bunker Hill, was the great American Anarchist. If they mean by Anarchist those diseased and unsettled minds which brood upon the tyrannies of government until a death stroke at the visible head of government is the consummation of their broodings, we ourselves have bred the only assassins who have struck at our presidents. Have we got to learn all over again what the world is supposed to have learned hundreds of years ago, that the greatest safety lies in liberty and the greatest danger in tyrannous repression? You cannot imprison ideas. You cannot kill them. There is one thing certain, that the progress of humanity has been toward liberty, and there is another thing certain, that humanity will still continue to progress toward liberty, and those who would gain for the world more liberty are true prophets, and those who would take away anything of the liberty which has been so dearly gained are walking backward into a pit.—Charles E. S. Wood in the Pacific Monthly.

John Turner, the English Anarchist, is the first person to be arrested under the anti-Anarchist law passed after the shooting of McKinley. This law provides that persons who do not believe in the present government of the United States may be deported if they have not been three years in the country. It does not say they must advocate the overthrow of the present government, but it is sufficient if they merely believe that it should be overthrown. Not only this, but any American citizen inviting such a person to come to America to visit him is liable for a long term of imprisonment. This is free thought with a vengeance. The great White Czar will soon be sending emissaries to sit at the feet of our Washington Gamaliels and get pointers on how to rule an empire.—The Co-Operator.

BIRD SHOT.

In a recent issue of Free Society an article is published from "Law and Authority," by Peter Kropotkin. The article is in reality a stricture on the Socialist philosophy, but all the way through is a better defense of Socialism than individualism.

This writer says: "Two-thirds and often as many as three-fourths of crimes in the nature of injury to persons are instigated by the desire to obtain possession of some one's wealth. This immense class of so-called 'crimes and misdemeanors' will disappear on the day on which private property ceases to exist." To this all Socialists will agree, while many Anarchists cannot, for they believe in private property. But what is to be done, according to Kropotkin's estimate, with the "one-third" or "one-fourth" of the crimes that would remain after taking away private property? Those who will kill through jealousy or revenge—shall society have no protection from its murderous, unbalanced members like the Czolgoszes, Guiteaus and Hersheis? If protection is afforded from such characters all should contribute to the expense, and this is the Socialist's reason for any government or force at all, and we consider government to this extent at least indispensable.

If we take away the right to private property in capital (not wealth), then the need of force or government at once ceases, except as to protection from those who disregard the equal rights of others. With this exception Kropotkin's article voices the sentiment of all scientific Socialists. When all that is publicly used will be publicly owned and all that is privately used will be privately owned, then force in government, except to meet the very rare cases of "injury to persons," would vanish. Then government would partake of the nature of a bureau of information.

Private property in capital is the root of nearly all the evils which afflict society to-day. By capital, in contradistinction to wealth, I mean that which is used to make more capital. Society, the collectivity, must control all capital. Then the incentive is destroyed for one individual to exploit or made a profit or take an advantage of another individual. We do not need to change human nature. Simply remove the opportunity for profit or advantage that one individual holds over another; then we make it easier to do right than wrong, easier to earn than to steal a living. So long as any incentive remains for one individual to exploit another this world will remain a veritable industrial hell. Remove this incentive by making all capital publicly owned and we would begin at once the erection of a paradise.

HENRY E. ALLEN.

BABYLONIAN ORIGIN OF NEW TESTAMENT.

A careful examination of the mythology of the Babylonians goes to show that it abounds in parallels to both Old and New Testament conceptions. Not only is this true of the contents of the historical books, but also of the Epistles and the doctrinal teachings of the New Testament writers; especially does the Book of Revelation demonstrate this theory. Babylonian elements can be traced in the doctrine of the pré-existence of Christ and of his wonderful birth from a virgin; in the glorification of the Christ Child by the chorus of heavenly singers; in the miracles of the Lord, especially those that demonstrate his power over devils, even to the extent of expelling them; and in his descent to the lower world and his ascension to heaven. To Babylonian sources may also be traced the Christian mysteries of baptism and the Lord's Supper, church doctrines concerning angels and devils, and eschatological beliefs regarding the region of the dead, life beyond the tomb, and kindred matters. Although in some of these questions the data in hand are not yet sufficient to raise scientific conclusions above all doubt, and the whole hypothesis must for the present be regarded as problematic, yet the materials are sufficient to justify the main contention that the traditions of the Jews and of the earliest Christians are full of Babylonian elements. It is also evident that such elements were not mechanically and outwardly adopted, but were inwardly assimilated and appropriated in such a manner that the introduction of these Babylonian factors in a marked degree modified the original teachings of Judaism and Christianity.—Professor Zimmer, University of Leipsic.

The entire New Testament shows the evidence of Oriental and in particular of Babylonian influences. The post-exilic Jews were very susceptible to influences from other sources, and practiced a religious syncretism to a marked degree. In primitive Christianity the same factors can be recognized, especially in the writing of the Apostles Paul and John. Nowhere else are the Babylonian elements more readily detected than in the Apocalypse, where the seven spirits, the twenty-four elders, the four heavenly visions of animals, the two witnesses, the book with the seven seals, the heavenly Jerusalem, the marriage of the Lamb, and many other details are to be attributed to Babylonian teachings. The same is true, though not to so marked a degree, of the historical and doctrinal contents of the rest of the New Testament books—as illustrated, for example, in the story of the childhood of Christ, the narrative of the baptism of Jesus, his temptation, his transfiguration, his resurrection, ascension, descent to Hades, etc. On the whole, the Christology and the eschatology of the New Testament are largely composed of Babylonian elements.—Professor Gunkel, University of Berlin.

CHRISTIAN PAGANISM.

If one of the priests of Isis or Osiris could return to life again and visit a Roman Catholic cathedral on the continent, he would see many things that would recall to his mind the mysterious religion of the ancient temples—the lights on the altar; the peculiar vestments of the clergy; the incense; the sacred image moving in procession, "escorted by the tonsured surpliced train," which Juvenal satirized centuries ago; the worship accorded to Madonna and child, a paraphrase of that given to Isis and the infant Horus; the nimbus (a solar emblem) about the head of the pictured saint; the very orientation of the cathedral itself.—The Open Court.

Early Christianity was in all its essentials a special development of the common religious ideas of Asia Minor and Syria.—Grant Allen.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD OWN

TOKOLOGY.

A COMPLETE HEALTH GUIDE.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

Teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions.

Treats of diseases of women and children; contains practical teachings on Change of Life, limiting offspring, etc.

Lizzie N. Armstrong writes: "If I knew I were to be the mother of innumerable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of Tokology."

Dr. C. B. Willis: "Tokology is doing more for women than all other books put together."

CLOTH, PREPAID, $2.25; LEATHER, $2.75.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

TRUE MANHOOD.

AN INVALUABLE GUIDE TO HEALTH, STRENGTH AND PURITY.

BY E. B. SHEPHERD.

WHAT EVERY FATHER WANTS HIS BOY TO KNOW.

The Christian Endeavor World: "Its suggestions are wise and sensible."

Dr. Stockham, author of Tokology, says: "TRUE MANHOOD explains the transition from boyhood to manhood, giving knowledge of priceless value."

Levant cloth, 228 pages. Prepaid $1. STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

A treatise on Sexual Science and Marriage, rich in thought and strong in expression. Emphatically a book for the thinker.

Carpenter holds that woman's freedom is based upon economics; she must be independent financially that she may not be forced to sell herself in or out of marriage. He also makes a strong plea for a motherhood of freedom and thoughtful preparation.

AMERICAN EDITION, CLOTH, PREPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

CREATIVE LIFE.

A BOOK FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

A timely and important message not found in text books. Every girl seeks and should have this free, plain and practical knowledge. One writes: "Thank you, thank you, dear Doctor, for the plain but beautiful thoughts. Womanhood, motherhood and life have new meanings. You ennoble your theme." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

A NOVEL BY GEORGE N. MILLER.

FORTIETH THOUSAND.

"The Strike of a Sex" is a fascinating novel bearing upon the sexual relations. It is a bold protest against the customary life of most married people, and at the same time a prophecy of happier conditions between man and wife. Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

SONGS OF A CHILD,

AND OTHER POEMS.

By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. Price $1.50; postage 12c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

"PERSONAL EXPERIENCES OF TWO AMERICAN ANTI-VIVISECTIONISTS IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES."

BY PHILIP G. PEABODY.

With an Appendix by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c. Apply to PHILIP G. PEABODY, 15 Court Square, Boston, Mass.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1. M. HARMAN, 800 Fulton St., Chicago.

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

THE LIBERAL MAIL-ORDER JEWELER.

Now permanent at No. 110 N. Kensington Ave., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 20 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's Line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Thelma in the Crucible," free.

J. H. GREER, M. D.,

52 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.

Office Hours—9 a. m. to 6 p. m.; Wednesdays and Saturdays, 9 a. m. to 8 p. m.; Sundays, 9 a. m. to 12 m.

Telephone, Randolph 42.

DR. OGILVIE A. RICE,

DENTIST.

1556 MILWAUKEE AVE., COR. WESTERN, CHICAGO.

Telephone West 141.

PHILIP G. PEABODY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.

15 COURT SQUARE, ROOM 61.

BOSTON, MASS.

1009

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

KAREZZA.

SCIENCE OF MARRIAGE.

A godsend to every wife—a joy to every husband.

This work brings peace into homes disrupted by inharmony in the sexual relation. Dr. A. B. Stockham advises a practice which leads to individual liberty and to deeper love between husband and wife.

Dr. F. G. Welch: "After a personal trial of its teachings, I want to thank you for a great service to humanity."

Rev. George R. Stanshaw: "Out of a beautiful and ennobling experience, I can say, I KNOW."

Gives a high ideal of the marital relation and teaches control of the Procreating Power.

J. A. Smalley, M. D.: "I have received more actual benefit from the practice of KAREZZA teachings than from all other books on Sexual Science."

A. B. Franklin, M. D.: "KAREZZA does more than any other single thing to make marriage a perpetual courtship."

LEVANT CLOTH, POSTPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

JUST OUT.

PARENTHOOD.

By Alice B. Stockham, M. D., author of "Tokology" and "Karezza." Highest ideals for best offspring. Vital and important subjects discussed, including new philosophy of the Creative Energy. G. G. Hunt says: "Many sentences of PARENTHOOD should be graven in gold and handed down to posterity." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

One of the best short works on the subject. A charming little gift book. "Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it."

DAINTILY PRINTED. PREPAID, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY, AND THE STATE.

BY FREDERICK ENGELS.

Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans.

217 pages, bound in cloth. Price 50c; postage 5c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MEN, WOMEN, AND CHANCE.

BY WILLIAM PLATT.

Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. Price 75c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STORY OF IJAIN;

OR, THE EVOLUTION OF A MIND.

By Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Stuart Ross), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. Price $1; postage 8c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

ISOLA; OR, THE DISINHERITED.

A drama in six acts. By Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1; postage 7c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SEND 10c IN STAMPS FOR THREE NUMBERS, OR 50c FOR TWELVE MONTHS' SUBSCRIPTION TO

HUMAN NATURE.

It is a monthly magazine, now in the fifteenth year of publication. It is Unique, Eclectic and Scientific. It treats of Phrenology, Psychology, Health, Sociology and all subjects which pertain to the welfare of humanity.

The character of men and animals is in accordance with their physical organization. This is determined by size of body and brain, shape of head, texture, temperament and facial expression.

HUMAN NATURE illustrates these principles by picture and pen, and teaches its readers how to read character. Its aims are ennobling; its style, while strong, is sprightly, and its literary standard high. You need HUMAN NATURE. Address

PROFESSOR ALLEN HADDOCK,

PHRENOLOGIST,

1020 MARKET ST., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 63, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We cannot sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 30c each, two for 50c. Address EDWIN C. WALKER, 244 W. 143d St., New York, N. Y.

WANTED—100 women to study medicine or midwifery. Next term begins January 1, 1904. College of Medicine and Surgery, 245 Ashland Blvd., Chicago, Ill. DR. FLORENCE DRESSLER, Secretary. (Dept. A.)

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

PRICE FIVE CENTS. CHICAGO, ILL., MARCH 3, E. M. 304. [C. E. 1904.] WHOLE NO. 1010

JOHN TURNER RELEASED ON BAIL.

Washington, Feb. 29.—An order has been issued in the Supreme Court of the United States for the release of John Turner on bail, and the hearing of his case by the court has been set for April 4.

WOMAN AND A NEW HUMAMITY.

In the past, woman was considered by man to be an inferior, an obstacle, a necessary evil, a slave, a drudge, unclean and without a soul or reason, until, in the sixth century, the bishops of the Church, after much discussion, finally voted that she had a soul. But nearly a thousand years after this discussion in favor of the humanity of woman in Christian Europe it was still contended that the women of newly discovered America belonged to the brute creation, possessing neither souls nor reason. As late as the sixteenth century, an anonymous work appeared arguing that women were no part of humanity, but a species of an intermediate animal, between the human and brute creation. Until the time of Peter the Great, women were not recognized as human beings in the Greek Church. As late as the Woman's Rights Convention in Philadelphia, in 1854, an objector in the audience cried out, "Let women first prove they have souls; both Church and State deny it." All this and much more can be learned by reading, "Woman, Church and State," and the Bible view of woman is little better; not even the New Testament, with its "Let your women keep silence in the churches," and "I suffer not a woman to teach," and "Wives, be under subjection to your own husbands," and its view of young widows, and much more to the same effect. But notwithstanding all this, and with the common school, college and all institutions of learning closed against her, until within the last century—in spite of all that has been done by man to degrade her and prevent her progress—woman has slowly but surely improved intellectually and physically and spiritually, until to-day she is a recognized equal, standing side by side with man in almost every walk of life. This she has achieved in spite of much opposition. And now that the barriers are mostly withdrawn, now that the schools are open to her, now that man encourages her efforts, woman of to-day may well be thankful that she lives now instead of in the past.

Few of the women of this day know what they owe to Mary Lyon of Massachusetts, and those like her who have so smoothly paved for them the pleasant ways of learning. One hundred years ago girls were not allowed to go to school. In 1788 it was voted in town meeting in Northampton, Mass., not "to be at any expense for the schooling of girls." When the first high school for girls was opened in Boston, in 1825, there was such a great outcry against the innovation, and so many girls applied for admission, that the scheme was abandoned, and was not again attempted until 1853. In 1826 the school committee of Concord, Mass., passed a resolution that "from the first day of December to the first day of April, no misses under ten years of age shall attend school in the center of the town, nor any over the age of ten years where there are forty male scholars attending the school." Such was the actual position of young women in this country with reference to the means and opportunities of an education, when, in 1837, Mary Lyon opened her school at South Hadley. When her scheme became known and she began to ask assistance to build and furnish such a school, the whole thing was declared to be impractical, unnatural, unscriptural, unfeminine, unchristian, and whatever else was wrong and visionary. It was believed to be an innovation unheard of and uncalled for, the women did not want to be educated, and this in the face of the fact that the girls' school in Boston was closed because so many sought admission—and if women were educated it would ruin their health, impair their womanly delicacy and modesty, unsex them, unfit them for their proper sphere. Against these railing accusations Mary Lyon had nothing to plead but her heavenly vision, and she pleaded as for her life.

The past is too horrible and we gladly turn from it to consider the present and future. Step by step woman has advanced until to-day her prospects in life are as bright as that of man. Already she wins as many or more school honors as man, and whatever she undertakes her success compares favorably with man's. And the future is all before her, with its opportunities to help make this world a fit dwelling place. The combined efforts of both man and woman are necessary to right the many wrongs which man in his ignorance, has created. A few men and women have come to believe that if only desired and designed children were born they would be better children and consequently better men and women. If this idea could be universally taught and believed and practiced, and love take the place of what is considered by man to be love, in time we would have a humanity in which there would be little in common with what we now have. To teach man her idea of love is part of woman's work, and man must learn and believe the right meaning of love before we can hope to have a much better humanity. Woman's idea of what constitutes love between the sexes is widely different from man's. Man thinks physical attraction is the chief and almost only necessary element in love, and by acting upon this idea has, to a very great extent, caused pure-minded women to depreciate physical attraction, thereby doing almost if not quite as much harm as man has done by overestimating its value. The thinking, pure-minded woman would have harmony of temperament, similarity of tastes, congeniality of disposition, likeness in point of capacity, a similar degree of culture, as well as physical attraction. Humanity has gradually improved, not because of the teaching of the Church, but because nature always does its very best with the material it has to work with. So now that man has evolved to where he knows that woman is an actual necessity, and woman to where she knows she is an equal necessity, neither of more importance than the other, we can dream a dream; we can dream we see a land, and on the hills walk brave men and brave women, hand in hand, looking fearlessly into each other's eyes, and the women also holding each other's hands, and our reason tells us that such will be the future of this world, when our new humanity comes upon the stage of action and so changes conditions that it is possible for heaven to be on earth and in this life.

SARA CHRIST CAMPBELL.

THE SOLE DUTY OF THE PRESENT.

The future that is trying to dawn struggles against the past that is trying to prevent it. All that the present has to do is to declare against the past, for the duty of the present is to suppress all the barriers and oppose all the obstacles that retard the march of humanity.—Henry Maret.

A PLAIN STATEMENT OF FACTS.

In reply to numerous inquiries conveyed by letters through friends (neither of them can get a letter, except through a second party), Mrs. Helen Wilmans Post and Mr. C. C. Post have issued a pamphlet containing a brief statement of the facts in their case, from which the following extracts are taken:

The first attack on us was the bill drawn by the Medical Association of the state intended to make it criminal for any one to heal the sick except themselves. This was defeated in two successive legislatures, evidence that public sentiment is not with the doctors.

Then came an order from the Postmaster General to the postmaster at Seabreeze ordering that all letters addressed to Helen Wilmans be marked "Fraudulent" and returned to the writers. Thus cut off from the use of the mails by which to reach those who best could prove their innocence, Mrs. Post, together with Mr. Post and Mr. Burgman, were indicted and arrested on charge of swindling in the name of fifteen people, not one of whom made any charge against us or even knew of the use of their names.

At a hearing before the postoffice officials in Washington, on request to have Mrs. Post's right to the use of the mails restored to her, we were told that, while she might not get mail as Helen Wilmans, she might continue her mental healing business and get mail as Helen Wilmans Post, Mrs. H. W. Post or Mrs. C. C. Post. This hearing was before Mr. Christiancy, acting for Mr. Tyner (both of whom have been forced to leave office because of proof that they were engaged in blackmailing legitimate business firms while permitting recognized swindlers to do business on payment for the privilege).

Mrs. Post at once notified her many correspondents of the name under which they must in future address her, when we were again indicted in Macon, Ga., on the general charge of fraudulent use of the mails, though still no one complained of being defrauded, and we were under bonds to appear for trial at Jacksonville. All these indictments were eventually quashed, but immediately new ones were obtained at Tampa, and later still in Jacksonville. Meantime fraud orders had been issued against the name under which Mrs. Post had been told she could continue business, against C. C. Post, against C. F. Burgman, and against Mrs. Post's paper, Freedom, so that not one of the accused could get a letter from any one; and, as a matter of fact, letters written the accused by persons offering to testify in their behalf, by the attorneys whom they had employed to defend them, and by friends inclosing money, were marked "fraudulent," returned and never reached the hands of the accused.

If the American people will permit citizens to thus be deprived of every right guaranteed by the constitution, permit them to be branded as criminal without trial, without a hearing even, by an appointee of the President, denied the means of communicating with those who can best prove their innocence, or with the attorneys who are to plead their case, and then be arrested on the charge of swindling persons who say they have not been swindled, but benefited—then are the American people fallen from their high estate as lovers of liberty and fair play.

But there is more to be told: At the trial just ended Mrs. Post only was put on trial.

The judge in his charge to the jury stated that the only question for the jurors to determine was whether Mrs. Post believed that she could heal and intended to do so, when she "devised the scheme and advertised that she could heal," etc.

To prove that Mrs. Post believed that she could and did heal, volunteer witnesses came from a dozen different states, each of whom testified to having been healed of some serious malady by Mrs. Post; and her clerks, summoned by the prosecution, testified that 80 to 90 per cent of her patients reported being entirely healed or greatly benefited. To prove further her faith in mental healing, evidence was brought that she had paid other mental healers over $1,000 to treat a member of her family. In no other way possible could Mrs. Post prove that she acted in good faith and believed she could and did heal. How could she help believing that she healed when daily those whom she treated wrote her that she had healed or was healing them, or how could any juror fail to know that she must believe it? The judge, in his charge to the jurors, told them in substance that unless they, the jurors, themselves understood the law of mental healing under which Mrs. Post claimed to heal, or unless the law was commonly understood and accepted, the testimony of those who testified to being healed "could properly be ignored." He went further and instructed the jury that the evidence of the witnesses who testified to being healed by absent treatment could not be considered. Yet their evidence was the only possible means Mrs. Post had of proving her innocence, and it was for scheming to defraud these, and such as these, that she was being tried.

The exact language of the judge is as follows:

"The court has permitted several parties to testify as to their relations with the defendant. Although they, in terms, testified that they had been treated by the defendant and cured, it at the same time appeared that these parties were at great distances—hundreds and sometimes thousands of miles—from the defendant, and totally ignorant of her acts and doings at the time they alleged the defendant treated them; such testimony was so contrary to the well-established rules of evidence and natural law that it could not be accepted as stated."

Here was one on trial for claiming that she could heal absently; here the witnesses testifying that they were treated absently and healed; that they wrote and received letters weekly from Mrs. Post during the time they were being treated; that under her treatment they were healed after being abandoned by the regular doctors. Yet the judge instructs the jury that a person charged with defrauding, through the use of the mails, persons by promising to treat them may not have the evidence of the party treated and healed to prove her innocence.

But the judge did not stop there. What follows is from the columns of the daily papers of Jacksonville, the Times-Union and the Metropolis, one a morning, the other an evening paper:

"When the jury retired a great many of those in attendance thought it would only be a few minutes before a verdict would be returned, but they were badly disappointed. Twelve o'clock came and still no verdict. The marshal sent out and procured dinner for the jurors, and it was then seen that there was little prospect of an early agreement.

"At 4 p. m. the court was convened and the jury was ordered to be brought into the courtroom. Judge Locke asked if the jury had agreed upon a verdict. To this Mr. W. P. Gifford, foreman of the jury, replied that the jury was about to ask the court to be discharged on account of not being able to agree upon a verdict.

"Judge Locke then addressed the jury as follows: 'Gentlemen, this is a case that the court demands a verdict, either one way or the other. The court does not dictate to the jury how they will decide, but the court will require a verdict before the discharge of the jury. It is within the discretion of the court to insist upon the jury agreeing. It is necessary for me as judge of the court to go to Tampa to-night to impanel a grand jury. Just how long I may be detained is as yet uncertain. If the jury finds it impossible to agree by 6 o'clock to-night it will be necessary for me to leave you in charge of the marshal from day to day until I return to receive your verdict. There is too much trouble, expense and labor involved in a trial of this kind to have it pass off with simply the views of one or two jurors. The court does not attempt to dictate anything regarding your verdict, gentlemen, but I feel it my duty to do everything I possibly can to see that a verdict is reached in this case. If you cannot reach a verdict by 6 o'clock the court will stand adjourned from day to day, and you will remain in the custody of the marshal until I return from Tampa.'

"Colonel Green, attorney for the defense, objected to the court's remarks to the jury. His objection was based on the ground of coercion on the part of the court, as well as a threat of bodily inconvenience in case the jury did not agree. The objections were overruled.

"About 5:30 o'clock there was a rap on the door of the jury room and a message was sent to Judge Locke that the jury desired to come into court. The court was convened and the jury brought in.

"'Have you agreed upon a verdict, gentlemen?' inquired Judge Locke.

"'We have your honor,' replied Foreman Gifford.

"The verdict was handed to the clerk, who handed it to the court, and afterwards read it. It was: 'We, the jury, find the defendant guilty as charged.'

"The court thanked the jury for their services, and ordered the discharge of all jurors and witness in this particular case."

Here was a threat to hold the jury indefinitely unless they agreed within two hours. They might not agree in two hours, but might in three or four or by morning, but they were told that no judge would be there to receive their decision for days, possibly weeks—he did not himself know when he would return.

And so the case stands, but other indictments, which include both Mr. and Mrs. Post, await the action of the prosecution, and still they are denied the use of the mails. We have appealed, of course, and believe we shall win in the end. By and by the people will wake up to the efforts being made to establish a precedent for the exercise of an authority as great as that of the Czar of all the Russians in the hands of an official wholly irresponsible to any court or to Congress—a power that can be, has been and will continue to be used for the worst of purpose as long as it is permitted. We are not the only victims by many. Our case has become prominent because we have contended against the rulings of the department and now of the court. It has cost us the larger part of what we possessed. It may cost us what remains, but we will contest while we have means of contesting this, the most direct and dangerous attack upon our rights and the liberties of every American citizen ever attempted.

IMPERIALISM AND SOCIAL PROBLEMS.

There seem to be many who have failed to recognize any practical connection between imperialism and the internal social problems of a country. We are apt to think of imperialism as affecting only the foreign policy of the nation, and thus we fail to see its relation to home affairs, except, of course, as it increases government expenditures.

If we seek to get below the surface of vanity and hurrah, and try seriously to discover the real philosophy of the imperialistic movement, what, let us ask, is the impelling motive? Think of what England has added to her territory since 1870: an area of 4,754,000 square miles and an estimated population of 88,000,000! Why this immense expansion? What strong forces are back of it? Manifest destiny and Anglo-Saxon push are words; what is the thing? Mr. Hobson, an English writer, in his book, "Imperialism: A Study," has given the answer:

"It is not too much to say that the modern foreign policy of Great Britain is primarily a struggle for profitable markets of investment. To a larger extent every year Great Britain is becoming a nation living upon tribute from abroad, and the classes who enjoy this tribute have an ever-increasing incentive to employ the public policy, the public purse, and the public force to extend the field of their private investments and to safeguard and improve their existing investments."

In other words, it is in the growth of concentrated capital and the consequent desire for profitable foreign trade and investment that we find the explanation of colonial expansion. It is for foreign markets and the exploitation of weaker peoples that battleships are multiplied, taxes increased, expenditures quadrupled, lives sacrificed, and principles trampled under foot. It is for extending trade influence at the behest of financial rulers that the natural spread of civilization and self-government is disregarded and a domineering tyranny established over unwilling subjects.

All this has become as true of America as of England. We have not an equal necessity of looking abroad, because of our larger home market; but we are looking abroad. It may be that the home market of America still takes 96 per cent of all manufactured articles, only 4 per cent going to foreign markets; but already we find that the extension of foreign trade and the competition in foreign markets are begetting and fostering our imperialism. And at the same time, as has been the case in England, they are beginning to be used as an argument for resisting the demands of laborers for better pay and shorter hours. This argument is being dinned into the ears of British workingmen, and in due time it will be dinned more and more into the ears of American workingmen. Furthermore, the same argument is used to excuse the monopolistic methods of trusts. In an article, for example, in one of the current reviews, a writer concludes a lengthy discussion of the Standard Oil Company by telling how this company sells about 90 per cent of the oil exported, how its power at home enables it to compete in foreign fields, and how it sells abroad at a lower price than at home only where it comes into competition with Russia in the eastern market.

But in a still more intimate way the purpose and methods of imperialism connect themselves with social problems at home. Readers of the Public may, perhaps, remember a book on "Poverty" reviewed some time since in these columns. It was a minute study of the English city of York, in which place the author found that over 40 per cent of the population were virtually paupers. Now, suppose England, instead of overwhelming the Boers, had given her thought and effort to enabling these people to become purchasers of her goods! Well does Mr. Hobson speak of the "absurdity of spending half our financial resources in fighting to secure foreign markets at a time when hungry mouths, ill-clad backs, ill-furnished houses, indicate countless unsatisfied material wants among our own population." Imperialism turns its back on these conditions in the home market. It does not seek to increase this market by a better distribution of wealth at home. It goes about, at the cost of the nation's revenue and lives, seeking foreign markets and foreign investments.

Imperialism talks much about the spread of civilization. When we shall have attended better to social conditions at home, and then only shall we have a civilization worthy to spread. But imperialists do not think so; the present civilization is good enough for them, and they want more of the same kind. So the great financial forces that in both England and America, through the Tory and Republican parties, are whistling patriotism and prosperity to the neglect of the conditions of ill-distributed wealth at home, are the same forces that are backing the policy of imperialism.

Let us recognize the fact that there are many good men in these parties who have not considered the full purport of this policy. There are others who have been carried along by the impulse of a mistaken patriotism, or by the force of cleverly manipulated public opinion. To all these we must appeal to pause and think how false the policy of imperialism is both in spirit and in method. Its spirit is driving us to acts of cruelty and to the sacrifice of the optimistic principles of democratic government. Its method is to divert attention and to turn away from the betterment of social conditions at home, while it seeks new fields to exploit abroad.—J. H. Dillard in The Public (Chicago).

CRIME IN FREE SOCIETY.

In Lucifer of Feb. 25, Henry E. Allen quotes from Kropotkin, where he says: "Two-thirds and often as many as three-fourths of crimes in the nature of injury to persons are instigated by the desire to obtain possession of some one's wealth. This immense class of so-called crimes and misdemeanors will disappear on the day on which private property ceases to exist." "To this," says Allen, "all Socialists agree, while many Anarchists cannot, for they believe in private property." He then asks: "What is to be done with the one-third or one-fourth of the crimes that would remain after taking away private property? Those who will kill through jealousy or revenge—shall society have no protection?" To which I will say as an Anarchist (though as individuals one Anarchist has no right to speak for all), that I, with Kroptokin, do not believe in private property any more than Socialists do—and, as I view Anarchy, it is the true Socialism, the true co-operation, the true communism. Our ideal society is what State Socialists are aiming to attain by force, by law, by government with a horde of officers. True Socialism must be voluntary—true co-operation must be voluntary. When government, the great aggressor, ceases to protect the few in the possession of great wealth, of course great possessions of private property will cease—and the two-thirds and the three-fourths of crime generated by great wealth in a few hands will cease, and along with the three-fourths of crime, the other fourth will also cease in a free society. Mr. Allen tacitly admits that three-fourths of all crime results from private ownership of great wealth, but anticipates a residue of one-fourth to be suppressed by force. If the incentive to three-fourths of crime may be removed by an equal distribution of wealth, may not the other fourth be removed by giving freedom to all? I, with many other, if not all other, Anarchists, claim it would.

The jealousies that now exist he thinks would continue. By the time we are educated to the Anarchistic ideal of freedom and want it, jealousies will cease with other unreasonable passions. Even now many men and women are above jealousy. Jealousy is unphilosophical—unreasonable. If a woman loves another more than she does me, she cannot help it, nor can the other man. It is my own fault that I am not lovely, which should stimulate me to be more so.

In a free society, men and women would reason and cease to force things. It is coercive force that is at the bottom of all the error and evil that exists, and not the depravity of man. Man has been perverted by force so long that many have no appreciation of their own divinity and goodness within them.

J. C. Barnes.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

MOSES HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Application Filed for Entry at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One copy, one year.....$2.00 One copy, six months.....$1.00
Two copies to one address, one year.. 2.25 Two copies to one address, six mos.. 1.15
One copy, three months.....50 cents Single copies.....5 cents

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire notify us if you wish to continue to receive Lucifer.

EASTERN REPRESENTATIVE:
E. C. WALKER, 244 WEST 143D STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

THIRD SERIES. VOL. VIII. NO. 9.

Up to the time of going to press no decision in regard to Lucifer has been received from the postal department. We are paying postage on Lucifer at the rate of 21 cents a pound, instead of 1 cent a pound as formerly. It would seem that if a paper is not to be the object of charity in receiving a "subsidy," there should be a reasonable rate of postage charged. If all publishers paid a fair price it would not be necessary for the second-class mails to be a loss to the department. As the business is now conducted, the great dailies, which are really published primarily and principally for the money to be made from advertising, are carried by the thousands of tons at a loss. Lucifer is weighed and the number estimated instead of counted. The result is that we are obliged to pay more postage than we would if we should stamp each copy. Last week we were charged for mailing more copies than we had printed, and yet we had a surplus over the mailing. This mistake will probably be rectified, as we have pointed out the error. L. H.

LUCIFER IN ACCOUNT WITH THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

With more than twenty-five hundred miles of railway track intervening between me and Lucifer's office, it is easily seen that I am not in good position to decide, from week to week, as to what is best to do or say in regard to the contest in which, for some months past, we have been involved, through no fault of our own, with the postoffice department at Washington, D. C.

Hence I think it should excite no surprise that I have left to others, in the main, the task of holding up Lucifer's side of this defensive fight for liberty and justice against official, not to say officious, meddlesomeness.

So far as I am able to see, at long range, the right of free expression of opinion by public press and common mail has been well upheld and bravely defended by Daughter Lillian and our co-workers in Chicago, New York, Boston and elsewhere. One of these helpers went to Washington and interviewed the First Assistant Postmaster General in behalf of Lucifer. Others have written letters to and received replies from headquarters of the postoffice department, all of which efforts have probably been more or less helpful in securing a hearing for readmission to second-class rates of postage.

Careful readers have doubtless read the published correspondence between Lucifer's office and Postmaster Coyne of the Chicago postoffice; also the letter of Edwin C. Madden, Third Assistant Postmaster General, in the issue dated Feb. 18. While no commendation is needed from me, as I think, in regard to Lillian's replies to the letters of these high officials, I will ask all readers of Lucifer to note particularly her comments on the letter of Mr. Madden, and the wording of that letter itself.

With Lillian, I would ask:

If not to tell under what conditions mail will be transmitted, what [in thunder!] is the function of the postal officials?

If these officials cannot or will not condescend to tell common mortals what are the "requirements of the law" that controls, practically, the freedom of speech and of press of the country, what is the use of spending annually large sums of the people's money in salaries to pay these lordly heads of "departments"?

Several points in Madden's letter call for special comment, but believing our readers capable of making their own reflections thereon I will simply add that, to my thinking, there is a whole volume of suggestions in the phrase, "admissibility to the mails at the subsidized second-class rates of postage." Webster defines subsidy as—

"Aid in money to purchase assistance or support."

Why should there be a "subsidized" rate of postage?

Does not the word itself plainly imply discrimination, privilege, inequality, inequity, injustice?

If all printed matter were put on the same level as to rights in the public mail, would it not save a world of trouble, of expense, of worry and wrong, intentional or otherwise, in classifying or assorting? And would it not do much to vindicate our boastful claim that here in this country there are no privileged classes or orders?

So long as our government assumes the role of a parent in the way of giving privileges to one class of printed matter that are not allowed to others in transmission through the mails, just so long may we expect liberty and justice to be outraged in the name of law and order.

If the postoffice department were recognized as having no duties, no responsibilities, except those of a common carrier, there would be little or no chance for rich and popular journals to receive favors that are denied to the poor and unpopular, nor would there ever have been opportunity for a semi-theologic organization such as the "New York Society for the Suppression of Vice," to secure the enactment of postal laws against "obscenity," under which laws hundreds of innocent persons have been imprisoned, robbed of their hard-earned property, and in some instances brought to untimely graves.

* * *

It is well to be politic and prudent when in the power of irresponsible masters, but is it true that the appointees of Theodore Roosevelt are our irresponsible masters?

For one, I simply refuse to so consider the situation.

I still contend for the view, the doctrine, that our elected ones are our servants, not our masters.

As such, I feel disposed to call Theodore Roosevelt to account and to demand of him why it is that an issue of Lucifer, No. 1000, dated Dec. 17, 1902, should be held two months or more in transit from the office of publication in Chicago to its purchasers in all parts of the United States, to say nothing of foreign countries.

As I see the facts of the matter, it is simply a case of unlawful detention, of unwarranted interference between seller and buyer. We publish a weekly paper and take money in advance for yearly subscriptions, obligating ourselves to furnish a copy of our paper each week to all who pay in advance the stipulated price. One of the weekly issues of this paper, dated as aforesaid, was carried by the sellers to the postoffice in Chicago for transmission to the buyers. Soon there came complaints from these buyers that that particular number of the paper had failed to appear. On inquiry it was found that the whole edition was being held by the postoffice servants in Chicago, under instructions from the appointees of Theodore Roosevelt at Washington, and up to this time all our efforts to get the said issue of Lucifer released and sent to the purchasers have been unavailing.

Here, then, is a clear case of failure in the carrying out of a plain business contract—a legitimate or lawful business contract.

WHO IS TO BLAME FOR THIS FAILURE?

The makers and sellers of the paper called Lucifer have done their part. They cannot deliver the paper to the homes of the purchasers, so they deliver the goods to the common carrier, the United States mail, and tender the stipulated payment for transmission and delivery.

What more can they do?

So far as they know, they have violated neither law nor justice. The paper was filled with matter similar to that usually published therein—similar to that published in what are called reform journals; edited carefully and conscientiously with a view to sustaining the high character of the paper as a defender of the rights of all citizens to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness—which character the purchasers had a clear right to expect each issue to sustain.

The purchasers are directly and chiefly the losers.

They ask the reason why.

The publishers are secondarily and indirectly the losers. If they cannot get their product delivered to purchasers, their paper must suspend publication.

They ask the reason why.

* * *

It is true—as seen by correspondence, published and unpublished—that the claim has been made that the issue of Lucifer dated Dec. 17 is "unmailable" on account of the immoral character of its contents; that is, because it contains "obscene" matter.

What particular article or articles in that paper are called obscene or immoral we have never yet been informed, but had we been so informed such information would not help to clear up the matter until we know who it is that decides whether the paper in question violates the statute defining the offense called obscenity. So far as we have been informed, the accused issue of Lucifer has never been brought to the notice of any court of justice—no court that is authorized by our system of government to take cognizance of crimes and misdemeanors.

As I understand the matter, Theodore Roosevelt is an executive officer only. It is his business and that of his appointees (including the Postmaster General and his assistants) to execute the laws, not to make laws, nor to decide whether any particular law has been violated; this latter being the duty of the judicial branch or department of the federal government.

Such being my understanding of the duties devolving upon the co-ordinate branches of the national government, I charge Citizen Roosevelt, our present chief executive servant, with malfeasance in office: the particular offense being the failure to deliver one thousand copies, more or less, of the paper called Lucifer the Light-Bearer, to its purchasers, and refusing, when called upon, to give any adequate or substantial reason for such failure to perform his sworn duty as a public carrier.

In accord with the maxim that an injury to one is the concern of all, and in accord with the spirit of another well-known saying that ours is a government of the people, by the people and for the people, I now call upon my fellow citizens—upon all who love justice and abhor tyranny, to assist us, the publishers and subscribers of Lucifer, to compel our present chief executive servant to release the said edition of Lucifer from its present confinement at the Chicago postoffice and cause the same to be properly delivered to its rightful owners, the subscribers, at their homes or places of business, in compliance with the sworn duty of the officials of the executive department of our national government. M. HARMAN.

It would seem that, in the opinion of the truly orthodox, the people who happen to be burned to death are in great luck. To the ordinary unsanctified mind, the fate of the victims of the Iroquois theater fire was most horrible, but I find this comforting sentiment in the Women's Catholic Forester. In verses on those who perished in that fire are these lines:

> "We the lost ones—they triumphant,
> Through the torrent to the port,
> Safe with God, their trials ended;
> Ours the sorrow, ours the load."

From which it would seem that their God is a partial God. He should send enough fires so that "we, the lost ones," would have equal opportunities to be "safe with God."

As the firemen were bringing the dying people out of the flames an archbishop stood and granted absolution to every one that passed him. So, by a few minutes of the torture of fire and suffocation, they were spared an eternity of similar suffering. From that point of view, they were surely to be congratulated. L. H.

MATTIE E. HURSEN.

This is a name familiar to many of Lucifer's friends, and these friends will learn with regret that on Feb. 22 she quitted this state of existence. She fully believed that it was only to enter another and broader. She was an enthusiastic Spiritualist, and an earnest worker for various reforms. She had been a reader of Lucifer for about fifteen years, and six years ago was for several months a member of our household. At that time her hands were stiffening with what was supposed to be rheumatism, but she did the greater part of our housework in spite of the pain and disadvantage under which she labored.

She often "spoke in meeting," and when she spoke she had something interesting to say. Her experience in marriage made her particularly interested in Lucifer's work, and it was largely to that experience that she attributed her long years of suffering. About two years ago her disease had reached a stage in which she was almost helpless. She grew gradually worse, and since last June was able to take scarcely any nourishment. She said, when I last saw her living, the week before her death, that she could sympathize with a starving person, who would do anything to obtain food, "for I have starved to death," she said. Her mind seemed as clear as ever up to within a few hours of her death, when she became unconscious. She said she wanted no funeral services, and that she wanted her body cremated, which requests were complied with. In silence her children and a few of her friends watched her pass from sight in the beautiful crematory at Graceland Cemetery.

A broad-minded, generous, helpful woman is gone from us. If she was not mistaken, she is now resuming her work, but whether such is the case, or whether she has sunk into oblivion, we can be glad that her suffering is ended. L. H.

Replying to the inquiry in a recent issue concerning colonies in California, I would say that, to my thinking, the mountain and foothill regions of central and perhaps also northern California offer specially fine inducements for those wishing to form settlements on the co-operative plan. I have specially in view one such prospective settlement in the Santa Cruz Mountains, sixteen miles from San Jose, or sixty-seven miles from San Francisco. At this place it is hoped to practicalize Lucifer's doctrine in regard to associative life. For particulars address Dr. Jannay, 1016½ Washington street, Oakland, Cal.

M. H.

Mr. Moses Harman's present address is 126 South McLaughlin avenue, San Jose, Cal.

PAGAN IMPRESS ON CHRISTIANITY.

The worship of Jesus was no part of the original Christian cult, and, had Christianity been confined to Palestine and to the Jewish people, could not have been established. The Jewish mind never took this attitude toward its heroes, never could admit the notion of a man-god. But elsewhere in the Roman empire the case was different; the people had long been accustomed to deify their heroes. The dead emperor was fairly sure of apotheosis, and sometimes this elevation took place before his death. So, naturally enough, when Christianity was transplanted into this different environment and began to take root, Jesus, as the head of the new spiritual kingdom, was, in true Roman fashion, made an object of worship. The use of images came from the same source. In like manner many an old ceremony was christened and adopted. When Paul and his associates undertook the publication of the gospel to the pagan world there is no evidence that they went with a fixed order of service for the churches they should found; on the contrary, there would seem not to have been as yet any fixed order. There is no specification in the New Testament how a public service should be carried on; the ritual, apparently, beyond the simplest elements, was yet to form. The leaders had a large liberty—had only to consider what was of immediate fitness and propriety. The minds of converts were, of course, full of pagan ideas, their hearts bound to pagan customs. Some of these ideas were good enough, and the preacher was often brought face to face with the question whether they were not virtually Christian ideas; some of these customs, too, were good enough, and the strongest of reasons existed for their continuance, and they were accordingly adopted into the Christian ritual and the Christian calendar.—Rev. Newton Mann in Unity.

SAFETY LIES IN FREEDOM OF SPEECH.

Secretary Cortelyou has interpreted the anti-alien and sedition law to mean the exclusion of John Turner.

John Turner is known in Buffalo. He spent some weeks here not many years ago. It is the testimony of all who met him that he is an intelligent gentleman, opposed to every kind of violence. Whether the law was intended to exclude a man of this kind is now before the courts.

Now, if the law was designed to exclude any people save those who advocate crime and violence, it is a bad law. If this law be held to exclude John Turner, it would exclude Tolstoi, the foremost citizen of the world, and Elisee Reclus, one of the foremost scientists of France. It would exclude George Fox and the founder of the Christian religion, were they living, for John Turner is no more an Anarchist than these men, or, to speak more accurately, he is the same kind of an Anarchist as these men. It may seem to some irreverent to speak the name of Jesus of Nazareth in this connection, but if the words of Jesus are correctly reported, he did not believe in government by force. Quakers and Shakers, Menonites and non-resistent Christians of many kinds, have all believed that they could not be consistent followers of Jesus while participating in a government founded by and supported by force. Without a religious, or at least a Christian basis, John Turner believes precisely as these do; and if Turner is an Anarchist, then Quakers are Anarchists, and any law that would exclude Quakers is a stupid law.

It is a strange fact, but it is a fact nevertheless, that the gentlest people are the ones that apparently are hated most. Our Puritan forefathers used Quakers worse than we now use assassins, for they burned them. And what was their offense? Why, they would not go to law and they would not fight. They relied on intelligence and love to rule the world, instead of force.

Now this is Anarchy, and John Turner, believing this, is an Anarchist. In the popular thought an Anarchist is one who believes in assassination. This misunderstanding is perhaps natural, since the man who killed President McKinley claimed to be an Anarchist. But the man who killed Garfield claimed, I believe, to be a Baptist. He certainly claimed to be a Christian. Yet no one assumes for this reason that Baptists or Christians are dangerous people. Of all men the Anarchist is the one whose belief pledges him to the most peaceful methods.

I am not an Anarchist, because I believe force is still needed in this world; but I believe we need much less than we have, and that more and more intelligence and love are to take the place of force. I believe we can all safely say with Thoreau: "I heartily accept the motto, 'that government is best which governs least,' and I should like to see it lived up to more rapidly and systematically. Carried out it finally amounts to this, which also I believe: That government is best which governs not at all; and when we are prepared for it, that will be the kind of government we will have."

I believe that any man who advocates violence or murder should be locked up as a lunatic. But any law that makes it a crime to invite Tolstoi to visit this country is a very stupid law. Milton said: "The whole truth has nothing to fear from the whole error." The world's experience shows that Milton was right.

Life and property are always safest where thought and speech are freest. England, where Anarchists of every type of thought are given freest utterance in Hyde Park every Sunday, is almost the only country where a ruler has not been assassinated in recent years. There is no line we can draw marking a limit beyond which speech may not safely be free. The moment we say of any idea, "It is dangerous," the way is open to all tyranny. If the people cannot be trusted to decide what ideas are wise or foolish, democracy is a failure. The best way to cure a fool of his folly is to let him make a fool of himself, provided, of course, his folly harm no one else. If it be folly to believe that we can get along without a government of force—and all governments mean force—it is a folly that harms no one, since we have had Quakers and Shakers and Passive Resistent Christians among us for a long time, and the world is better for them all.

Turner has no wish to come to America, if America does not want him. He is willing, however, to spend six months in prison, treated as though he were the worst kind of a criminal, if by so doing he may help to preserve free speech in this country that has used him so badly. If this does not stir us to speech and action, and cause our hearts to go out to him, then is there little hope for us left.—From an address by Rev. L. M. Powers (Universalist), at Buffalo, N. Y.

A NEW WORK ON MONISM.

Charles H. Kerr & Co., 56 Fifth avenue, Chicago, announce for early publication a philosophical work by Charles Kendall Franklin entitled "The Socialization of Humanity: An Analysis and Synthesis of Nature, Life, Mind and Society through the Law of Repetition—A System of Monistic Philosophy." To quote the first sentence of the preface, "The object of this investigation is to trace physical, organic and social phenomena to their sources in order to discover their laws, so that the subsequent expenditure of energy in nature, life, mind and society may be determined for human welfare." This is what the book attempts, and in a large measure accomplishes.

The author shows in plain, simple language that all nature is passing through a process in the expenditure of energy along the line of least resistance; that, following the Law of Repetition, there are four forms of this great Law of Motion developed: first, as in physical nature, where the line of least resistance is determined by blind conflict; second, as in organic nature, where it is determined by instincts and ideas; third, as in the individual man or woman, where it is determined by the moral sense; and fourth, as in society, where it is determined by the social sense; that each of these methods of the expenditure of energy is a new law of motion which is a more economical method of expending energy than the other preceding it, and that the perfect economic expenditure of all energy can only be attained by the socialization of the race, an end to which the universal process in the expenditure of energy in nature tends, and which will ultimately and inevitably be attained by the factors now at work.

In morality the work shows the inadequacy of Christianity as a race-religion and establishes in its place the religion of morality, which is destined to last so long as the race exists. In philosophy it shows that heretofore we have understood things only allegorically; that the great idea of God is only a symbol for the race; that all our hopes, aspirations and longings for a wider, deeper, fuller and purer life are to be realized here on earth in the socialization of humanity, with the perfect expenditure of all energy, and not in a dream-life beyond the grave. It suggests a solution of the ultimate metaphysical problem of knowledge by tracing the origin of mind from inorganic nature, showing that external energies produce the senses, that the senses produce the intellect, that the intellect is only a developed form of the external energies producing it and is identical with them; that man is only a developed form of all the energies of nature and thus knows the ultimate nature of things by identifying them with his own being. It traces the kinship of chemism, will, love and religion, showing that one is a developed form of the other with similar functions, resulting in similar phenomena; and that a continuity in all nature is thus established. It shows that plants and animals, the differences of the sexes, the functions of order and progress in society are due to a division of labor in the blind expenditure of energy in nature and society. It shows that capitalism is only one of many forms of producing property which humanity has adopted while passing through its evolution from primitive democracy to social democracy, and that individualism will inevitably be supplanted by the socialism of the race, which will result in the perfect expenditure of all energy through verifiable, public, corporate knowledge. It reconciles religion with science, freedom with necessity, responsibility with autonomy, and eliminates all of the heartrending contradictions of theology in its monistic explanation of good and evil.

This work is presented as an exposition and development of the general theory of evolution rather than of historical materialism, which, however, the author accepts by implication, if he is not rigorously consistent in applying it. The writer's style is eloquent, his absolute sincerity is manifest, and his book will be of immense service to those who have realized the inadequacy of conventional religion and philosophy to explain the facts of life, and who wish to examine vital questions from the viewpoint of modern science.

The work is complete in one large octavo volume of 500 pages, printed and bound by union labor. The paper is of extra quality, and the binding tasteful and substantial. The price, including prepayment of expressage to any address, will be $2.

VARIOUS VOICES.

We are always glad to receive calls from friends visiting the city. Take the Lake street elevated, stop at Ashland avenue, walk one block east, then one block north. Or take Fulton street electric car west and stop at St. John's place, alighting in front of our house. The Lake street electric and Paulina street cars also pass within a block of our residence.

Emeline A. Prescott, Hallowell, Me.: I want two papers every week. I will distribute them where I think they will do the most good, as I have done with all papers on reform in the past. Your troubles worry me. I hope you will conquer. If I were younger I would do better by you than I now can.

Cornelia Boeklin, Brooklyn, N. Y.: Of course I am willing to pay the $2 a year for Lucifer as long as I have the $2 to spare. Am very sorry you have been so much annoyed by the authorities, but so it goes. Very glad your father is in California and seemingly finding the general outlook somewhat encouraging.

Cornelia Forward, Manton, Cal.: Am sorry to know the postal authorities are giving you so much trouble, and hope that Lucifer will survive through it all. I look with eager expectancy to its weekly visits, and hope that it may live long to illumine the darkness. Let the friends of Lucifer unite to maintain it, to help the editor in the grandest purpose for which man can work—the uplifting of humanity. By all means let Lucifer live.

R. N. Douglass, Postville, Iowa: Kindly send me a few copies of Lucifer No. 1008, containing three or four pages devoted to the Turner case. I inclose 25 cents to pay for same. I wish that article could be in the hands of every thinking man in the United States. It seems to me that there is more good or evil to come from that affair than from any single thing that has transpired for many years. I think that you are doing splendidly in the absence of your father. Long may you both live.

J. W. Rose, Helena, Mont.: If a man and woman desire to live together, how would it do for them to register, make a record in county and state? I know very well anything our present government indorses is fraud. I think the woman should own the home and vote, and that the franchise should be an intellectual qualification. Before these things can come to pass the two old parties must go; also metal money must go, and to start these things co-operative enterprises must be established and all public schools must be on practical industrial lines.

C. R. Price, M. D., Bradford, Tex.: How glad we are to get Lucifer again. We are eighteen miles from the railroad and get the mail twice a week. People here do not take papers and they are eager to get anything to read. Negro males must keep aloof from white women, but white males seem to have no hesitancy in approaching the colored women. I think the race question will settle itself. Will be in Chicago ere long and will be pleased to see any persons who may desire to settle on land that will produce abundantly nearly everything in the line of cereals, fruit and vegetables. Forty acres make a good farm—twenty acres broken and cleared, and the other twenty acres left for timber and pasture. Persons settle here and make everything out of the woods, nails excepted.

H. F. Odell, Flagler, Colo.: I think the postoffice department has used you shamefully. You wrote and offered to conform to their demands if you could find out what they wanted. Instead of informing you, they excluded Lucifer from second-class rates. Evidently the government does not desire to have postal laws, rules and regulations that can be understood and obeyed. They want the power to exercise despotic favoritism. There is not a lawyer in the United States that could have told you how to comply with their rulings in this case. Nearly every reform paper in the United States has suffered from the postal authorities in some way, especially if they do not bow more or less to plutocratic sway. I take twenty papers, and of these seven have suffered from them. "Freedom" of Seabreeze, Fla., by Helen Wilmans, was suppressed, after failing by legal means, by a "fraud order," cutting off all mail to her and her immediate friends, and hence cutting off the support of the paper. New Thought, of Chicago, by W. W. Atkinson and Ella Wheeler Wilcox, and the Christian, of Denver, by T. J. Shelton, were both refused second-class rates. We receive each paper now prepaid with stamp. Wilshire's Magazine, rather than submit to a blackmail of $5,000 to get second-class rates, removed to Canada and comes regularly from Toronto. Discontent, of Home, Wash., once suppressed as the New Era, was suppressed by having its postoffice discontinued, but now comes as the Demonstrator, mailed from Lake Bay, Wash. The Appeal to Reason, of Girard, Kan., by J. A. Wayland, was too strong to be suppressed and still makes its weekly appearance, with sledge-hammer blows against plutocracy, though harassed continually by the postoffice officials. I hope the other one, Lucifer the Light-Bearer, may continue to spread the light over the darkened pathway of sexual slavery until the horrible legal prostitution under the sanction of marriage is fully revealed and blotted out. I will still continue to take Lucifer, if you have to not only double but quadruple the price.

I would suggest that no controversial article be admitted that reflects in any way against the equal intelligence and honesty of opponents.

Oscar Schlief, Laurium, Mich.: I should like information about any societies promulgating your doctrines, especially in Wisconsin or Michigan. Is the communistic society at Oneida, New York, still in existence?

[I do not know of any such societies in the states named. Send to the Demonstrator, Lake Bay, Wash., for information regarding the association at Home. Perhaps our readers will give Mr. Schlief information in regard to others. The old Oneida community no longer exists, though the manufacturing business established by the founders of the community is being carried on flourishingly as a stock company, the shares being owned principally by the children of the original members.—L. H.]

PHYSICAL SCIENCE.

Modern civilization rests upon physical science; it is physical science that makes intelligence and moral energy stronger than brute force. The whole of moral thought is steeped in science. It has made its way into the works of our best poets, and even the mere man of letters, who affects to ignore and despise Science, is unconsciously impregnated with her spirit and indebted for his best products to her methods. She is teaching the world that the ultimate court of appeal is observation and experience, not authority. She is creating a firm and living faith in the existence of immutable moral and physical laws, perfect obedience to which is the highest possible aim of an intelligent being.—Huxley.

Photographs of Moses Harman, taken in San Francisco and contributed by the photographer to be sold for the benefit of Lucifer, may be ordered of Moses Harman. See address in another column. Price, 25 cents.

Every advance in science, every improvement in the command of the mechanical forces of nature, every step in political or social freedom, has risen in the first instance from an act of skepticism.—James Anthony Froude.

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

THE LIBERAL MAIL-ORDER JEWELER.

Now permanent at No. 110 N. Kensington Ave., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 20 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's Line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Thelsm in the Crucible," free.

J. H. GREER, M. D.,
52 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.
Office Hours—9 a. m. to 6 p. m.; Wednesdays and Saturdays, 9 a. m. to 8 p. m.; Sundays, 9 a. m. to 12 m.
Telephone, Randolph 42.

DR. OGILVIE A. RICE,
DENTIST.
1356 MILWAUKEE AVE., COR. WESTERN, CHICAGO.
Telephone West 141.

PHILIP G. PEABODY,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
15 COURT SQUARE, ROOM 61.
BOSTON, MASS.

CHRISTIANITY AND PROGRESS.

Some one had dared to say, "Happy the poor in spirit!" and from that mortal error had sprung the misery of two thousand years. The legend of the benefits of ignorance now appeared like a prolonged social crime. Poverty, dirt, superstitions, falsehoods, tyranny, woman exploited and held in contempt, man stupefied and mastered, every physical and every moral ill, were the fruits of that ignorance which had been fostered intentionally, which had served as a system of state politics and religious police. Knowledge alone would slay mendacious dogmas, disperse those who traded and lived on them, and become the source of wealth, whether in respect to the harvest of the soil or the general florescence of the human mind. No! happiness had never had its abode in ignorance; it lay in knowledge, which will change the frightful field of material and moral wretchedness into a vast and fruitful expanse whose wealth from year to year culture will increase tenfold.—Emile Zola.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD OWN

TOKOLOGY.

A COMPLETE HEALTH GUIDE.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

Teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions.

Treats of diseases of women and children; contains practical teachings on Change of Life, limiting offspring, etc.

Lizzie N. Armstrong writes: "If I knew I were to be the mother of inmumerable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of Tokology."

Dr. C. B. Willis: "Tokology is doing more for women than all other books put together."

CLOTH, PREPAID, $2.25; LEATHER, $2.75.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

TRUE MANHOOD.

AN INVALUABLE GUIDE TO HEALTH, STRENGTH AND PURITY.

BY E. B. SHEPHERD.

WHAT EVERY FATHER WANTS HIS BOY TO KNOW.

The Christian Endeavor World: "Its suggestions are wise and ennobling." Dr. Stockham, author of Tokology, says: "TRUE MANHOOD explains the transition from boyhood to manhood, giving knowledge of priceless value." Levant cloth, 128 pages. Prepaid $1. STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

A treatise on Sexual Science and Marriage, rich in thought and strong in expression. Emphatically a book for the thinker.

Carpenter holds that woman's freedom is based upon economics; she must be independent financially that she may not be forced to sell herself in or out of marriage. He also makes a strong plea for a motherhood of freedom and thoughtful preparation.

AMERICAN EDITION, CLOTH, PREPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

CREATIVE LIFE.

A BOOK FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

A timely and important message not found in text books. Every girl seeks and should have this true, plain and practical knowledge. One writes: "Thank you, thank you, dear Doctor, for the plain but beautiful thoughts. Womanhood, motherhood and life have new meanings. You ennoble your theme." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

A NOVEL BY GEORGE N. MILLER.

FORTIETH THOUSAND.

"The Strike of a Sex" is a fascinating novel bearing upon the sexual relations. It is a bold protest against the customary life of most married people, and at the same time a prophecy of happier conditions between man and wife. Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

SONGS OF A CHILD,
AND OTHER POEMS.

By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. Price $1.50; postage 12c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

"PERSONAL EXPERIENCES OF TWO AMERICAN ANTI-VIVISECTIONISTS IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES."

BY PHILIP G. PEABODY.

With an Appendix by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c. Apply to PHILIP G. PEABODY, 15 Court Square, Boston, Mass.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1. M. HARMAN, 509 Fulton St., Chicago.

1010

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

KAREZZA.

SCIENCE OF MARRIAGE.

A godsend to every wife—a joy to every husband.

This work brings peace into homes disrupted by inharmony in the sexual relation. Dr. A. B. Stockham advises a practice which leads to individual liberty and to deeper love between husband and wife.

Dr. F. G. Welch: "After a personal trial of its teachings, I want to thank you for a great service to humanity."

Rev. George R. Needham: "Out of a beautiful and ennobling experience, I can say, I KNOW."

Gives a high ideal of the marital relation and teaches control of the Fecundating Power.

J. A. Smalley, M. D.: "I have received more actual benefit from the practice of KAREZZA teachings than from all other books on Sexual Science."

A. B. Franklin, M. D.: "KAREZZA does more than any other single thing to make marriage a perpetual courtship."

LEVANT CLOTH, POSTPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

JUST OUT.

PARENTHOOD.

By Alice B. Stockham, M. D., author of "Tokology" and "Karezza." Highest ideals for best offspring. Vital and important subjects discussed, including new philosophy of the Creative Energy. O. G. Hunt says: "Many sentences of PARENTHOOD should be graven in gold and handed down to posterity." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

One of the best short works on the subject. A charming little gift book. "Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it."

DAINTILY PRINTED. PREPAID, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY, AND THE STATE.

BY FREDERICK ENGELS.

Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages: The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans. 217 pages; bound in cloth. Price 60c; postage 5c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MEN, WOMEN, AND CHANCE.

BY WILLIAM PLATT.

Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. Price 75c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STORY OF IJAIN;

OR, THE EVOLUTION OF A MIND.

By Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Stuart Rose), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. Price $1; postage 8c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

ISOLA; OR, THE DISINHERITED.

A drama in six acts. By Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1; postage 7c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SYSTEM-ENERGY

PFEIFFER PRINCIPLE
Based upon the laws of Psychology and Physiology.

TEN TYPEWRITTEN LESSONS, $10.

Contains such information as cannot be obtained in any other way. They give the key to nature and tell you how to live and be healthy even in old age. When you have mastered the Pfeiffer Principle you can defy disease and will be master of conditions. When we consider that Health is Wealth, who will hesitate to invest $10.00 for teachings worth a fortune! Address

OUR HOME RIGHTS PUBLISHING CO.,
BEDFORD, MASS.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 63, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We cannot sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 35c each, two for $50. Address EDWIN C. WALKER, 244 W. 143d St., New York, N. Y.

WANTED—100 women to study medicine or midwifery. Next term begins January 1, 1904. College of Medicine and Surgery, 245 Ashland Blvd., Chicago, Ill. DR. FLORENCE DRESSLER, Secretary. (Dept. A.)

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

ENTERED AT THE CHICAGO POSTOFFICE AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

PRICE FIVE CENTS. CHICAGO, ILL., MARCH 10, E. M. 304. [C. E. 1904.] WHOLE NO. 1011

JUDICIAL USURPATION.

Boston, Feb. 12.—Justice Loring, of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, has invented a new method of dealing with sympathetic strikes. It is an injunction against the paying of strike benefits by union men in such cases. The injunction, which is a temporary one, was issued to-day against the International Pressmen and Assistants' Union. The pressmen have been threatening a sympathetic strike in connection with the contest of the job compositors of this city against members of the United Typothetae of America. By the terms of the injunction they are restrained from bringing about this action. That clause of the injunction referring to strike benefits prohibits their payment to those who have already left their work out of sympathy for the strikers rather than because of any individual grievance against their employers. The striking book and job printers are also enjoined from inciting the pressmen and feeders to leave their present employ.—Press dispatch.

* * *

The development of government by injunction is as important as the smothering of an incipient blaze in the neighborhood of a powder magazine.

A court of equity could to-day extend its very strong arm to sell at auction the citizen's goods who is arrested and fined for contempt, without giving rise to anything more than the sensation of a surprise party to the conservative portion of the people. At the extremes of the social scale there would be different opinions as to the civic righteousness of the principle involved. Those who sympathize with the man who is overwhelmed by the opening of the flood-gates of justice will say it is right to resist such usurpation of the taxing power, linked with imprisonment for debt. Those at the other extreme would commend the exhibition of nerve and dignity on the part of the official, and could with a clear conscience say that the injunctive process, in the language of Lord Bacon concerning the star chamber, is a sage and beneficent institution. The first-named conviction spreads the more rapidly because it is natural for a thing to grow from the ground up.

We are too much inclined to think of the ordinary judge as living in a valley of dry bones. Some talented attorney comes into court and speaks the judge fair: "Breathe me now the breath of life into this long bone, so that my master may become the Samson of society."

All the time the smiling attorney is pleading the cause of abstract justice he has the pass of the corporation he is working for stowed away in his pocket; and ten to one his honor on the bench is in the same fix. The pleader gains his end by concealing as much as he reveals. He aims to apply suggestive treatment. In his genial fashion he would have a Minerva-like idea spring full-orbed from the brain of the public servant he addresses to convince him of the possession of surplus power. It must be a comfortable sensation to realize that you are like Robinson Crusoe—monarch of all you survey. Jefferson made the red-headed observation that the less governing we do the better. He had in mind the natural law that the citizen gets stubborn when he is hammered into submission; his adherence to the constitution and the laws ought to be free-will offerings.

The federal judge, for instance, in swinging round his ample circuit reaches a community afflicted with an industrial boil. Instead of applying Franklin's prudential algebra, and without seeing the patient in consultation, he hears the ex parte complaint of those who stand charged with giving the wrong medicine, and grants the injunction. How much truth and falsehood have been woven together into the woof of persuasion the victim does not know. If he did know he might be prepared to bring a suit for slander. The ukase meets the toiler in the middle of the road and orders him to consent to a bad bargain.

Organized wealth may be seeking to add a cubit to its stature. It manifests no disposition to confess that its gain means labor's loss. The plea is always: "Oh, my Lord, maintain the status quot ante bellum." In the same breath it makes the claim that the splendid new conditions created by combination imply expansive constitutional limitations; whereas strict construction must be used on the rebels in the trenches, shops and herding pens of labor.

* * *

Attorney General Knox is on record as saying that the big holding companies have not played the part of alma mater to American prosperity. What they do hold is the big end of the horn of plenty. With equal truth they might be called withholding companies. Their gold mine is the public pocketbook. Sometimes they illustrate a famous line of Browning's:

"A man's reach is longer than his grasp."

An injunction does not make the impression of being loaded with the determination to go behind the returns and inquire into the antecedent history of a sore spot. What it actually does is to command the wage worker to look pleasant. Labor disputes never strike a community with splitting suddenness. We ought to be built right to admit that, in case of a strike involving a few thousands of men, some of the number are honest, God-fearing men, who have a desire to meet obligations. Something has happened to dislocate the hip joint of confidence. The willingness to strike does not imply the desire to strike. Nothing else will fill the bill. The guilty parties do not intend to sever relations with the employer. They know well enough where bread and butter comes from. A striker's offense is rank, it smells to heaven, inasmuch as it seeks to regulate another man's business. Hiring substitutes and resistance thereto are parts of the game. Here is a strategic point both sides undertake to hold against all comers. Persuasion, picketing, mobocracy, agitation, sympathy and money aid are eagerly sought by the strikers. Employers seek to thrust aside these cobwebs with the new broom called the injunction. It must needs be polyglot for fear it may tackle a tarantula.

* * *

Sharp lines of demarcation are visible in the afflicted community as to the disease and the remedy. Outside the local ring in which the combatants engage in their pitched battle is the greater ring where the public is asked to stand as a disinterested spectator. A hungry bulldog has no choice between a sermon and a spanking. Government does not intervene with a helping hand as it aims to do where money is needed to move crops, or where stringency comes down on the money centers like a wolf on the fold. An injunction has been known to punish the least guilty.

Hatching technicalities is a business of the legal departments of the big corporations. Woe unto the hired servant who allows his master to be beaten in a court of justice. Either he must find a way or make one to stay the hand of the avenger out of the raw material.

The stepfather of a recent injunction had to pay the penalty for carrying his flag too far ahead of the constitution. He must have heard something drop, or he would not, after the fashion of Saint Peter's dog, have returned to his vomit. It is a self-evident fact that the trusts regard themselves as the fifth wheel of the administration, because they pay the freight on presidential elections.

Intervention from Washington should not be as a thing done in a corner. To charge organized labor with conspiracy and intent to destroy property, on account of a threatened strike, is throwing sand into the public eye. Organized capital scouts the idea that it is under any obligation to the wage worker for his job; yet it coolly asks for an injunction restraining men from quitting its employ in a pinch. Justice should be the same yesterday, to-day and forever.

★ ★ ★

In the original injunction applied to labor disputes, which was sued out in the Massachusetts court in 1888, it was contended that carrying a banner constituted intimidation. That was intended to be a warning to trespassers, and presaged a new-fangled interpretation of existing law, liable to have as startling consequences as the opinion of a Pennsylvania judge that a natural right to do missionary work among non-strikers did not exist. Human beings are not intimidated by something which cannot exercise force. That banner was not the thing aimed at in reality. We might as sensibly argue that the human voice belongs to Balaam's ass. Banners in a political procession are inimical to the success of a party, but they could not be enjoined any more than a flash of lightning. Men could be found to appeal to court, verily believing they did the cause of good government a service.

A disturbance of the peace was in progress. The days of contract, conciliation, profit-sharing and arbitration had not yet dawned, with healing in its wings. As a result of this pulling of injunctions out of courts of equity with forceps, these latter aids to labor's cause have sprung up and borne fruit, some thirty, some sixty and some an hundred fold.

The judge in his chambers understood that mobocracy is a contagious disorder. Extra-constitutional power would be seized by the mob or the court, and the question to be settled on short notice was simply this, Which power could make the most merciful and honest use of oppression? Surgeons, in the press of a great battle, amputate more legs than they would under ordinary circumstances. If the judge used a convex lens in his search for authority, and magnified it until it was made to include a piece of virile municipal legislation, he would reflect that he had jurisdiction, and his act was not subject to review. The mob does not have jurisdiction, and it is in the minority; the majority being conservative enough to stay by the stuff in the social organism as long as possible. A banner to-day might incite to riot to-morrow, and to murder and incendiarism the day following. How much better to have a scapegoat than to invite a deluge of criminal business for the courts. "Take no thought for the morrow" does not apply to courts.

This kind of an injunction is as far removed as the east is from the west, compared with the starvation injunction of a later date, but they are seed and melon to each other. The English precedent of 1868 was counterfeit. Some American investigator found the bones of this prehistoric giant and constructed a Trojan horse.

★ ★ ★

Interference with fundamental rights must have been deliberately planned where the disbursing officer of an organization of wage workers was enjoined from paying relief money to members on strike. The right to belong to a lodge is as sacred as the right to belong to a church. There is no necessary connection between a man's occupation and his lodge: One is not the train to the body of the other. His job requires that the wage worker spend the best part of the day on the premises of his employer. Capital is not a schoolmaster to exercise supervision over an employe outside of working hours. Men who disobey the mandate of a court are treated as legal heretics. They are not exactly plain, unvarnished criminals. Courts would fall into disrepute if they had not the power to compel obedience. •If the man with the hoe will not be good he must be punished for something. His guilt must be only constructive, since it is not touched by the right to the committing magistrate, counsel, appeal and jury. The trial by jury of a body of strikers caught in the act of refusing to work would be expensive and tedious. Taxpayers would not suffer such a burden to be loaded upon them for any length of time. "What thou doest do quickly to save the enjoiner's face," is the theory of the injunction. An old dodge is to create a diversion in the opposite direction to the real point of attack.

★ ★ ★

First the injunction was used to protect the private right in civil property. That was accepted as an edible mushroom. Later, organized wealth applied the principle to the preservation of public peace. People may have been astonished at the doctrine, but it worked. Now it has become a pons asinorum to enforce political powers.

Combinations of capital have picketed every avenue of approach to political power. Insistence that it is conspiracy to use the machinery of organized labor to strike ignores the twin fact that it is treason to usurp the functions of government.

Where the occupant of the bench shows the unmistakable proofs of concentrated mental energy by interfering with some of the alleged privileges of capital, he becomes at once persona non grata. It is imperative that he come to his task thoroughly furnished unto every good work, from a biased standpoint. Washington's test for high office is not enough—namely, "ability, integrity and conspicuousness." Industrial conspiracy is proven by a combination which stands a pyramid of money on its apex. An injunction does not often demonstrate its right to existence by removing such a heart clot from the national vitals. Earning capacity and buying capacity for producer and consumer are measured by the yard-stick of capital. The wage worker has the narrower interest in industry, perhaps, but, such as it is, it represents all that makes life worth living. The few cents which capital seeks to shear off the labor cost of a product per capita can ill be spared. More of this amount in the aggregate will find its way into the channels of trade if it goes into the poor man's pocket than if it goes into the stockholder's private bank account. Overcapitalization is high-toned robbery of the plain people. Commodity handlers have a lively interest in the continuous activity of the industrial giants. Upon the steady employment of wage workers depends the turning of society on its axis. Fat pocketbooks incline toward big heads. Workingmen have a cast iron conviction that capital is trying to put the cart before the horse. Those who force industry to the front have to carry a swarm of drones along. It is a granite boulder fact that $1,100 is required to-day to do the work of $700 four years ago. One-third of labor's purchasing power has disappeared as mysteriously as Captain Kidd's treasure, or the booty of Ananias and Sapphira. To steal outright amounts to the same thing as to destroy something beyond the hope of recovery which the wage worker needs in his business.

★ ★ ★

Injunctions have advantages which employers are slow to speak of in public. They put the government in the position of the insurance company. Defense with military power is the alternative to a suit for damages. Either way the cost comes out of the taxpayers of the nation, and it is hinted that it will pay in dollars and cents to stand by the government, no matter how severe its repressive measures may seem. The love of money in such a case may be a root of evil.

Strikers are irresponsible, and the court does its best to put the foundation for responsibility somewhere. Monopoly, which squeezes the price of what it buys and inflates the price of what it sells, will practice its system of organized loot in any direction. As an example of how the people are exploited study the coal strike. Say the estimated output for the current year will be 60,000,000 tons. One dollar per ton increase would make several men multi-millionaires. These men, of course, saw the end from the beginning, and initiated an ordered sequence of events as logical as the tale of the House that Jack Built. Where the graft was faulty was in overlooking the tendency of the unexpected to happen. Proposals for government ownership of coal mines and the strike commission have boosted the cause of organized labor.

The people were careful to lodge the taxing power where it would be under the best control. Courts have power to find that the value of stocks and bonds is a fair basis for taxation, but organized wealth finds it easy to rob this wasp of its sting. Violation of equity in this point is presumptive evidence of conspiracy, to the same extent as the determination to strike on the part of organized labor. The court shows a disposition to treat everybody alike in the same way as the Almighty, who does not do for us what we can do for ourselves.

A commission to study government by injunction would be as sensible as a tariff or finance commission.

The injunction having issued against a body of strikers, the latter are in contempt if they dare to violate the judge's ipse dixit. It affects others as well as the strikers who happen to be driven into the industrial whirligig. Suppose the judge who brings forth the injunction could be an eye-witness to a head-end collision between the contending forces, in which a striker commits murder. Would the striker be punished for contempt, or would he be reserved for the criminal court to make a horrible example of? It cannot be a doctrine of American jurisprudence that a man must commit murder in order to be entitled to trial by jury.—James E. Free in The Public.

ARBITRARY POSTAL RULINGS.

Our Chicago contemporary, Lucifer, though now enjoying, tentatively, admission to the postoffice for transmission at what are called the "subsidized" second-class rates, is able to get from the authorities no satisfactory instructions as to what the publisher must do to make his acceptance sure. In the issue of Feb. 18 is published a letter from that frowning czar, Third Assistant Postmaster-General Madden, who, having been asked what change was needed in Lucifer to make it mailable, retorts:

"It is not the province of the department, nor will it undertake to enter into details as to how a publication should be modified to meet the requirements of the law, but a decision as to its admissibility to the mails at the subsidized second-class rates of postage will be rendered purely upon the facts in the case."

This is bad enough if true, for the department ought to be willing at all times to instruct publishers as to what is and what is not admissible under its rules. As the editor of Lucifer reasonably inquires, "What is the function of postal officials if not to tell under what conditions mail will be transmitted?" The function of the postoffice, according to Mr. Madden's idea, would appear to be wholly that of not receiving and transmitting mail matter, if by any pretext it can be excluded.

But his statement, above quoted, is not wholly true; decision as to the admissibility to the mails is not "rendered purely upon the facts in the case." It is rendered according to the whim of the official called upon to make the decision. The "facts" to be dealt with in a given case are not the opinions advocated by the publication, but the advertising matter, premium offers, and the genuineness of its subscription list; but the experience of unorthodox publications has proved that such "facts" counts for nothing. Lucifer has been once admitted and once excluded by decisions rendered upon the same set of facts. The interpretation of the law as applied to that paper has been marked by inconsistency, ignorance, incompetence, and complete disregard of the publisher's rights.

One issue of Lucifer was seized and held as "obscene"—an utterly groundless charge, as is proved by the fact that, although the Comstock fraternity would be only too glad to land the Harmans in jail, no prosecution has been or will be instituted. It appears that the officials are under no obligation to substantiate their charges in court. Any postmaster, using his own judgment as to the mailability of a newspaper, may arbitrarily refuse transmission, and the publisher has no redress. He may not even be notified of the act of confiscation. He is despoiled of his property and of the amount of money paid for postage; the subscriber is defrauded and the editor left to bear the stain of publishing unmailable matter. Thus is reversed the rule that a man is presumed to be innocent until proven guilty. Here, as in the days of the Inquisition, the accusation is deemed sufficient evidence of crime. The government need not prove him guilty; he must prove himself innocent. There may be a legal course by which he can recover his property and vindicate himself, but this does not end it. There is no redress and no guarantee against a repetition of the outrage. Proof that one issue is mailable is no proof that the next one will be, so that each succeeding number of his paper can be seized and the publisher put to the expense of vindicating himself every week. The publication may be pure as snow, but may yet be persecuted out of existence by the officials of a hostile administration.

A knowledge of these almost incredible facts should stir the American people to demand such a reform in the administration of the postoffice as will remove it from the power of postmasters summarily to exclude from the mails, on their own judgment, any matter on which the postage has been paid and which is physically mailable. While they may reject, for physical reasons, an iron safe offered for transmission, or a glass bottle insecurely protected, or anything likely to damage other mail matter, they ought not to be allowed to pass upon the moral, religious, or commercial character of matter. No newspaper should be excluded as "immoral" or "blasphemous" or as not entitled to ordinary newspaper rates of postage until condemned by due process of law, and the sender convicted of depositing unmailable matter in the postoffice. While the present rule obtains, no publisher is safe, and every subscriber is liable to be robbed by the government of the paper for which he has paid the subscription price. It is soon enough to suppress a newspaper when its publisher has been found guilty of violating the law of the country in which it is published. As it is now, the publisher is punished first and tried afterward, if at all.

The postoffice department needs a thorough overhauling. At present it is censored in business by the express companies and railroads, in politics by the office holders, and in morals and religion by Anthony Comstock and the Catholic Church.—The Truth Seeker (New York).

A BOUQUET FOR R. B. KERR.

In a late issue of Lucifer R. B. Kerr, of British Columbia, contributes an article on "The Radicalism of Great Men" which is a literary gem. But it is lacking in one respect. The name of Comrade Kerr does not appear in the list of names which the article reviews.

As a reader of Lucifer for a dozen years or more, I have often thought that the publication was well worth the subscription price for Kerr's contributions alone. He is a university graduate, a lawyer of great ability, and, best of all, he is a close student of economics and sociology and has the courage to stand for what he believes. Much that Comrade Kerr expressed in his article on "The Radicalism of Great Men," which, by the way, indicates an unusually wide range of knowledge on current literature, is applicable to himself.

If R. B. Kerr ever strolls across the Canadian line and finds his way to this part of the imperial republic I wish he would bear in mind that there is a small fruit farm over at Benton Harbor, Mich., to which he has a standing invitation to visit; and we will not object if he should bring James F. Morton, Jr., along for company. If "each day is a life," and life is only a few days, let us at least be kind to those who are doing so much to make pleasant these few days. HENRY E. ALLEN.

LOOKING FOR CAUSES.

Let us take into consideration what the women of the despised classes are called upon to pass through. Let us ask the why and wherefore. When starvation stares her in the face; when the demon drink has entered her home; when the husband and father is thrown out of work through no fault of his; when the monster monopoly has shed precious blood and made her home desolate—what then, think you, breeds in the heart of woman? Must not her every thought, her every breath, of necessity be freighted with murder? Then the little helpless unborn, the human embryon, that is being gestated and fed with such nourishment—must not a race of murderers, of criminals of every description, be the product of such creative conditions?

When mothers are free to choose the fathers of their babes; when they can have just the conditions their hearts long for; when every woman has learned the science of becoming a perfect mother; when every mother understands the fearful responsibility of becoming such; when every father is filled with a sense of the high honor that has been conferred upon him in being chosen to be such; when in consequence he recognizes the duties he owes to woman and her offspring, and when in every act of his life he seeks to aid her in perfecting the coming being—then, and not till then, may we expect peace and joy and happiness.—From "Hilda's Home."

Photographs of Moses Harman, taken in San Francisco and contributed by the photographer to be sold for the benefit of Lucifer, may be ordered of Moses Harman. See address in another column. Price, 25 cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

MOSES HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One copy, one year.....$2.00 One copy, six months.....$1.00
Two copies to one address, one year.. 2.25 Two copies to one address, six mos.. 1.15
One copy, three months.....50 cents Single copies.....5 cents

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire notify us if you wish to continue to receive Lucifer.

EASTERN REPRESENTATIVE:
E. G. WALKER, 244 WEST 143D STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

THIRD SERIES. VOL. VIII. NO. 10.

LUCIFER READMITTED TO SECOND-CLASS RATES

We have been informed that the postal department has decided to readmit Lucifer and refund the money which we have been depositing for postage for the past two months. We, of course, lose the money for the stamps with which we prepaid postage for three weeks. As the editor writes that he expects to be at home in a short time there will be no changes in the paper until his return. For the past six months I have been obliged to take the responsibility of the management, as he was too far away to be consulted. L. H.

WINTER GLEANINGS.

COLONIZATION.

Continuing the subject touched upon in No. 1009, that of schemes to get people away from the overcrowded centers of population, where the evils attendant upon the competitive wage system are apparent to even the most superficial observer, I wish to speak of two or three plans that have been brought to my attention by friends in San Francisco and in Oakland.

First. Among the liberal-minded and progressive men whose acquaintance I made soon after my arrival on the Pacific Coast, is J. Albertus, 217 Eddy street, San Francisco. After reading carefully the plans put into print by Mr. Albertus, and after repeated and extended conversations with him and with others associated with him in the enterprise, I am fairly well convinced that the scheme proposed is feasible, is practicable, and that all that is needed to make it a triumphant success is the bringing together of enough people whose minds have been broadened sufficient to grasp the lofty aims of the projectors, and who have stability and persistence of character sufficient to insure the right kind of co-operative effort.

Mr. Albertus has been a great traveler. Having seen the evils of monopoly in his native land, he set out to find a country whose resources were yet open to all who prefer freedom and competence to slavery and poverty.

Having made a careful study of reform movements in America, of which he has been a resident for some twenty years, also of similar movements in other quarters of the globe, notably in Russia and in the South American republics, he has succeeded in obtaining an option on some 100,000 acres of very suitable lands, on very reasonable terms, on which to practicalize colonization on a large co-operative plan—agreeing to settle 500 families thereon.

As far as I have studied this co-operative movement, it seems to be based on logical, philosophical, and at the same time business-like principles; all points having been carefully weighed, and errors of other colonies carefully guarded against.

Freedom on all lines is the underlying thought of course, including freedom of the affections, freedom of womanhood and motherhood, securing to the child the right to be born well, also its right to be reared in an atmosphere of love, of harmony, of concord, surrounded by economic and industrial conditions that enable the young citizen to grow to the fullest, the noblest, individuality possible to his or her hereditary endowment.

Co-operation is the watchword of the times, and whether the scheme outlined and inaugurated by Mr. Albertus shall be pushed to complete success or not, it will serve at least one purpose, that of helping to educate the ignorant in the principles of liberty and justice, and will make it easier for subsequent experimenters to realize the full fruition of the aims of the thinkers, the dreamers, such as Plato, Sir Thomas More, Edward Bellamy, and thousands more who have written upon the subject of human perfectibility, since the dawn of history.

Keeping in mind the many disastrous failures of co-operative schemes, I am careful not to advise any reader to invest either time or money in this enterprise, without the most careful investigation. It will take only a few minutes of time and a postage stamp to write to Mr. Albertus and get copies of his circulars describing in detail the land and the methods of co-operation proposed by him, and then, if favorably impressed, it will cost only a little more time and a few more stamps to correspond with other persons whose means of information are far better than mine in regard to the location, the climate, the resources, the means of getting there, the prospects for permanence, the amount of money necessary to enable a family to subsist until crops can be raised, etc.

Second. Another co-operative enterprise in which I feel much interest is one to be located in the Santa Cruz Mountains, on the line of the Southern Pacific Railway, less than seventy miles from San Francisco. There are, in fact, quite a number of colonies, or settlements of co-operators, now in process of formation, to be planted in this range of mountains, so that people can have choice of locations and choice of plans or methods of co-operation.

For obvious reasons—the title to the tract in question not yet being secured—the exact location and description thereof is not yet published.

As in the plan of Mr. Albertus, the projectors of the Santa Cruz Mountains enterprise propose to make liberty and equity their chief corner stones. If they can be said to have rules or creeds of any kind, these may be summed up in the one rule of life: Each has the right to do as he pleases, so long as he does not infringe upon the equal right of others.

The climate of these mountains is said to be as nearly perfect, as a resort for invalids, as it is possible to find on the continent. The soil is rich and well suited to raising fruits of all the kinds adapted to the north temperate zone. On the tract in question there are vineyards and orchards now in successful bearing, also fields producing abundant crops of grain and vegetables. Springs of water abound, and never-failing streams, creeks run through it, furnishing the means of irrigation if needed, though the supply of water from the clouds is usually quite sufficient.

Though only a few miles distant from my present stopping place, I have not yet visited this tract, but hope to do so before many days, when I shall probably have something more to say about it. From what I have seen, however, of this valley—the famed Santa Clara—and of the mountains and foot-hills on its eastern or northeastern side, I am prepared to credit almost anything that is said in praise of the Santa Cruz range, lying to the southwest, and in plain view of San Jose.

THE RIGHT OF PROTEST AND OF CRITICISM.

In recent numbers of Lucifer I took occasion to speak of the fraternal hospitality and co-operative aid extended to me by James H. Barry, editor and publisher of the San Francisco Weekly Star, an old and well-established journal, and if I mistake not one of the chief leaders of independent thought on the Pacific Coast. In reply to my questions Mr. Barry gave a somewhat extended account of the contest, the defensive fight for free speech, in which he was the leading figure some thirteen or fourteen years ago. Briefly stated, the contest was precipitated by editorials in the Star criticising the action of certain judges in San Francisco, and protesting against the abuse of power by these judges.

For this offense Mr. Barry was sentenced to pay a heavy fine and to be imprisoned for five days in the county jail, for the alleged crime of "contempt of court."

Accepting the kind offer of Mr. Barry, I looked through the history of these famous court proceedings as recorded in the bound volume of the Star, from which records I copied much matter that I should like to spread before the readers of Lucifer, did space permit.

Of the items of history copied I will venture to reproduce a very few. After the case had been appealed from the decision of the lower court, under the head "Convicted of Contempt," the Star, in its issue of Sept. 13, 1890, said:

"As we were going to press the Supreme Court rendered a decision in the case of James H. Barry, charged with contempt of court, affirming the decision of the lower court, fining Mr. Barry $500 and ordering his confinement in the county jail for five days.

"After we have received a copy of this decision, and at the proper time, we will be heard.

"At the present writing Mr. Barry is not in jail. He is, however, prepared for the inevitable; and our readers may be assured that when it is finally settled that the state law does not permit a man to criticise a judge without danger of being dragged to jail, and, without trial by jury, punished for contempt, the Star will open a campaign for the repeal of such a law, and will not stop until it is repealed. Prison bars will not make us stop speaking the truth!"

In its issue of Sept. 20, 1890, the Star published an extended account of a mass meeting held on the previous day or night. "Metropolitan Hall was crammed," so the report said, by people "not confined to a class, but included men of eminence in the professions and in business enterprises, advanced thinkers, active workers, mechanics, physicians, members of the various trades unions, Nationalists, Greenbackers, advocates of the Single Tax, Democrats true to the teachings of Jefferson, Republicans faithful to the principles of free speech and free press, on which their party was originally based—all of whom united as one to attack the common enemy—to protest against any laws or decisions which invalidate or even bring into subordination the corner stone on which our right to become a nation at all was based."

Many of the older readers of Lucifer doubtless remember the outcome of that memorable struggle for liberty and justice, but to such as do not so recall I will just say the result was a triumphant vindication of the stand taken by Mr. Barry, and the repeal of the law under which he was condemned.

★ ★ ★

Abruptly I must close this letter—in order to make sure that it will reach the office in time for next week's issue.

For the next week or two my address will be in care of W. C. James, 128 Olive street, Los Angeles, Cal.

M. HARMAN.

PATRIOTISM HARMFUL TO HUMANITY.

Asked by a newspaper correspondent in Paris recently, "Is patriotism incompatible with humanity?" Maurice Maeterlinck replied: "The ideas that guide humanity ought to be respected only in proportion to the amount of good they do. The idea of a fatherland was long necessary. It is not yet completely useless. That fact indicates that the hour approaches when it will become harmful.

"It is the duty, then, of those who walk in advance of the unthinking masses to attack that idea from now on, if they wish their descendants to find the sentiment enfeebled enough to be overthrown upon the day when men shall realize that it stands seriously in the way of man's evolutions.

"It is important to destroy, little by little, everything which tends to hamper the liberty of man, as if all men really deserved to be free. One knows, however, that they will not merit the freedom for several centuries after their deliverance. The harmonious use of liberty can only be learned through long abuse of its benefits."

Judaism and Christianity will disappear. Jewish work will end, but Greek work—that is, science, rational and experimental—civilization without charlatanism, without revelation, founded on reason and liberty, will, on the contrary, go on forever.—Renan.

MALE AND FEMALE SELECTION.

In No. 1007 J. L. Hicks says: "If I have read Lucifer intelligently for the past seven or eight years, the prevailing opinion among sex reformers in regard to heredity and race improvement is that woman is the race builder, the race preserver, the transmitter of qualities."

From the above supposition Mr. Hicks draws the very logical inference that what is needed is the selection of mothers, not the selection of fathers. Clearly, if women transmit qualities by inheritance, and men do not, it is much more important to have a proper mother than a proper father.

It is almost certain, however, that the supposition is a mistaken one. Whatever the prevailing opinion among sex reformers may be, I think there is little doubt that the prevailing tendency among biologists is to attach exactly equal importance to men and women as transmitters of qualities. Weismann, who is generally conceded to be the most important writer of our time on heredity, believes that the germ-plasm, or hereditary substance of the male sperm, is similar in character to that of the female ovum, and that the chances of inheritance from the father and from the mother are on the average exactly equal. To use his own words, "the physiological values of sperm and egg-cell are equal; they are as 1 : 1."

This does not imply that in the case of every particular couple the chances of inheritance from father and mother are equal. It is well known that some persons have what is called a "prepotency" in the transmission of qualities; that is to say, they have an exceptional power of impressing their characteristics on their offspring. There is no reason, however, to suppose that prepotent males are either more or less common than prepotent females.

The theory I have stated appears to have the support, not only of science, but also of popular opinion. When a baby is born, we ask whether it is like its father or its mother, and I think the general assumption is that it is just as likely to resemble the one as the other. We are accustomed to see men and women of all ages, some of whom are more like their father and his family, others more like the mother and her family, and others about equally divided between both families, and we accept all of these resemblances as equally natural.

If the chances of inheritance from the male and the female are equal, then it is clear that the selection of mothers is exactly as effectual as that of fathers. Unfortunately, however, it is not so practicable. As Amy Linnett pointed out some time ago, a much smaller percentage of the men than of the women in the community is needed to produce the next generation; consequently the scope for selection of fathers is much greater than that for selection of mothers.

Breeders are well aware of this. While they select mothers to some extent, they select fathers to a much greater extent. If you look into a field of grass, you will see only one bull to a good many cows; while one stallion will suffice for the brood mares of a number of farms. If we want to improve the human race, we have only to apply to bipeds by humaner methods the principles we now apply to quadrupeds. R. B. KERR.

AN ANECDOTE OF SPENCER.

When the Czar of Russia visited England he was entertained by the Duchess of Devonshire. Huxley, Darwin and Spencer were among the invited guests, but they were informed that they were expected to appear in court costume. Herbert Spencer having, as he said, "No notion of dressing himself to look like a monkey," declined the invitation, although the Duchess sent the assurance that she "would be charmed to receive a person of Mr. Spencer's distinction in any costume." Darwin, receiving the same explanation, went to the dinner in ordinary evening dress; or, as Spencer put it, "dressed like a gentleman." Huxley accepted and went in court costume.

"What would you have done?" said Mr. Spencer to John Fiske, to whom he told the story. Mr. Fiske replied: "Why, I think it was making a mighty big fuss over a very small matter." To which Mr. Spencer replied: "That is just like you Americans. You let anyody impose upon you. You let anybody steal your liberties little by little until some day you will wake up and find you have not any left."

The area of prayer will be gradually narrowed as men learn to trace results to natural causes.—R. C. Adams.

RUSSIA'S "DIVINELY APPOINTED MISSION."

"Russia has never waged a war except for an ideal. No other country on earth or in history can say as much, except, perhaps, your own American republic." This surprising sentiment was voiced by a Russian officer in conversation with Senator Albert J. Beveridge in St. Petersburg three years ago. It is cited by the Senator in his new book, "The Russian Advance," to support his argument that the Russian people are inspired by "two sovereign ideals":

"These two ideals are, first, the preservation of religious faith, and, when the rest of the disputing world shall have grown weary of its spiritual conflicts, the restoration of the simple faith to all mankind; and the second is like unto the first—namely, the preservation of order, form, and authority in civil affairs, and when the rest of the world shall have completed its circle of liberty, and then license, and finally anarchy (which is what Russians believe we are doing), to restore to the confused, hopeless, struggling peoples of the earth those forms of social order and political authority which the Slav thinks are, after all, the foundation-stones of civilization.

"Incident to this last is the more immediate Russian idealistic purpose of spreading her dominions over all Asia. To the Russian mind, China is to be Russian, Persia is to be Russian, India is to be Russian. It is Russian power which is to restore the cross to Jerusalem. It is Holy Russia that is to bring the authority of his faith to the land where the Savior of mankind walked and taught and was crucified. So thinks the Russian."

The instinct toward Asiatic expansion has, then, at the root of it "a religious impulse." We quote further:

"The Russian religionist argues that some place in the world there must be, not only a church, but a people who preserve faith in its purity, fervor, and exaltation; not only a church, but a people who are really, genuinely religious; and that when the rest of the world, weary to death of the vain disputes about this or that point of doctrine or dogma, and with their faith in God himself destroyed, shall cry out, like a child in darkness, it will be Russia's sacred and divinely appointed mission to give to her sister nations thus benighted an example of a people still believing, still trustful, still religious; a people in whose temples the sacred fire has never been permitted to die or even languish, and who have borne forward to the blessing of those who have submitted the cross of man's universal Lord. . . . . .

"Holy Russia looks to the regeneration of the world as one of her great, if, indeed, not her greatest historic mission. Of course, even the most fanatical Russian churchman does not consider this a thing of the present day, or the present decade, or the present century. Indeed, the centuries, to the thought of the Russian churchman (or, for that matter, the Russian statesman), are small matters. 'All in God's own time' is the motto of the Russian peasant. 'If the mills of the gods grind slowly' to us, they do not grind slowly to the Russian. He sees no particular reason for hurry. Let the processes of evil and good work out their distinct results naturally. Let the world's ages-old battle between darkness and light not be waged in the flash of a spark struck from the meeting of swords of single combatants in some portion of the universal field. It is a gigantic struggle in which the decades are but moments and the centuries but hours. In the end light will conquer darkness, thinks the Russian; and, to his mind, the Christian faith is the all-conquering light and the Greek Orthodox Church the only true bearer of that sacred torch."

Senator Beveridge scouts the idea that Russia is "priest-ridden." He thinks it would be nearer the truth to say that "the Russian priest is people-ridden," since the people look upon the church as theirs, the icons as theirs, Christ as theirs, Jehovah as their father, etc., and regard the priest as "their servant, who is supposed to attend to certain necessary formulas to keep the great spiritual machine in motion." Russian priests are treated, we are told, "with an indifference and even a contempt which an American Protestant minister or Catholic priest would not tolerate for an instant." The real ground for a feeling of popular grievance lies rather in the iron-clad rules which make it impossible to escape the domination of the Greek Orthodox Church. Senator Beveridge writes on this point:

"The children of orthodox parents are orthodox by reason of that circumstance, and cannot be anything else. They may become infidels in belief—atheists even. Nevertheless, they are members of the Greek Orthodox Church. They cannot join any other. Moreover, the children even of a father or mother who is a member of the Greek Orthodox Church are, by reason of that circumstance, members of it, are baptized in it, and, most important of all, that fact constitutes a part of their civil status; for be it remembered that the Greek Orthodox Church and the Russian autocratic government are woven inextricably into each other. They are socially one. The church membership is a part of the civil life."—The Literary Digest.

WHAT'S TO BE DONE?

Some weeks ago I was so forcibly impressed with the big difference between the moral standards which society at large maintains for its masculine members, and those which it imposes upon its less fortunate feminine constituents, that, although I have always been keenly alive to the fact that there was a difference, and a mighty big one too, the cruelty and injustice of the thing was borne in upon me as never before.

For three years I have frequently visited one of the well-known public institutions of Boston. During the first of my going there, I met and was very pleasantly impressed with a quiet, self-poised young woman of about thirty, who always appeared to be paying strict attention to her work. She had a wonderfully sympathetic face and manner, and as time went on we grew to be somewhat acquainted. From the superintendent I learned that she was the matron, that she was unusually competent, and that everybody felt that she was the right woman in the right place. The last time I called I missed her and inquired if she was ill. The superintendent shook her head mournfully, and assumed such a look of sanctimonious grief that I was puzzled and hastened to express the hope that nothing was wrong. She led me to her private office and, closing the door carefully, said: "I am very sorry to have to say this to you, but please do not ever speak of Miss R. again; we have found out that she is not a good woman."

"Not a good woman! Why, that hardly seems creditable. She was so lady-like in appearance, and she certainly possessed marked business ability."

"Yes, she was a splendid business woman, and she appeared to be a lady, but appearances are often deceitful. From friends of mine who recently visited the town where Miss R. lives I found out that she is a mother."

"Indeed, and because she is a mother does it necessarily follow that she is not a good woman?"

The virtuous superintendent stared at me in amazement. "You seem to forget that Miss R. is unmarried," she said frigidly.

"Not at all, but that seems to me to be strictly a personal matter, concerning no one but Miss R. herself. If she conducted herself properly, and was faithful to her business obligations, I cannot feel that it was just to deprive her of the opportunity of earning her livelihood simply because she had met with misfortune, and the thing strikes me as doubly unjust and cruel if there is a helpless and unoffending little child dependent upon her for the necessities of its life."

"You have always impressed me as a woman of keen perceptions," said the superintendent in the same icy tone, "and I am much surprised that you fail to grasp the situation in this case. However, it is needless to argue the point. It would never do to have a fallen woman so prominently connected with one of our leading public charities; and so, though Miss R. was a valuable worker, I had no alternative but to dismiss her."

Opening the door, she sailed down the corridor in all her pristine purity, while I, like the wise Mambres in Voltaire's story of the white bull, retired to solitude and reflected. It seems hardly possible that in the twentieth century, and in this so-called Christian city, a competent, respectable woman should be denied the right to work and maintain herself merely because she chose to be a mother, or became so by accident. If all the unmarried fathers were dealt with in a like manner, much of the business now going forward here would be at a standstill. What can we do to hasten the time when ability and fidelity to business obligations shall determine whether a woman is qualified for a position or not, and when she shall enjoy the same personal liberty which men have so long enjoyed?

BERTHA M. SNOW.

God doeth all things well, though by what strange, solemn, and murderous contrivances!—Robert Louis Stevenson.

THE BLUE LAWS.

Many who have heard of the Connecticut "blue laws" have probably never had an opportunity of perusing that celebrated code. The territory comprised in the state of Connecticut was formerly two colonies, Connecticut and New Haven. The colony of Connecticut was planted by emigrants from Massachusetts and Windsor, in 1633, and Hartford and Weathersfield, 1635-36. The other colony, styled by its founders the Dominion of New Haven, was founded by emigrants from England in 1638. The two colonies were united in 1665. The statutes copied below, from an ancient volume relating to the history of the American colonies, were enacted by the people of the "Dominion of New Haven," and being printed on blue paper came to be known as the blue laws:

The governor and magistrates convened in general assembly are the supreme power, under God, of this independent dominion.

From the determination of the assembly no appeal shall be made.

The governor is amenable to the voice of the people.

Conspiracy against this dominion shall be punished by death.

Whosoever says there is power and jurisdiction above and over this dominion shall suffer death and loss of property.

Whoever attempts to change or overturn this dominion shall suffer death.

No one shall be a freeman or give a vote unless he be converted and a member of one of the churches allowed in the dominion.

Each freeman shall swear by the blessed God to bear true allegiance to this dominion, and that Jesus is the only King.

No Quaker or dissenter from the established worship of this dominion shall be allowed to give a vote for the electing of magistrates or any other officer.

No food or lodging shall be offered to Quaker, Adamite, or heretic.

If any person turns Quaker, he shall be banished, and not suffered to return but on pain of death.

No priest shall abide in the dominion; he shall be banished, and suffer death on his return.

Priests may be seized by any one without a warrant.

No one to cross a river but an authorized ferryman.

No one shall run on the Sabbath day, or walk in his garden or elsewhere, except reverently to and from meeting.

No one shall travel, cook victuals, make beds, sweep house, cut hair, or shave on the Sabbath day.

No woman shall kiss her children on Sabbath or fasting day.

The Sabbath shall begin at sunset on Saturday.

A person accused of trespass in the night shall be judged guilty, unless he clears himself by his oath.

When it appears that the accused has confederates, and he refuses to discover them, he may be racked.

No one shall buy or sell lands without permission of the selectmen.

A drunkard shall have a master appointed by the selectmen, who are to bar him from the liberty of buying and selling.

Whoever publishes a lie, to the prejudice of his neighbor, shall be set in the stocks, or be whipped ten stripes.

No minister shall keep a school.

Every ratable person who refuses to pay his proportion to support the minister of town or parish, shall be fined by the court 51d and 4s every quarter until he or she pay the rate to the minister.

Men stealers shall suffer death.

Whosoever wears clothes trimmed with gold, silver, or fine lace above 1s per yard shall be presented by the grand jurors, and the selectmen shall tax the offender £300 estate.

A debtor in prison, swearing that he has no estate, shall be let out and sold to make satisfaction.

Whosoever sets a fire in the woods, and it burns a house, shall suffer death; and persons suspected of this crime shall be imprisoned without benefit of bail.

Whosoever brings cards or dice into this dominion shall pay a fine of £5.

No one shall read common prayer books, keep Christmas or set days, eat mince pies, dance, or play on any instrument of music except the drum, trumpet and Jew's harp.

No gospel minister shall join people in marriage. The magistrate only shall join them in marriage, as he may do it with less scandal to Christ's church.

When parents refuse their children convenient marriages, the magistrate shall determine the point.

The selectmen, on finding children ignorant, may take them away from their parents, and put them in better hands at the expense of their parents.

A man that strikes his wife shall pay a fine of £10.

A woman that strikes her husband shall be punished as the law directs.

A wife shall be deemed good evidence against her husband.

No man shall court a maid in person or by letter without first obtaining consent of her parents; £5 for the first offense; £10 for the second; and for the third, imprisonment during the pleasure of the court.

Married persons must live together or be imprisoned.

Every male must have his hair cut round according to his cap.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD OWN

TOKOLOGY.

A COMPLETE HEALTH GUIDE.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

Teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions.

Treats of diseases of women and children; contains practical teachings on Change of Life, limiting offspring, etc.

Lizzie N. Armstrong writes: "If I knew I were to be the mother of inharmonious children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of Tokology."

Dr. C. B. Wills: "Tokology is doing more for women than all other books put together."

CLOTH, PREPAID, $2.25; LEATHER, $2.75.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

TRUE MANHOOD.

AN INVALUABLE GUIDE TO HEALTH, STRENGTH AND PURITY.

BY E. B. SHEPHERD.

WHAT EVERY FATHER WANTS HIS BOY TO KNOW.

The Christian Endeavor World: "Its suggestions are wise and ennobling." Dr. Stockham, author of Tokology, says: "TRUE MANHOOD explains the transition from boyhood to manhood, giving knowledge of priceless value."

Levant cloth, 328 pages. Prepaid $1. STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

A treatise on Sexual Science and Marriage, rich in thought and strong in expression. Emphatically a book for the thinker.

Carpenter holds that woman's freedom is based upon economics; she must be independent financially that she may not be forced to sell herself in or out of marriage. He also makes a strong plea for a motherhood of freedom and thoughtful preparation.

AMERICAN EDITION, CLOTH, PREPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

CREATIVE LIFE.

A BOOK FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

A timely and important message not found in text books. Every girl seeks and should have this true, plain and practical knowledge. One writes: "Thank you, thank you, dear Doctor, for the plain but beautiful thoughts. Womanhood, motherhood and life have new meanings. You ennoble your theme." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

A NOVEL BY GEORGE N. MILLER.

FORTIETH THOUSAND.

"The Strike of a Sex" is a fascinating novel bearing upon the sexual relations. It is a bold protest against the customary life of most married people, and at the same time a prophecy of happier conditions between man and wife. Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

SONGS OF A CHILD,
AND OTHER POEMS.

By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. Price $1.50; postage 12c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

"PERSONAL EXPERIENCES OF TWO AMERICAN ANTI-VIVISECTIONISTS IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES."

BY PHILIP G. PEABODY.

With an Appendix by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c. Apply to PHILIP G. PEABODY, 13 Court Square, Boston, Mass.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

VARIOUS VOICES.

We are always glad to receive calls from friends visiting the city. Take the Lake street elevated, stop at Ashland avenue, walk one block east, then one block north. Or take Fulton street electric car west and stop at St. John's place, alighting in front of our house. The Lake street electric and Paulina street cars also pass within a block of our residence.

Anna Gearhart, Freeland, Wash.: Please find enclosed 75 cents, which will, I think, pay what I am in arrears. I would have been very glad to have had the paper while Mr. Harman was on this coast, but there were too many places for my dimes; couldn't save any. When I am able to do so, will subscribe again. Long life to Lucifer and its editors.

James B. Elliott, Philadelphia: In a recent number of Lucifer Mrs. Briggs of San Francisco referred to the trial of George Francis Train for sending Bible clippings through the mails. I hope she will favor Lucifer with the date of trial and a short account of the same, and the verdict and sentence pronounced by the court, or where an account of the trial may be read.

C. Walton, Muscatine, Iowa: Enclosed you will find $2. Please apply on subscription of Anna E. Walton, my wife. If I did not care for Lucifer, still I would want to support it now. Everything worth living for is at stake. As you may have been sending the paper at a loss since the inquisition, shorten the time for which this $2 pays to make it right. The paper is too cheap anyway, considering the motive for its publication and the obstacles to be met.

Albina L. Washburn, San Diego, Cal.: The Denver Post of Feb. 21 mentions a "new official order" of the postoffice department to the effect that the pretty tourist mailing cards from various popular resorts are declared "off" on account of containing the words "United States of America," holding that no private person has the right to use these words, as they are "too near a fac-simile of the postal card issued by Uncle Sam." The order goes into effect July 1. The cream of the item may be interesting to Lucifer readers and those who have come to know something of the jolly idiosyncrasies of that branch of our "guvment" known as the postoffice department. Here it is: "The date of the debarring of the private mailing cards was set at July 1 so that people might have a chance to use up any illegal mailing cards which they have on hand." Now, of course, we have only to call the attention of Uncle Sam to the little injustice inadvertently committed in shutting Lucifer from the mails without a moment's warning or any given reason, to obtain six months' time to shuffle off the illegal issues on hand, and thus save editors, paper and readers from loss, permitting them to "take another tack" and watch out for the direction of the next official breeze.

ADMONISHED.

Lowscads (despondently): "I might just as well be dead. What good am I, anyway? Why, I believe that I've been refused by every girl in town!"

Henpecke (excitedly): "Touch wood! touch wood, quick, or your luck will change!"—Smart Set.

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

THE LIBERAL MAIL-ORDER JEWELER.

Now permanent at No. 110 N. Kensington Ave., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 20 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's Line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Thelam in the Crucible," free.

J. H. GREER, M. D.,
52 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.
Office Hours—9 a. m. to 6 p. m.; Wednesdays at 1 Saturdays, 9 a. m. to 8 p. m.; Sundays, 9 a. m. to 12 m.
Telephone, Randolph 42.

DR. OGILVIE A. RICE,
DENTIST.
1556 MILWAUKEE AVE., COR. WESTERN, CHICAGO.
Telephone West 141.

PHILIP G. PEABODY,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
15 COURT SQUARE, ROOM 61,
BOSTON, MASS.

1011

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.
If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

KAREZZA.

SCIENCE OF MARRIAGE.

A godsend to every wife—a joy to every husband.
This work brings peace into homes disrupted by inharmony in the sexual relation. Dr. A. R. Stockham advises a practice which leads to individual liberty and to deeper love between husband and wife.
Dr. F. G. Welch: "After a personal trial of its teachings, I want to thank you for a great service to humanity."
Rev. George R. Haushaw: "Out of a beautiful and ennobling experience, I can say, I KNOW."
Gives a high ideal of the marital relation and teaches control of the Procreating Power.
J. A. Smalley, M. D.: "I have received more actual benefit from the practice of KAREZZA teachings than from all other books on Sexual Science."
A. R. Franklin, M. D.: "KAREZZA does more than any other single thing to make marriage a perpetual courtship."
LEVANT CLOTH, POSTPAID, $1.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

JUST OUT,

PARENTHOOD.

By Alice B. Stockham, M. D., author of "Tokology" and "Karezza." Highest ideals for best offspring. Vital and important subjects discussed, including new philosophy of the Creative Energy. G. G. Hunt says: "Many sentences of PARENTHOOD should be graven in gold and handed down to posterity." Prepaid, 25c.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

One of the best short works on the subject. A charming little gift book. "Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it."
DAINTILY PRINTED. PREPAID, 25c.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY, AND THE STATE.

BY FREDERICK ENGELS.

Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans.
217 pages; bound in cloth. Price 60c; postage 5c.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MEN, WOMEN, AND CHANCE.

BY WILLIAM PLATT.

Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. Price 75c.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STORY OF IJAIN;

OR, THE EVOLUTION OF A MIND.

By Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Haladin" (W. Stuart Ross), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. Price $1; postage 8c.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

ISOLA; OR, THE DISINHERITED.

A drama in six acts. By Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1; postage 7c.
STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SYSTEM-ENERGY

PFEIFFER PRINCIPLE
Based upon the laws of Psychology and Physiology.

TEN TYPEWRITTEN LESSONS, $10.

Contains such information as cannot be obtained in any other way. They give the key to nature and tell you how to live and be healthy even in old age. When you have mastered the Pfeiffer Principle you can defy disease and will be master of conditions worth a fortune? Address

OUR HOME RIGHTS PUBLISHING CO.,
BEDFORD, MASS.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 62, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We cannot sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she bestowed the penalty of the Comstock. Two styles, 35c each, two for 50c. Address EDWIN C. WALKER, 244 W. 143d St., New York, N. Y.

WANTED—100 women to study medicine or midwifery. Next term begins January 1, 1904. College of Medicine and Surgery, 245 Ashland Blvd., Chicago, Ill. DR. FLORENCE DRESSLER, Secretary. (Dept. A.)

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

ENTERED AT THE CHICAGO POSTOFFICE AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

PRICE FIVE CENTS. CHICAGO, ILL., MARCH 17, E. M. 304. [C. E. 1904.] WHOLE NO. 1012

THE LAW OF SEX.

In the absence of evolutionary knowledge, mankind is bewildered by the complex action of the human mind in connection with bodily function, and especially is this true of the very foundation of life itself—the sex relation. Therefore from ignorance of the origin and law of sex arise most of the evils of social life.

When a man journeys from Chicago to New York he realizes that he cannot and does not take Chicago with him. But in the matter of soul growth, people vainly imagine that they can carry the old intact into the new, forgetting that the new is ever the old, modified and transformed by evolution.

A very great amount of the inharmony of the human world, not only in social and domestic life, but in all other human relations, arises from this failure to recognize the law of metamorphosis, or evolutionary development.

Another and very potent cause of the misunderstanding of the law of sex, and its consequent suffering, is the absurd but almost universal idea that there is something sinful or vulgar about the procreative function. This idea is largely a heritage from the barbaric theologies of the past. Back in the dim twilight of human life men discovered that the abuse of this function brought the penalty of physical suffering. They had not then, and very few persons have yet, reached the knowledge that, by the principle of correlated mentality, when the physical suffering became mental, the abuse and the consequent suffering would cease.

The sex instinct, so called, among the inferior animals is simply the reproductive impulse without rationality. The animal has no rational ideas of cause and effect, such as man possesses. Primates in nature chemically unite under law, but it is evident that there is no conscious cognition of the act. Perhaps, owing to atomic or molecular form, or perhaps owing to the imminent intelligence in nature, the elements unite in fixed proportions. But it is evident that the union is an unconscious one.

Oxygen, hydrogen, nitrogen and carbon, by the law of elective affinity, unite in definite proportion, and protoplasm, the physical basis of life, is the result. The lowest form of organic life, the moneron, multiplies by bi-section, or the process of cellular division, and starts the process which Spencer says is the ascending scale from the homogeneous to the heterogeneous, wherein growth is coherent reproduction, and reproduction is defached growth. This stage of development is called asexual, because there is nothing in it corresponding to that relation. It is simply the starting point of organic life and is still wholly dominated by chemical law, and there is as yet no co-ordination of the energy manifested on the line of specialized functional arrangement.

The next stage of evolutionary development is that of the unisexual, wherein is the beginning of that division of function which is to ultimate in the complete division of the procreative function into the two distinct forms of sex. This stage is represented by all of those forms of animal and vegetable life in which are to be found both elements of the procreative function in the same individual. Many of the lowest forms of insect life and very many plants belong to this class. A stalk of maize, or Indian corn, is a familiar illustration of this stage of development, wherein the shoot, with its delicate fibers called the "silk," a thread of which extends to each ovule or germ on the cob, is the female, and the tassel, with its blossom and pollen, is the male. The latter falling upon the delicate silk completes the sex union and causes the ear of corn to reach perfection in the reproductive process. In this a field of corn becomes a co-operative commonwealth, each plant assisting in the general fructifying process. It is then an easy step from this stage to a complete division of labor, and this stage has been reached by nearly all animals and some plants. As we ascend in the scale of development we find a constant advancement in the specialization of every function. The lowest forms of animal life are only a digestive sack. The highest animals possess a digestive sack or stomach. The heart, nervous and visceral systems present a like division of labor as between the lowest and highest forms of life. Especially is this the case in the procreative function, which is, perhaps, the most highly specialized and sensitive of any portion of the physical economy, as is proven by the fact that any abuse of this function induces severer punishment than in any other department of being.

In the animal kingdom below man but one law inheres—that of the perpetuity of the species. Acting simply as an impulse, without rationality and for but one purpose, there is little or no danger of a violation of the law. But in the human race, sex becomes subject not only to a higher physical law, but it becomes a legitimate subject of intellectual and moral law as well.

Among the inferior creatures, while the wishes of the female are respected, it is also true that the males contend even to the death for the favors of the female, and this constitutes one phase of the "struggle for existence," and sexual selection constitutes a very important department of natural selection in the production of species, a subject to which Darwin and other writers on evolution have devoted much attention.

When the stage of reason is reached, new factors seek recognition, and we see those factors multiplying all along the line from the lowest savage to the most cultivated civilization.

A savage holds the female as a drudge and slave. And as the most civilized man is but a metamorphosed savage, there still clings to him that tendency which, in spite of himself, at times even with the highest, impels him to assume a superior demeanor toward his "helpmeet."

The more spiritual that men and women become, the greater become the possibilities of happiness or of misery in the sex relation, because of the more complex mental and moral condition.

The procreation of the species becomes more and more an incident of this relation because in moving up the scale of spiritual development, the sex union becomes more and more a union of soul or spirit than of physical union, the physical being but the necessary instrument or agent of soul-blending. Thus the entire polarity is reversed, and that which in the animal kingdom is solely for procreative purposes, and in the lower human departments serves as the basis of conjugal and parental love, becomes, when the spirit reaches its highest possible development in this life, the means by which two kindred equal spirits blend in magnetic sympathy and realize the ecstatic fruition of spiritual unfoldment.

In order to realize this perfect and divine condition there must be a full sense of justice, a full sense of equality, a love of truth for its own sake, and a well-developed love of beauty; not mere physical beauty, for that is but the outward expression of symmetry and may be confined to mere physical symmetry without mental and moral harmony.

Here, then, is the danger point. Here is the exact place where the lack of knowledge on the part of both men and women plunges them into the seething cauldrons of marital Gehennas.

Selfishness and love cannot dwell together, and a majority of marriages are based upon unadulterated selfishness.

If a man is on the merely passional and procreative plane there is nothing in that fact to be ashamed of, because it is a perfectly natural stage of evolution. But he should be reasonable enough to try to mate with a woman on that plane, for then there are, in their proper degree, on that plane, the sense of justice, equality, truth and beauty, fitted for their united capacity on that plane of development. Gretchen may be as homely as a stone fence, and Hans may be as coarse as a satyr, but to each other they are true counterparts, and you are astonished at the perfect domestic harmony that reigns supreme as they "multiply and replenish" with astounding frequency and regularity! To them there is nothing lacking because they are on the same plane of development. To you they seem to have no spirituality, but they have all there is in the sphere which they inhabit.

The eternal law of chemistry says that one atom of hydrogen and two of oxygen are required to produce water, and that no other combination will produce it. This is the truth, and you may practice whatever incantations you please, but you will never obtain water in any other way. If you play that you are producing water chemically and add another atom of oxygen you are liable to produce a poisonous acid that will destroy your life. Nature will never be false to herself. So a man may inveigle some woman into his embrace, through motives of selfishness, and accommodating nature may even enable him to compel her to be the mother of his abnormal progeny, but rest assured that outraged nature will exact the penalty of violated law.

Such a fool is this man that he refuses to accept the proof that he is a fool! If his neighbor owes him $50 he knows that $25 will not pay the debt. He can realize the fact of his being cheated in a horse trade. But he utterly refuses to see that the sex union, to be productive of happiness, even to himself, must, on the principle of natural equity, produce the equivalent of happiness in his partner.

No one was ever yet fool enough to call a slave companion or comrade. The very names are symbols of equality, and unless the equality actually exists, the play degenerates into a farce or a tragedy.

The fact is that love and liberty are one.

What is liberty? Physical liberty consists of self-centered individuality, by which the person is physically free to do, to act or not act in any way that does not interfere with the same freedom in his fellow man.

Mental liberty is the right to think along any line that the mental nature may be impelled, and moral liberty is the co-ordinating power of conscience acting as cohesive and impelling power to harmonize the whole being in the line of right development. If follows, then, that without liberty there can be no progress; hence Macauley's axiom that the remedy for the evils that came with liberty was more liberty.

Love is attraction. Self-love is its lowest expression and has its origin in the law of self-preservation, called the "first law of nature," which it really is. The law of gravitation is the primary expression of the principle of attraction. The law of cohesion is the same thing in atomic and molecular expression, and the planets maintain their place in their orbits by reason of the mutuality of the centrifugal and centripetal forces, which act in perfect harmony. Each force recognizes the free activity of the other.

In the elective affinity of chemistry the same principle of freedom is recognized, and the two atoms of oxygen refuse to be coerced in choosing the single atom of hydrogen, just as the atom of hydrogen refuses to accept more or less than two atoms of oxygen in forming water. It might be here said that so far from this being atomic liberty, that it was exactly the opposite. But this is only apparent, for in all nature true liberty is found in obedience to law. The exuberance of health, which is liberty or freedom from disease, can only be secured by obedience to the laws of health.

This liberty of acceptance is recognized throughout the kingdoms of animated nature below man, but when reason begins certainty ends, because reason is the foundation of individuality and of progress, and that which does not err makes no progress. The individualized soul must grope its way through the labyrinth of its environment, through all the experiences and penalties of violated law, until it obeys every natural law in a conscious way, as perfectly as the unconscious atom obeys, yet rationally, as an intelligent being.

Conjugal love, in evolving out of the animal into the human, necessarily partakes of both. The male, being the positive, is aggressive, and this aggressiveness survives in the highest present civilization in compelling, by social custom, the woman to wait to be chosen in marriage. And this same quality, combined with man's superior physical strength, gave rise to the idea of woman's inferiority to man. And this idea, being useful to kings and priests, has been preserved and fostered by State and Church until the subjection of woman has led to countless evils. It compels womankind into three classes: A spoiled and petted mistress; a petulant, tyrannical virago, or a helpless drudge, or all three, by turns, so that, as stated by John Stuart Mill, nobody knows what a natural woman is like, for nobody ever saw a natural woman. Of course, these conditions react upon men, and they, too, are dwarfed and hampered in their development. Gradually the world is working its way out of these conditions, and men and women are learning that the only way to be loved is to love; that love and liberty are one, and that this law can no more be reversed than could be the planetary motion of the solar system.

Men and women are learning that truth and justice are prime factors in domestic happiness; that any effort on the part of one to compel the other is at once the signal for rebellion, or a sullen submission which, through fear of consequence, compels the victim to acquiesce. And he who compels a wife to submit to an unwilling and loathsome embrace is more detestable than the proprietor of a Turkish harem, because he has not even the excuse of religious error to palliate his offense against personal liberty.

True love never sets any tasks. True love never speaks of self-sacrifice. True love is like the sun, which never takes any account of the light and warmth that it sheds upon the earth—it shines because it must. And, like the sun in springtime, the genial warmth of an unselfish love will cause its object to respond with fragrant blossoms. But if there is falsehood, or deception, or fraud, or distrust, or tyranny, these symptoms of selfishness will chill and blight and kill the delicate flower of love and leave behind a barren waste of desert sands, where the pitiless siroccos and simoons of fear and hate and jealousy and contention will sweep across the dreary desolation with perpetual storms.

Husband and wife must be equal on the plane of development, whatever that plane may be. And whatever the difference between them in this particular may be, that difference will measure the degree of inharmony and consequent suffering. Of course, it is not intended that we would convey the idea that this is the sole cause of marital discord, but it is the greatest cause that can exist. It ranges through all gradations, from the union of a man who is wholly on the animal plane with a woman wholly on the spiritual plane, to those perfect marriages where there is perfect equality on whatever plane they may occupy.

In addition to mutual desire there must be mutual tenderness, a quality that is in the ratio of spiritual development, rising as it rises and falling as it falls. This tender feeling has neither merit nor demerit. The inferior animals know no such feeling—it belongs to spirituality, and no human being is to be blamed for not possessing it, any more than they are to be blamed for not having a fully developed musical or artistic talent. But nature decrees that the absence of it in one and the presence of it in the other will be productive of inevitable discord and suffering in marriage. The discord arises from a demand on the part of the one not possessing it upon the one who has it, which the latter cannot, in the very nature of things, supply, and this very tenderness assumes the tone of pity and commiseration for the other, because of this very inability to supply what is demanded.

This very feeling usually results in a species of self-immolation on the part of the one having the more spiritual nature, and they become voluntary martyrs to an abnormal relation; self-devoted offerings on the altar of passion. While it is true that it sometimes happens that it is the man who suffers, it is more frequently the woman, for the evolutionary reason that among the inferior animals from which the human race was evolved the sex union takes place exclusively for procreative purposes. In the transition from the plane of instinct, or unconscious mental activity, to that of rational conscious activity, we find the reason for the sentiment expressed by the poet:

"Man's love is of man's life a thing apart;
'Tis woman's whole existence."

The instinctive feeling of mother-love on the part of the animal for its young, which is but an extension or expansion of self-love, because the offspring is virtually a part of the mother, in a much greater sense, than of the father, evolves into the sublime mother-love of the human being. It leads to the highest spirituality and causes that spirituality to look upon the sex-relation as a stepping-stone to something higher, rather than as something desirable in and of itself.

There is no doubt that the foolish and ignorant idea that copulation is a vulgar thing has, to some extent, influenced and strengthened this sentiment.

All normal people love to fondle and caress babies, admire and praise motherhood, and talk about the beginnings of immortal life, yet are inconsistent enough to be horrified at the mere mention of sex. Flowers are symbols of love, because they represent the sex of plants. The world will never be purified of its dross, and the marital relation be productive of its possible bliss, until there is as much respect shown to the primary origin and cause of motherhood as there is now shown to motherhood itself.

The law of love is the law of life. Not only this, but a full knowledge of the principles of sex will go very far toward banishing the selfish greed and lust for material wealth which is the bane of so-called civilization.—C. W. Stewart in the Light of Truth.

UNPRINTED AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

One of the biographical directory concerns asked the president of a Philadelphia company for the usual story of birth, ancestors, education, marriage, politics, religion and career. The reply was the most unique in the annals of autobiography.

"My great-grandfather was shot in his doorway in the American Revolution because he would neither fight nor resist the British. My grandfather lost a fortune because he would not appear in a law court. My father's house was five times burglarized because he would lock neither doors, windows nor drawers. When my father died neither my mother nor any member of my family wore mourning.

"I was never baptized. I married without the aid of a clergyman. I have never taken the oath of allegiance to the United States, nor any other oath; but I sometimes silently swear. I have never served on a jury, and never will. Were this country to become engaged in a great war, and I the last man not in uniform, I still would refuse to take up arms.

"In my house a piano is forbidden, also any other musical instrument save the human voice, and even singing is prohibited on Sundays. I am of no political party, never vote, have no interest even in a presidential election. When presented to the president at the White House, I addressed him as Theodore, and his wife as Edith. Mr. and Mrs. are not in my vocabulary, nor any other title save Friend.

"In my religion there is neither form, creed, ritual, liturgy nor priesthood, nor money-earning nor money-spending. To worship costs me two dollars a year—my surplus is given without the tinkling of cymbals to the worthy in need. In church I have never sat beside my wife, daughter, nor any other woman.

"I never attend big dinners, nor toast my fellow-men. I settle material disputes with my brothers by arbitration. I give equal rights in all things to women. I recognize no man as a lion. I have never lifted my hat to anyone—to woman, potentate nor God. In church I keep my hat on my head, and to the Golden Rule I add the admonition 'Silence!' I am the man to whom General Booth of the Salvation Army, appreciating the humor of the situation, shouted above the din of tambourine and the shriek of cornet: 'Your people and mine have much in common. You add a little quiet; we add a little noise.'

"Please omit my name from your book. A Quaker has no use for the brass bands of publicity."—Philadelphia Press.

THE FAILURE OF MORAL CRUSADES.

The programs of these Labor candidates must be lamentable reading to any person of a Socialistic tendency, and to any one accepting the Socialistic doctrine that rent, interest and profits are the means by which we are exploited they are nothing less than farcical. In some of these programs no reference at all was made to any economic subject. They were entirely made up of appeals to the religious and moral prejudices of the electors, while the candidates, almost without exception, lamented the terrible degradation of Sunday clubs, ice cream shops, etc. What harm the ice cream shops have done those gentlemen I for one am at a loss to understand, while they fail to tell us that it was the present persecuting action of the magistrates which has rendered drinking clubs necessary. At the same time it must be pleasant to know that the clubs are to be licensed in the future. This, at least, will help to make them respectable; and the respectable classes, who do not care to be seen near them, will then be able to gratify their desire for a drink on Sunday.

But we may ask, have the various moral crusades of the magistrates been so successful that we should be glad to see them initiating another? I think not; indeed, nothing but failure has resulted from their efforts in the past.

The one result noticeable since those crusades were initiated has been the advertisement of immorality in all the various phases in which they have persecuted it. It is now a good many years since they started with the publicans, and can one honestly say that there is less drunkenness in Glasgow to-day than there was when this crusade was initiated?

Then there was the crusade against betting. When this was initiated betting journals could only be obtained in the lower-class shops in certain districts of the city. A decent news agent was ashamed to keep those betting journals upon his counter. How different it is to-day! Almost every stationer can give you a selection of sporting papers, papers which contain nothing but betting news and tips for the various races. Not only this, but many news agents can offer one a selection of telegrams direct from the field. The bookmaker has his agents in all the large factories, while a very large majority of our young men bet to a greater or lesser extent.

Our police, some time ago, prosecuted certain pictures which they held to be immoral, and the result has been practically the same as in the case with betting—namely, a huge advertisement to those whom they persecuted. At the time they started the prosecution of immoral pictures the papers publishing those vulgar illustrations could only be obtained in the very lowest districts in the city, but no sooner had the prosecution of spicy pictures commenced than the circulation of these journals went up by leaps and bounds, until to-day, like the betting journals, they can be obtained in every district of the city, while some news agents' stock seems to be composed of little else than a selection between these and betting journals.

Then take the prosecutions directed against immoral houses and against prostitution. Have they resulted in any greater success than the others? No man who judges impartially can say that they have. Only the other day I noticed that in the Cowcaddens district they had in the preceding year 590 cases for this crime (immorality it might be, but not crime) alone, which was a record for the district. Sometimes I wonder if our magistrates ever think of the waste of energy or of the debasing nature of the occupation which our police are given when they are put in the position of prosecuting prostitutes.—John Gibson in the Voice of Labor (Glasgow, Scotland).

THE DIFFICULTY.

Here is the way a Benton county man confessed at a revival. He had been pressed to repent, and finally got up and said: "Dear friends, I feel the spirit moving in me to talk and tell what a bad man I have been, but I can't do it while the grand jury is in session."

"The Lord will forgive," shouted the preacher.

"I guess that's right," said the penitent, "but he ain't on the grand jury."—Warrensburg (Mo.) Journal Democrat.

Photographs of Moses Harman, taken in San Francisco and contributed by the photographer to be sold for the benefit of Lucifer, may be ordered of Moses Harman. See address in another column. Price, 25 cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

MOSES HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One copy, one year.....$2.00 One copy, six months.....$1.00
Two copies to one address, one year.. 2.25 Two copies to one address, six mos.. 1.15
One copy, three months.....50 cents Single copies.....5 cents

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire notify us if you wish to continue to receive Lucifer.

EASTERN REPRESENTATIVE:
E. C. WALKER, 244 WEST 143D STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

THIRD SERIES. VOL. VIII. NO. 11.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

It was said in last week's Lucifer that the editor would soon be at home and necessary changes in Lucifer would be decided on. He had written that he expected to be in Chicago about the middle of March. He now writes that he wants to spend a month or two in Washington and Oregon before returning home, and suggests that it may be well to suspend publication of Lucifer until his return. So No. 1013 will not appear soon, and it is impossible to fix the exact date of its publication. Subscriptions are credited by number instead of by date, so our subscribers will lose nothing by the delay. As it will be necessary to make application for re-entry when we resume publication, we hope to hear from all whose subscriptions are about to expire. It would be well, also, if we could receive fresh orders from those whose subscriptions are paid in advance. L. H.

IN THE SANTA CRUZ MOUNTAINS.

Glenwood, Cal., March 4.

In my last letter home it was mentioned that I purposed visiting the Santa Cruz Mountains in the interest of a plan to plant a colony there, a colony of home-seekers who believe in the gospel of liberty, justice, and fraternity, as preached by Lucifer's principal writers and workers. I am now returning from a short trip of exploration to the world-famous Redwood lands of Santa Cruz County, California, and find myself obliged to wait for a few hours at a small station called Glenwood, on the Southern Pacific Railway, narrow gauge, situated about half way between Santa Cruz, on the coast, and San Jose, the capital of the finest of California's valleys, so far as I have seen—the Santa Clara—and while waiting will try to jot down some of the impressions of this short but memorable trip.

To begin, let me say that he who has not seen the giant Redwoods, or any members of that family of prehistoric vegetable mammoths, can form little idea of these truly wonderful productions of nature. No description of mine can do the matter justice.

In estimating the advantages or disadvantages of any given locality for colonization purposes some of the main points to be considered are the following:

First—Climate.
Second—Soil.
Third—Accessibility to markets.
Fourth—Cheapness of land.

In most of these respects the lands of the Santa Cruz Mountains seem to me to be among the most favored I have yet seen. In the matter of climate it would be impossible, as I think, to find a locality that surpasses these mountains. Thermometer seldom falls below the freezing point, and never rises to a degree that may be called hot. And when we remember the apparently exhaustless supply of timber, it is seen that at least two of the prime necessities of human existence are easily and cheaply met—namely, fuel and shelter.

As to soil, while I have seen lands that possess greater depth of vegetable loam it is well known that wherever Redwoods grow the soil is rich and productive. Especially is it adapted to the growth of fruit, such as apples, grapes, peaches, prunes, cherries, apricots, oranges, lemons, nuts, etc.

As to accessibility to market, to centers of trade and commerce, these mountains lie within a few miles of the Pacific Ocean on the west. Santa Cruz, a city of about ten thousand inhabitants, is less than one hundred miles distant by water, and also by two lines of railway, from San Francisco. San Jose, a city of thirty thousand people, also a long list of other thriving towns in the Santa Clara Valley, lie immediately east of this mountain range.

In the matter of cheapness of land—when it is remembered that the soil, with the natural products growing thereon and the minerals that lie beneath it, is made by your laws an article of commerce, of trade, of speculation, of mercenary cupidity or greed and monopoly—we cannot expect cheapness to be one of the leading features of fertile land so near the good markets. The market price of unimproved land, in the Santa Cruz Mountains, suitable for cultivation, ranges from about $35 to $100 per acre. It is claimed, however, that in all the Redwood region the timber as it stands is worth the purchase price of the land; that so great is the demand for lumber of this variety for building purposes, for fence-posts, for stakes, pickets, etc., that the prices must constantly increase, owing to the fact that the area of Redwood lands is by no means large. Even now the price for Redwood lumber at the mill is $13 to $20 per thousand feet, in the rough, as I am credibly informed.

As to rainfall in these mountains, it is claimed that it is nearly if not quite double in inches as compared with the amount that annually falls upon the great valleys of which we hear so much—the Santa Clara Valley, for instance. Drouth in the Santa Cruz Mountains is of very rare occurrence, if human testimony is to be relied on. Springs and creeks are found everywhere in the Redwood region. That the enormous growth of timber has an influence upon the annual rainfall would seem probable. Santa Clara County, on the east, has a maximum rainfall of 33 inches per annum and a minimum of 17 inches. The rainfall in the San Lorenzo country, on the west side of the Santa Cruz Mountains, is about double that of the valleys and foothills on the east, or Santa Clara side.

In regard to healthfulness, it is claimed that no country in the world surpasses these mountains in this respect. Consequently the whole region is dotted with "summer resorts," hotels, boarding-houses and cottages, erected for the entertainment of health-seekers.

* * *

From this brief description of advantages it might be inferred that I have a mercenary interest in advertising the Santa Cruz Mountains, but not so; pecuniary gain is altogether foreign to my purpose. For many years I have maintained that next to the work of rousing women and men to a sense of the importance of freedom and justice to woman as creator of a new race, Lucifer's work should be an economic one—that is, it should be to awaken mankind to a sense of the necessity of getting the workers away from the crowded and unhealthful centers of population to the free air and sunshine of the country—to the soil, from which all must draw sustenance, directly or indirectly, else perish miserably. For many years I have maintained that the superstitions relating to land-ownership are similar in origin and nature to the superstitions relating to sex-ownership; that together these superstitions are necessary to the enslavement of the many by the few, the privileged and power-loving few; and that the complete emancipation of the race from slaveries of all kinds must come through freedom of sex—motherhood in freedom—and through freedom of the soil—freedom of access to unoccupied land and the treasures it contains.

So long have we submitted to the priests of law and of theology that we recognize no other way of coming into the world than through permission (license) granted by a priest or magistrate, and after our arrival here we think there is no way to live except to pay rent (or taxes, or both) to a syndicate of rulers called a "government."

To destroy these two enslaving superstitions is pre-eminently the work of Lucifer. In order to work successfully in any line it is necessary to have a clear understanding of the objects to be obtained by our efforts. To have clear ideas on any subject it is necessary to have healthy thinking faculties, healthy brain power. To have healthy brain power we must have pure air, clear sunlight, pure water and natural food. To have these we must get away from the artificial life of the cities; must go to the free, the unconventional, the natural life of the forests and hills; must go in sufficient numbers that the longings for society, for human association, can be gratified and the evils of isolation be avoided.

If possible the next issue of the paper will contain more definite description of what I have seen in Santa Clara Valley and in the neighboring mountains, that may be of interest to home-seekers.

For the next few weeks my address will be in care of W. C. James, 128 South Olive street, Los Angeles, Cal.

M. HARMAN.

PROGRESS.

The few who have been making a struggle for the rights of free thought, free press, and free mails found much to encourage them in last week's developments. There were these three victories for right:

1. The readmission to the United States mails of copies of the Truth Seeker addressed to Canadian destinations.

2. The readmission of Lucifer at the Chicago postoffice as entitled to the privileges of second or the "subsidized" class of mail matter.

3. The admission of John Turner to bail pending the decision of the Supreme Court as to the constitutionality of that section of the immigration law which excludes aliens for disbelief.

Something happens once in an age to encourage those who keep working.—Truth Seeker.

THE TRUTH SEEKER EXCLUSION CASE.

In January the copies of this newspaper addressed to Canadian subscribers were returned to us marked "Unmailable." We applied to the New York postoffice to find out what this meant, and were told that the order had come from First Assistant Postmaster-General Wynne at Washington. Our letter of inquiry and protest was referred to Mr. Wynne, from whose reply we learned that the Truth Seeker had been thrown out of the United States mails at the request of the deputy postmaster-general of Canada, that official having informed Mr. Wynne that the papers were destroyed at the city postoffices of the dominion—which, by the way, was not then and never had been the fact.

Let us picture the thing. The Canadian government, the capital of which is at Ottawa, in Quebec, a hotbed of Catholicism, is under orders from the priests to prohibit the Truth Seeker in the Canadian mails, and on the pretext of "blasphemy" and "scurrility" the order is issued by the postmaster-general. It is a paper prohibition, as ineffective as a paper blockade, and the subscribers get the Truth Seeker as before. Local postmasters in the dominion do not co-operate to suppress the paper. Then there is further protest from the priests, and the deputy postmaster-general is moved to notify the postal authorities at Washington that the Truth Seeker is prohibited in Canada, and hence not mailable in the United States. Our guileless officials believe him; the order is forwarded to New York, and the hand of the Canadian priest closes the postoffice to the Truth Seeker in the city of its publication. It is not process of law by which we are robbed, nor even administrative process; it is ecclesiastical process begun in Canada!

Now, why should our postoffice take orders from Canada? Have our officials exhausted their own ingenuity in devising ways and means to harass the American press, so that they must import a few? Is the secular government "all in," so that it must call upon the hierarchy for suggestions? Was the independence of this country ever achieved, or was it not? The colonies had the courage to declare their independence of Great Britain. Have not the states enough self-confidence to cut loose from Canada? Language becomes unprintable when we undertake to express the disgust that this exclusion incident has produced. We are desirous that the general superintendent of the foreign mail service should render his decision. If relief cannot be got through the postal officials, we would proceed to inquire if it cannot be had from others.—The Truth Seeker (New York).

* * *

The morning after the last issue of the Truth Seeker had gone to press that paper received the following letter from the New York postmaster:

"Referring to previous correspondence relative to the mailing of your publication to Canada, I beg to inform you that the Hon. First Assistant Postmaster-General directs this office to advise you that the appeal made in your letter of the 28th ultimo has been determined in your favor, and to accept for mailing copies addressed to Canadian destinations, provided, of course, such copies are not otherwise unmailable on account of any article or advertisement the circulation of which is forbidden in the domestic mails, and the publication does not violate the copyright laws of Canada. Appropriate instructions have been issued, and the copies may be presented for mailing as second-class matter at your convenience."

FARCICAL FEATURES OF THE TURNER CASE.

As soon as the Supreme Court of the United States had heard the argument of Mr. Pentecost in this case, it decided that Mr. Turner might be admitted to bail, which was a just decision, although the amount of the bail, $5,000, is excessive and absurd. It is excessive because Mr. Turner is accused of no crime, and it is absurd because it binds his bondsmen, Mr. Bolton Hall and Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., to produce him in the United States, when the whole object of his arrest and detention is to get him out of the United States. That is, one court having decided that Mr. Turner is unlawfully in the United States, another court puts him under $5,000 bonds to stay here!

Mr. Turner is under engagement to be present in London at a meeting to be held by the trades unions he has organized in that country, and with the assent of his bondsmen he may possibly go there for a few weeks. And here is the second farcical feature of the case; for, although Mr. Turner will be in England, to which country the law condemns him to be deported, yet, if the case before the Supreme Court goes against him, he must return to the United States to be deported whence he came; that is, he must come back to this country in obedience to the law, although the law makes his presence here unlawful! Physically Mr. Turner will be in England, but judicially he will be in the United States; actually he will have deported himself, and yet must come back in order to be deported officially.

It is as if a man who had committed suicide under sentence of death should afterward be turned over to the sheriff for the execution of the law's decree. When the Church ran things a man might be tried and condemned for heresy after he was dead; but in that case there was a purpose, since condemnation carried with it the confiscation of his estate; but here there will be no such excuse, the accused being condemned only to leave the country he has already left. In other words, he is to be condemned to leave the country where he is not and return to the country where he is. Thus the law compels him to take ship from the country where his presence is legal according to the law which compels him to depart from it, and to enter a country where the same law makes his entry illegal.

The Supreme Court has agreed to try the case on April 4. Along in May or June a decision may be expected. If this decision be adverse to the accused, the judgment of Lacombe in the Circuit Court will have been confirmed, and the defendant must be produced. But if he is in England already in obedience to the decree of the Circuit Court, can his bondsmen lawfully bring him back? Of course he has a perfect right to be there, the court having decreed that he must go. He will have voluntarily carried out his sentence. But the law provides that any person who knowingly allows, aids, or permits a man of Mr. Turner's views to enter this country, or is instrumental in bringing him here, may be fined $5,000 or imprisoned for five years. In what position, then, will Messrs. Foote and Hall find themselves? They must produce Turner or make good their bond of $5,000, but by conniving at the entry of one who disbelieves in organized government they become liable to a fine of $5,000, to say nothing about imprisonment. Will they produce the man or the money?—Truth Seeker.

THE EVIL OF PENALIZING OPINION.

Here is a copy of a Senate document—Senate document No. 2314. Since the first Congress met, aye, since the first Colonial Legislature was formed, there never has been so wanton, so flagrant an attack upon the principles of liberty, of liberty of thought, as this bill, and David B. Hill is its author. This is the bill popularly known as the anti-Anarchist bill, the bill introduced into the Senate of the United States in its last closing days by David B. Hill.

I am not an Anarchist; it is also needless for me to say that. But I am far from sharing in the opinion that an Anarchist is merely a man who wants to use dynamite. The Anarchists have not a monopoly of physical force. That has been used over and over again by trades unions, by American patriots, and by people of all kinds. Anarchy in its true meaning is a belief; it is a political philosophy. It is an extension to its limit of the old Democratic belief that the best government is the government that governs least.

The Anarchists would abolish government. In that I think they are mistaken. I think they go too far on one side, just as the Socialists go too far on the other side. But every Anarchist has a right to his opinion. Now, what is this bill? A bill to provide for the exclusion and deportation of alien Anarchists, which provides that no alien Anarchist shall hereafter be permitted to land in any part of the United States; that a board of inquiry is to examine every person who is suspected of being an Anarchist. This is David B. Hill! Every alien seeking admission into the United States is to be examined if he is suspected of being an Anarchist. Examined as to what? As to whether he ever blew up a house, or killed an emperor, or murdered a brutal and oppressive governor, whom human laws could not reach? No, nothing of that kind. He is to be examined by pertinent questions as to his antecedents, and as to his opinions as to government!

Is there any difference between examining a man as to his opinions as to government, and if you do not like him sending him back again, and asking his opinion as to God, and after that sending him back? He is to be examined as to whether he belongs to any society or association of known Anarchistic tendencies, and this board may examine the person of such alien for marks indicative of such membership. What does that mean? To examine him from the crown of his head to the soles of his feet for marks indicative of such tendency! What marks? Would a man looked for by all the police of the monarchies of Europe mark himself so that he could be known by them? No; but in some of those countries political prisoners are marked. This precious bill took that way of finding out whether any man coming to this country in search of liberty had been under the ban of the despotic police of Europe.

And more. This board may accept evidence of an emigrant's common reputation as an Anarchist, and the judgments of foreign courts and police investigations may be taken as prima facie evidence, which may be deemed sufficient, unless controverted.

And this bill goes on to provide that, in case they think there is evidence of his holding such opinions, he is to be sent back from this country, and from there the bill goes on to appropriate $60,000 of money wrung from labor by the most atrocious taxation. For what? To send agents, who are virtually to be police spies, to Europe; there to go into connection with the police of European countries, and to find out and report here whom they suspect to be Anarchists.

Why, under that bill such a man as Prince Kropotkin, a man who enjoys the hospitality of England to-day, a man who as an investigator has rendered the greatest service; such a man as Professor Reclus, who enjoys the freedom of free Switzerland, a man who stands to-day as the most eminent of living geographers—under that bill if such men came to this country they could be taken up, examined as to their opinions of government and then sent back to Europe. The man who introduced that bill was David B. Hill—a man posing as a Democrat; posing to-day as a friend of labor; posing to-day as a defender of free speech. There never was such an atrocious bill introduced into the Congress of the United States.

And in that Senate which has become an American house of millionaires, that Senate which was only anxious to serve the sugar trust, for good and sufficient reasons; in that Senate this bill passed without opposition, and it might have been to-day the law of the land, just as the atrocious Russian treaty that binds us to send back political offenders to Russia is the law of the land. It might have been the law of the land, but, thank God, there was one real Democrat, a Single Tax Democrat—John DeWitt Warner—who stood up and protested, and killed that bill there and then. John DeWitt Warner, the man who stood up and did this, the man who has been true to all his pledges, has been turned down by Tammany. You cannot vote for him this year. Tammany and Hill! They are simply parts of the same thing. I shall vote against Tammany and I shall vote against Hill.—Henry George at Cooper Union, New York, in 1894.

THE PRURIENTS.

What a dull world this would be but for those prurient persons who want to purify life by directing attention to its ulcers, and literature by forbidding those books that are too natural. The other day a society in Boston had a number of booksellers arrested for having in their possession books like the "Heptameron," "Decameron," Rabelais and "Don Quixote." Why not Shakespeare and the Bible? Why not any book that deals with life and passion? There's a possible suggestion of sin in any love episode. All it needs is a mind that can't think of love except as a physical, sexual function. I knew a learned but unfortunate man once who couldn't look at a piece of wall paper, at a fragment of carving, at a letter of the alphabet, without seeing therein a phallic symbol. We all know the youth who can't let the simplest observation pass without distorting it into an excuse for a double meaning of doubtful decency or direct dirt. Of such are the people who are always finding corruption in the masterpieces of literature. Now, the fact is that the "Heptameron" and "Decameron" are so dull that they would remain unread, for the most part, but for just such advertisement as they have received in Boston. Nine people out of ten have read Rabelais because they have had an idea that they shouldn't read the book. They miss altogether the quality and value of these books, which are such that their suggestiveness or filth is a negligible quantity. Take Rabelais: it is safe to assert that not one reader out of ten who tackles him ever finishes the book. He dips for dirt, gets it, and the rest is unintelligible, when, in fact, the greater part of the book is a wonderful criticism of life, a splendid scarification of folly and sham and sin in statemanship, science, religion, literature and education, and a presentation of a truly beautiful idealism under the fantasticalities of the laughing monk's method. As for "Don Quixote," the filth is microscopic, and God help him who can remember that only as supreme above the sense of tears that softens the parody of a once beautiful but latterly degraded dream. A preacher named Leavitt has now come forward to tell us that the "Iliad" and the "Odyssey" are immoral, and he thinks that the former is only a story of a young man running away with another man's wife, while the latter is reprehensible because Ulysses tarried long and pleasantly on Calypso's magic isle. Most mythology is indecent, too. The story of David and of Solomon brings the blush of shame to the cheek of innocence. There's nothing in the heavens above or the earth beneath that's not nasty. A baby is an abomination. There are people who might see something evil and polluting in the Sistine Madonna. There are such people in the insane asylums—and out of them. Their only excuse for being is the prominence they are given by the disgust and indignation they excite in the hearts of really pure-minded people of judgment and culture.—St. Louis Mirror.

The outcome of the Boston case was that the booksellers were given back the seized books and warned that if they were to sell such books it must be done decorously, and in a manner not too public. The most important thing accomplished by the arrests was to make known to several million people the names of several "bad" books by them before unheard of. It is a foregone conclusion that most of the "several million" will be filled with mental unrest until they have read the books which have had their morality questioned.—Book and News Dealer (New York).

"I'm sorry," said the private secretary, "but the President will not see you." "Try again, won't you?" persisted the White House visitors. "Tell him I'm the man in the brown hat that stood in the crowd when the Rough Riders left Tampa for the front."—Philadelphia Press.

VARIOUS VOICES.

We are always glad to receive calls from friends visiting the city. Take the Lake street elevated, step at Ashland avenue, walk one block east, then one block north. Or take Fulton street electric car west and step at St. John's place, alighting in front of our house. The Lake street electric and Paulina street cars also pass within a block of our residence.

The Truth, San Francisco, Cal.: Moses Harman left last week for Los Angeles, after a stay in San Francisco that was much longer and apparently more agreeable than he had expected. He evidently enjoyed many San Francisco people, and an unfeigned liking for him certainly developed for him in many places. He became known here as a broad-minded, tolerant man, working for the best good of society as a whole, and a man who wears well in the little trivialities of social and personal life.

Fritz, Kansas: Replying to Sara Crist Campbell in Lucifer of March 3, under the caption "Woman and a New Humanity," I desire to enter a protest against all this sex distinction. While probably true that some men have voted women out of the school, and silenced her in the Church, etc., it is also true that some women are equally opposed to woman's advancement. In fact, it has been said that "Woman's greatest enemy is woman." Talk about woman teaching man her idea of love and doing this being woman's greatest duty! Just as though there were a sex distinction in love! From the writer's standpoint, the greatest duty of woman is to shake off physical and mental weaknesses born of her economic dependence upon man; become equally economically independent. As she succeeds in doing this, she also will succeed in establishing a true, sweet, pure and undefiled love.

Edward E. Gore, Lawrence, Kan.: As the subject of colonization seems to be up among liberals of the Lucifer school, I feel like calling their attention to the island of Jamaica, British West Indies, as an ideal location for our people. In this island one needs but a cheesecloth suit or gown the whole of the year, and one can live in the luxury of its fish and fruits with only the effort of throwing in a hook or climbing a tree to gather the luscious fruits. As for health, this island is not excelled by even Hawaii. It is quite true that the majority of the inhabitants are negroes, the latest census giving the number of the colored people at 700,000, while that of the white population as not quite 15,000; but this is really an advantage, rather than an objection, to the location of a colony of radical people. I am sure if any of our people will investigate all the advantages which Jamaica offers to colonization they will be most favorably impressed with it, and I would suggest that any one interested would send 25 cents to the Colored American Magazine, 82 West Concord street, Boston, Mass., for copies of January and February issues (1904) of their magazine, containing a full description of the island, etc., by John C. Freund, of Boston.

EMERSON ON "THE STATE."

The disrespect that some of us have for government was put into print in reckless language by the late Ralph Waldo Emerson, who inquired: "Is not the State a question? All society is divided in opinion on the subject of the State. Nobody loves it; great numbers dislike it, and suffer conscientious scruples to allegiance; and the only defense set up is the fear of doing worse by disorganizing." Emerson only needed to have this fear dispelled to become an Anarchist and an outlaw. If any of our mediums should chance to bring Emerson back to the "mundane sphere," it might become the duty of our authorities to detain him.—G. E. M. in Truth Seeker.

Mankind went to religions, which proved nothing, for they differed among themselves; it went to philosophies, which revealed no more, for they contradicted one another; and it will now try to find the way out of the difficulty by itself, trusting to its own instinct and its own simple good sense; and since mankind finds itself here on earth without knowing why or how, it is going to try to be as happy as it can with just those means the earth supplies.—Dumas.

Anyone can go to the Bible and find some text, some passage, to uphold anything he may desire.—R. G. Ingersoll.

THE TASK OF VOLTAIRE.

Voltaire's task, however, was never directly political, but spiritual, to shake the foundations of that religious system which professed to be founded on the revelation of Christ. Was he not right? If we find ourselves walking amid a generation of cruel and unjust and darkened spirits, we may be assured that it is their beliefs on what they deem highest that have made them so. There is no counting with certainty on the justice of men who are capable of fashioning and worshiping an unjust divinity, nor on their humanity so long as they incorporate inhuman motives in their most sacred dogma, nor on their reasonableness while they rigorously decline to accept reason as a test of truth.—John Morley.

So long as we love, we serve. So long as we are loved by others, I would almost say we are indispensable; and no man is useless while he has a friend.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD OWN

TOKOLOGY.

A COMPLETE HEALTH GUIDE.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

Teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions.

Treats of diseases of women and children; contains practical teachings on Change of Life, limiting offspring, etc.

Lizzie N. Armstrong writes: "If I knew I were to be the mother of innumerable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of Tokology."

Dr. C. B. Willis: "Tokology is doing more for women than all other books put together."

CLOTH, PREPAID, $2.25; LEATHER, $2.75.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

TRUE MANHOOD.

AN INVALUABLE GUIDE TO HEALTH, STRENGTH AND PURITY.

BY E. B. SHEPHERD.

WHAT EVERY FATHER WANTS HIS BOY TO KNOW.

The Christian Endeavor World: "Its suggestions are wise and ennobling." Dr. Stockham, author of Tokology, says: "TRUE MANHOOD explains the transition from boyhood to manhood, giving knowledge of priceless value."

Levant cloth, 328 pages. Prepaid $1. STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

A treatise on Sexual Science and Marriage, rich in thought and strong in expression. Emphatically a book for the thinker.

Carpenter holds that woman's freedom is based upon economics; she must be independent financially that she may not be forced to sell herself in or out of marriage. He also makes a strong plea for a motherhood of freedom and thoughtful preparation.

AMERICAN EDITION, CLOTH, PREPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

CREATIVE LIFE.

A BOOK FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

A timely and important message not found in text books. Every girl seeks and should have this true, plain and practical knowledge. One writes: "Thank you, thank you, dear Doctor, for the plain but beautiful thoughts. Womanhood, motherhood and life have new meanings. You ennoble your theme." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

A NOVEL BY GEORGE N. MILLER.

FORTIETH THOUSAND.

"The Strike of a Sex" is a fascinating novel bearing upon the sexual relations. It is a bold protest against the customary life of most married people, and at the same time a prophecy of happier conditions between man and wife. Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

SONGS OF A CHILD,
AND OTHER POEMS.

By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. Price $1.50; postage 12c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

"PERSONAL EXPERIENCES OF TWO AMERICAN ANTI-VIVISECTIONISTS IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES."

BY PHILIP G. PEABODY.

With an Appendix by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c. Apply to PHILIP G. PEABODY, 15 Court Square, Boston, Mass.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

HE NEW THOUGHT CONVENTION.

After being one of Elbert Hubbard's "freaks" for some time and mingling with the constant stream of charmed and charming visitors to the much-overrated Roycroft Shop, I drifted into the Chicago convention, and found its atmosphere very pleasant and congenial.

Aside from the general interest in a "reformed Roycrofter," I met a fine spirit of comradery and good-fellowship that spoke well for the New Thought people. Probably in no other gathering containing so many people of influence and high position did conventionality ever count for so little, and individuality have such free scope. Strangers from thousands of miles apart were mutually fused by the instinct of the occasion into the happy units of a family reunion.

The whole drift of New Thought teaching is in the direction of Individualism. It helps in the attainment of that personal poise and power that fits for release from all restraint. Before those who really live in its spirit, law is ridiculous and government absurd.

The world will hear from this convention and the people who composed it. It is the New Life—the charmed life, the full-orbed life—that is irresistible. It is immune from prison or injunction. Its smile is stronger than uniformed regiments; its silent thought more explosive than dynamite. The New Thought reformer, in any line, needs no revolutionary programme, no campaign of noisy invectives and denunciation. Kindly and sweetly he lives and works, and all the things that bind and bar humanity's rising love-tide vanish like the winter's ice before the coming spring.

All this was immanent and vibrant at the convention. That some of the people who create this spirit were not familiar with the avowedly Anarchistic forms of its expression helps to show its universality and power. The love of freedom is a growing love. Real New Thought people make good Anarchists.

C. L. BREWER.

The one outstanding feature of the recent municipal elections in Scotland was the indifference displayed by the people as to who "represented" them. It is to be hoped that they have found out at last that representative legislators and administrators are, along with the clergymen, the greatest humbugs on earth.—The Voice of Labor (Glasgow).

Atheism affirms that there are no gods or goddesses, assuming that God means a personal, extra-mundane personality. This "godless world system" substantially agrees with monism or pantheism of the modern scientist. It is only another expression for it, emphasizing its negative aspect, the non-existence of any supernatural deity.—Ernest Haeckel.

The right of private judgment will subsist, in full force, wherever true men subsist. A true man believes with his whole judgment, with all the illumination and discernment that is in him, and he has always so believed. A false man, only struggling to "believe that he believes," will naturally manage it in some other way.—Carlyle.

Correction does much, but encouragement does more.—Goethe.

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

THE LIBERAL MAIL-ORDER JEWELER.

Now permanent at No. 110 N. Kensington Ave., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 20 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's Line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Theism in the Credible," free.

J. H. GREER, M. D.,
52 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.
Office Hours—9 a. m. to 6 p. m.; Wednesdays at 1 Saturdays, 9 a. m. to 8 p. m.; Sundays, 9 a. m. to 12 m.
Telephone, Randolph 42.

DR. OGILVIE A. RICE,
DENTIST,
1556 MILWAUKEE AVE., COR. WESTERN, CHICAGO.
Telephone West 141.

PHILIP G. PEABODY,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
15 COURT SQUARE, ROOM 81.
BOSTON, MASS.

1012

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

KAREZZA.

SCIENCE OF MARRIAGE.

A godsend to every wife—a joy to every husband.

This work brings peace into homes disrupted by inharmony in the sexual relation. Dr. A. B. Stockham advises a practice which leads to individual liberty and to deeper love between husband and wife.

Dr. F. G. Welch: "After a personal trial of its teachings, I want to thank you for a great service to humanity."

Rev. George R. Ranshaw: "Out of a beautiful and ennobling experience, I can say, I KNOW."

Gives a high ideal of the marital relation and teaches control of the Procreating Power.

J. A. Smalley, M. D.: "I have received more actual benefit from the practice of KAREZZA teachings than from all other books on Sexual Science."

A. B. Franklin, M. D.: "KAREZZA does more than any other single thing to make marriage a perpetual courtship."

LEVANT CLOTH, POSTPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

JUST OUT.

PARENTHOOD.

By Alice B. Stockham, M. D., author of "Tokology" and "Karezza." Highest ideals for best offspring. Vital and important subjects discussed, including new philosophy of the Creative Energy. G. G. Hunt says: "Many sentences of PARENTHOOD should be graven in gold and handed down to posterity." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

One of the best short works on the subject. A charming little gift book. "Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it."

DAINTILY PRINTED. PREPAID, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY, AND THE STATE.

BY FREDERICK ENGELS.

Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages: The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans.

217 pages; bound in cloth. Price 60c; postage 5c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MEN, WOMEN, AND CHANCE.

BY WILLIAM PLATT.

Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. Price 75c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STORY OF IJAIN;

OR, THE EVOLUTION OF A MIND.

By Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Stuart Ross), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. Price $1; postage 8c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

ISOLA; OR, THE DISINHERITED.

A drama in six acts. By Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1; postage 7c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SYSTEM-ENERGY

PFEIFFER PRINCIPLE
Based upon the laws of Psychology and Physiology.

TEN TYPEWRITTEN LESSONS, $10.

Contains such information as cannot be obtained in any other way. They give the key to nature and tell you how to live and be healthy even in old age. When you have mastered the Pfeiffer Principle you can defy disease and will be master of conditions. When we consider that Health is Wealth, who will hesitate to invest $10.00 for teachings worth a fortune! Address

OUR HOME RIGHTS PUBLISHING CO.,
BEDFORD, MASS.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 63, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We cannot sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 30c each, two for 50c. Address EDWIN C. WALKER, 244 W. 145d St., New York, N. Y.

WANTED—100 women to study medicine or midwifery. Next term begins January 1, 1904. College of Medicine and Surgery, 245 Ashland Blvd., Chicago, Ill. DR. FLORENCE DRESSLER, Secretary. (Dept. A.)

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

PRICE FIVE CENTS. CHICAGO, ILL., MAY 12, E. M. 304. [C. E. 1904.] WHOLE NO. 1013

THE RIGHT TO BE BORN WELL.

In San Francisco and in Los Angeles my public talks were the immediate cause of the formation of two radical clubs or associations for the free, candid, earnest and honest discussion of the fundamental problems of human existence. While my outing on the Pacific Coast was quite satisfactory in most particulars, this feature, this result of the trip was and is especially gratifying. At Woodmen's Hall, Los Angeles, April 3, before a small but very attentive and appreciative audience, a good proportion of which were women, I spoke on the subject of Prenatal Influence, as a factor in the formation of character. The following is the opening part of that address, with a few unimportant emendations:

Lowell says:

"We will speak out, we will be heard,
Though all earth's systems crack;
We will not bate a single word,
Nor take a letter back.

"Let liars fear; let cowards shrink;
Let traitors turn away.
Whatever we have dared to think,
That dare we also say."

"Society everywhere is in conspiracy against the manhood of every one of its members," says Emerson. "Society is a joint stock company in which the members agree, for the better securing of his bread to each shareholder, to surrender the liberty and culture of the eater. The virtue in most request is conformity. Self-reliance is its aversion. Whoso would be a man must be a nonconformist."

Again he says: "It demands something Godlike in him who has cast off the common motives of humanity and has ventured to trust himself for a task-master. High be his heart, faithful his will, clear his sight, that he may be in good earnest, doctrine, society, law, to himself; that a simple purpose may be to him strong as iron necessity to others. . . . . We are afraid of truth, afraid of fortune, afraid of death, afraid of each other."

And again says the Sage of Concord: "The Heroic cannot be the Common, nor the common the heroic. . . . If you would serve your brother, because it is fit you should serve him, do not take back your words when you find that prudent people do not commend you. Be true to your own act and congratulate yourself if you have done something strange and extravagant and broken the monotony of a decorous age. It was high counsel I once heard given to a young person. 'Always do what you are afraid to do.' A simple manly character need never make an apology."

In accord with and pertinent to these thoughts, these maxims of two of the most famous thinkers of the past generation I proceed to say:

The most important of all rights is the right to be born well, if born at all.

Life on the planet Earth is not such an unmixed good that it should be thrust upon a human being who does not ask for it unless indeed under the very best possible conditions, including among these conditions the very best possible endowment, the very best possible capacity for happiness and for bestowing happiness upon others.

That word capacity is suggestive—very suggestive. We have all heard the story of the "new rich woman" who asked the principal at the fashionable boarding school how her daughter was getting on and whether she lacked anything.

"Oh, fairly well," was the response. "She does not lack anything unless it be capacity,—and for that, of course, we cannot blame her."

"Certainly not," replied the mother, "but I blame you for not telling me sooner. Her father, thank heaven, is able to afford her a capacity, and it is your fault if the girl lacks a capacity."

Time was when women and men everywhere believed that capacity, talent, genius, are gifts from God; but now most people accept the doctrine that mental faculties as well as physical endowments are heritages from parents—gifts from a line of ancestry dating back thousands, perhaps millions of years, supplemented by maternal impressions during the fateful nine months of gestation, afterwards modified by the multiform factor called environment, training, education.

Whether heredity, including all that precedes birth, be more potent in the formation of character than post-natal influences is a question upon which thinkers are not agreed. Speaking for myself alone, while by no means ignoring the power of post-natal training, especially in the more superficial elements of character, I strongly incline to the opinion expressed by an old-time philosopher that nine-tenths of the education of every human being is received by him before the hour of birth; that is, that the training he gets through suggestions made upon the maternal mind during the period of embryonic growth tremendously outweighs all the work of teachers, and of environment generally, after he enters upon the stage of post-natal existence, or of independent life.

"'Tis education forms the common mind;
Just as the twig is bent the tree's inclined.
But education ne'er supplied
What ruling Nature has denied."

The question arises just here:

When does Nature, as distinguished from environment—education—get in its work? Evidently the author of these famous lines meant that Nature gets in its work before education—post-natal education—begins.

In accord with this view I would say that if the father wishes to help nature to give to his child the best possible "capacity" he must do his helping mainly before the period of birth—before the closing of the doors of Nature's "endowment house"—the creatory that every woman, every mother, enshrines in her own body—reverently be it said.

Need I ask pardon of this audience for plainness of speech? I think not. I agree with Emerson, already quoted, "A simple manly character need never make an apology." Truth may be blamed, but never shamed. To my thinking it is neither blasphemous, indelicate, obscene nor "vulgar" to speak reverently of Nature's processes, Nature's unfoldments. I assume that each of my hearers, no less than myself, is anxious to know all that can be known of these processes, to the intent that we may help Mother Nature to do her best work in creating a better race.

I would say, then, that if masculine man wishes to give to his prospective child the best possible endowment, the best possible "capacity," he must prepare himself for fatherhood by consciously building up and conserving his virile forces to their utmost limit before the fateful moment of conception—before the union of sperm cell with germ cell.

Then, during the nine months of pre-natal life—while the embryonic human being lies utterly dumb and helpless in the matrix, in its little crib beneath the mother heart—the father should see to it that the mother organism be shielded from all unwelcome intrusion—his own included—and that she be supplied with all needful and helpful materials and surroundings for her own comfort and for the healthful growth of the child.

The father should see to it that the expectant mother be protected as much as possible from sudden shocks that might disastrously affect the organism of the rapidly forming child—shocks that might arrest its evolution from the beast to the human.

I assume that my hearers are not ignorant of the fact in physiologic science that the human embryon passes through many forms of lower animal life during the pre-natal nine months. Has it never occurred to each of you that the mothers of some people must have received a shock at the critical time when her child happened to be passing through that part of its evolution when it resembled a bird of prey—a hawk, an owl, an eagle—or a fox, a weasel, a wolf, a pig, a goat, a dog, a tiger or a monkey? and that the child could never entirely outgrow the characteristics, mental as well as physical, then dominant when the shock and consequent arrest was received?

But if the responsibility of father before and during the pre-natal life of the child be great, what must be that of the mother, since her relation to the embryon is so vastly more intimate and constant?

Should she not prepare herself, consciously and unremittingly prepare herself, body and mind, for this office, this transcendentally most important of all the human functions or offices, that of creation and pre-natal training of a new human life? Through all the years of maidenhood till the hour arrives in which she consciously assumes the duties, the responsibilities of motherhood.

Should not one of her chief preparations be the care of her own health, physical and mental, her own nervous system, so that accidental shocks will not seriously affect the embryon during the various gradations of growth from plant life up to the human plane?

Then during all the months of pre-natal development, should she not guard—consciously and yet not too anxiously guard—her sacred trust? If fatherhood should guard the creatory, or the avenues thereto, from unwelcome or hurtful intrusion, how much more should the mother stand sentinel over this the citadel of her own life, as well as the life of her child!

The mother—and she alone—knows the kind of influences, the impressions, the magnetisms, the companionships, that are congenial, welcome and healthful, and what kinds are unwelcome or repulsive to herself and through her organism unwelcome and hurtful to the organism of the unborn child.

M. Harman.

(To be continued.)

HEREDITY AND ENVIRONMENT.

In No. 1008 Arthur C. Pleydell, criticising a previous article of mine, tells us that "Human progress does not depend upon physical heredity, but upon what may be termed social heredity." There is a modicum of truth in this, but it is clear that social heredity would be of very little use to a people without sound bodies and sound minds. If modern biologists are right in their belief that without selection there must be physical degeneration, then it follows that social heredity can be no substitute for the benefits of selection. Brooklyn bridges would be of little use to a people lapsing into insanity and imbecility.

Mr. Pleydell says that "The human race has apparently reached a stage of evolution where it adapts itself to environments by means of mental processes which invent external aids, rather than through changes in physical structure." I know that, and regret the fact; therefore, I am trying to persuade the human race to reach a more advanced stage of evolution at which it will adapt itself to environment largely through changes in physical structure. Such external aids as false hair, false teeth, and spectacles are very admirable things, no doubt, but I would rather see a race produced whose natural hair, teeth and eyes would enable it to dispense with these external aids.

I would also point out that external aids have hitherto proved useful only in compartively superficial matters. There are ear trumpets for defective ears, and spectacles for bad eyesight, but I have never heard of any external remedy for a defective brain or a weak will. These things must be weeded out by selection.

It is most extraordinary that persons who see what selection has done for domestic animals should yet feel aggrieved when it is proposed to apply the same thing to human beings. If human selection has evolved the dog from the wolf, what would it not evolve from man as he is now? Would it not be better to have a race far superior in health, strength, intelligence and sympathy to that now existing, than to content ourselves with such minds and bodies as we have now, while we devote our energies to the multiplication of telephones and street-cars?

My Pleydell also says: "It is worth noting that from a biological standpoint Herbert Spencer at the age of eight was one of the unfit. Had he been sent to a public school and allowed to grow up with as little training as most children receive, he would probably have been an average individual. The training he received, more than his physical structure, made him a great philosopher."

I do not know what Mr. Pleydell means when he says that Spencer was unfit at the age of eight. Does he mean that he was in delicate health? If so, I would reply that Spencer was all his life in delicate health, as many great men have been. Intellectual greatness is quite compatible with delicate health. I should like Mr. Pleydell to give his reasons for making such sweeping assertions as he does in the above paragraph. He must be aware that many of the greatest men of science, such as Newton and Darwin, have suffered from the disadvantage of going to public schools, and have yet been more important than Herbert Spencer. Does Mr. Pleydell mean that Spencer was so inferior in intellect to these men that he would have been merely an average individual if he had been educated as they were? What, in his opinion, would Newton and Darwin have been if they had been trained at home, seeing that, in spite of going to public schools, they were so far superior to average individuals?

R. B. Kerr.

HOW TO COLONIZE THE PACIFIC COAST.

INDUSTRIAL AND SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS.

In these papers it has been contended that the great examples of successful colonization in the West are co-operative settlements, notably those in parts of Colorado and Southern California and all of Utah. Last month it was suggested that all the active land interests in California might well form a union in order to employ the methods which were used in the enlistment of Greeley, Anaheim, Riverside and Salt Lake. Getting the settlers is, however, but half the battle. The other half is to organize them upon such a basis that they will be prosperous, contented, and an inspiration to similar movements hereafter.

To accomplish this, the methods of the successful settlements referred to must be imitated still further. But is it possible to command for this business undertaking the spirit and the leadership which created these notable communities during the past fifty years? Yes, in my opinion, we cannot only equal, but surpass, anything yet done in this line. To a certain extent, we can begin where the others leave off. We can avail ourselves of advantages which did not exist twenty-five or fifty years ago. We can found a system of colonization that will go on widening the sphere of its operations and bearing larger and richer fruit long after we shall have passed from the scene. When we have made one thoroughly successful colony by methods capable of general application the problem is solved. How shall we make it?

THREE KINDS OF SETTLERS.

There are three distinct classes of settlers who will enter into the making of every well-organized colony. They are as follows:

First, those possessing sufficient capital to purchase land, make improvements and sustain themselves until the land comes into bearing. This would mean a capital of $2,000 and upwards.

Second, non-resident buyers now in receipt of assured incomes elsewhere—people who do not desire to move at present, but will come later when their places are ready to support them.

Third, those who possess insufficient capital and can only make homes by borrowing money and then working for wages while their places are being improved. Some of this class have a part of the capital required, while others possess only enough to bring their families and household goods to the colony.

For convenience, these three classes will be referred to as independents, non-residents and borrowers, respectively. The ideal colony plan must offer to all these classes the opportunity to live, to labor, and to make homes. And under good plans, each will be a source of strength to the community. I have addressed many colony meetings in the East and corresponded with thousands of people who wanted to get homes in the West. I have always found each of these elements in evidence. I believe we can handle them all, and that, if we do not, we shall fall short of solving the problem of bringing the surplus man to the surplus land.

WHAT IS A SANE COLONY PLAN?

If we make out of hand just such a colony as we consider best for California, and best for the surplus population of the East, what will that colony be? What will be its industrial character? What its social and civic institutions? How will it be governed? In answering these questions, we must not forget that we have before us, in Colorado, Utah and Southern California, several very successful communities from which we can learn valuable lessons. Neither must we forget that every attempt to realize the communistic ideal has failed, and that nearly every successful undertaking has been dominated during its early days by strong men who possessed large authority. My view is this:

Farms are small—five, ten or twenty acres, with not over forty for the maximum. It is a mistake for men of small means to attempt the improvement of large areas, especially under irrigation. Furthermore, high social advantages are closely related to the small farm-unit.

The most diversified production is encouraged. The ideal arrangement is to have each family produce the variety of things it consumes.

Supplies are purchased and products sold in common, so far as possible. The co-operative store, affiliated with the Rochdale wholesale in San Francisco, supplies the means for purchasing; the various fruit exchanges supply a considerable part of the means for selling, but require to be supplemented with numerous small local industries, such as creameries, canneries, and pork-packeries.

Under these industrial plans each man possesses his own farm and thrives in proportion to his industry, thrift and ability. But none of the settlers are exploited by storekeepers, commission-houses, or combinations controlling the various industries which utilize the raw materials produced by the farmer. This is not Socialism. It is business common-sense, and the logical fruit of our modern economic conditions.

On the social side, the aim is to combine, as far as possible, the advantages arising from neighborhood association with the independence which comes from tilling the soil. To this end it is desirable that many, if not most, of the settlers have their homes in a central village on lots of generous size. Experience in many Western communities has proven that this is feasible. Centuries of experience in Europe prove the same thing. And you will never turn the tide from the cities to the country until you find a way to satisfy that social instinct which is one of the strongest traits in human nature.—"Land of Sunshine."

(To be continued.)

ONE ACRE BETTER THAN 10,000.

In a tour of the Sacramento Valley the writer was shown over a number of famous large estates, ranging from 5,000 to 100,000 acres, but the estate which struck him as altogether the most interesting and hopeful of all he saw in that splendid valley consisted of just one acre. This is the irrigated "farm" of Mr. Samuel Cleeks at Orland, Glenn county.

In the Sacramento Valley irrigation is not fashionable, though nature has favored it with a wonderful water supply. For a generation farmers have raised wheat by dependence on the rainfall. Their farms are very large, and they do not always take kindly to the suggestion of irrigation and subdivision. Mr. Cleeks' little place is in the midst of these great farms, many of which have now passed out of the hands of their former owners as a result of mortgage foreclosure. I found it an oasis of prosperity in a desert of despair. When the proprietor told me that he had supported himself and wife for thirty years on that single acre of irrigated land, and when his neighbors informed me that he was one of the men in the little town who always had money to loan on good security or to donate to a worthy cause, I marveled much and had an immediate desire to know just how he had used his land to produce such a result. Mr. Thomas Brown, secretary of the Lemon Home Colony, took the trouble to obtain and send me the following exact information:

"Barn and corral space, 75x75 feet; rabbit hutch, 25x25 feet; house and porches, 30x30 feet; two windmill towers, 16x16 feet each; garden, 46x94 feet; blackberries, 16x90 feet; strawberries, 85x90 feet; citrus nursery, 90x98 feet, in which there are 2,300 trees budded; one row of dew berries, 100 feet long; 4 apricot trees; 2 oak trees; 3 peach trees; 6 fig trees; 10 locust trees; 30 assorted roses; 20 assorted geraniums; 12 lemon trees, bearing, which are seven years old; 1 lime tree, 9 years old and bearing, from which were sold last year 160 dozen limes; 8 bearing orange trees; 4 breadfruit trees; 5 pomegranate trees; one patch of bamboo; 3 calla lilies; 4 prune trees; 3 blue gum trees; 6 cypress trees; 4 grapevines; 1 English ivy; 2 honeysuckles; one seed bed; one violet bed; 1 sage bed; 2 tomato vines, which are in bloom (Dec. 2); 12 stands of bees."

Mr. Cleeks informed me that from the foregoing sources he has no difficulty in realizing a comfortable living and putting $400 aside each year. If the same could be said of the average wheat grower, farming thousands of acres without irrigation, the condition in the Sacramento Valley would be very different from what it is. As the matter stands to-day it must be acknowledged that one irrigated acre in the Sacramento Valley returns a larger net profit than 10,000 acres without irrigation. To be sure, Mr. Cleeks owes a part of his prosperity to the folly of his neighbors whom he supplies with oranges and lemons, peaches, apricots, berries and sundry other luxuries. That, however, is one of the striking advantages of irrigation, since it permits of intensive and diversified cultivation.

From a physician who has recently settled in Utah I have the following interesting budget of suggestions along the same line of thought:

"I have long thought that half an acre ought to support many a poor widow with children, who does not wish to marry again. In 1865, without irrigation, in Illinois, I raised all the vegetables a family of four needed, and had many to give away, on a plot of ground 20x25 feet, just one-eighty-seventh of an acre. I had also from it 18 squashes for winter and 4 quarts of lima beans. It was my first experience. I am convinced I could double that, with irrigation. I have been here four months, and am surprised at the Mormon success. They deserve it. But I fear that more than half the water is wasted. If I were to start a colony for poor people I would tolerate no trees that did not bear fruit or nuts. There are pear trees here that are as large and shady as our useless Lombardy poplars. Women ought to raise fruit, as a rule; they are not strong enough for farm work. I see no reason why half an acre should not support a family."—From "Land of Sunshine."

MODESTY OF FILIPINO WOMEN.

The New York "World" of Feb. 28 contained an interview with Secretary Taft, formerly Governor-General of the Philippines, on conditions in those islands. In the course of the interview, the secretary is quoted as saying:

"There are a great many instances among the natives of families which have not been sanctified by a marriage service. Among us such a condition would be looked upon with horror, but there is an innocence and sincerity in the Filipino relationship which disarms condemnation. The people are so moral and good that the domestic virtues exist in the absence of the marriage tie. The relation in such cases continues as long as the parties prove faithful, and as fidelity is a strong point with them, the system seems successful.

"During the whole of my term in the Islands I did not once see a native woman betray so much as a glance that was immodest. They have an intuitive refinement which is very pretty and charming. And although the native costume entails a greater exposure than our northern ideas sanction—except in a fashionable ball-room—they wear it so modestly, with such graceful unconsciousness that it appears perfectly natural and proper.

"I remember seeing a woman whose kimasa accidentally slipped down, leaving the whole of one shoulder exposed, but she did not show the slightest embarrassment, and her own modesty was so perfectly unaffected and natural that no spectator could have felt embarrassed either. After living among the Filipinos you can appreciate the force of the proverb, 'Honi soit qui mal y pense.' I have seen a woman go down to the shore to bathe within sight of everybody, as they do habitually. She had to undress and dress within view of a great many people, and she did it so fearlessly and naturally, and at the same time so modestly and quickly and skillfully, that even the most evil mind could hardly think evil."

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

MOSES HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED FORTNIGHTLY AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year .....$1.00 Three months .....25 cents
Six months .....50 cents Single copies .....5 cents

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire notify us if you wish to continue to receive Lucifer.

EASTERN REPRESENTATIVE:
E. C. WALKER, 244 WEST 143D STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

THIRD SERIES. VOL. VIII. NO. 12.

RETURN TO OFFICE—THE OUTLOOK.

After an absence of nearly eight months I find myself in harness once more, trying, as best I can, to gather up the broken threads and get the publication loom in working order again.

The chief cause of the temporary suspension of Lucifer—March 17—was the protracted illness of the managing editor pro tem, Lillian Harman, and the well-grounded fear that if I should return to the very changeable climate of Chicago before the return of settled spring weather the result would be the loss of much or possibly all that I had gained by my winter's outing in California. As known to many, the past winter was an exceptionally severe one in Chicago, causing a greatly increased death rate from pneumonia, grip and kindred troubles. The little family at 500 Fulton street did not escape the affliction. Hearing of the situation, I wrote to my daughter that if there was danger of serious collapse in her health it might be better to skip a few numbers of the paper, or suspend publication till my return to office.

But sickness in family was not the only cause of temporary suspension. As stated elsewhere in this issue, there was a falling off in general receipts, partly, no doubt, on account of the severity of the winter, compelling many people to postpone payment for their literature in order to pay for coal, food, clothing and shelter, and partly perhaps through fear that the prolonged fight over the postoffice question would result in permanent suspension of the paper.

During all the years of publication it has been the aim, the desire, of the publishers of Lucifer to avoid debt, and also to avoid making direct appeals for aid—as is the custom of many if not most of our radical reform publishers. We have accepted the doctrine that while no radical reform was ever successfully launched without donations from those who felt the necessity of such reform, yet the habit of depending upon such donations for its continued existence is a decidedly bad habit, and should not be encouraged. Hence to avoid debt and also the necessity of making appeals for donations it was thought best to skip a few numbers, hoping that the return of warm weather in the northern hemisphere would bring renewals to Lucifer, also new subscribers and orders for our book and pamphlet publications.

It was stated in our issue of March 17, that on my return to office "necessary changes would be decided upon." In my letter written from San Francisco, entitled "Another Heart to Heart Talk," I have spoken at some length in regard to these proposed changes, and also of the necessity of hearing promptly from all who are now in arrears on the paper, or who will soon be in arrears inasmuch as the number of papers to be sent through the mails at second-class rates is governed by the number of those who have paid ahead, or have asked that the paper be continued to their address.

In order that ample time may be had for a thorough sifting of the proposed changes by a "committee of the whole"—that is, by all who have helped to keep Lucifer's flag afloat—after carefully considering the pros and cons, I have decided to ask for readmission to second-class rates for Lucifer and therefore will, on this basis, publish but twenty-six numbers per year, instead of fifty-two.

AS A FORTNIGHTLY,

I have decided also to place the price at one dollar, the old rate. This is the same as two dollars, the present rate, for fifty-two numbers.

Believing that there are many thousands who feel a deep and abiding interest in the discussions to which our Light Bearer is devoted I confidently leave its fate in their hands.

M. HARMAN.

COLONIZATION—A MOUNTAIN HOME FOR THE LIGHT-BEARER AND ITS FRIENDS.

In No. 1012 I stated that next issue would—if possible—"contain a more definite description of what I saw in Santa Clara Valley and in the neighboring mountains." When this promise was made I did not know that so many weeks would elapse before another issue of the paper would appear. I was then not without hope that something might be done this coming summer towards planting our "Son of the Morning" in the Redwood lands of the Santa Cruz Mountains, located about fifty miles south of San Francisco. The temporary suspension of the paper has probably defeated the possibility of doing more, this present year, than laying plans for practical work in the near future.

For this issue I prefer to call the attention of our readers to a series of articles published some time ago in a magazine called "The Land of Sunshine," Los Angeles, Calif. These articles deal with the problem of colonization in a general and comprehensive way, and give the reader some idea of what has already been accomplished by co-operative settlements in the West within the past fifty years.

A press of other work, social calls, attendance upon the National Convention of Socialists in Chicago, since my return to office, have prevented the preparation of a detailed statement of the advantages offered by the Redwood lands of Santa Clara and Santa Cruz Counties for co-operative settlement—for "bringing the surplus man to the surplus land."

No. 1014 of the Light Bearer will probably be a colony number—that is, it will be mainly devoted to correspondence and statistics relating to the Pacific Coast in general and to the Redwood lands in particular.

In No. 1009 of Lucifer a brief account was copied from the "San Jose Mercury" illustrative of the fact, not yet generally known, that it does not require large areas of land to enable the industrious individual, or family, to live comfortably and lay up something for future use, by horticulture, bee-keeping, etc. Details of the experiment of Mr. Clecks were not given in the clipping from the "Mercury," and now, believing that working people everywhere need just such object lessons, we reproduce in this issue a fuller account of this wonderful "one-acre farm," with some comments by the editor of the "Land of Sunshine."

M. H.

ANOTHER HEART TO HEART TALK.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 16.

At Lyric Hall, in this city, last Sunday morning, I listened to a discourse by J. Stitt Wilson—known by reputation at least to many of Lucifer's readers. This address was designed to be the close of a series of lectures at the same place, by the same speaker, on Socialism, in its broader and more comprehensive aspects.

Instead of mounting the stage of the theater, Mr. Wilson stood on a low platform in front of his audience, and began by saying he did not mean to make a set speech, but simply to have a "heart to heart talk" with his hearers, and truly it was a talk long to be remembered by all present.

To myself, sitting within a few feet of the speaker, the most interesting feature of the discourse was a panoramic presentation of prehistoric times and conditions upon this planet, showing that life upon earth was once wholly lacking in the element that now to us seems most important, namely, the element or force called sympathy—a feeling for and with others.

This element, the speaker said, was wholly unknown—because not needed—so long as there were no mammals upon earth. So long as animal life was propagated by the primitive method of laying eggs on the sand, or in the mud, to be hatched by the sun, there was no need of sympathetic care on the part of the parent, no need of mother love.

The reptilian monsters of sea and land felt no interest in the welfare of others. It was each for self, and for self alone. Hence they fought and devoured each other—the strong swallowing and digesting the weak, with no regard for ties of family, of kindred or of race; the mother Saurian devouring her own offspring indiscriminately with the young of any other mother.

Thus the carnival of appetite, of lust, of narrowly selfish greed, went on from age to age, till evolution produced the mammal. Then sympathy was born; then love began; its first form and manifestation being

MOTHER LOVE.

From mother love, from sympathy with and for the helplessness of infancy, were gradually developed all other forms of love—filial love, paternal, fraternal, conjugal, tribal, racial, cosmic or universal love.

The development, the elaboration of this idea, this picture of the all-embracing importance, the dominance, the predominance, of mother love, as the chief element in social evolution—in the work of lifting the world out of the mud, the slime, the horror, of conditions similar to those of prehistoric times when the strong devoured the weak without thought or sympathy—all this was painted by the speaker with the magical touch of a true word-painter, and cannot possibly be reproduced in cold type upon this sheet of white paper.

THE FUTURE OF LUCIFER.

In this review Mr. Wilson closed his winter's work in San Francisco, and outlined his plans for the future. In much the same way I wish briefly to speak of my own winter's work, and also of future plans for Lucifer.

First, as to the past. Our readers do not need to be told that the past three or four months have been months of trial, of struggle and anxiety for Lucifer and its workers. We, my daughter and myself, have been discriminated against—very unjustly, as many think—by the heads of the postoffice department at Washington; deprived of our share of the government subsidy known as "second-class" mail privilege, and compelled to pay, not an average, not an equitable share of the expense of carrying the mails, but a much higher rate, in order that other and richer publishers may get their publications sent through the mails for much less than such privilege is in equity worth. Also in order that congressmen may send tons and tons of partisan speeches through the mails free of charge!

But this is not all. One entire issue of Lucifer, that dated Dec. 17, was held up, confiscated, condemned, by the postoffice officials as unmailable, because of the alleged immoral character of its contents. By this act of official robbery our subscribers were deprived of a whole issue of the paper for which they had paid their money.

No attempt was ever made to show wherein the publishers of Lucifer had violated any statute, any law, or any principle of right or of justice.

In addition to this the publishers have been subjected to the danger of arrest, of trial and imprisonment, simply because they had exercised their native right of freedom of speech and of press, supplemented by their citizen right to use the common mails to complete the act of publication, namely, the distribution of printed matter to the readers, the purchasers.

As stated in last issue, part of our winter's fight has been won. We are again allowed our share, our very small share, of "subsidy," that is, our small share of the money taken from the pockets of the people by our despotic government and given to one class of publishers, under the pretext that, like the public schools, a certain class of publishers should be encouraged by government aid. Part of the money robbed from us is to be restored, but not all. For three weeks we were compelled to put a government stamp on every copy of the paper sent by mail, instead of paying 1 cent per pound, the subsidized rate. This robber tax, or tariff, we must lose without remedy.

The other half of the outrage to which we have been subjected—the confiscation of No. 1000 of Lucifer—Dec. 17, 1903—has not been righted. An appointee of Theodore Roosevelt, Mr. Wynne by name, a "servant of a servant" of the people of the United States, still holds our property, unlawfully and unjustly holds our property, and prevents us from sending it to the purchasers thereof by mail or in any other way, and still the Damocles' sword, the threat of fine and of imprisonment for alleged "obscenity," is held over head of the responsible publisher.

Secondly, as to the future. In view of the difficulties and dangers attending the publication of a radical reform journal, a logical Freethought journal, within the limits of the autocratic despotism called the United States of America, we have been very seriously advised to do one of three things, namely,

Either cease discussing the sex question in Lucifer, else move the paper to some other country, else permanently suspend its publication.

The person who gives us this advice is an old editor and publisher, has himself suffered from the same despotic, invasive and partialistic abuse of power, and, moreover, has earned the right to advise, by doing as much as any other individual, in a financial way, to make Lucifer live.

What say our readers to this?

Especially what say the friends of Lucifer's pivotal contention, namely, the right of the child to be born well, through the emancipation of womanhood and motherhood from the thralldom of man-made laws and customs, the thralldom of priest-made superstitions and creeds in regard to what is true, right and moral in the sex-relations of human beings?

Shall we temporize? Shall we surrender?

Shall we "give up the ship"—in any of the ways named?

The same person, or rather the symposium of persons, who gave this advice made another suggestion:

If the publication of Lucifer is to be continued, they advise dropping its Latin name—retaining only its English synonym. That is to say, instead of calling the paper "Lucifer the Light Bearer," call it simply "The Light Bearer."

This shortening of the name they seem to regard as simply a step in the line of evolutionary progress—a step forward and upward and not at all a surrender to old-time prejudice or to priest-born superstition in regard to the origin and meaning of the word Lucifer.

Having often, and at much length, given my reasons for adopting the name Lucifer I do not care to discuss this question now, but inasmuch as several of those who have done most to show their abiding interest in Lucifer and its work have joined in making this suggestion I am willing to "open the polls," so to speak, and put it to vote as to whether the old name shall be retained as in the past or whether it shall be shortened by the elimination of the first half.

QUESTION OF PRICE.

The question of name is by no means the only one upon which there is serious difference of opinion. By conversation with many of Lucifer's patrons, also by letters received, I have been made aware that there is widespread dissatisfaction with, or disapproval of, the late advance in price from one to two dollars. It is urged that while it is true that the price of skilled labor has advanced to nearly double what it was a few years ago, also the price of most materials that enter into the production of books and papers, also that the cost of living has nearly doubled—all making it necessary and right to advance the price of the paper—yet it is maintained that if Lucifer is to reach the classes of people that most need its teachings it must not be advanced in price.

Better, much better, would it be, say these friends, to reduce the number of issues—better make the paper a fortnightly or even a monthly, rather than advance the price above one dollar per year. It is certainly a source of much encouragement and of thankfulness that so many have responded to the call for an additional dollar to keep Lucifer alive, yet it is equally a matter of discouragement that some have discontinued the paper to their address because of the advance in price.

In accord then with the suggestions of these good and faithful friends, who have shown their faith by their works, and in order that we may the better make up our minds as to what is the best course to pursue, I now ask all who have at heart the welfare of the race to which we all belong, to write us brief answers to the following list of questions:

First. Shall the paper now called Lucifer the Light Bearer be continued?

Second. If so, shall it be published in the United States or in some foreign country?

Third. If it is to live, what shall be its name?

Fourth. What shall be its price per annum?

Fifth. What its period of issue—weekly, fortnightly or monthly?

In addition to these questions I will venture to ask of each who may care to respond:

In case the changes are made that may be suggested by you—or the more important of your suggested changes—how many copies of the paper will you take and pay for? or how many yearly subscriptions will you be responsible for?

Answers to these questions may, for brevity and cheapness, be sent on postal card, and should be sent at once, or without unnecessary delay. Inasmuch, however, as the expenses of the winter have left nothing in the treasury to pay the bills for this issue of Lucifer, it is hoped that few postal cards will be received in answer to these questions, but that instead, a letter, concise and pointed, will be sent, and that with such letter will come something in the shape of co-operative aid to help pay the bills aforesaid.

But whether convenient to send money, stamps or money orders, do not neglect to write to say whether you want Lucifer or not. As we are compelled to go through the forms of making fresh application for re-admission to second-class privileges—on account of temporary suspension—which forms require that none but paid up subscribers can be counted (or such as request the paper to be continued to their address) it is vitally important that we should know what names we can count, and how many to erase permanently from the list.

M. HARMAN.

NATIONAL SOCIALIST CONVENTION.

After a very busy and fairly harmonious meeting of six days and nights the delegates to the National Socialist Convention closed their labors, Friday night, May 6, at Brand's Hall in this city. As a student of human nature and an observer of passing events I attended several of the sessions of this convention, renewing old acquaintanceships and forming new ones. As compared with other representative bodies of men and women—there were six women delegates—I consider the personnel of this convention by no means inferior to that of any similar assemblage that I have ever had the privilege of meeting.

As compared to the scenes enacted on the floor of the national congress at Washington, D. C., the sessions of this convention were characterized by a spirit of fairness, of fraternal sympathy, of courtesy, of toleration, and at the same time of independent thought and absence of servility to leaders and bosses that was decidedly encouraging to all who labor and wait for the dawning of a brighter day in political evolution.

As was expected by most readers of Socialist journals the nominee for standard-bearer of the party in the on-coming battle of the ballots is Eugene V. Debs, the "Hero of Woodstock Jail." Benjamin Hanford of New York is the nominee for vice-president.

Whether the action of the convention in putting forward a national ticket be wise or not, is something upon which there will be much diversity of opinion. Being quite out of partisan politics I can only give the opinion of an on-looker that such action is premature, and will not hasten but rather delay the final triumph of the principles for which the Socialist party of the United States stands pledged.

Lack of space prevents further consideration of this subject for this issue.

M. H.

"WHAT WILL HE DO WITH IT?"

It is constantly urged by many of Lucifer's contemporaries that the first and most needed reform is economic freedom, economic reconstruction, and that until this freedom is achieved, practicalized, it is useless to work for Freedom of Motherhood or the Right of the Child to be born well. The following lines from a good friend and subscriber voices this view and serves as a sample of many thousands:

"I appreciate very highly the work you are doing, or at least trying to do, though I cannot believe that sexual freedom can ever be either established, or maintained if established, so long as economic bondage persists. When we have made capital of our material resources, we have bonded everything under the sun, ourselves included."—J. W. C.

Yes, there is practically no disagreement between Lucifer's leading writers and the political Socialists as to evils of "capitalized material resources." Our main points of difference are as to the best practical means of obtaining economic freedom and justice, and also in regard to the use to which the collective control of our material resources will be put—if ever obtained.

To my thinking, the most potent argument for overthrowing our present capitalistic control of material resources is that womanhood, motherhood, cannot do its best work in creating a better race until the economic reconstruction is achieved, and secondly, if collective ownership and control of these material resources were once established the result would be only a half victory so long as the right to sexual self-ownership is not established as a fundamental principle in human association.

Hence we maintain that the first and most necessary reform is that of rousing womanhood to a true sense of what liberty and justice mean in sex-life, in the co-operation of human beings in the relation that creates a new race.

"Sex contains all," says Whitman. Then to get things right in economics, or in anything else, we must understand and practicalize right principles on the sex question.

"What will he (or she) do with freedom when he gets it?" thus becomes the previous question.

M. HARMAN.

VARIOUS VOICES.

We are always glad to receive calls from friends visiting the city. Take the Lake street elevated, stop at Ashland avenue, walk one block east, then one block north. Or take Fulton street electric car west and stop at St. John's place, alighting in front of our house. The Lake street electric and Paulina street cars also pass within a block of our residence.

When writing on business of any kind, please do not forget to enclose a stamp for catalogue of books and pamphlets on sale at this office.

Dr. M. A. Cohn, Brooklyn, N. Y.: Enclosed find check for $3, as subscription to Lucifer, which I am missing very much indeed.

H. W. Hunt, Federalsburg, Md. (April 27, '04): I have been upon your list of subscribers for about a decade, and have rarely been in arrears. I find, on investigation, that I am so now. Please continue to send the paper, and I will liquidate soon after the 1st prox.

Wesley Jewell, Humboldt, Kan.: My father, W. D. Jewell, left us Jan. 20, in the 75d year of his age. He died as he had lived, a Freethinker in religion and a true friend to his fellow man. Enclosed find one dollar, settling his account to date.

[Thus one by one the veteran workers are leaving us. Brother W. D. Jewell had been a subscriber and helper of Lucifer for more than twenty years. Peace and honor to his memory.—M. H.]

W. W. Miller, 159 Spring St., New Haven, Conn.: Enclosed find 50 cents, to apply on my subscription. Will send more before the expiration of my time, for I would not have Lucifer cease publication if I could in any way prevent it. It has been too great a benefit to me during the fifteen years of my acquaintance with it. It certainly has done more to improve me than any other thing of which I know. Long may it live and continue to influence for good.

Allen Haddock, Editor "Human Nature," San Francisco, Calif. (March 14, '04): Allow me to congratulate you on the re-admission of Lucifer to second-class privileges. It was a shame to withdraw them. Keep right on, old friend. You deserve all the encouragement and support of every progressive thinker. "Truth is mighty and must prevail," but it takes so long to "prevail" that our old bones will return to Mother Earth before the masses awake.

Koranna Savard, Hot Springs, Ark.: Herewith I send 50 cents. Please keep me on your subscription list. Some friend was kind enough to send me Lucifer for the short time it has been coming to me, but now I feel the need of it. Wish there were more such "Light Bearers" in this beautiful land of ours. I have no doubt but that great good will come out of the oppression that is now heaped upon Lucifer. It has always been so. The American people do not like oppression, but they need to be aroused.

J. W. Kelley, Marion, Ind.: Have our people established any place in St. Louis as headquarters during the fair? I have not received the last three issues of Lucifer, but have always missed many numbers. I am glad you had a pleasant trip out West, and I know you will do much good wherever you go.

[Yes. Brother Carl Nold of East St. Louis, Ill., 1638 Kansas avenue, writes me under date May 6: "I succeeded in establishing a little headquarters—the St. Louis Debating Club, 1008 North Seventeenth street, St. Louis—where friends and comrades will be welcome, but we cannot accommodate anyone with rooms and board. It would have been too expensive an undertaking. I certainly want Lucifer again and will send in my subscription as soon as possible." Those wishing further information in regard to the headquarters will address Brother Nold.]

Martin Nortvedt, Laurium, Mich.: If ever you get instruction from me to stop sending me your paper you can take it as absolute evidence that I have gone insane. As long as I am able to pay the subscription price, be it even $5 a year, I shall remain a subscriber. Being a wage worker and having five children to support, I am not overloaded with money, and recognize that I might become a cripple through accident. My only regret is that I am not able to do as much for the cause of liberty as I would like to do. I have, however, done what I could. Messrs. K. J. L. and J. O'B. of this place have become subscribers to your paper through me; also Prof. S. O. These persons never knew that such a paper existed before I handed them each a copy. I am glad that such a paper as Lucifer exists; glad that a copy of it fell into my hands, some eight or nine years ago. I have always read it with great interest and not a single copy has escaped me in all those years. I shall always do what I can to keep Lucifer's banner afloat; of this you may rest assured.

Aurin F. Hill, 12 Isabella St., Boston: I am glad to learn that you have again obtained equal conditions with richer publishers in use of the mail service. Gods may weep at the astonishing injustice of some public servants. We should think, act, work and vote right to recover lost liberties and rights and to gain more equality, liberty and justice from the voters and the servants elected and appointed to serve the people. A Rt. Rev. Mgr. died while he was at prayer after saying to a person, "Go, sin no more." Consider the words of clergymen about death as a punishment of the wicked by God. Consider, if a part of what has been expended in churches and for clergymen and their maintainance had been used to the improving of homes, would not good health, happiness and prosperity have prevailed among all mankind on this earth?

M. C. Powers, Paskenta, Calif.: Pleased to hear from you, and much regret that I am unable to see you while you are in California. I have read with great interest the accounts you have given in Lucifer of your labors in San Francisco this past winter, and am sure your efforts will be crowned with success. The truths you have given the people of San Francisco will find many receptive hearts. I enclose $2. You can give me credit for one year's subscription to Lucifer and the balance (if any) you can use for any purpose you like. Would like to send you more, and shall do so some time. I think it time for every lover of freedom to put his shoulder to the wheel, when we see our rights being taken from us. What are we that someone must sit in judgment over us and tell us what we can have to read and what not? If this is what government does for us, I say away with it and give us fredom.

Photographs of Moses Harman, taken in San Francisco and contributed by the photographer to be sold for the benefit of Lucifer, may be ordered of Moses Harman. See address in another column. Price, 25 cents.

MISCELLANEOUS.

GEORGE FOX, 1114 W. Huerfano st., Colorado Springs, wishes to correspond with lady of liberal mind, with view to forming business and social alliance.

WANTED—To correspond with people desiring to join a Nature Colony in Southern California. Perfect climate; magnificent view; located at foot of Mt. Lowe. No users of liquor, tobacco, meat or corsets need apply. Address MRS. MAUD JOHNSON, Station A, Pasadena, Cal.

BUT ONE SANTA CLARA VALLEY.

SAN JOSE (JOSAY) IN THE CENTRE. POP., 37,000.

Write for particulars about the most beautiful orchard homes and the most delightful climate in the world. The foothills and mountains are clothed in green and are the home of the vine and fruit tree. No irrigation necessary. Fifty miles from San Francisco. Descriptive literature free on application to

W. S. OBVIS, Land Agent and Colonizer, No. 7 North First St., San Jose, Cal.

SYSTEM-ENERGY

PFEIFFER PRINCIPLE
Based upon the laws of Psychology and Physiology.

TEN TYPEWRITTEN LESSONS, $10.

Contains such information as cannot be obtained in any other way. They give the key to nature and tell you how to live and be healthy even in old age. When you have mastered the Pfeiffer Principle you can defy disease and will be master of conditions. When we consider that Health is Wealth, who will hesitate to invest $10.00 for teachings worth a fortune! Address

OUR HOME RIGHTS PUBLISHING CO.,
BEDFORD, MASS.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 62, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We cannot sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 20c each, two for 50c. Address EDWIN C. WALKER, 244 W. 143d St., New York, N. Y.

WANTED—100 women to study medicine or midwifery. Next term begins January 1, 1904. College of Medicine and Surgery, 245 Ashland Blvd., Chicago, Ill. DR. FLORENCE DRESSLER, Secretary. (Dept. A.)

A QUESTION FOR J. C. BARNES.

In No. 1010 J. C. Barnes says: "It is coercive force that is at the bottom of all the error and evil that exists, and not the depravity of man." Let me ask Mr. Barnes this question: If coercive force is the cause of all error and evil, what is the cause of coercive force?

R. B. KERR.

He that boasteth of his ancestors confesseth he hath no virtue of his own. No other person hath lived for our honor, nor ought that to be reputed ours which was long before we had a being. For what advantage can it be to a blind man that his parents had good eyes? Does he see one whit the better?—R. de Charron.

The briefest expose of all the errors of the Bible would require a larger volume than the Bible itself. And yet this book, which contains more errors than any other book in Christendom, is the only book for which Christians claim inerrancy.—Remsburg's "The Bible."

The bride: "We have come to be married." Modern minister: "Ah, yes. With or without?" The bride: "What?" The minister: "Obey."—Town Topics.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD OWN

TOKOLOGY.

A COMPLETE HEALTH GUIDE.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

Teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions.

Treats of diseases of women and children; contains practical teachings on Change of Life, limiting offspring, etc.

Lizzie N. Armstrong writes: "If I knew I were to be the mother of innumerable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of Tokology."

Dr. C. B. Wilbur: "Tokology is doing more for women than all other books put together."

CLOTH, PREPAID, $2.25; LEATHER, $2.75.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

TRUE MANHOOD.

AN INVALUABLE GUIDE TO HEALTH, STRENGTH AND PURITY.

BY E. B. SHEPHERD.

WHAT EVERY FATHER WANTS HIS BOY TO KNOW.

The Christian Endeavor World: "Its suggestions are wise and ennobling." Dr. Stockham, author of Tokology, says: "TRUE MANHOOD explains the transition from boyhood to manhood, giving knowledge of priceless value."

Levant cloth, 328 pages. Prepaid $1. STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

A treatise on Sexual Science and Marriage, rich in thought and strong in expression. Emphatically a book for the thinker.

Carpenter holds that woman's freedom is based upon economics; she must be independent financially that she may not be forced to sell herself in or out of marriage. He also makes a strong plea for a motherhood of freedom and thoughtful preparation.

AMERICAN EDITION, CLOTH, PREPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

CREATIVE LIFE.

A BOOK FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

A timely and important message not found in text books. Every girl seeks and should have this true, plain and practical knowledge. One writes: "Thank you, thank you, dear Doctor, for the plain but beautiful thoughts. Womanhood, motherhood and life have new meanings. You ennoble your theme." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

A NOVEL BY GEORGE N. MILLER.

FORTIETH THOUSAND.

"The Strike of a Sex" is a fascinating novel bearing upon the sexual relations. It is a bold protest against the customary life of most married people, and at the same time a prophecy of happier conditions between man and wife. Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

SONGS OF A CHILD,
AND OTHER POEMS.

By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. Price $1.50; postage 12c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

1013

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

KAREZZA.

SCIENCE OF MARRIAGE.

A godsend to every wife—a joy to every husband.

This work brings peace into homes disrupted by inharmony in the sexual relation. Dr. A. B. Stockham advises a practice which leads to individual liberty and to deeper love between husband and wife.

Dr. F. G. Welch: "After a personal trial of its teachings, I want to thank you for a great service to humanity."

Rev. George R. Stanshaw: "Out of a beautiful and ennobling experience, I can say, I KNOW."

Gives a high ideal of the marital relation and teaches control of the Procreating Power.

J. A. Smalley, M. D.: "I have received more actual benefit from the practice of KAREZZA teachings than from all other books on Sexual Science."

A. B. Franklin, M. D.: "KAREZZA does more than any other single thing to make marriage a perpetual courtship."

LEVANT CLOTH, POSTPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

JUST OUT.

PARENTHOOD.

By Alice B. Stockham, M. D., author of "Tokology" and "Karezza." Highest ideals for best offspring. Vital and important subjects discussed. Including new philosophy of the Creative Energy. G. G. Hunt says: "Many sentences of PARENTHOOD should be graven in gold and handed down to posterity." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

One of the best short works on the subject. A charming little gift book. "Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it."

DAINTILY PRINTED. PREPAID, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY, AND THE STATE.

BY FREDERICK ENGELS.

Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans.

217 pages; bound in cloth. Price 60c; postage 5c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MEN, WOMEN, AND CHANCE.

BY WILLIAM PLATT.

Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. Price 75c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

"PERSONAL EXPERIENCES OF TWO AMERICAN ANTI-VIVISECTIONISTS IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES."

BY PHILIP G. PEABODY.

With an Appendix by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c. Apply to PHILIP G. PEABODY, 15 Court Square, Boston, Mass.

THE STORY OF IJAIN;

OR, THE EVOLUTION OF A MIND.

By Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Stuart Ross), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. Price $1; postage 8c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

ISOLA; OR, THE DISINHERITED.

A drama in six acts. By Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1; postage 7c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

THE LIBERAL MAIL-ORDER JEWELER.

Now permanent at No. 110 N. Kensington Ave., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 20 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's Line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Thebem in the Crucible," free.

J. H. GREER, M. D.,
52 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.

Office Hours—9 a. m. to 6 p. m.; Wednesdays and Saturdays, 9 a. m. to 8 p. m.; Sundays, 9 a. m. to 12 m.
Telephone, Randolph 42.

DR. OGILVIE A. RICE,
DENTIST.
1556 MILWAUKEE AVE., COR. WESTERN, CHICAGO.
Telephone West 141.

PHILIP G. PEABODY,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
15 COURT SQUARE, ROOM 61.
BOSTON, MASS.

PRICE FIVE CENTS. CHICAGO, ILL., MAY 26, E. M. 304. [C. E. 1904.] WHOLE NO. 1014

THE RIGHT TO BE BORN WELL.

(Continued from Page 90.)

Should not every woman demand—not simply request—as a prime condition under which she will consent to relations with man which may result in motherhood, that she be supplied with

A HOME OF HER OWN?

A home from which she cannot be evicted?

A home in which she will be not only "queen-consort," but the absolute ruler, at least so far as deciding who shall and who shall not be inmates of that home?

This for the very sufficient reason that peace is the home is an absolute essential to the right-building of the new and better race.

That war is now—as in all the past—so popular, and apparently so necessary to national life, is just what we might logically expect when we remember that in so large a proportion of the homes in which men are generated, gestated, born and reared, the mother, the creator and builder, must fight—in some way must fight—for her right to her person, her right to a private room or rooms, her right to congenial and helpful companionships and to such alone.

Does not the fact that so few women, of all who undertake the role of motherhood, are sufficiently individualized to demand and secure their rights in these regards, does not this fact tell the story why kings, czars, mikados and presidents find no difficulty in obtaining willing slaves to fight their battles of invasion and of conquest, while they themselves remain securely at home in their well-guarded and luxurious palaces?

Like mother, like son!

The stream cannot rise higher than its source.

If man needs a home of his own, a place to which he can retire for restful recuperation after the toils, the worries and vexations of the day, how much more necessary to woman is a home of her own, her very own, because her life is spent mainly in that home, but especially because, by nature's own division of labor, woman is made the creator, the builder and chief educator of the new race.

If for his own satisfaction and for the better recuperation of wasted energies man needs a home supplied with accessories such as oil paintings, pictures and statuary—models in bronze or marble of the "human form divine"—how much more does woman, in what is necessarily the more or less monotonous life of the home, need such accessories for her own comfort and sanity, but especially in order that she may have ever before her eyes models from which to fashion more symmetrically beautiful forms for her children than nature was able to give to herself, or to the incarnate human specimens with whom she is obliged to live.

The same argument would seem to apply to the outside environments of the home, as well as to its inside components. How is it possible for woman to do her best work in child-building when her home is surrounded with nothing more beautiful or inspiring than "piles and piles of bricks and mortar," as in the crowded city, or by endless stretches of monotonous, plain, unrelieved by the sight of hill or forest or mountain, as in the grain-growing and beef-producing sections of the United States?

Is it strange that children generated, gestated, born and reared amid such physical environments of the home should be lacking in imagination, in aspiration, in originality, in individuality, in mental or moral independence?

But now we are confronted with the most difficult factor or element, perhaps, in the problem of how to be born well through free, independent, self-owning and self-reliant motherhood. If woman must demand a home of her own, her very own, as a condition precedent to living with a man in the relation that may result in motherhood, of whom must she demand this home?

If she is herself the possessor, in her own right, by inheritance, by bequest, or by her own industry, of a competence sufficient to buy a home and to support herself and child or children during the years of their helplessness, then the problem needs no other solution. But how many women of all the twenty or more millions of women within the child-bearing age in the United States are so environed, so dowered?

"No freedom of any sort, and especially no sex freedom, is possible under economic dependence," say our Socialistic friends, and with this general statement I find myself in full accord.

Time failing, I close for this issue by saying that one of the many solutions of the problem of woman's economic independence was broadly hinted at on page 91 of No. 1013, under the head "One Acre Better than 10,000," wherein "a physician" says: "I have long thought that half an acre ought to support many a poor widow with children, who does not wish to marry again."

How or where this productive half-acre can be found, and how a woman with children, or without children, can support herself independently thereon, is the subject of an article now in preparation for these columns.

M. HARMAN.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

TO ALL LIBERAL FRIENDS.

Through the courtesy of Lucifer I desire to announce that I am on my way East, designing to spend the summer in New England, and to start West on a lecture tour in the fall. I shall be in St. Louis May 25, and remain at least two or three weeks, where I want to meet all friends of freedom. As various gatherings of Liberals will doubtless be held during my visit, I should like to suggest that those who expect to attend the World's Fair make a special effort to come at this particular time. I hope all Liberals residing in St. Louis, or visiting it while I am there, will notify me where to find them. Address me care of Carl Nold, 1638 Kansas avenue, East St. Louis, Ill. Do not make a mistake, and write "Mo." for "Ill." It is just across the Mississippi River from the larger city.

It is a special hobby of mine to make the personal acquaintance of Liberal thinkers, regardless of differences in opinion, and I hope that all readers of Lucifer in the localities mentioned will accept this as meant for them, and let me know if they wish to see me.

JAMES F. NORTON, JR.

Sexual education is the greatest need of the age. Knowledge is the only purity. Make no suggestion by thought, word or deed that the fountain of life is not inherently pure. A false conception of the sex-nature has delayed the discovery of principles that make perpetual life possible.—Harry Gaze in "How to Live Forever."

Woman must yearn for motherhood because she is woman. Before it is reached the bow of her Ideal plants its farthest foot there and leads unwaveringly to it. Next it springs across the Great Valley and bends down into Heaven, whither, when she has them, she would take all her children.—"Woman and Her Era."

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.

Two weeks ago the following questions were asked of all who take interest in the life and work of Lucifer the Light Bearer:

First. Shall the paper now called Lucifer the Light Bearer be continued?

Second. If so, shall it be published in the United States or in some foreign country?

Third. If it is to live, what shall be its name?

Fourth. What shall be its price per annum?

Fifth. What its period of issue—weekly, fortnightly or monthly?

In addition to these questions I will venture to ask of each who may care to respond:

In case the changes are made that may be suggested by you—or the more important of your suggested changes—how many copies of the paper will you take and pay for? or how many yearly subscriptions will you be responsible for?

The first reply to the above questions came from Geo. B. Wheeler of this city, and is as follows:

"(1) Yes. (2) In the United States. (3) Lucifer the Light Bearer. (4) $1. (5) Fortnightly at present. I would take and pay for three copies if my suggestions were followed, but shall do what I can for it at any rate. Do what you think is best and I am ready to boost. I want Lucifer at any price."

From Winsted, Conn., L. V. Pinney writes: "You are peremptorily ordered not to strike my name from your subscription list. I vote for the name Lucifer. Hang to it and let the heathen rage. You cannot please the dunderheads who cavil at the word, no matter how you bend to their stupidity; so save yourself the humiliation of bending and keep your name as a sacred part of your paper's individuality. My subscription is paid in advance [more than a year in advance], so there is no question about my being a bona fide subscriber."

B. W., Colorado, writes: "(1) Yes, by all means. (2) In Chicago. (3) Lucifer. (4) $1. (5) Weekly if possible, but at least fortnightly.

"The name has been something of a stumbling block to me, but I came to this conclusion: those who will not read Lucifer on account of its name are too ignorant to understand its philosophy. A man who reads radical literature prefers a radical name for the paper he reads. A radical name is a novelty, and an American fool always takes after a novelty. I believe in doing everything above board.

"Three-month subscriptions for 25 cents is a good idea. Enclosed find a two-dollar bill, for which send Lucifer three months to each of the following names. If all your subscribers would do as well Lucifer would soon become a power. Each of your subscribers ought to get one more subscriber, if only for three months."

Mrs. B. M., New York: "Answering your questions would say: (1) Continue. (2) Publish in the United States. (3) Keep it alive and call it The Light Bearer. The name Lucifer is associated in the ignorant mind with the devil and hell, and then when you discuss the sex question, that settles it! Remember we are dealing with ignorance and prejudice, and these are in authority and can arrest and place in jail. You have to mix worldly wisdom with your presentation of subjects you wish reformed. To be frank and fearless is a grand thing in the abstract, but a little mixture of strategy and wisdom is to be commended, and better results will ensue. Remember you are dealing with semi-barbarians, with the crude teachings of their ancestors burning in their veins. (4) Fifty cents per annum.

"I enclose check for $10 and desire to be considered a life subscriber. I also want Mr. Harman's picture thrown in."

Hermann Wettstein, Fitzgerald, Ga.: "My ballot is as follows: (1) The Light Bearer should surely be continued. (2) In the United States. (3) Would suggest the Light Bearer, as this is not open to misconstruction, while Lucifer is. (4) One dollar per annum, seeing the majority of your subscribers desire it so. (5) Fortnightly. Will take two. Herewith I enclose $1 for my second subscription for distribution to friends.

"It makes my heart sore to see such a cause as you represent—than which there is none better or nobler—meet with such opposition from those who should have the elevation of the people whom they profess to serve, ever in view. But what can we expect from a class of fanatics whose chief stigmatized as a 'dirty little Atheist' one of the principal founders of our so-called 'glorious republic,' because he was not a religious bigot, only a deist?

"No Freethinker, be his political affiliations what they may, can consistently give his support to this man if nominated for President. I would suggest that every editor in the country opposed to him and who has the courage to express his convictions should keep the following standing notice at his masthead until after the election:

"'Are you going to vote for one who stigmatized Thomas Paine—whose motto was: To do good is my religion"—as a "dirty little Atheist"?'"

"My choice is William J. Bryan, for while he does not represent my political convictions fully he comes nearest to them of any man who has a good chance of being elected. Hearst is not qualified because he is no speaker. Parker is like Roosevelt, a 'gold-bug'—a tool of the money mongers. Politically there is no difference between them. Cleveland is like them. Bryan has the welfore of the masses at heart, and though twice defeated he gained enough at the last election to make his success almost a certainty at the coming one. Under his regime the liberal press would certainly not be subjected to such persecution as now.

"Your article, 'The Right to Be Born Well,' in No. 1013, was the best I ever read on that subject. If the sentiments expressed therein were heeded and followed by the people for only one generation it would raise the physical status and the moral and intellectual standard of the nation over 50 per cent, within that time.

"And such sentiments as these a lot of political imbeciles dare try to suppress. It makes my blood boil!"

Katie E. Beck, Attica, O.: "By all means continue the paper. There is nothing more essential, as I see it, than education on sex. (2) Stay in the United States. You have no assurance that you would be better treated elsewhere. (3) As to its name I am not positive. Sometimes it is better to bend in order to conquer. Though the name Lucifer is doubtless dear to your heart it might be best to drop it. (4) $1.25 I think would be easier for most of us to pay and have it fortnightly than $2 and have it weekly, and be easier for the publishers. As a monthly I think many readers would lose interest. Constant dropping wears the stone; so also prejudices."

A. H. Frank, Red House, N. Y.: "I have learned one valuable lesson—namely, how to live well on a cost of food material not exceeding 25 cents per week. This does not allow the use of eggs, milk, and but very little butter. Will be 81 years old next August. Am in good health. Will send $1 so as to count one paid-up subscriber. As to your questions:

"(1) No. [Evidently Father Frank meant "Yes," else he would not have sent the dollar to pay ahead.] (2) In the United States. (3) Light Bearer. (4) $1. (5) Semi-monthly. I do not feel able to take more than one copy, but enclose 25 cents for which please send me as many as you can of No. 1013, which number I want especially for the article 'One Acre Better than 10,000.' Good wild or uncleared land, well watered, can be bought here, in lots of one or two acres, for less than $10 an acre. No healthier location in the United States. I can control the sale of about 150 acres and secure good title."

May Hurd, Wellesley, Mass.: "I shall renew my two subscriptions when they expire. I think once in two weeks would be a good plan. I should be very sorry not to have Lucifer."

Bettie M. Roberts, Miller, Mo.: "Answer to first question: 'Don't give up the ship.' I only wish your words [speaking to Lillian] uttered since this trouble commenced, 'I intend that my father's work shall live,' could ring in the ears, and hearts, of every woman in the land. Publish in the United States if possible; if not, do like Wilshire, remove to Canada. Drop the name Lucifer; it frightens the ignorant orthodox—it repels. The price should be as low as you can make it; it is worth more than $1, but few could, in justice to themselves, pay more. Fortnightly, if possible, but monthly if you can do no better. It must not die! The battle of free speech and free press must be fought. Let us fight it now!"

Edward Wenning, Cincinnati, O.: "My subscription is paid ahead. Nevertheless I enclose $1 to help you get started anew, and you may extend my subscription accordingly. This shows that I believe in the need and benefit of your paper, and I should like very much to see it continue unimpaired and, if possible, improved. I think we need a paper whose special function is the treatment of sex questions. For other realms there are other papers, but for this realm there is only yours.

"(1) Yes, continue the paper if in your power. 2) Stay in the United States if at all possible. Fight it out here. (3) Let the name be The Light Bearer. (4) Let the price be $1. (5) Fortnightly or monthly, according to your judgment. It is immaterial, so it be published, and so it contain good matter. (6) I will be responsible for two subscriptions."

O. P. Loomis, Newport News, Va.: "Am pleased to learn that you are back from the West and trust that you are benefited by your trip. Regarding the queries put forth, beg to say that I consider the name Lucifer very appropriate, but my sentiments may not be the most desirable in a commercial view. If the circulation were increased by changing the name, I suppose it would be wise to do so. To my mind, however, it is ideal. I believe the United States is as good as anywhere to publish the paper. The price should be what you can afford to make it, but rather than have it too high it would seem desirable to reduce the number of issues per year. My own subscription is all that I can be responsible for at present. There are few if any people in this section who are interested in such matters. I generally pass my issues along and suppose somebody reads them."

An Old Friend: "(1) Yes. (2) United States. (3) Lucifer, by all means. (4) $1 per annum. (5) Monthly. Will be responsible for five paid subscriptions for one year, and this no matter whether my suggestions are followed or not, just so you and Lillian run it in a manner you think best."

[Would say that Lillian intends to take a rest, for some months at least; hence the entire responsibility will be borne by yours truly.—M. H.]

Myra Pepper, Miami, I. T.: "Shall Lucifer be continued? By all means. It is the only representative of the all-embracing idea of [individual] sex-ownership, and there ought to be enough women in the United States who would co-operate to the extent of keeping Lucifer alive. (2) In the United States. Several foreign countries are getting ahead of us in freedom now. We don't want to move all our radical publications to Canada or anywhere else. (3) Lucifer the Light Bearer. Any change would seem to me a concession to the enemies who appear to take offense at the name but who in reality are fighting its principles. As to price, anything that will enable the publishers to live in comfort and supply the paper to its patrons. Nothing less than a dollar. (5) Weekly if possible; if not, fortnightly. Will add that I expect to be a life subscriber; will pay for one copy and more if able."

Ed. Secrest, Randolph, Kan.: "Your note with enclosed copy of Lucifer is at hand, and I gladly note your safe arrival home, refreshed, I hope, in body and mind, and ready to enter again, booted and spurred, your chosen arena, to fight undaunted the battle of humanity against inherited and intrenched wrong. You may be sure that I take an intense interest in the welfare and success of Lucifer and the principles it stands for. I was particularly pleased to see your editorial on the 'Socialist Convention.' Your paper was about the first one outside of the social party organs that alluded to the occurrence that came under my observation. So heavily rests the hand of plutocracy upon the muzzled mouth of the metropolitan press, and so completely has the Associated Press sold out its heart, soul, hair, hide, body and breeches to capitalism, that barely an allusion to this national gathering at Chicago reached the general public.

"Now, as to the questions propounded to your friends and patrons. For myself I should favor (1) the continuation of Lucifer. (2) Its publication as heretofore in Chicago, the center of Liberalism in the great Middle West, and the metropolis of the mighty Mississippi basin. (3) In order to yield a mite to the bitter prejudices and unreasoning fanaticism of the orthodox masses, I would consider it the part of wisdom to change the name Lucifer into Light Bearer. (4) A fortnightly issue at $1 per annum.

"And may I humbly submit a suggestion that I think will find a ready response by more than one of Lucifer's friends, viz., put your editorial foot on some of the long-winded correspondents. Give us articles full of vim and vigor, but boil 'er down to short, sharp and decisive mind food.

"The paper is too small, life too short and time too precious to wade through endless columns of stuff, much of which, vitriolic personalities especially, might well wander into the waste basket."

Emeline A. Prescott, Hallowell, Me.: (1) Yes. (2) Yes. (3) Lucifer. (4) $1. (6) Fortnightly. (6) One. I am a deep sympathizer; can do but little more; my will is good.

E. L. Small, North Truro, Mass.: "No 1013 at hand and very interesting. As you recall I have been a subscriber for many years—sometimes in arrears and sometimes not, but never out of debt since my oldest boy was born. He is now coming 16, as tall as myself. As to Lucifer's course I do not feel confident of being a wise counselor. From my point of view, if the name were to be changed, I would have it Lucifer alone. If it is to cease the discussion of the sex question it may very well cease to exist. You and your daughter could find other avenues of access to the people's mind. If the strain of publication could be eased by removal to other dominion, I see no great objection to that, provided it can be established in a climate favorable to your health. What about the possibilities of Mexico? As to giving up the name Lucifer I do not regard it as a surrender to superstition but only a judicious recognition of the fact. I shall continue to take one copy as long as I can pay for it, and as to whether it is weekly or less often can certainly best be decided in the office. It would seem to me better to reach a larger number less often than a less number more often.

Amy Odell, St. Paul, Kan.: (1) Yes, if possible. (2) United States preferred. (3) I like its present name. (4) $1.00 if possible. (5) As the publishers think best. I enclose $1.00 for subscription, as mine is out with No. 1014. Also 10 cents, for which please send copy of No. 1012 to S. P. M., Baxter Springs, Kansas. Yes, I want Lucifer as long as I'm able to raise chickens to pay for it, and when I can't raise chickens I want it anyway as long as I can read, and can get the price of it."

Elsie Cole Wilcox, Bellingham, Wash.: "Am more than glad to see the little 'Son of the Morning' out again. Have been waiting for its revival to send in my subscription. Have also succeeded in getting one new subscriber, and hope to have another before long. Enclosed find postoffice order for two dollars for which continue Lucifer to me one year and send and additional copy for Mrs. J. E. E.

"Now to the questions regarding the publication of Lucifer. I do not feel entitled to much of a 'say' about it as I cannot promise more than one subscription, but as an expression of opinion and preference would say: By all means continue the paper if possible, and in the United States. Although the country matters little, yet it seems more like our paper if published here. 'What's in a name?' My choice is for Lucifer, but if it can do more good under another name, why, 'A rose by any other name would smell as sweet. Do not put the price above $1 per annum. Publish as often as possible with that amount of money; I should say not less than fortnightly, and above all keep the subject matter along the same old lines. Lucifer's mission is to work for the emancipation of woman from sex slavery and when it deviates from that course its mission is ended. There are papers enough that deal with every other subject under the sun, but only one Lucifer. Let Lucifer be 'The Light Bearer' if it seems best, but let it light up the dark pathway of sexology."

* * *

Many more responses have been received, equally encouraging. Will say to those whose letters are not publishd that little or no discrimination has been used in the selection—"first come, first served," being, to a large extent the rule, and yet I think the letters herein given are fairly representative of those not printed. Next issue will probably contain other samples from the budget of responses.

M. HARMAN.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

MOSES HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED FORTNIGHTLY AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO ILLINOIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year.....$1.00 Three months.....25 cents
Six months.....50 cents Single copies.....5 cents

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire notify us if you wish to continue to receive Lucifer.

EASTERN REPRESENTATIVE:
E. C. WALKER, 244 WEST 143D STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

THIRD SERIES. VOL. VIII. NO. 13.

THE OUTLOOK.

Since No. 1012 went to press the outlook for Lucifer has very materially improved in nearly all respects. Expressions of thanks for prompt responses to questions and for financial aid to pay up balances due on bills for printer's supplies, for typesetting, mailing, etc., while very natural and very customary are also somewhat old-fashioned and anachronous when it is remembered that Lucifer belongs to its subscribers and helpers rather than to a single publisher or a small syndicate of publishers. With this view of the case it would seem like an assumption of egotistic superiority of right to thank the subscribers and friends of Lucifer for their efforts to sustain their own enterprise, their own central or pivoted work.

In last issue the plan of making special appeals for aid to keep the publication alive was discouraged. Now, without any suggestion from this office, a few old-time friends of radical reform, in New York, have decided to send out a brief statement of the needs of this office, as a circular letter to such of Lucifer's subscribers as have shown special interest in its central propaganda. This circular letter will ask all contributions to a sustaining fund, to be sent to Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., 120 Lexington avenue, New York, who has consented to act as treasurer of this fund.

Altogether it would seem that the confidence expressed in last issue that Lucifer's friends would not consent to let it die, was not misplaced confidence.

M. HARMAN.

Subscribers who receive more than one copy of Lucifer, when not ordered, will please use the extra copy or copies to induce their friends to subscribe, if only for a trial trip of three months for 25 cents. Stamps received in payment. As the paper weighs less than one ounce a copy can sent to a friend in a common 2 cent letter, with an ordinary sized sheet of note paper.

The essay, or lecture, entitled "The Right to Be Born Well," the second installment of which appears in this issue, has received so many commendations that I am moved to ask, how many readers would like one or more copies thereof in pamphlet form? The essay will run through several more numbers of the paper and would make a pamphlet of perhaps fifty or sixty pages of medium size, worth, say, 15 or 20 cents each. If the type be kept out of the melting pot until all the parts are printed in Lucifer it would materially lessen the cost. For this reason I would be glad to know, soon, whether there are sufficient calls to justify putting it in pamphlet form.

COLONIZATION ON THE PACIFIC COAST.

Press of other work has again compelled postponement of the "colony number" of Lucifer. Meantime materials are being collected which it is hoped, when published, will compensate our friends for the temporary delay. That these materials may be abundant, comprehensive and various our friends everywhere are requested to send brief statements of what they know of the particular advantages of each section of the U. S., also of other lands for colonization purposes.

The series of articles now running in Lucifer, entitled "How to Colonize California," were published some years ago, in a magazine called "The Land of Sunshine," and are republished now mainly for the purpose of showing what has been done, and what is possible to be done, on a large scale, to draw people away from the engorged centers of population and get them planted upon the soil, and under conditions that will free the workers from the cut-throat competition to get a chance to sell their labor—which often means a chance to sell their bodies, their minds and souls for shelter and their daily bread.

Again the forbearance of our friends interested in colonization is asked, until the present pressure of other matters is somewhat relieved.

M. H.

WHAT LUCIFER STANDS FOR.

While sending answers to questions in No. 1013, one of Lucifer's most earnest and helpful friends makes this suggestion:

"I suggest that each issue explain the meaning of the word Lucifer. Also in each issue and at some length explain what the paper stands for. Mention the present condition of unhappy homes. Give some statistics touching upon marriage and divorce—insanity, murder, suicide—and connect them with the sex question. Make it plain that Lucifer stands for the elimination of these ills and make the world happier, more moral and better."

First, let me say that on the editorial page of each issue of this paper appears, under the head "Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose," a brief but comprehensive explanation of the origin and true meaning of the name adopted, more than twenty years ago, as the most suitable, all things considered, for a paper devoted to a thorough, fearless, uncompromising investigation of the basic problems of human life, and especially to the unveiling of subjects we have all been taught to regard as too sacred, else too vile, to be spoken of in public, either from the platform or in a public journal.

Inasmuch as the question of name has once more been opened, and inasmuch as in former issues I have given, at much length, my reasons for this name, I now prefer to say but little, desiring that others do the talking, only asking that as little space as possible be used for this purpose. That there is much in a name is silently if not audibly admitted by all. We have all heard how a really innocent dog once lost his life because, in sport, some one yelled out, "Bad dog!" This cry was passed along, and as the animal was seen running at full speed from his tormentors the cry soon changed to "Mad dog!"—which name meant "sentenced to a speedy death!"

Not only dogs but human beings have often been put to death simply because of a name—such as "heretic," "infidel," "atheist," "traitor," "abolitionist," "rapist," when the victim was wholly guiltless of wrong, even in thought.

But while preferring that others should do the talking it may not be amiss to call attention to the fact that what is called in church circles the "higher criticism" has stripped the old-time superstitions of most of their terrors, including the superstitions in regard to gods, demons, hells, heavens, etc. What was once regarded as authentic history is now shown to be simply the crude imaginings of ignorant, unphilosophic and unscientic minds, added to and exaggerated from age to age by a class of men whose interest it was and still is to keep the masses in ignorance and fear.

As an instance of this evolution of thought touching these old-time myths and fables, take a sermon by the Rev. Thomas B. Gregory, a prominent writer for the editorial sections of the Hearst syndicate of papers. The main purpose of this sermon, as shown by extracts given in Lucifer some months ago, was to inspire courage in the minds of the faint-hearted and despairing. In just so many words this reverend editorial writer advised his readers to study and profit by the example of "Satan," as given in Milton's Paradise Lost. "Emulate," said he, "the character of Satan, who, when the battle went most hopelessly against him, simply gritted his teeth and resolved, more courageously than ever resolved, never to yield, but to fight on and conquer, or die in the attempt."

Rev. Gregory is right in this view of the character given by Milton to his chief hero in that most famous of all the Christian epics, "Paradise Lost." Milton was himself a great admirer and champion of liberty, of independence, and a most resolute foe of all paternalistic despotisms, such as that enforced in the fabled Garden of Eden, and in the equally fabulous "Heaven" of ancient religious cults; and he seems to have clothed his hero Satan with his own ideas of what a faultless champion of liberty, of truth and of justice should be.

Has it not often occurred to many if not most of my readers that if Paradise was Lost, then its founder, its creator, Yaveh—or as commonly spelled Jehovah—must have been beaten, and that Satan was the victor? And has it not occurred to many that we, all of us, have good reason to rejoice that this mythical battle was lost by Yaveh and won by Satan?

Yaveh wanted his children always to remain children, always to remain ignorant. Child-like simplicity, coupled with blind, unquestioning obedience, was to be the chief characteristic of their lives. "In the day thou eatest of the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt surely die!"

Satan told a different story, and told the truth! "Thou shalt not surely die." Satan always told the truth, notwithstanding the saying attributed to Jesus that Satan was the "Father of Lies"; always told the truth, whereas his old antagonist, Yaveh, often resorted to and defended the use of falsehood.

If, then, it could be shown that Lucifer means Satan " is not a fact to be ashamed of, but rather to be proud of.

Even Webster's Dictionary—notwithstanding the fact that it has been so often revised and emasculated, by Rev. Goodrich and others, that the work as it came from the hands of its comparatively free and independent author, is quite another book, defends the names of Lucifer and Satan from the slur and calumnies of the priestly champions of Yaveh. See the word "Lucifer," page 992, Webster's Unabridged, edition of 1886, Merriam & Co., Springfield, Mass. Webster's first and principal definition of Lucifer is, "The planet Venus, when appearing as the morning star—also applied, in Isaiah, by a bold metaphor, to the King of Babylon." See also the rebuke administered by Commentator Henderson, on the same page, when he says:

"The application of this passage [in Isaiah] to Satan and the apostate angels, is one of those gross perversions of sacred writ which so extensively obtain, and which are to be traced to a proneness to seek for more in a given passage than it really contains—a disposition to be influenced by sound rather than sense, and an implicit faith in received interpretations."

Another commentator, Yonge (see page 1,621 of same edition), says:

"Lucifer is, in fact, no profane or satanic title. It is the Latin *Lucifer*us, the light-bringer, the morning star, equivalent to the Greek Phosphorus, and was a Christian name in early times, borne even by one of the popes. It only acquired its present association from the apostrophe of the ruined King of Babylon, in Isaiah, as a fallen star: 'How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning!' Thence as this destruction was [thought to be] assuredly a type of the fall of Satan, Milton took Lucifer as the title of his demon of pride, and this name of the pure pale herald of daylight has become hateful to Christian ears."

The word "demon," from the Greek daimon, a "divinity," is another of the misused words. The word "pride," too, to many Christian ears has an evil significance, whereas the character of Satan as given by Milton is that of a mind so lofty, so true to itself, that it will not stoop to falsehood, nor to any act of dishonor. In fact, the first etymologic meaning given to "pride" by Webster, is honor!

Again I have allowed my pen to run away with me. My excuse, if one be needed, is that I wanted to show beyond the possibility of doubt, that if Lucifer and Satan mean the same character, then that character is eminently typical of what I want, and have always wanted, the paper called Lucifer to be, namely:

THE TRUTH TELLER—"

the defender of liberty, of the right to self-ownership, the uncompromising, the undaunted, the unconquered and unconquerable foe of injustice, of inequity, of despotism, of all slaveries, whether physical, moral or mental.

This, then, is what the paper Lucifer the Light Bearer "stands for." This is what the name means, but if good and true women and men can show good reason why, after more than two decades of conflict with the "powers that be"—that is, with the powers represented by the "three G's," God, Government and Grundy, God meaning the clergy, Government meaning the organized State, and Grundy meaning conventional public opinion (the last the most powerful of the three)—if women and men, good and true, can show sufficient reason why a change should be made in the name that has floated so long at the mast-head, then let the change be made.

The polls are still open. Many have voted, but there are more that have not yet been heard from.

M. HARMAN.

LUCIFER AND THE POSTAL CENSORSHIP.

Until too late for insertion in No. 1012 my attention had not been called to the statement by Dr. Immanuel Pfeiffer of what he did in Washington, D. C., in behalf of Lucifer and for the cause of free speech and free press in general. It seems Dr. Pfeiffer of Boston, editor of the magazine "Our Home-Rights," has been selected by the members of the Free Speech League, whose treasurer is Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., of New York, to represent them and their work in Washington and to make an effort to secure such action by the present Congress of the United States in regard to the immigration laws that "a repetition of the John Turner outrage would be impossible."

The following is part of a letter writen by Dr. Pfeiffer and published in the New York Truth Seeker of April 2:

"It is a matter of education. We have found a member of the immigration committee who will introduce a bill giving some relief, and the chairman of the committee has promised me a hearing. Quite a number of members have promised to help me as far as they can. Anyway, Washington and Congress will know that there is a powerful organized effort to oppose the government's interference with free thought and free speech, and I believe we will eventually be successful.

"I had quite a battle at the postoffice department a few days ago. Acting Postmaster-General Wynne was looking for a hole to crawl into when I had finished my statement of what I thought of him and his administration. I forced a confession that a December edition of Lucifer by order of the postmaster-general had been sent to the dead-letter office and destroyed. How? By putting it among 'waste paper.' I did not succeed in finding out what becomes of the waste paper, but I was told it was not burned. One of the matters marked 'obscene' was an advertisement offering for sale Ida Craddock's picture. Our postoffice censorship is not content with withholding and destroying citizens' mail on its own narrow interpretation of the law, but it evidently proposes also to suppress any reference to the fact that there is a postal censorship.

"I had things pretty near my own way for a couple of hours, and those in power were hunting high and low in the statutes to show me authority for their action. They did not succeed very well. General Wynne kept on telling me that we could 'bring the matter into court.' I told him that if he had done his duty there would be no need of going into court. I said: 'It is an easy matter for the wrong-doer to cry, "You can sue me," but it costs money to go to law.' I had written a letter to General Wynne on Feb. 25 (the destruction of Lucifer took place the latter part of January), in which I used language to the effect that if he did not reform he and his gang of ignoramuses and his stupid way of doing business would be shown up to the American people. General Wynne read this part of my letter to me in a low voice, and I told him that, from the facts I had learned to-day of the government unlawfully destroying the property of people, my opinion expressed in my letter had been still more fully confirmed, and I was glad I had an opportunity to express this opinion in person. I told him I was ashamed to call myself an American citizen with such men as he in power. I am only sorry I did not have a larger audience.

"Had I the money at my command I would hold the Postoffice Department responsible for its outrageous act, by bringing suit. When I represented Lucifer in a hearing before General Madden, third assistant postmaster-general, I was treated with respect and the restoration to second-class of that paper showed the disposition to correct an error."

This letter is its own sufficient explanation. Until I saw it in the Truth Seeker I was left to suppose that No. 1000 of Lucifer, Dec. 17, 1903, was still in the custody of Postmaster Coyne of Chicago, subject to the order of the postmaster-general at Washington, and that there was still grounds of hope that orders would soon be issued that said number should be sent to the subscribers who had paid their money therefor.

If Dr. Pfeiffer is rightly informed, then no possibility remains that our subscribers will ever see their property in that issue, unless the matter is again put in type, printed and sent out through the mails or by some other means.

So far as I know, this action of the postoffice department is wholly without precedent. It has been charged by the opposition journals that Theodore Roosevelt has been guilty of acts of usurpation of power that no previous president of the United States had ever done. As the postmaster-general is simply the servant of the president, it follows that whatever is done by the postoffice department is done by the president himself.

The following letter, just received, shows how one at least of Lucifer's subscribers looks upon this act of our national administration:

"Charleston, W. Va., May 18, 1904.

"Editor Lucifer—Dear Sir: I was rejoiced to receive a copy of Lucifer once more. I trust you will not have to suspend again. For though I can see no sense in Anarchy I am interested in the other questions you discuss. I think them important, and well handled. I am open to conviction on any and all subjects. I will exercise my own judgment, and grant every other the same privilege. I have written the postmaster-general that I want my copy of the issue of Dec. 17, 1903. I enclose copy of letter. Also $1—renewal.

"Your friend,

"Tom Swinburn."

Here follows a copy of the letter referred to:

"Charleston, W. Va., May 18, 1904.

"Postmaster-General, Washington, D. C.—Sir: I have been a subscriber of 'Lucifer the Light Bearer,' published at 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill., for several years, and keep my copies for binding. I lack the issue of Dec. 17, 1903. I see by the last issue that it is held by postal authorities on the ground of alleged immoral contents. I once stopped a local paper coming into my house for an immoral editorial, and would stop this or any other for the same reason, did I know it to exist.

"I am 64 years of age, the father of six children and grandfather of nine, all respectable. I have held positions of responsibility in my community. I shed my blood for the preservation of this union, and am honored by a pension from my government. I regard myself as competent to judge of what is fit for my family to read. I have paid for that issue. I want it to complete my file. I demand it. Can I have it?

"Yours respectfully,

"Tom Swinburn."

While in Topeka, Kan., a few weeks ago I called upon a leading lawyer of that city and asked for his advice as to what could or should be done to recover our property unlawfully and unjustly held by the postoffice officials. His advice was substantially this:

"Institute mandamus proceedings in the proper court for the restoration of property rights. If this is too expensive, then let each subscriber who wants that particular issue write to the postmaster-general, demanding that he give orders to have the paper now held in the Chicago postoffice sent to the subscribers, else show good reason why it cannot be so sent. If the postmaster-general should pay no attention to these demands, then bring the matter to the attention of President Roosevelt, direct, as the chief guardian of the rights of the people."

When in San Francisco a meeting was held to protest against the treatment to which Lucifer, "Freedom" of Seabreeze, Fla., and other reform journals have received from the postoffice department. Typewritten copies of the proceedings of that meeting were sent in registered letters to President Roosevelt and to the congressman from the San Francisco district. Return cards were received by the sender, showing that these letters were delivered to the congressman and to Roosevelt's private secretary.

Whether Mr. Swinburn registered his letter to the postmaster-general he does not say, but I would suggest the propriety of doing so when writing to public servants. So long have these servants regarded themselves as the rulers, and the common people as their subjects that all possible precautions should be taken against miscarriage of the documents sent by the citizen to his agent at what should be and not the "general government," at Washington, D. C.

THE GENERAL AGENCY,

If our agents at Washington are allowed to destroy the private and personal property of the citizen without even the trouble of giving the reasons of their action, is it not about time to inquire whether we are living in a republic of equal rights or under an absolute monarchy?

In conclusion, for this time, I wish to return sincerest thanks to Dr. Pfeiffer and to the members of the Free Speech League for their efforts in behalf of liberty and justice in general, and in behalf of our little journal in particular, and as a slight token of our gratitude for such service in the cause of human rights I hereby move that every reader of Lucifer who can possibly spare a dollar should at once send that dollar to Dr. E. B. Foote, whose statement in regard to the present work of the Free Speech League will be found elsewhere in this issue, under the head "What We Are Doing for the United States."

M. Harman.

HOW TO COLONIZE CALIFORNIA.

(Continued from page 91.)

The village community enjoys many facilities entirely beyond the reach of ordinary farmers. They have a common system of domestic water supply, which is cheaper and more satisfactory than individual wells. They light their houses with electricity, enjoy good streets, sidewalks and parks, and have a public building which includes auditorium, library and clubrooms for both men and women. Furthermore, the presence of such a population, living in the midst of such advantages, must in time create values for town property which will enrich the community. If Horace Greeley's wise plan be adopted, as in the case of his famous Colorado settlement, profits from this source will be available for public improvements.

The government? There is nothing better for small communities than the New England town meeting, but it cannot be safely trusted with the powers of administration until the community is well established and past the dangers sure to surround its pathway during the first few years. Until the lands are all sold, until the farms have become self-sustaining, and until the community indebtedness is wiped out or perfectly secured, the founders of the colony retain absolute control of its affairs. This authority is exercised by a single individual—the executive selected by the founders. Those who cannot agree to this plan are not invited to join. Long and bitter experience has shown that it is for the best interests of the settlers themselves that superior ability should be in a position of secure control during the formative period at least. The town meeting rules in New England to-day, but the Massachusetts Bay Company was all-powerful until communities were thoroughly established.

Such a colony plan as this meets the industrial and social needs of the time. Thousands will gladly join it if they have confidence in its management. None of its principles are untried. Some of them have been demonstrated at Greeley, others in Utah, still others in Southern California.

THE PLAN IN OPERATION.

How can such a plan be practically realized by the associated land interests of California? The question can be answered here only in the briefest way.

Let them select a tract of, say, 15,500 acres where all conditions of soil, water, transportation, and markets are favorable. Let this tract be subdivided and set apart as follows: For townsite, 500 acres; for independent settlers, 6,000 acres; for non-residents, 6,000 acres; for borrowers, 3,000 acres.

The independents buy their land and pay for it like ordinary settlers. This feature requires no explanation.

The non-residents pay for their land on installments extending over, say, four years. The price they pay includes improvements, such as clearing, plowing, fencing, planting, and care of crops until they reach maturity. It would be feasible to extend improvements to building a house and barn, which would increase the purchase price in proportion. But aside from house and barn it is probable that about $30 per acre will have to be expended in improvements and care to bring the place to maturity by the time installment payments are complete. That is to say, a total of $180,000 will be collected for the improvement of the 6,000 acres set apart for non-residents. Almost the entire sum will be paid out for labor of men and teams.

There has been reserved for borrowers 3,000 acres, which will accommodate 150 families on 20-acre farms. These borrowers reach the colony with little capital—possibly with none to speak of. They require a loan of, say, $1,000 each, or a total of $150,000. This is sufficient to pay for their land and interest in colony property, on the basis of $20* an acre for the one and $10 a share for the other; to provide shelter; to grade and fence land; to buy seed and nursery stock, team, implements, poultry, and one or two cows. These things constitute the foundation of a home and future independence. They leave no margin for the support of the borrowers while their lands are coming into bearing. How is this support to be provided? From the proceeds arising from the labor of this class of settlers. They will be employed a large part of the time in improving the lands of the non-residents, for which $180,000 will be paid, chiefly for labor. They will also be employed in improving townsite, erecting public buildings and industries, and creating public utilities, such as the system for domestic water supply. Not less than $100,000 will have to be expended in these ways. Of this amount at least 75 per cent will go to labor. Adding this $75,000 to the sum of $180,000, to be paid by non-residents, makes a total of $255,000 available for the employment of the borrowers. Spread this over four years and it amounts to $63,750 per year. Dividing this by 150 families gives $450 per year for each family. At the end of four years the borrowers will be self-sustaining. Many will be earlier.

The colony requires a capital of $250,000, to be expended about as follows: Loans to settlers, $150,000; townsite improvements, $25,000; industrial plants, $25,000; light and water plants, $25,000; working capital, stores, industries, etc., $25,000.

The proper expenditure of this fund will create one of the most beautiful colony centers that ever blossomed on the face of the earth. It will have all the improvements of the best modern town, together with commercial machinery for the purchase of supplies and sale of products on the best possible terms. —"Land of Sunshine," Los Angeles, Cal.

*The richest land and best water supply in California (on the Colorado Delta) may be had for $20 per acre. Some of the finest lands under the Turlock system, in Stanislaus County, and some of the best in Glenn County, are offered at this price. When higher priced lands are to be sold the borrowers must possess some capital of their own, or borrow more money from the fund, or defer some of their purchases of implements and live stock until they have saved money from their wages. Aside from some spare time of their own, they can count on the assistance of their families in improving their places, or upon income earned by their family in other work.

(To be concluded.)

VARIOUS VOICES.

We are always glad to receive calls from friends visiting the city. Take the Lake street elevated, stop at Ashland avenue, walk one block east, then one block north. Or take Fulton street electric car west and stop at St. John's place, alighting in front of our house. The Lake street electric and Paulina street cars also pass within a block of our residence.

When writing on business of any kind, please do not forget to enclose a stamp for catalogue of books and pamphlets on sale at this office.

Lizzie M. Holmes, La Veta, Colo.: "Let Lucifer be continued, if possible, in any sense. Let it be published in this country. All means for doing so are not exhausted yet. Let it be called Lucifer the Light Bearer, as heretofore. Then in my opinion a dollar a year for a fortnightly appearance would be wise. I certainly want to receive the paper as long as I live. I send a dollar to renew."

C. V. Cook, San Francisco, Cal., 217 Parrott Bldg.: "Please continue my subscription to Lucifer. I will do all that I can to get a line of prompt requests for subscriptions. Hoping for renewed success, yours truly."

S. F. Ralston, Choteau, Mont.: "Glad to know that you have returned from your western trip and hope in improved health. My health has been very poor for some time past, partly due to old age, as I am but little younger than yourself, hence my neglect of Lucifer, for I expect to take it as long as I live or it is published. Enclosed find three dollars and fifty cents, for which send Lucifer to F. T., Choteau, Mont., one dollar's worth, and credit my subscription with the balance."

Leo Rosenthal, Paterson, N. J.: "What is there in a name?" asked the great bard, but because of the name of your publication I long hesitated to write to you. I am not a church man, and, as you would say, not afraid of the devil himself; but to make the acquaintance of Lucifer I did not want. Having read recently that the notorious Mr. Madden is denying you second-class rates I was convinced that there is something good in Lucifer. I believe that Mr. Madden is prejudiced against the tendency of your magazine rather than its name. I am anxious to make the acquaintance of "Lucifer."

J. W. Kelley, Marion, Ind.: I am in receipt of your favor of the 2d. In replying thereto I herewith enclose $2, to apply on my subscription. I trust your daughter is much improved in health, and that you may both live long and prosper in the good work to which you have at so much sacrifice devoted your lives. When the final word in the history of North American civilization shall have been written, I predict that the names of M. Harman and daughter will occupy a conspicuous and much-referred-to place therein, among those who have devoted their lives to the making of this a better world in which to live.

Photographs of Moses Harman, taken in San Francisco and contributed by the photographer to be sold for the benefit of Lucifer, may be ordered of Moses Harman. See address in another column. Price, 25 cents.

MISCELLANEOUS.

GEORGE FOX, 113½ W. Huerfano st., Colorado Springs, wishes to correspond with lady of liberal mind, with view to forming business and social alliance.

WANTED—To correspond with people desiring to join a Nature Colony in Southern California. Perfect climate; magnificent view; located at foot of Mt. Lowe. No users of liquor, tobacco, meat or corsets need apply. Address MRS. MAUD JOHNSON, Station A, Pasadena, Cal.

BUT ONE SANTA CLARA VALLEY.

SAN JOSE (HOSAY) IN THE CENTRE. POP., 37,000.

Write for particulars about the most beautiful orchard homes and the most delightful climate in the world. The foothills and mountains are clothed in green and are the home of the vine and fruit tree. No irrigation necessary. Fifty miles from San Francisco. Descriptive literature free on application to

W. S. ORVIS, Land Agent and Colonizer, No. 7 North First St., San Jose, Cal.

SYSTEM-ENERGY

PFEIFFER PRINCIPLE

Based upon the laws of Psychology and Physiology.

TEN TYPEWRITTEN LESSONS, $10.

Contains such information as cannot be obtained in any other way. They give the key to nature and tell you how to live and be healthy even in old age. When you have mastered the Pfeiffer Principle you can defy disease and will be master of conditions. When we consider that Health is Wealth, who will hesitate to invest $10.00 for teachings worth a fortune? Address

OUR HOME RIGHTS PUBLISHING CO.,
BEDFORD, MASS.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 63, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We cannot sell her books, but you may have her picture and Judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 20c each, two for 50c. Address EDWIN C. WALKER, 244 W. 143d St., New York, N. Y.

WANTED—100 women to study medicine or midwifery. Next term begins January 1, 1904. College of Medicine and Surgery, 245 Ashland Blvd., Chicago, Ill. DR. FLORENCE DRESSLER, Secretary. (Dept. A.)

WHAT WE ARE DOING FOR THE UNITED STATES.

The Free Press League has raised a small fund for the special purpose of maintaining a good man at Washington during the present session of Congress, to work in every legitimate way for more liberal immigration laws. There is a chance that the present "tangle," or inconsistent legislation, may be straightened out without any relief as to exclusion of foreigners "for opinions' sake," unless we are vigilant and active and insistent. Those who feel, as some of us do, the disgrace of present laws, may be disposed to aid us in the increase of this special fund, and the treasurer will be pleased to receive their contributions. Had we been properly vigilant a year ago we might have nipped this evil legislation in the bud, but until it shall be repealed or modified in accord with fundamental American principles we are in duty bound to protest, work, and help the effort to set things right.

Please consider this a personal call or appeal, and respond promptly, for in our work during the present session of Congress it is now or never, and we wish to maintain our influence there to the end. E. B. FOOTE, JR., Treasurer.

120 Lexington avenue, New York.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD OWN

TOKOLOGY.

A COMPLETE HEALTH GUIDE.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

Teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions.

Treats of diseases of women and children; contains practical teachings on Change of Life, limiting offspring, etc.

Lizzie N. Armstrong writes: "If I knew I were to be the mother of innumerable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of Tokology."

Dr. C. R. Willis: "Tokology is doing more for women than all other books put together."

CLOTH, PREPAID, $2.25; LEATHER, $2.75.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

TRUE MANHOOD.

AN INVALUABLE GUIDE TO HEALTH, STRENGTH AND PURITY.

BY E. B. SHEPHERD.

WHAT EVERY FATHER WANTS HIS BOY TO KNOW.

The Christian Endeavor World: "Its suggestions are wise and ennobling." Dr. Stockham, author of Tokology, says: "TRUE MANHOOD explains the transition from boyhood to manhood, giving knowledge of priceless value."

Levant cloth, 328 pages. Prepaid $1. STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

A treatise on Sexual Science and Marriage, rich in thought and strong in expression. Emphatically a book for the thinker.

Carpenter holds that woman's freedom is based upon economics; she must be independent financially that she may not be forced to sell herself in or out of marriage. He also makes a strong plea for a motherhood of freedom and thoughtful preparation.

AMERICAN EDITION, CLOTH, PREPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

CREATIVE LIFE.

A BOOK FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

A timely and important message not found in text books. Every girl seeks and should have this true, plain and practical knowledge. One writes: "Thank you, thank you, dear Doctor, for the plain but beautiful thoughts. Womanhood, motherhood and life have new meanings. You ennoble your theme." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

A NOVEL BY GEORGE N. MILLER.

FORTIETH THOUSAND.

"The Strike of a Sex" is a fascinating novel bearing upon the sexual relations. It is a bold protest against the customary life of most married people, and at the same time a prophecy of happier conditions between man and wife. Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

SONGS OF A CHILD,
AND OTHER POEMS.

By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. Price $1.50; postage 12c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1. M. HARMAN, 509 Fulton St., Chicago.

1014

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

KAREZZA.

SCIENCE OF MARRIAGE.

A godsend to every wife—a joy to every husband.

This work brings peace into homes disrupted by inharmony in the sexual relation. Dr. A. B. Stockham advises a practice which leads to individual liberty and to deeper love between husband and wife.

Dr. F. G. Welch: "After a personal trial of its teachings, I want to thank you for a great service to humanity."

Rev. George H. Hanshaw: "Out of a beautiful and ennobling experience, I can say, I KNOW."

Gives a high ideal of the marital relation and teaches control of the Procreating Power.

J. A. Smalley, M. D.: "I have received more actual benefit from the practice of KAREZZA teachings than from all other books on Sexual Science."

A. B. Franklin, M. D.: "KAREZZA does more than any other single thing to make marriage a perpetual courtship."

LEVANT CLOTH, POSTPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

JUST OUT.

PARENTHOOD.

By Alice B. Stockham, M. D., author of "Tokology" and "Karezza." Highest ideals for best offspring. Vital and important subjects discussed, including new philosophy of the Creative Energy. G. G. Hunt says: "Many sentences of PARENTHOOD should be graven in gold and handed down to posterity." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

One of the best short works on the subject. A charming little gift book. "Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it."

DAINTILY PRINTED. PREPAID, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY, AND THE STATE.

BY FREDERICK ENGELS.

Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans.

217 pages; bound in cloth. Price 60c; postage 5c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MEN, WOMEN, AND CHANCE.

BY WILLIAM PLATT.

Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. Price 75c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

"PERSONAL EXPERIENCES OF TWO AMERICAN ANTI-VIVISECTIONISTS IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES."

BY PHILIP G. PEABODY.

With an Appendix by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c. Apply to PHILIP G. PEABODY, 15 Court Square, Boston, Mass.

THE STORY OF IJAIN;

OR, THE EVOLUTION OF A MIND.

By Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Eraldis" (W. Stuart Ross), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. Price $1; postage 8c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

ISOLA; OR, THE DISINHERITED.

A drama in six acts. By Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1; postage 7c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

THE LIBERAL MAIL-ORDER JEWELER.

Now permanent at No. 110 N. Kensington Ave., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 20 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's Line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Thelma in the Crucible," free.

J. H. GREER, M. D.,
52 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.

Office Hours—9 a. m. to 6 p. m.; Wednesdays and Saturdays, 9 a. m. to 8 p. m.; Sundays, 9 a. m. to 12 m.

Telephone, Randolph 42.

DR. OGILVIE A. RICE,
DENTIST.
1356 MILWAUKEE AVE., COR. WESTERN, CHICAGO.

Telephone West 141.

PHILIP G. PEABODY,
ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.
15 COURT SQUARE, ROOM 61.
BOSTON, MASS.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

PRICE FIVE CENTS. CHICAGO, ILL., JUNE 9, E. M. 304. [C. E. 1904.] WHOLE NO. 1015

SHAFTS OF TRUTH.

Women! who shall one day bear
Sons to breathe New England air,
If you hear without a blush
Deeds to make the roused blood rush
Like red lava through your veins,
For your sisters now in chains,
Answer! are ye fit to be Mothers of the brave and free?

—Whittier.

COLONIES AND COLONIZATION.

The history of this world's progress is largely a history of colonies, and of colonization schemes. Greece was colonized by adventurers from Egypt and from Western Asia, and the result was a civilization that for more than two thousand years has served as a model for later aggregations of human beings to pattern after.

Rome was colonized, founded, by a gang of brigands who captured their wives by strategy and held them by force. Carthage was colonized by Phoenicians from Tyre, and these two colonies, near neighbors and rivals, for centuries schemed and fought for the supremacy of the then known world.

The nation called the United States of America is the result of colonization schemes and efforts by the more enterprising, the more courageous, the more reckless and venturesome of the peoples inhabiting Western Europe.

To-day the most interesting, because most progressive, of political aggregations, New Zealand and Australia, are the result of the more recent attempts at colonization on a large scale. These countries have been settled by civilized people mainly within the recollection of hundreds now living, and mainly by the more virile, more courageous and enterprising of the Anglo-Saxon race. Warned by her experience in trying to govern the thirteen rebellious American colonies, the "Mother Country" has allowed its later colonies to do pretty much as they pleased, with the result that political and economic reforms have been successfully inaugurated there that would scarcely have been tolerated by any well-established government on earth.

But we do not need to go to the Antipodes for illustrations. The same spirit of adventure, of dissatisfaction with the artificial restriction and limitations of older communities and of long-established castes and customs, that led to the successful colonization of Athens, of Rome, of Carthage, of New England, of New York, of New Orleans, of Chicago, St. Louis and of the great "Middle West" generally, and also of Australia and New Zealand, these same causes have led to the colonization of California, of Oregon, of Washington and of British Columbia.

Within the memory of thousands now living Oregon and California were nearly if not quite out of the world. Before the building of the transcontinental railways a journey to the Pacific coast of North America called for courage, endurance and for sacrifices such as but few men and still fewer women were capable of exhibiting. Most of this pioneer emigration was undertaken without concert or definite plan. Men, women and children traveled in canvas-covered farm wagons drawn by oxen, mules or horses. They went in companies of a dozen or more families each simply for mutual protection against hostile Indians and more savage beasts of mountain and desert plain. Others took the longer and scarcely less dangerous route by way of the Isthmus of Panama, or of the still longer ocean voyage round Cape Horn.

When at length, after months of travel, exposed to countless dangers and privations by land or sea, the toil-worn and often ragged and penniless pilgrims reached "the land of promise," the Pacific coast, they found other hardships awaiting them. Whether they chose to follow the uncertain fortunes of the mining camp or settled down to agriculture and live stock raising, they found life a constant struggle with conditions such as were to them, for the most part, wholly unfamiliar.

But now, after the lapse of a single generation, all this has been changed. The hardships of pioneer life on the Pacific coast are practically things of the past. Instead of the five or six months of travel by sea or land, the journey from the Mississippi Valley to San Francisco or Portland is made in less than one week, with no exposure to storm or sun, with no real labor or loss of sleep, and with no wear and tear of shoes or clothing.

On leaving the comfortable "tourist sleeper" at the end of the five or six days' journey, the homeseeker finds him or herself surrounded by much the same evidences of civilization, of culture, of comfort, as those left behind in the "States" east of the Rockies. If the main object of removal to the western coast be change of climate, a home where it is always summer, or at least spring and summer, then the traveler will probably prefer to settle down in a city, town or rural community where pioneer work is no longer needed.

In most respects the newcomer will find the various gainful occupations and professions parceled out in the same way as in the older states of the American Union, and the opportunities for getting a living in these occupations and professions not essentially different from what he has been accustomed to in Eastern states, or in the Middle West.

Speaking of California alone, and of the central and southern parts thereof in particular, I would say, as it has often been said by others, its climate is the greatest asset of the "Golden State." To describe this climate in terms that will be appreciated by one accustomed to the extremes of the eastern, northern and central sections of the United States is a difficult undertaking. Only a chronic invalid, one whose health and comfort depend more on atmospheric conditions than upon anything else, can fully understand what it is to have every day so nearly like all other days that we can, with almost absolute certainty, plan to meet it, whether in matters of business, health or pleasure.

Having recently spent six months in middle and southern California, I can speak with some degree of confidence in regard to the advantages of that section of the world for colonization purposes. My sojourn on the Pacific coast began early in November and ended the latter part of April, consequently I know nothing by personal observation of what the summers there are like. But having many acquaintances, friends and relations, who have lived in California for many years I have been permitted to see through their eyes what the shortness of my stay prevented seeing with my own.

From personal observation, then, and from what I believe to be wholly reliable information gained from competent witnesses, I give it as my opinion that California is unrivaled as a land inviting the kind of settlement now generally understood by the term colonization—that is, settlement in groups by people of like opinions and aims on questions of morals, of economics, of dietetics, of hygiene, religion, local government, etc., etc.

More attempts at colonization by groups, of the kinds herein mentioned, have been made on the Pacific coast of the United States within the past twenty-five or thirty years than upon any other equal area of the earth's surface.

The series of articles entitled "How to Colonize California."

printed in recent issues of Lucifer, with more coming, is intended in good measure to show what has been done and what is possible to be done on a large scale in California and in other Western States and territories.

It is not, however, so much with the colonizing of immense tracts of land under a single management, as described by the writer in the magazine called "The Land of Sunshine," as it is with the more modest attempts, such as that briefly described in the advertisement of Mrs. Maude Johnson in this issue of Lucifer, that I am interested in just now.

During my brief stay in Southern California I called at Mrs. Johnson's "Nature Colony" and was much pleased with what I saw. Located in one of the suburbs of the aristocratic city called Pasadena, Mrs. Johnson's colonists can have the conveniences of city life combined with those of her fruit farm of twenty acres. Although the chief object of the founder is to teach and practicalize right methods of living, so as to secure the blessings of health, physical and mental, the economic and industrial problems receive attention.

As indicated by her title—Nature Colony—Mrs. Johnson aims to live as near to Mother Nature as possible—that is, to discard and eschew conventional habits and artificial customs as much as possible. One of her methods of cure for the sick is the sun-bath. I was shown a large open space upstairs where her patients expose their bodies to the direct influence of sunshine and wind.

Other places and points of interest to homeseekers, and especially to those who desire to settle in groups, will be the subject of next article on colonization in California, Oregon and Washington.

M. H.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.

R. B. Kerr, Phoenix, B. C.: "Was delighted when Lucifer arrived again yesterday, as I was afraid you would have some difficulties in starting up again. I now enclose $5, which please apply as follows:

"Send me 'Our Worship of Primitive Social Guesses,' 'Vice; Its Friends and Its Foes,' 'The Worm Turns,' and the number of Our New Humanity containing my allegory on 'The Greatest Sin.'

"Please also send Lucifer for three months to each of the persons mentioned in enclosed list. [Sixteen names of trial subscribers.]

"Dora's subscription to Lucifer is paid considerably in advance, but please tell Mr. Madden that she will certainly want to renew the paper, when her subscription expires.

"In answer to your five inquiries I would say:

"First—Lucifer the Light Bearer should be continued.

Second—It should certainly be published in the United States, for the following reasons:

"1. Women are more emancipated in thought in the U. S. than elsewhere, and therefore it is there that Lucifer is most wanted and can accomplish most. In fact the growing importance of the movement in the U. S. is one of the reasons why it is getting to be more persecuted. It is not in its first and most insignificant stage that a movement is most liable to persecution.

"2. If you did not publish in the U. S. you would have to go to some other English-speaking country; otherwise you would have no local circulation in your place of publication. But I am sure you would be no safer from persecution in Canada or Australia, and I doubt very much if you would be in New Zealand. The only possible alternative to the U. S. would be London, England; but even there persecution, though it occurs at longer intervals, is quite well known. Besides, in England you would have to put a cent stamp on every copy mailed, as all newspapers have to do; consequently you would have to rely mainly on news stores and public meetings, which are quite open to you in the U. S.

"Third—I cannot judge what prejudice there really is against the name Lucifer in America, as one must be brought up in a country to understand its prejudices. When the Theosophists published a paper of that name in England, I never heard of any one being shocked. But if the name is at all objectionable in America, it should certainly be dropped. In working for an unpopular movement one should follow the example of foot-racers and other athletes, and throw out all superfluous weight. It is quite enough for one paper to take an unpopular stand on the sex question without increasing its difficulties by being either unpopular or odd in any other particular whatsoever. Captain Adams used to say, 'Never offend public opinion in more than one way.' I think that was excellent advice, and if I were running Lucifer I should take pains to be ultra-conventional on every other subject than the sex question. For that reason I should also drop the peculiar chronology of Lucifer, and stick to the Christian era. The Brunonian era makes no enemies, but it is looked on as a fad, and thus takes a little away from your weight in dealing with your special subject. Nothing is so fatal as to be considered an all-round crank. The very most you can expect of an ordinary person is to excite his interest in one movement, but if he thinks you are trying to commit him to universal change he will drop you like a hot coal. As for Anarchism, you cannot get that out of the paper too quickly or too completely. It and the sex movement are the most unpopular of all movements, and to mix them in one paper is absolutely suicidal. The Anarchists are so few in number that there are no compensating advantages in getting their support. In any case, I do not think you get it. When we crossed from New York to Liverpool with Kropotkin in November, 1897, I spoke to him about Lucifer, expecting that as he came straight from Chicago he would at least have met you. But he told me he had never heard of either you or Lucifer. Evidently the Chicago Anarchists had been too respectable to mention you to him, although your paper was then the only Anarchist one in Chicago. So I am sure you have everything to lose, and not a single thing to gain, by running a sex reform paper with Anarchism on the side.

"It is a little different with Socialism and Secularism, because these are such big movements that something may be gained by paying some attention to them. Moreover, it is impossible to discuss the sex question without some allusion to economic and religious questions. But these questions should not be introduced to such a degree as to constitute any serious obstacle to ordinary people, without any advanced ideas, but whose attention may happen to have been drawn by experience to sexual evils, taking up Lucifer without being prejudiced.

"Fourth—Lucifer's price should on no account exceed $1 per annum.

"Fifth—A weekly issue would be much the best, but a fortnightly issue is the next best.

"By the way, to go back to the third heading, you may say that Madden would not allow you to fill the whole paper with the sex question, and that you must put in something else for padding. In that case, I suggest that you give part of your space to woman suffrage, reforms in dress, and other minor aspects of the woman question which are interesting to intelligent women, and can be discussed without fear of persecution. The legal disabilities of women, especially in regard to the possession of their children, could also be discussed without interference. In fact there are so many aspects of the sex question on which Lucifer is usually silent, that there is no occasion to draw in outside movements in order to fill space.

"Another matter I overlooked is the laziness of Lucifer's writers. For many months the paper has been made up of extracts. That will never do; you must have original articles. What has become of Walker, Ruedebusch, Lloyd, Denson, Crane, V. de Cleyre, Maud Abbey, May Huntley, Mary Brundage, Florence Johnson, Lena Belfort, Leona Mathers, and dozens of others? I think you should take energetic measures to wake all these people up."

Jonathan Mayo Crane, whose address is care of Press Club, 116 Nassau street, New York City, writes: "(1) Yes. (2) In Chicago. (3) The Light Bearer. (4) $1 per fortnightly of sixteen pages, or for monthly if not less than sixty-four pages. (5) I prefer weekly issue, but if it cannot be published so often without serious loss, a monthly issue is advisable. (6) I will pay for ten subscribtions yearly. The paper must be sustained. Its present subscribers can easily sustain it by paying their subscriptions promptly. I feel sure many subscribers would willingly pay from two to ten times the present price of the paper rather than have it discontinued. Myra Pepper writes that 'Any change [of name] would seem to me a concession to the enemies.' On the contrary, it seems to me that enemies of the paper are glad its name is Lucifer, for the popular belief that that name signifies all that is evil aids them in creating prejudice against the paper. Why should a Latin name be used when its English equivalent—the Light Bearer—more correctly explains to the masses the significance of the paper? Adherence to the Latin name is much like the Catholic Church's adherence to the Latin words in its church services. Space in the paper is too valuable to be taken up every week with explanations of what its name means, when the English translation—the Light Bearer—would explain itself. The name Lucifer invites opposition. Under the name Light Bearer the paper would have much more influence and might soon double the number of its subscribers. Latin is a dead language. Shall the most earnest advocate of the emancipation of women be 'ruled by the tomb' in the choice of a name for his paper? That name—Lucifer—is the most powerful weapon that can be used against the paper by its enemies."

Mrs. D. Pommer, New York: "I send $1 for the benefit of Lucifer. My subscription has not run out yet, so use it as you think best."

J. B. Billard, Kan.: "(1) Yes. (2) In United States. (3) The Light Bearer. (4) $1 or less. (5) Monthly. Enclosed find $2 to help bear the first expenses."

Henry Bool, New York: "I have many ways for cash outlay, but would like to see Lucifer's light kept burning. I had promised $10 a year, but will now make it $30. I now enclose the first $10."

F. H. Bergman, Chicago: "Enclosed find check for $5—money for sustaining Lucifer. The name Lucifer is good enough for me, and all who try to make 'hell' out of mother earth should be satisfied too."

F. E. Leonard, Cestos, Okla.: "(1) Would like to have it so. (2) You can decide that better than others. (3) Don't care what the name is myself. (4) Will be easier to keep subscribers and get new ones at $1 than $2. I expect to continue to take the paper if publication is continued, whatever the name, price, frequency or place of publication."

J. E. C., Wisconsin: "Replying to 'Heart to Heart Talks' in No. 1013, I enclose $1 for Lucifer's treasury. With regard to change of name, would like to see Lucifer dropped because of the prejudice against it, and Light Bearer retained. Hope the paper will be continued in some way, although I cannot promise more than two subscriptions a year to it."

Robert Greer, M. D., Chicago: "The name Lucifer does not fully express the real mission of the publication. The Biologist would better express it—devoted exclusively to the sacred rights of the unborn, with view to child culture and child building. By all means let the Biologist be published in the United States, and right here in Chicago, either weekly or fortnightly."

J. Herbert Rowell, Chicago: "Two dollars a year is cheap for Lucifer. Fortnightly is often enough. This gives you more time to get out a good sheet, and may be some leisure time which you so richly deserve. Lucifer is Lucifer; don't change the name. Might as well consider the changing of your name as to change the name of your paper. Since you have published it so long under the name of Lucifer—by all means let it go at that."

Celia B. Whitehead, Denver, Colo.: "(1) Lucifer should be continued. (2) Such rebukes as that given by Wilshire in removing to Canada are greatly needed in the United States. I do not feel competent to speak positively, but that is the way it seems to me. (3) I hope the name will not be changed. I should feel as if I had lost an old friend if Lucifer should not come. Do you not think you have lived down most of the objections to the name? and that it has called out much helpful discussion? (4) One dollar per year. (5) Once in two weeks. Wish I could respond to your need of new subscribers. Am specially interested to see what J. C. Barnes will reply to R. B. Kerr's question as to what is the cause of 'coercive force,' asked in No. 1013."

C. Amory Stevens, New York: "Enclosed please find my check for $50. If one needs and appreciates yours or any paper they will, I think, find the modest subscription price. As a rule where there is not a fair spirit of reciprocation it is a waste of time and substance to continue efforts in that direction. As I view it the 'Light Bearer' is attractive and acceptable to all, whereas the term 'Lucifer' disturbs some, being unpleasantly suggestive. It is better business policy to promptly recognize stubborn facts than to waste vitality vainly seeking to argue them away. I think that a monthly has many advantages over a weekly or semi-weekly, especially in this age of over-many periodicals which call upon our time and permit no single one to monopolize. Moreover, it allows sufficient time for a stronger production, is easier compiled and costs less than four weeklies."

Otto Wittstein, La Grange, Ill.:—"The many answers to your five questions in No. 1014 remind me of my duty: (1) Of course. (2) In Chicago. Why incur expense, labor and worry of moving, especially in face of the fact that you are now located in the best city on earth? (3) The Woman's Emancipator. The name or title of a paper, book, party, faith or creed should indicate its character, object or mission. That is why I object to Monism, Agnosticism, etc., in place of plain, self-defining Materialism—which must be my philosophy until you enlighten me how 'beautiful woman' can exist without flesh and blood! (4) $1. (5) Fortnightly—until your finances increase sufficiently so you and yours can live comfortably and restore the weekly. Mark me ahead from 1000 to 1100 and draw on me for diamonds, watches, engagement rings, spectacles, microscopes (so you can discover the 'obscenity' in your paper, a la Comstock), etc., etc."

Steven J. Byington, East Cambridge, Mass.: "I do not see that using the name Lucifer serves any purpose except that of insisting that the word Lucifer ought to mean something else than what in current English it does mean; and I don't think that restoring the ancient meaning of a word, when it has been replaced by a good English name like 'morning star,' is worth much trouble. The name walnut, which originally means a foreign nut, is applied to a native nut.

"The name aisle, which originally means a wing, is applied to a central passage; our use of the words amethyst, barnacle and lunatic is the mere record of exploded superstitions; and I do not see what harm it would do to anybody if the Latin word for morning star should continue to be an English name for Satan so long as anybody cares to talk about Satan."

S. R. Shepherd, Leavenworth, Kan.: "As I see it, Elsie Cole Wilcox solved the problem and plunked the bull's eye of practical wisdom in her declaration that 'Lucifer's mission is to work for the emancipation of women from sex slavery, and when it deviates from that course its mission is ended.' Of all questions pressing for solution the relation of the sexes is the most vital and comprehensive. For obvious reasons no other field has so few explorers and educators and none so urgently needs them. Sexology is the keystone science, the master science, the grand central science of all the sciences. It portends more for weal or woe to the race than all other sciences put together. One thing I always did admire in Paul, and that was his singleness of purpose, his concentration. He was determined to 'know nothing but Christ and him crucified.' Paul never wobbled, never scattered his energies. Had Darwin been a jack at all trades he never would have wrought out that greatest of all human achievements—Evolution. This paper should not be wedded to external forms or words. Principles and ideas, not texts. Lucifer, Light Bearer, Light are essentially the same, but the latter, as a name for this paper, seems to me, is shorter, sweeter, grander and more inspiring. Torch bearers are a thing of the past. Memory carries me back to the days before tallow-dip tin lanterns came in fashion in Michigan, when hickory bark torch bearers led us through the wild woods, weirdly waving their torches to keep them burning. Let us evolute. The word 'Light' has five letters. Lucifer's star of 'Light and Liberty' has five points—and a special significance and history in its adoption by Lucifer. I donned one of the badges twenty years ago. The more you think of 'Light' as a name for this paper the more you will be sure to 'fall in love' with it."

Subscribers who receive more than one copy of Lucifer, when not ordered, will please use the extra copy or copies to induce their friends to subscribe, if only for a trial trip of three months for 25 cents. Stamps received in payment. As the paper weighs less than one ounce a copy can sent to a friend in a common 2 cent letter, with an ordinary sized sheet of note paper.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

MOSES HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED FORTNIGHTLY AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO ILLINOIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year.....$1.00 Three months.....25 cents
Six months.....50 cents Single copies.....5 cents

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire notify us if you wish to continue to receive Lucifer.

EASTERN REPRESENTATIVE:
E. C. WALKER, 244 WEST 143D STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

THIRD SERIES. VOL. VIII. NO. 14

PRESS WRITERS AND FREE SPEECH LEAGUE.

Of all the agencies now at work to bring about a reaction against the systematic suppression of speech and of press in this country the two associations named in the heading are certainly the most effective, most important. For information in regard to what these two associations are doing, and how they are doing it, write to the Boston Press Writer, Boston, and to the Treasurer of the Free Speech League, Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., 120 Lexington avenue, New York City, and if possible send the fee—25 cents for membership in the American Press Writers' Association, and one dollar for membership in the Free Speech League.

M. HARMAN.

TO LUCIFER'S HELPERS—TRIAL SUBSCRIPTIONS.

The thanks of all lovers of freedom of speech and of press, as well as of all friends of the emancipation of womanhood and motherhood from the chains of sex slavery, are due to the generous helpers whose names or initials appear in another column. Also to all who have written to say that Lucifer's light must not go out in darkness and despair, a small portion only of which letters of encouragement have appeared in this and last issues.

Believing that Lucifer's helpers do not need votes of thanks for doing what they can to keep alive the most necessary of all agitations, of all educational movements, the main object of this editorial reference is to ask these generous patrons—and all others whose names have not yet appeared in answer to questions propounded in No. 1013—to send to us the names of those who are not yet regular readers of the Light Bearer, but who would probably welcome the gift of a trial subscription of three months. A considerable proportion of those who have responded to the questions referred to, say they will be responsible for two or more annual subscriptions. Others have sent names of friends to whom they want the paper sent for three months, at 25 cents.

Judging from past experience no better way can be devised of extending Lucifer's educational work than is this method of trial subscriptions. In all such cases a letter should be sent from the publisher notifying the person to whom the paper is sent that a friend has paid for a three months' trial, and that no bill will ever be sent to him or her who receives and reads the paper without having asked therefor.

As said by a Colorado helper in No. 1014, who had sent $2 and eight names, "If all subscribers would do as well Lucifer would soon become a power." "A hint to the wise."

M. HARMAN.

"HOW TO LIVE FOREVER."

Surgeon-General Hammond of the United States Army is credited with saying that if man could or would correctly keep the balance between "waste and repair" there would be no need of dying at an age less than one thousand years. But if Helen Wilmans, and many others of the "New Thought" cult, are to be believed, there is no need of dying at the age of one thousand, two thousand, or at any other age.

And now one of these New Thought theorists—which thought, however, is older than human history, older probably than any recorded myth or fable—one of these latter-day thinkers and dreamers has given us a book telling how to live so that sickness, old age and physical or somatic death will cease to exist. In "How to Live Forever" Harry Gaze claims to have gazed into the problem of life until he has solved it. Perhaps it would be better to say he has gazed into the problem of death until he has convinced himself that there is no such problem, no such fate, provided the methods of right-living, as laid down in his book, be complied with.

But whether Harry Gaze be right or wrong as to the possibility of eternal life in the flesh, I am glad he wrote the book under review. Whether immortality of man's physical organism be possible, desirable or even thinkable, there can be little doubt that the general adoption or practicalization of the rules of living recommended in this book would go far, in a few generations, to eliminate disease, poverty, vice and crime from human lives.

The following paragraphs will give the reader some idea of the author's style and trend of thought:

"The desire to survive is strongest in the minds of those prepared for it. Emerson wisely says, 'Immortality will come to such as are fit for it.' The aspiration for natural immortality is incidental to a healthy appreciation of life, and a thorough recognition of man's latent possibilities. Living forever does not mean the preservation of that which is crude and undesirable, but the permanent survival, in ever changing forms, of all that is sweet, true and beautiful. . . .

"Through the practice of the principles of sexual science, mental science and hygiene, eternal life, health and youth are attainable. Heretofore the race and not the individual has been perpetuated. . . . Man has now evolved the capacity to perpetuate his own individual life as well as the race. As the race is perpetuated by sexual union, so also is the individual life. Sex is the fountain of life. The effort of scientists to prolong life by chemicals or by electricity is as illogical as the effort to create a new life by the same means. Within the laboratory of man's own being are latent the forces for the eternal renewal of life."

"LIFE A UNION OF BIRTH AND DEATH."

Under this head Mr. Gaze seems substantially to agree with Surgeon-General Hammond. He says:

"Life cannot exist a moment without simultaneous dying. To live forever is not to avoid death, but eternally to retain youth by establishing a balance between the processes of destruction and reconstruction [of waste and repair]. This requires perfect willingness to let go the old and to receive the new, which is continual death and rebirth. Bodily life will continue as long as this process is perfectly performed.

"The way to live forever is fully to recognize the process of change and to co-operate with it. Change necessitates continual tearing down and rebuilding, death and rebirth. Death silently but surely takes away the elements that are rejected, leaving the body sweet and fresh for the performance of the bodily functions. Dissociate the idea of death from the absence of life. Recognize the unceasing operation of death in mind and in body, and when told by the disbelievers in physical immortality that you must die, answer, 'Why, certainly; I never stop dying!'"

So much for a general statement of principles. To get the details the book must be read. It is published and sold by Stockham Publishing Co., 70 Dearborn street, Chicago; by mail, $1.25.

M. HARMAN.

LUCIFER AND SOCIALISM.

In a private letter from a good helper occurs this paragraph:

"Socialism by assuring woman her economic freedom will enable her to be the mistress of herself—a condition now attained by few of those whose theories are radical. Socialism gets at the root of the matter—Lucifer is but dealing with a few of the withered buds of capitalism."

Another generous and faithful friend writes thus:

"I agree with J. M. C., quoted in last Lucifer, that there must be economic freedom before there can be freedom of sex. I believe further that we will have less freedom of speech and of the press before we get more."

And still another, a prominent worker in the ranks of the national socialist organization, is of the opinion that

"The money question is first of all. We must live to do, and we must have food to live. We are all slaves until this question is settled. Financial independence is all that will ever liberate either man or woman, and we must have the highest co-operation to have the highest liberty. You have not reasoned out these great principles."

The letters from which these paragraphs are taken were not written for the public eye and therefore all the more valuble because more surely the candid thought of the writers thereof.

It seems unfortunate that membership in a club, church, political party, faction or sect should have a tendency to narrowness, to egotistic arrogance, to dogmatic self-assertion. But that such is the fact there seems not the shadow of a doubt. Our Socialist friends magnify the economic factor above all others. "The money question is first of all," and he or she who cannot see that financial independence, economic equity, will bring all other needed reforms, is necessarily ignorant, else so prejudiced that he will not see the truth when presented.

Likewise the members of the Single Tax—the believers in the gospel according to Henry George. With them the land question is first of all. "The earth is the mother of us all, say they. "Give us the Single Tax—in other words, economic rent, thereby equalizing the burdens of government and giving all an even chance; abolishing privilege and compelling all to work or starve—then all other reforms will follow as a matter of course; all other slaveries will quickly disappear."

And just so also the zealous Christian propagandist says, quoting Jesus: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness [get converted] and all these things [all temporal blessings] shall be added unto you."

As I see it there is no panacea for the ills of human life. All true reforms are co-related, co-operatively helpful. We must have money reform, labor reform, land reform, government reform, sex reform, in order to have freedom and justice, that is, the Co-operative Commonwealth. The money question is important but is not basic, as I have seen demonstrated more than once. Given free access to land, as in the settlement of the "middle west" fifty or sixty years ago, and people can live and be happy with practically no money at all. Production and exchange without money is possible and practicable as we all know. Especially is it possible without money to live comfortably and happily in communities of moderate size, in which all really useful trades and occupations are carried on, provided there is free access to the earth and to what the earth contains or spontaneously produces, and hence it seems apparent that the money question assumes its present abnormal importance simply because it is made the tool of the monopolist, the land and labor monopolist. With free land and free labor the power of the "money king" would disappear.

How, then, to free the land and the laborer who is dependent upon the land for his means of subsistence, is pre-eminently the question, the "previous question"!

As some of us see it the first thing to do is to get the mind right. At present we are all more or less insane, hypnotized, on the question of what liberty and justice really mean. "The ascent of life is no ascent of ideals." If there is no ascent of ideals there will be no ascent of life. The order of nature seems to be something like this:

First—Discontent with the present and desire for something better.

Second—The formation, the growth or evolution, of new ideals as to what would be the better mode or standard of living.

Third—Adaptation of means to the end of realizing, of practicalizing, the desired ideals.

"Socialism by assuring woman her economic freedom will enable her to be the mistress of herself"—says one. Will it?

Why do not women who are now economically independent assert and practicalize their right to be mistress of themselves?

Partly, no doubt, because it is difficult for a few to be free until all can be free, but chiefly, as I see it, because the desire to be free and the ideal of what true freedom means, has not yet come to woman, or at most, to very few women.

Nearly all women, even of those who claim to be free and self-owning, are slaves to their own inherited ideals of womanly "modesty," "purity" and "virtue." The vast majority of women, even of the least conventional, least orthdox, do not desire to be self-owning. They prefer to be owned by some man and still believe that the highest morality requires them to be sexually "true" to some man, which means to be sexually monopolized by the man they have once accepted as a life companion, notwithstanding the fact that passionate love, if it ever existed between the pair, may have long since changed to satiety, to indifference, not to speak of positive repugnance, aversion or disgust.

If the consequence of adherence to this old-time superstition, this irrational and unnatural standard of what purity and virtue in sex life really mean, if these penalties were borne only by women themselves, the case would be pitiable enough, but when it is remembered that children are conceived, gestated and born of these mothers while holding this attitude of mental and physical satiety, indifference, aversion or disgust towards the father of their children the question at issue assumes a vastly more serious aspect.

Looking for basic causes of imbecility, of failure, of criminality, of degeneracy, do we need to look further than our inherited ideals of purity and virtue in the relation that creates new human beings? Do we wonder that men, sons of human mothers, can be hired to torture and to murder their fellow workingmen, as shown by the letter of R. A. Southworth, printed in this issue?

I well know what the answer to this argument will be, but while giving, as I think, due weight to the economic factor in the problem of human depravity, many years of close study and observation of the springs of human action convince me that economic environment is secondary, not primary, and that until woman awakes to a sense of her responsibility to herself, to her child and to the race of which she is a part, and until she demands, as a condition precedent to motherhood, that her individuality as a self-owning human being shall be held sacred by all, under all circumstances, until this is done the dreams of the Co-operative Commonwealth will never be more than very partially realized, if realized at all.

M. HARMAN.

CONTINUED ARTICLES AND BACK NUMBERS.

Instead of devoting a whole issue of Lucifer to the subject of Colonization, it is now thought best to print a series of articles, to run through a half dozen or more issues, treating upon this subject. This plan will give room for other continued articles, such as that entitled the "Right to Be Born Well," and others closely connected with Lucifer's pivoted work. In order that new subscribers, whether for a year or less time, may get the whole of these continued articles a good supply of back numbers will be kept, subject to the orders of friends and helpers, both old and new.

M. H.

LUCIFER'S HELPERS.

J. B. Billard	$ 2.00	Ed. Armand	10.00
Henry Bool	10.00	E. A. K.	5.00
F. H. Bergman	5.00	John V. Carter	1.50
Mrs. B. M.	10.00	Mrs. D. Jane Fritz	1.00
J. E. Collins	1.00	W. C. J.	2.00
Ed. Wenning	1.00	Tom White	1.00
H. Henn	5.00	Eugene Smith	5.00
Mrs. D. Pommer	1.00	T. C. Deuel	5.00
C. A. S.	50.00	Paul L. Sautter	1.00
Mrs. B. P. E.	5.00	Horace N. Fowler	5.00
W. W. Boyes	2.00	Z. M. P. Shank	1.00
R. B. Kerr	4.00

THE COLORADO SITUATION.

Some years ago the wageworkers and farmers of Colorado elected Davis H. Waite as governor of that state. The miners of the Cripple Creek district went on strike for an eight-hour work day. The sheriff of the county swore in about eighteen hundred deputies and marched them from Colorado Springs to the scene of action for the purpose of intimidating the miners and driving them back to work. Governor Waite called out the militia, sent them to the district, dispersed the deputy sheriffs, and sent them back to their homes. The miners won their strike, and have enjoyed an eight-hour work day ever since.

A bill for an eight-hour work day was passed at a subsequent general assembly. The employers took it to the Supreme Court of the state. Three judges, one Republican and two Democrats, were unanimous in declaring it unconstitutional. Agitation was kept up by the various unions until an amendment to the constitution was submitted to a vote of the people in the fall of 1902 and adopted by a vote of 72,980 to 26,266, which was a direct command to the legislature to pass the desired law, its terms being as follows: "The general assembly shall provide by law and shall prescribe suitable penalties for the violation thereof, for a period of employment not to exceed eight hours, within any twenty-four hours (except in cases of emergency where life or property is in immediate danger) for persons employed in underground mines or other underground workings, blast furnaces, smelters and any ore reduction works or other branch of industry or labor that the general assembly may consider injurious or dangerous to health, life or limb."

Nearly three to one was the majority for this measure, yet the following general assembly were so boodled by the mine and smelter operators that a complete failure to carry out pledges to party and the commands of the people resulted. Different strikes have been inaugurated since to gain what the people had said the workers should have—an eight-hour day. These strikes have each and all been free from violence on the part of the workers.

The same cannot be said for the employers. Violence, bloodshed and murder have been resorted to by them through the governor of the state, hired militia and thugs.

An organization sprung into existence last year called "the Citizens' Alliance," which has been largely instrumental in influencing the governor—who is a member—to perform his unwarranted and unlawful acts, and its members have banded together in midnight mobs and forcibly deported unoffending and industrious workers and business men, in some cases brutally beating unarmed and helpless victims and threatening dire penalties, even death, if they dared to return to their homes or families.

Martial law has been declared in three different mining districts, even though to do so was a direct violation of the law and the constitution. Many cases of violence followed, but the military and the authorities were always the aggressors. In numerous instances peaceful officers or agents of the unions have been beaten nearly to death when sitting quietly in a railway coach or riding in a carriage along the public highway, by hired detectives or thugs. In each case these murderous brutes have escaped unmolested by the law or its agents.

This brutal and unlawful action by those intrusted with the execution of the law has forced thousands of workers to leave their homes to gain a livelihood in other counties or states, while several hundreds have been forcibly deported, as before related.

The readers of Lucifer will get a better idea of the gravity of the conditions in some of the cities of this state if I give the story of Mr. A. H. Floaten as related by himself and in his words.

R. A. SOUTHWORTH.

Denver, Colo.

[On account of its length the story of his experiences as told by a prominent merchant of Telluride, Colo., is deferred to next issue. As object lessons showing whither we as a people are drifting, these statements from a reliable source will not lose their value because the article was written several weeks ago. If possible the copies of Lucifer containing the accounts given by Editor Southworth of what he has had most ample means of verifying, should be preserved for future reference.—M. H.]

MR. BARNES EXPLAINS.

Mr. R. B. Kerr quotes literally a statement of mine which I admit to be unprofound, except in a secondary sense, in which I said, "It is coercive force that is at the bottom of all error and evil that exists, and not the depravity of man." Mr. Kerr then asks me, "What is the cause of coercive force?" I might have left out the word error, which implies ignorance, which is the real bottom of evil among men, and not their inherent depravity. Of course I meant government in what I said. Man fears earthquakes, famines, cyclones, lightnings and other natural calamities, and in his ignorance supposed that what he called crime among men could be eradicated by man-made laws, with dire penalities for violations of them, appealing to men's fears and deterrents. "Ignorance is the only sin," but men are learning that punishment of man by man does not lessen crime, and he is emerging from his former ignorance or error. My observation has lead me to think that nearly every so-called crime is traceable, directly or indirectly as cause, to government by coercive force of man by man. So I meant by the words quoted by Mr. Kerr, which might have been expressed in more definite language, and I thank Mr. Kerr for calling my attention to my inexact langauge, whether intended as a captious criticism or not. I find word language at best a very imperfect medium through which to convey thought, and I have a very limited literary education and, of course, a limited command of language. I stand corrected by his criticism and hope to learn more from Mr. Kerr, whom I admire as a writer and thinker. I would like to know his theory of the cause of coercive force.

J. C. BARNES.

LOS ANGELES LIGHT-BEARER CLUB.

The Los Angeles Light Bearer Club met May 2 at Mrs. A. M. Snow's, Fifty-sixth street. The president, A. A. Caswell, being absent, Dr. Russell acted as chairman. The subject of discussion for the evening was "Love." Dr. Russell read the opening paper, after which a general exchange of ideas upon freedom, love, marriage, was had by the members. A letter from Moses Harman was read to the club. All were glad to hear of his safe arrival home. The secretary sold 80 cents' worth of books and one 25-cent photo, for Lucifer's benefit. On motion Mr. Savory was requested to prepare a paper for next meeting. Club adjourned to meet the 17th of May at Mrs. Bensen's on Fiftieth street.—Annie E. Cummings, Secretary, Los Angeles, Cal.

Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., of 120 Lexington avenue, New York City, treasurer of the Free Speech League, informs us that he has a number of copies of Darrow's Brief on the Turner case, for sale at 50 cents each, and postage, 10c. It is a strong and instructive book, although it failed to influence the Supreme Court. No doubt there are many among Lucifer readers who would value this book and utilize its historical research. The proceeds of sale of this work will, presumably, be applied to helping pay the expenses of the Free Speech League.

VARIOUS VOICES.

We are always glad to receive calls from friends visiting the city. Take the Lake street elevated, stop at Ashland avenue, walk one block east, then one block north. Or take Fulton street electric car west and stop at St. John's place, alighting in front of our house. The Lake street electric and Paulina street cars also pass within a block of our residence.

When writing on business of any kind, please do not forget to enclose a stamp for catalogue of books and pamphlets on sale at this office.

Subscriber, Cascade Locks, Ore.: Inclosed is money order for $5 contribution to sustaining fund. Will send more if needed to sustain the Light Bearer, even as a fortnightly.

Horce N. Fowler, Philadelphia, Pa.: Enclosed find money order for $5 to carry on the publication of the Light Bearer. Think you can count on me for this sum about once a year.

Bayonne (New Jersey Daily Times: Glad to see Lucifer on deck again. It is the only paper in its specialty, the emancipation of the sexes, that has the courage to speak out. Speaking out honestly is expensive though, but in its able editor, Moses Harmon, it become a virtue. Lucifer is only 25 cents a year. Send subscription to 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

[Thanks, Brother Proctor, for friendly greeting. With one hundred thousand subscribers and plenty of paying advertisers Lucifer could be published for 25 cents a year, but at present $1 is the yearly price.]

Bodhraj Shah, Langhei District, Thelum, Punjab, India: Unexpectedly I received a sample copy of your valuable paper Lucifer, and could not imagine how you learned my address. I like the paper very much. It entirely suits me. Am anxious to know all the arguments against the marriage system. At the same time am anxious to know, if marriage is abolished, who will take care of us in sickness and misfortune, and how the children are to be brought up. Kindly let me know the names of the books you consider best on these subjects and where they are to be had. I should have gladly sent you the annual subscription price if I had known the value of the dollar in our Indian currency. Please enlighten me on these points and oblige me very much.

Rev. Sidney Holmes, New York: The Jews in the olden days gave a tith—a tenth—of their income to the Lord. I understand Dowie requiree his followers to comply with the same rule and give one-tenth of their income to Zion. Surely, it seems to me, the stanch believers in the doctrines taught by the Light Bearer—doctrines which are vital to the proper development of the human race—should be willing to contribute one day's wages to the support of that paper. Such a fund would enable its zealous and earnest editor and publisher to get out a magazine which would wield a great influence for good. One day's wages is about one three-hundredths of the average man or woman's income, or about one-thirtieth of the proportion of the contribution made to Dowie by his followers. Let Liberals be liberal.

MOST NEEDFUL EDUCATION.

Many essential points in educating children are neglected, especially the subjects of sex and birth. Truth will not harm the child, but ignorance is dangerous. Educate children in sexual life in pure and simple language. Unless this instruction is given by the parents the children are taught by their playmates in a coarse and vulgar manner. Much sickness and misery are directly caused by ignorance concerning the sexual functions. The properly instructed child feels a natural respect and reverence for this subject. When the child asks the inevitable question of where it came from, make the simple statement that its tiny body unfolded in a little room in its mother's body, until it was ready to come into the outer world.—Harry Gaze, in "How to Live Forever."

The whole world is plainly in travail to lift the primeval curse of brutalizing labor from man. But the just, at least, are beginning to perceive that the primeval curse must also be lifted from woman. When these long-borne curses are really lifted from man and woman, what then? The Garden of Eden!—George N. Miller in "Strike of a Sex."

Self-trust is the essence of heroism. It is the state of the soul at war, and its ultimate objects are the last defiance of falsehood and wrong, and the power to bear all that can be inflicted by evil agents. It speaks the truth and it is just. It is generous, hospitable, temperate, scornful of petty calculations and scornful of being scorned. It persists; it is of an undaunted boldness, and of a fortitude not to be wearied out.—R. W. Emerson.

Neither let us be slandered from our duty by false accusations against us, nor frightened from it by menaces of destruction to the government, nor of dungeons to ourselves. Let us have faith that right makes right, and in that faith let us to the end dare to do our duty as we understand it.—Abraham Lincoln.

This country with its institutions belongs to the people who inhabit it. Whenever they shall grow weary of the existing government, they can exercise their constitutional right of amending it, or their revolutionary right to dismember and overthrow it.

Photographs of Moses Harman, taken in San Francisco and contributed by the photographer to be sold for the benefit of Lucifer, may be ordered of Moses Harman. See address in another column. Price, 25 cents.

MISCELLANEOUS.

GEORGE FOX, 11¼ W. Huerfano st., Colorado Springs, wishes to correspond with lady of liberal mind, with view to forming business and social alliance.

WANTED—100 women to study medicine or midwifery. Next term begins January 1, 1904. College of Medicine and Surgery, 245 Ashland Blvd., Chicago, Ill. DR. FLORENCE DRESSLER, Secretary. (Dept. A.)

WANTED—To correspond with people desiring to join a Nature Colony in Southern California. Perfect climate; magnificent view; located at foot of Mt. Lowe. No users of liquor, tobacco, meat or cosmetics need apply. Address MRS. MAUD JOHNSON, Station A, Pasadena, Cal.

AT LAST I HAVE THEM!

Cabinet photographs of Ida C. Craddock, victim of the Postal Inquisition. We cannot sell her books, but you may have her picture and judge for yourselves why she incurred the enmity of the Censor. Two styles, 20c each, two for 30c. Address EDWIN C. WALKER, 244 W. 143d St., New York, N. Y.

A PRIVATE MATERNITY HOME

Or Lying-In Hospital for Women During Pregnancy and Confinement. Especially adapted to classes that wish to avoid publicity. We provide a home for the infant by adoption if desired. For particulars and terms give description of case, and address C. S. WOOD, M. D., Suite 63, 119 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

BUT ONE SANTA CLARA VALLEY.

SAN JOSE (HOSAY) IN THE CENTRE. POP., 37,000.

Write for particulars about the most beautiful orchard homes and the most delightful climate in the world. The foothills and mountains are clothed in green and are the home of the vine and fruit tree. No irrigation necessary. Fifty miles from San Francisco. Descriptive literature free on application to

W. S. ORVIS, Land Agent and Colonizer,
No. 7 North First St., San Jose, Cal.

SYSTEM-ENERGY

PFEIFFER PRINCIPLE
Based upon the laws of Psychology and Physiology.

TEN TYPEWRITTEN LESSONS, $10.

Contains such information as cannot be obtained in any other way. They give the key to nature and tell you how to live and be healthy even in old age. When you have mastered the Pfeiffer Principle you can defy disease and will be master of conditions. When we consider that Health is Wealth, who will hesitate to invest $10.00 for teachings worth a fortune? Address

OUR HOME RIGHTS PUBLISHING CO.,
BEDFORD, MASS.

NOW

is a magazine advocating Health, Happiness and Opulence; all this here and now.

NOW is a journal of Soul Culture which includes the education of man in the use of his Spiritual faculties, the unfolding of Psychic Power and the development of Self-Control. It is a Spiritual Messenger with food for the Soul, and is the leading New Thought journal of the world. No premiums, gifts or prizes with NOW; it stands on its own merits.

A prominent real estate dealer of this city has this to say in praise of NOW: "As NOW is edited by the 'King Pen' of so-called New Thought Philosophers, it is consequently the best new-psychology journal on earth; hence in order to keep abreast (in reality considerably ahead) of the times, I don't want to miss a single number of that paper. It is invaluable. So for the dollar herewith enclosed please send NOW for the coming year and 'forget it not.'"—N. D. Sickles, 6 Geary street.

Special—Three months' trial trip, 10 cents.

Address "Now" Folk Pub. Co., 1427A Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

EVERY WOMAN SHOULD OWN

TOKOLOGY.

A COMPLETE HEALTH GUIDE.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

Teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions.

Treats of diseases of women and children; contains practical teachings on Change of Life, limiting offspring, etc.

Lizzie N. Armstrong writes: "If I knew I were to be the mother of innumerable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of Tokology."

Dr. C. B. Willis: "Tokology is doing more for women than all other books put together."

CLOTH, PREPAID, $2.25; LEATHER, $2.75.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

HILDA'S HOME.

A STORY OF WOMAN'S EMANCIPATION.

BY ROSA GRAUL.

With Macaulay, Rosa Graul would say: "The cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty." Hence she has no fears that under Freedom the Home and the Family would cease to exist, or that woman would be less loving and lovable, or that man would be less manly and honorable. On the contrary, she maintains that only in the soil and atmosphere of freedom is it possible for true womanhood and manhood to live and flourish.

426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES.

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

Contents—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only"; Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen"; What Are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; Is What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women. With Appendix: The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our False Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 15c.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

TRUE MANHOOD.

AN INVALUABLE GUIDE TO HEALTH, STRENGTH AND PURITY.

BY E. B. SHEPHERD.

WHAT EVERY FATHER WANTS HIS BOY TO KNOW.

The Christian Endeavor World: "Its suggestions are wise and ennobling." Dr. Stockham, author of Tokology, says: "TRUE MANHOOD explains the transition from boyhood to manhood, giving knowledge of priceless value."

Levant cloth, 328 pages. Prepaid $1. STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

LOVE'S COMING OF AGE.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

A treatise on Sexual Science and Marriage, rich in thought and strong in expression. Emphatically a book for the thinker.

Carpenter holds that woman's freedom is based upon economics; she must be independent financially that she may not be forced to sell herself in or out of marriage. He also makes a strong plea for a motherhood of freedom and thoughtful preparation.

AMERICAN EDITION, CLOTH, PREPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

CREATIVE LIFE.

A BOOK FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

BY ALICE B. STOCKHAM, M. D.

A timely and important message not found in text books. Every girl seeks and should have this true, plain and practical knowledge. One writes: "Thank you, thank you, dear Doctor, for the plain but beautiful thoughts. Womanhood, motherhood and life have new meanings. You ennoble your theme." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

THE STRIKE OF A SEX.

A NOVEL BY GEORGE N. MILLER.

FORTIETH THOUSAND.

"The Strike of a Sex" is a fascinating novel bearing upon the sexual relations. It is a bold protest against the customary life of most married people, and at the same time a prophecy of happier conditions between man and wife. Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

SONGS OF A CHILD,

AND OTHER POEMS.

By "Darling" (Lady Florence Douglas, now Lady Florence Dixie). Parts I. and II. together in one volume, with three portraits printed in colors. Price $1.50; postage 12c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

LUCIFER. Bound volumes, $1.75; unbound, $1. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

1015

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

KAREZZA.

SCIENCE OF MARRIAGE.

A godsend to every wife—a joy to every husband.

This work brings peace into homes disrupted by inharmony in the sexual relation. Dr. A. B. Stockham advises a practice which leads to individual liberty and to deeper love between husband and wife.

Dr. F. G. Welch: "After a personal trial of its teachings, I want to thank you for a great service to humanity."

Rev. George R. Ranshaw: "Out of a beautiful and ennobling experience, I can say, I KNOW."

Gives a high ideal of the marital relation and teaches control of the Fecundating Power.

J. A. Smalley, M. D.: "I have received more actual benefit from the practice of KAREZZA teachings than from all other books on Sexual Science."

A. B. Franklin, M. D.: "KAREZZA does more than any other single thing to make marriage a perpetual courtship."

LEVANT CLOTH, POSTPAID, $1.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

JUST OUT.

PARENTHOOD.

By Alice B. Stockham, M. D., author of "Tokology" and "Karezza." Highest ideals for best offspring. Vital and important subjects discussed, including new philosophy of the Creative Energy. G. G. Hunt says: "Many sentences of PARENTHOOD should be graven in gold and handed down to posterity." Prepaid, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY.

BY EDWARD CARPENTER.

One of the best short works on the subject. A charming little gift book. "Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others. Perhaps the time has come for the modern nations when, ceasing to be children, they may even try to learn it."

DAINTILY PRINTED. PREPAID, 25c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

ORIGIN OF THE FAMILY, PRIVATE PROPERTY, AND THE STATE.

BY FREDERICK ENGELS.

Chapter titles: Prehistoric Stages; The Family; The Iroquois Gens; The Grecian Gens; Origin of the Attic State; Gens and State in Rome; The Gens Among Celts and Germans; The Rise of the State Among Germans.

217 pages; bound in cloth. Price 60c; postage 5c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

MEN, WOMEN, AND CHANCE.

BY WILLIAM PLATT.

Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth; gilt top, rough edges. Price 75c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

"PERSONAL EXPERIENCES OF TWO AMERICAN ANTI-VIVISECTIONISTS IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES."

BY PHILIP G. PEABODY.

With an Appendix by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c. Apply to PHILIP G. PEABODY, 15 Court Square, Boston, Mass.

THE STORY OF IJAIN;

OR, THE EVOLUTION OF A MIND.

By Lady Florence Dixie. With Epilogue by "Saladin" (W. Stuart Rose), and four illustrations beautifully printed in colors. Price $1; postage 8c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

ISOLA; OR, THE DISINHERITED.

A drama in six acts. By Lady Florence Dixie. With Foreword by George Jacob Holyoake. Colored frontispiece. Cloth, $1; postage 7c.

STOCKHAM PUB. CO., 70 Dearborn St., Suite 72, Chicago.

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

OTTO WETTSTEIN,

THE LIBERAL MAIL-ORDER JEWELER.

Now permanent at No. 110 N. Kensington Ave., La Grange, Cook Co., Ill. Can save you 10 to 20 per cent on Watches, Diamonds or anything in the Jeweler's Line. Write me and receive prices and my great little tract, "Thelem in the Crucible," free.

J. H. GREER, M. D.,

52 DEARBORN ST., CHICAGO.

Office Hours—9 a. m. to 6 p. m.; Wednesdays and Saturdays, 9 a. m. to 8 p. m.; Sundays, 9 a. m. to 12 m.

Telephone, Randolph 42.

DR. OGILVIE A. RICE,

DENTIST.

1556 MILWAUKEE AVE., COR. WESTERN, CHICAGO.

Telephone West 141.

PHILIP G. PEABODY,

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW.

15 COURT SQUARE, ROOM 61.

BOSTON, MASS.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

ENTERED AT THE CHICAGO POSTOFFICE AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

PRICE FIVE CENTS. CHICAGO, ILL., JUNE 23, E. M. 304. [C. E. 1904.] WHOLE NO. 1016

THE RIGHT TO BE BORN WELL.

CONTINUED FROM NO. 1014.

Prof. E. L. Larkin of Lowe Observatory, near Los Angeles, Cal., after speaking of the power of "suggestion" as a curative agent, adds this very significant paragraph:

"But all benefits derived by suggestion, by those now living are as nothing to what may be done, and will be, in prenatal 'suggestion.' Here the possibilities of complete control of unborn generations, race improvement, physically and mentally, are so great as to be almost beyond belief. It is a subject so important that statesmen will be attracted by the appeals of suggestors that national laws will be enacted on the subject. By suggestion to mothers before the birth of their children, kept up for three generations, say a hundred years, the people can be cultivated to a standard of physical and intellectual perfection the like of which has not appeared in human history."

The only comment I care to make upon this utterance of Prof. Larkin is that, in my opinion, we have now too much legislation—too much paternalistic legislation, and that educational methods, in the line of "suggestion," without the interference of the paternal state, are much to be preferred.

Another popular writer, Garrett P. Serviss, commenting upon the late utterances of Francis Galton, the well known English sociologist, who recommends more definite, more scientific methods of instruction for the young in regard to improving the human race, has this to say:

"This is a thing that necessarily interests everybody. No one will deny that it is of far more importance to improve the human race, if it can be done, than to improve the breeds of horses, dogs, or other animals, on whose cultivation we expend a great deal of thought and effort. Who that looks over the world as it is to-day and observes what the peoples are about—their mad struggles to get the advantage over one another, their demoniac efforts to slaughter their kind, their insane yielding to tendencies which debase them physically, intellectually, and morally—will conclude that man is already so fine an animal that he cannot be improved?

"The principal question is whether we should trust for improvement to the natural evolution of the race or should endeavor to assist and direct the evolutionary tendencies by our own efforts. Mr. Galton decidedly favors the latter view of the case. He thinks that we should by no means wait for the slow and gradual processes of nature to produce the ideal type of mankind, but should go to work and bring it forth ourselves. Apparently he doubts whether nature, left to herself, would ever make us as good as we might, or ought, to be."

Mr. Serviss, while evidently agreeing with Galton as to the need of a better plan of education for the young in regard to sex and reproduction, does not seem very hopeful that anything important will come from present agitation of the subject, adding:

"The chances are that Mr. Galton's science of human improvement will not arouse any great enthusiasm. Even if he should succeed in having it taught in the schools, it is likely that the young men and women, after mastering its principles and getting its statistics by heart, would continue to marry on the old, unscientific plan."

There is too much reason to think Mr. Serviss right in his pessimistic view. So long have people been taught that there is something supernatural about the creation of human beings and that the principle known as natural causation does not hold good in the matter of the endowment of children,—as in the case of other animals and plants; so long have we been told that it is "God" who sends children into the world and who gives to each its "capacity," its quota of "gifts," its "talents," etc., that the sense of responsibility to the oncoming generation is seldom felt by the young when entering upon marital duties and it will doubtless be long before the old, the superstitious, ideas in regard to sex and reproduction can be supplanted by the newer and more scientific.

Some years ago, at a "Mothers' Meeting" in Kansas City, a paper was read, entitled "At What Age Shall We Teach Our Children the Sacred Uses of Sex." The following paragraphs give a fragmentary outline of what one thoughful mother believes can be done in the home, toward starting the young mind right in the matter of sexual education:

"The generative, the creative processes are carried on through the brain and sexual organs. They represent the opposite poles of our being, mental and physical; they act and react upon each other. No abuse of one but impairs the usefulness of the other, and especially is this true of the abuse of the sexual nature—imbecility sometimes results from it. Mothers may begin their influence upon the character of the child as soon as it is conceived, and quite as much is felt upon the sexual as any part of its nature.

"She may go back even farther and begin her work of right generation in a preparation for motherhood. By magnetizing the tiny nest with sweet thoughts, by a love that reaches forward toward the little one she is about to invite to come and dwell with her, and by all the harmonious influences she can draw.

"If she puts her house in order for the entertainment of an angel, an angel and not a devil will come to dwell with her. We, as mothers, prepare the dwelling for the spirit we invoke. Will we lay the foundation in sexual passion? Will we build the superstructure of selfishness, antagonism and hate?

"We weave into the very fiber of the little body that which we habitually hold in thought, while this building process is going on, and we continue to build during the period of lactation as well as gestation. With our thought we are constructing an instrument through which the spirit of our child is to make itself known to us. If the key note is passion, what must we naturally expect?

"It is right here we must make our first impressions; right here we may stamp purity or passion. Let us begin with ourselves. Let us not fashion in ignorance these instruments that human souls are to play upon. If not in tune the manifestations must necessarily be discordant.

"Let every prospective mother pause often to inquire what chords or discords she is arranging for the fortunate or unfortunate soul that is to find expression through her organism; for through mothers must the race be redeemed."

Yes! "Through mothers must the race be redeemed," if ever redeemed. Would that this paper read before the Kansas City "Mothers Meeting" could be printed in leaflet form and scattered by the million among the young of both sexes, but especially among young women, the prospective mothers of the next generation.

M. HARMAN.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.

Daniel Leatherman, Bremen, Ind.: I shall certainly want the paper regardless of price. Enclosed find one dollar to renew.

Mary Drake Jenne, Me.: I always want Lucifer the Light Bearer in my home. God and the angels help you in your noblest of all works. Keep on. Let Lucifer live forever, and let it be sent as often as possible, for each copy is a messenger of good. Enclosed find one dollar for renewal.

Elmer Elsworth Carey: "You have indicated in your marked editorial the only rational cure for the present festering condition of city life (free land and free labor). You and I will never see the industrial colonies you mention, but some day the earth will belong to the common people. If your journal is devoted to the Emancipation of Womanhood why don't you call it 'The Emancipator?' Certainly there is no connection between your present title and your object. You might as well call it the 'Arc Light' or the 'Lighthouse' or "The Glowworm.' Change the form to magazine size, change the name, and you will not encounter near as much antagonism from the postoffice department, and other critical people. Print your declarations of principles in each issue. I read Lucifer a year before I found out just what you were driving at. I think you have 'scattered' your fire too much. You have discussed everything under the sun and in this rapid fire program the main object is lost sight of. Many articles should have been edited—cut down—condensed—some to a single paragraph. Mrs. So and So believes that So and So is the case. Reform writers are given to verbosity and ramblings."

Alexander Horr, New York: "Am glad you are interested in Colonization, but if you colonize, why not do so on right principles? You ought to consider the plan of Dr. Hertzka before you definitely decide upon any course. I cannot help agreeing with Mr. Walker that it will not do to colonize as radicals. It would be killed either by the sex radicals or by the government. But if a colony were started on account of the economic advantages it would secure them."

[A brief statement of Dr. Hertzka's "Freeland" scheme, as given in his book, would be welcome, I think, to Lucifer's readers. Will Mr. Herr favor us with such a statement?]

J. W. Wicklund, Ore.: "I would hate to see the death of Lucifer, even though published quarterly, for I know it has brought relief to possibly more than one woman when it seemed the whole world had turned against her. I can safely promise that I will manage to raise the money for my subscription."

C. N. G., Topeka, Kan.: Am renewing and sending you a dollar for several reasons: 1—I find some things in the paper I like. 2—I believe in free speech and free press. 3—I think the U. S. government should be in better business than persecuting such papers as Lucifer. 4—I know the people need to be taught along the lines Lucifer is intended to teach. 5—I know of no publication that comes nearer filling the bill than yours. 6—I do not like to see you crushed out. 7—Old friendship.

Were I not so careless and indifferent I would have demanded my property from the Chicago postoffice, or from headquarters at Washington, but as it is now so late, will let it pass. I think myself old enough to know and decide as to whether I want a paper, without help from those placed in charge by the government.

It is evident that the suppressed paper did not entirely pollute the United States mails or they would not have carried it from Chicago to the dead letter office. As I see it this incident is simply one more index finger showing the great farce under which we are living.

[Is it no more than a "farce," Bro. G.? If a farce then it is the most expensive one ever enacted in the history of theatricals —not at the expense of the players themselves but of the defenseless spectators.]

So I say, Go ahead!—as long as you have the backbone to stand up and meet the storm. When backbone gives out then go down shouting "Liberty." I believe in liberty and want to see more of it.

As to your questions, while I do not consider it much of my business, and do not feel that I have much means to back up my opinions, would say: 1—Yes, as long as the means hold out. 2—In the United States. Why go to the south pole when the work is needed here. 3—The name—Lucifer the Light Bearer, Lucifer has seven letters, all good ones. 4—$1.5—Weekly, semi-monthly or monthly, as you can afford.

Geo. Brayton, Minneapolis, Minn.: Lucifer is an old friend that has been with me twenty years and I cannot part with it. Will send money soon.

Carl Nold, E. St. Louis, Ill.: "Enclosed one dollar for my Lucifer. Why not appoint R. B. Kerr as Press Censor for Lucifer, and thus give him a chance to gratify his highest ambition: the killing of 'the Anarchists who are so few in number that there are no compensating advantages in getting their support?' Can't this social democratic bundle of dogmas comprehend that whenever you (Mr. Harman) see fit to preach or defend Anarchism you are not doing it to please the Anarchists, but because your logic and sense of justice move you to do it? Lucifer shall live.

"Friends of Lucifer who come to see the World's Fair are requested to visit the St. Louis Debating Club, 1008 N. 17th street, St. Louis. Open every evening and Sunday."

Virginia D. Hyde-Vogel, Denver, Colo.: 1—Freedom of speech and freedom of press are analogous terms. The only test is sincerity. I think Lucifer sincere, though I do not fully agree with it. Therefore I say, Keep on! 2—In Canada. I should judge by Wilshire's success. 3—Lucifer. Drop the Light Bearer. Being a journalist I know the value of a brief, fine-sounding name. 4 and 5—$1 semi-monthly.

Lillie D. White, Lake Charles, La.: "I think that Lillie White, who used to read Lucifer and write for it and was a part of 'the Lucifer outfit' must have died some time ago, and Mrs. L. D. White, a most respectable backwoods school ma'am, who has possession of her personality, doesn't attend to these matters very well. Lillie White—what there is left of her—wants to see Lucifer live (preferably as Lucifer), when, where and how the editors prefer, or find most convenient."

C. A. C., Cleveland, Ohio: Certainly I am a friend of Lucifer, and should dislike to have it suspended and lose the foothold it has gained by years of labor. I shall be glad to give something toward a fund for sustaining the paper. My salary is not large and I devote about all I can spare to the propagation of Socialism; but I can promise you at least $4 or $5 per year—say $1 every 3 months. Shall send first installment next week.

Bertha Moore, Portland, Ore.: "1—Most certainly the paper must be continued. 2—The United States needs it more than any other spot on earth. 3—The name Lucifer conveys the idea of something alive and active. I like it, but the majority of people, when they hear the word, think of a sulphur match or the devil; therefore, for the sake of the unenlightened, may be it is best to translate the name into plain English and call the paper The Light Bearer. 4—That price is best which will bring the greatest circulation. 5—Fortnightly at $1 a year would be satisfactory to me. 6—I will be responsible for at least one yearly subscription and will send you another subscriber soon.

C. Peterson, Manti, Utah: Lucifer must not be abandoned. You can count on me as a permanent subscriber; should like to see it come weekly. A suggestion: Can you not arrange with such gifted women as S. C. Campbell, Myra Pepper, Dora Forster and others, to contribute weekly to the paper, as well as Lillian Harman and yourself? When women write on the sex question it generally commands attention and respect.

[The suggestion is decidedly a good one. Will the persons named and a score or more not named, heed the hint?]

B. L. Locke, Leavenworth, Kan.: By all means cast away every impediment, including "Lucifer," anarchy, etc. It is love's labor lost trying to deodorize words and remove the indelible stains of prejudice. Heywood tried and utterly failed. Word sticklers—the haters and worshipers of words—are equally materialistic. But who would name a child Anthony Comstock, Benedict Arnold or Judas Iscariot? At best, Lucifer is the name of a mere material object—a star which for a limited time emits light, but "Light" or "The Light," is one of the five great cardinal principles of the universe—"Truth, Love, Light, Life and Liberty. Let us idealize principles—qualities—and not objects. When our Kansas grasshopper attains his majority and casts off his old shell he develops wings and gets out of the grass onto a higher plane. He evolutes. Lucifer is now about 21 years old. It has reached the master degree of light and knowledge. And after the oriental custom let it be given a new name—"Light"—the culmination of its childhood name and the glorious fulfillment of its prophecy.

Herbert A. Gries, Central House, Cal.: 1—Yes, keep on publishing Lucifer, by all means. 2—In the United States. 3—Personally I prefer Lucifer, but will cheerfully abide your judgment. 4—For my part I would pay $5 per annum, but for the majority I think $1 a year fortnightly. 6—In a couple of months at farthest I will send the money for five yearly subscriptions extra, and will let you send them to whom you wish.

R. C. Hensley, Oregon: Inclosed find three dollars, as per my promise, for three annual subscriptions to the Light Bearer, to be sent to the enclosed names.

John Guntz, Jr., Wausau, Wis.: "Some one remarked of your eccentric era, 'It is the finishing touch. Bruno! one of the greatest and most noble of men.' To date from the Burning of Bruno inaugurates and commemorates the era of upward progress. The Brunonian era stands for freedom, for liberty and for light. Let the new method of reckoning time be adopted."

A. Johnson, San Francisco, Cal.: "Bro. Kerr's 'spirit' moves me to say a word. He says, 'the Anarchists are so few in number that there are no compensating advantages in getting their support,' and again, it is a little different with Socialism and secularism because these are such big movements that something may be gained by paying some attention to them.'

"On that principle, why not pay some attention to the church? That's 'such a big movement.' The Methodists made twenty millions out of it last year. Is it to say that a movement is right simply because it is 'big'? Or to say Anarchism is wrong because 'so few in number'? Galileo I believe had the world against him—who was right?

"Stick to your idea, through 'fire and sword'—though I differ from you in some things, as you are aware. I have not fought the church for thirty years because 'something may be gained.' It has left me dead broke; but I'll die fighting the greatest fraud ever foisted on mankind—Christianity.

"I am not aware of any movement against the established order of things that has any 'compensating advantages,' only that satisfaction that every true reformer has in being true to himself. Some of the early reformers were subjected to slow fires."

Adler Jorgenson, Lewiston, Mich.: Last winter I sent you five dollars, $1.25 of this I requested to be applied on subscription, which added to the $1 previously sent would entitle me to two copies of Lucifer, and the rest of the $5 was donated to your western trip; but so far I have had but one copy. As to the future of Lucifer I think that one dollar per year for a monthly or fortnightly would be better than weekly at $2 per year. My view is that people who are inclined to read radical literature are not well to do financially and would hesitate long before paying two dollars per year. So far as I am personally concerned I would not do without your paper should it cost three or more dollars per year.

[If there are others who have paid for two copies and got but one it is hoped they will at once let that fact be known. Bro. Jorgenson is certainly in the right in saying that few people inclined to read radical literature are financially well to do, hence the need of scattering this literature broadcast by those who are able to pay for two or more yearly subscriptions.]

J. O. Charboneau, Los Angeles, Cal.: It affords me great pleasure to learn through Lucifer that you got safely back to the old nest, and strapped and buckled again the old harness on the old back. I will do all I can to support the cause, if not by word then by deed, for I want to see an end to injustice, to slavery, to superstition and all the wickedness and misery that follow as effects of these. I will contribute my mite. Enclosed find $2 in stamps. Please send me Karezza. Use the other dollar as you may see fit. The book "A Cityless and Countryless World" which I bought of you in Los Angeles, has proved such an eye-opener to me on several subjects that I intend to patronize your ads to the full extent of my ability.

E. A. Pilsworth, Battle Creek, Mich.: "Enclosed I send you a small postal order ($2.50) to help the good fight along a trifle. With reference to the questions you ask in Lucifer, I would say that your own judgment is probably better than mine could possibly be, but if possible I would suggest that you continue in this country, as you are not by any means sure that you would receive better treatment anywhere else. The idea of Lucifer being discontinued is not by any means a pleasant one for me, and I presume that there are many others who feel like myself. It appeals to a need of my nature that none of the regular conventional press touch, and that even the socialistic papers fight shy of. With best wishes for success, and hoping that the persecution has ended."

John Orth, Boston, Mass.: If you have a half dozen copies of No. 980, that you can spare, please send them to me. That number contains "The Greatest of All Reforms," an article which particularly appeals to me, though I have never seen anything in your paper the spirit of which I did not like.

[So long as the supply holds out we are glad to attend to such requests, especially when accompanied by stamps for postage, and to pay for time spent in looking up the desired numbers.]

LOS ANGELES LIGHT-BEARER CLUB.

From the secretary, Annie E. Cummings, comes the word that several "very good club meetings" have been had since last regular report. Among these was one held at the home of Mrs. Bensen, 956 50th street, and presided over by that pioneer worker and champion defender of liberty and justice, Daniel W. Hull, formerly of Nortonville, Kansas, but now of Los Angeles, Cal. Few of the old time public speakers and writers are better or more favorably known to the liberal public than is Brother Daniel. During my sojourn in the "City of the Angels" I frequently had the pleasure of hearing the live issues of the times discussed by this "veteran of many wars," especially at the meetings of the Light Bearer Club, of which association he was one of the original founders and promoters. An important feature of this club is the raising of funds to buy radical literature for general circulation, as well as for use of the members. The secretary reports substantial progress in this regard.

Readers of Lucifer who may intend visiting Los Angeles, would meet a cordial welcome at the meetings of the Light Bearer Club. Address the secretary, Annie E. Cummings, care Dr. Richmond, 712 N. Bunker Hill avenue, Los Angeles, Cal.

M. H.

Instead of devoting a whole issue of Lucifer to the subject of Colonization, it is now thought best to print a series of articles, to run through a half dozen or more issues, treating upon this subject. This plan will give room for other continued articles, such as that entitled the "Right to Be Born Well," and others closely connected with Lucifer's pivoted work. In order that new subscribers, whether for a year or less time, may get the whole of these continued articles a good supply of back numbers will be kept, subject to the orders of friends and helpers, both old and new.

Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., of 120 Lexington avenue, New York City, treasurer of the Free Speech League, informs us that he has a number of copies of Darrow's Brief on the Turner case, for sale at 50 cents each, and postage, 10c. It is a strong and instructive book, although it failed to influence the Supreme Court. No doubt there are many among Lucifer readers who would value this book and utilize its historical research. The proceeds of sale of this work will, presumably, be applied to helping pay the expenses of the Free Speech League.

There is a class of persons to whom by all spiritual affinity I am bought and sold; for them I will go to prison if need be; but your miscelluneous popular charities; the education at college of fools; the building of meeting houses to the vain end to which many now stand; alms to sots; and the thousandfold relief societies;—though I confess with shame I sometimes succumb and give the dollar, it is a wicked dollar which by and by I shall have the manhood to withhold.—R. W. Emerson.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

MOSES HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED FORTNIGHTLY AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO ILLINOIS.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year.....$1.00 Three months.....25 cents
Six months.....50 cents Single copies.....5 cents

Hereafter Lucifer will not be sent to subscribers after expiration of subscription except by special request. Please compare number on your wrapper with whole number of paper, and if your subscription is about to expire notify us if you wish to continue to receive Lucifer.

EASTERN REPRESENTATIVE:
E. C. WALKER, 344 WEST 143D STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

LUCIFER: ITS MEANING AND PURPOSE.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

THIRD SERIES. VOL. VIII. NO. 15.

Lillian Harman and daughter, Virna, left Chicago Wednesday, June 15, for a few weeks' visit to friends in Missouri, intending to spend a few days sight-seeing at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition.

After a few days spent "doing" the Great Fair at St. Louis James F. Morton, Jr., arrived in Chicago Saturday evening, June 18. At 8 o'clock, same evening, he lectured to a good audience at Workmen's Hall, on West 12th street. Subject, "What Is Anarchism?" Saturday, June 25, at the same hall and hour, he will speak on "The Colorado Situation." Sunday, 26th, 2 p. m., at 412 West Division street, he speaks on "Free Speech."

READMITTED.

Once more Lucifer carries the legend, "Entered as second-class matter at the Chicago postoffice." Whatever may have been the animus of the officials at Washington towards our paper we can say that the Chicago officials have treated us with uniform courtesy and respect, throughout the prolonged contest for equal participation in the "subsidized" rate of postage. Again our thanks, and the thanks of freedom-lovers everywhere, are due to the members of the Free Speech League who have been tireless in their efforts to secure justice to Lucifer. Whether the reinstatement would have been secured without their aid we know not, but all such efforts are doubtless of value in bringing the public conscience up to the point of demanding equal justice to all, whether rich or poor, popular or unpopular.

TWO SIDES OF A QUESTION.

Among the many responses that are coming to questions asked in No. 1013 is this, and it may be taken as characteristic of many more:

"My idea is that Lucifer should be continued as a monthly or semi-monthly if possible. I cannot get up much enthusiasm for those who want it but will not or cannot pay the trifling price."

Having had the pleasure of meeting the writer of this briefly expressed opinion I feel very sure it is an honest opinion. To many thousands of people now living in the United States one dollar is a "trifling price" to pay for the weekly or bi-weekly visits of Lucifer, but for millions more one dollar is not a trifling price.

For instance: Three weeks ago an old timer in Chicago, a friend and subscriber of twenty years standing, asked permission to store his books, an excellent library, the result of many years' careful selection, and worth several hundred dollars. He wanted also to store with us his trunk and surplus clothing, saying he found himself compelled to leave the city and seek employment elsewhere.

This man I had long known personally as an honest, industrious, temperate, capable, reliable wage-worker and yet with more than thirty years of faithful service behind him he now finds himself out of a job; his employers, like the railway corporations, having adopted the plan of curtailing expenses by discharging a large portion of their employes, and this man having no family, was one of the first to be laid off.

After vainly trying for days and weeks to find employment in the city he decided to try the country. With a letter of introduction to a well known Michigan fruit-grower our friend crossed the lake, to find nothing to do just now in the famous "Fruit Belt." After a long tramp a letter came back saying he had found work for a few days, but no assurance of a permanent job.

This man's experience is typical of that of many thousands if not millions of honest, industrious, temperate, frugal breadwinners to-day. Between strikes and lockouts the opportunities for paying employment seem daily growing less and less, and those who still have jobs are heavily taxed to support friends and fellow workmen who are hunting work.

Last fall, under the new ruling of our paternal government at Washington, about one-third of Lucifer's subscribers were cut off for non-payment of dues. From personal inquiry I learn that many of these still regard themselves subscribers and mean to renew just as soon as possible, but not knowing what the future may have in store for them they hesitate to make any promises.

To such as these one dollar is not a "trifling" sum.

M. HARMAN.

LUCIFER'S HELPERS.

W. W. Carter	$1.00	G. W. Soule	5.00
Fred. Schulder	.50	Lydie L. Lamb	1.00
E. J. Sayre	.25	R. C. Hensley	3.00
C. R.	5.00	Cora A. Morse	2.00
David Overmeyer	5.00	C. V. Miller	5.00
Sallie D. Hayden	2.50	Solomon Harman	2.00
Mrs. S. A.	2.00	J. O. Charboneau	1.00
David Gillstrom	1.00	E. A. Pilsworth	2.50
J. Wm. Lloyd	1.00	A. A. Cowles	1.00
Ella Kautz	1.00	Sarah Stone Rockhill	5.00

Again the workers in Lucifer's office have much reason to thank the workers outside the office for their splendid co-operation in furnishing the means of extending the influence of the "Morning Star," the star of hope, the beacon of woman's emancipation from sex slavery, the worst of all slaveries, because enslaving the entire race.

As before said, often in these columns, the workers in Lucifer's office do not ask for donations as such. We much prefer that each helper when sending money over and above the price of the yearly subscription, should send the names of liberal minded people, especially of women, to whom Lucifer shall be sent for a trial subscription for three or more months. Many of our helpers are now doing this. Others say, "send the paper to whom you please."

For many years we have been sending out about one-third as many sample copies each week as we have paid-up subscribers. The names of persons to whom these samples are sent are selected from reform papers, or, are sent us by subscribers or correspondents. But it often takes the reading of a half dozen or more copies to enable a stranger to Lucifer's philosophy to understand the full aim or object of the publication. One very intelligent reader says it took him a year to find out what we are "driving at."

For this reason we think it much better that the paper be sent continuously for three months or more to each person. If all who have subscribed to and paid money for Lucifer's "sustaining fund" would remember, when sending money, to send the names of those whom they have reason to believe would take the paper from the postoffice and give it a careful reading for three months, it would soon mean a doubling of the regular readers, and while but a small proportion might subscribe on their own account when the trial term had expired, it would probably be the means of starting the reader on a line of thought that would produce in time a thorough revolution in the aims and conduct of life.

During my recent western trip I was constantly meeting people who knew of Lucifer through sample copies, and many of these were ready to become subscribers because of the acquaintance thus previously formed.

So, then, we once more ask every reader to send names of independent thinkers, and if convenient send stamps or money orders to pay for trial subscriptions, or for occasional sample copies to be sent to each of the names sent to us.

M. HARMAN.

THE DIVORCE QUESTION.

Divorce, as an institution, is justifiable. The only way to handle the divorce question is to make reformatory moves in the question of marriage. Marriage is the second stage of life, and, at times, divorce is the next. There are thousands of families to-day that should never be allowed to grow. If the marriage law were different the divorce question would be different. Under certain conditions divorce cannot be too strongly urged. The exceptions in the marriage law should be far more numerous, and their enforcement should be rigid.

In many cases a couple discover they do not love each other after a few weeks or months together. The revelation may come after some years even. In that case their living together is not a state of clean and righteous existence. It is nothing but toleration on one, or perhaps on both, sides.

When toleration takes the place of love the step towards infidelity and general immorality is one which is easily taken—yes, invited. People should be educated for married life, as well as for a business life or professional pursuit. Educate the children, inform them of the sanctity of their own lives as mothers and fathers, and do not let them exist in ignorance. Do not let them remain strangers to the most important parts of their lives and the lives of their ancestors. Knowledge of that sort, if properly taught, incites morality, and morality is the secret of a happy marriage.—Mrs. Mary E. Teats, National Evangelist for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

That the divorce question, including marriage, is one that never loses interest is not strange when we recollect how much of human happiness or misery grows out of the intimate relations of the sexes.

Marriage and divorce are the outgrowth of the most powerful and most universal of all the human instincts, emotions, impulses—that of race-preservation.

Theodore Roosevelt but voices the almost universal sentiment when he insists that the test of good citizenship is large families, and that he or she who shirks an equal share of the burdens of bringing children into the world and caring for them afterward—unless for exceptional reasons—cannot be a good man or good woman.

That this basic instinct—desire for race preservation, horror of race suicide—accounts for the popularity of marriage and the unpopularity of divorce, goes without saying.

In its broadest, most comprehensive sense marriage is a life-assurance institution or policy, founded or issued as a guarantee that children shall be born, and that they shall not be left to perish after being born.

This is the meaning of the fact that the wedding, or marriage, of two human beings is the most important of all social events, social functions, especially in the life of woman; the wedding ceremony being tantamount to a public declaration that the woman means to become a mother; that she does not mean to die childless.

On the part of the man the wedding ceremony means a public pledge, or bond, that he will support the woman while she is incapacitated by the duties of maternity from taking care of herself, and that he will provide the means of sustenance for the child, or children, of this particular woman during the helplessness of infancy.

Marriage, then, means the family. The instinct of race preservation demand, that whatever sustains and promotes the integrity of the family be considered good and right, and whatever opposes or lowers the integrity of the family be held bad and wrong.

Divorce breaks up the family, temporarily and partially at least; hence divorce is bad and wrong.

Marriage means more to woman than to man, simply because race reproduction is far more the work of woman than of man. Hence the public conscience naturally and reasonably holds woman to a far stricter accountability in marital matters than it holds man. Divorce does not disgrace man as it disgraces woman, and old-bachelorhood is not held in such disrepute as is old-maidenhood. Celibate life for man does not necessarily mean repudiation of the duties, the obligations of parenthood for man as it does for woman.

So much for the natural and rational causes of the popularity of marriage as an institution, and for the unpopularity of divorce; also for the unpopularity of celibacy—except for religious reasons, or for the greater devotion to some public work, as the "woman suffrage movement," service in army hospitals, etc.

But there is another and not less powerful cause for the prominence given to marriage and divorce in the social, political and economic affairs of this world, and that cause or force is the class interests of the clergy and of the men who control the artificial machine called the state, and also of the men and women who seek control of the economic and industrial relations, associations or customs of organized human society.

First the clergy:

Of all men, of all vocations among men, it is necessary to the clerical office that there should be inequalities as to birth; that there should be classes, grades, orders of men and women. The typical clergyman is one who speaks by authority, the authority of "God." Hence a prime necessity to the success of the clerical office is a laity that don't know too much! and who are willing to accept without question whatever is told them by their "pastor," their "shepherd," their spiritual "father."

In order that the laity, the great mass of human society, should be thus docile, thus obedient to their spiritual guides, it is necessary that the making of these masses should be controlled by the clergy, else there would be constant danger that rebels against their authority will be born. In order that no rebels be born there must be no rebels among the mothers. Like mother like son. If during the nine months of gestation the mother mind should be in constant revolt against authority, if the mother should constantly say to herself,

"I know what is good for me and for my coming child, quite as well as the parson knows.

"I know as much about what God thinks as the parson knows.

"I refuse to believe that God made man the head of woman.

"I refuse to believe that God commanded wives to submit themselves to their husbands in all things.'

"I demand the right to own myself, my mind, my body, my soul, if I have a soul, or if I am a soul.

"I will not become a mother by a man I neither love, honor nor respect, and when I become a mother I claim the right to choose the father of my child, for the same reason I claim the right to choose the kind of food I shall eat while my body is building my child.

"If I find that I have made a mistake in first choice I refuse to make that mistake perpetual.

"I claim the right to correct all mistakes and especially a mistake involving the life-long success and happiness or failure and misery of my child.

"How could I ever look my child in the face knowing I had given him an inferior fatherhood when a better could have been had for the asking?"

The clergyman knows that such thoughts as these in the mind of the mother, thoughts woven into the very fiber of her prospective child, would produce a rebel against authority, a rebel against all authority, and especially against the authority of the clergy whose control over mankind rests upon faith, and not upon demonstrable proof.

And hence it is that the clergy of all denominations of Christians claim that marriage is a "divine" institution—a "sacrament," and therefore rightly failing under priestly control, both as to who are proper persons to enter into marital relations, and what the duties, obligations and period of continuance of the "holy estate" should be.

Is it to be wondered at, then that the churches are banded together in a solid phalanx in opposition to liberal and rational divorce laws?

Consciously or unconsciously the churches know—that is, the clergy know, that freedom of womanhood and motherhood would mean the death of ecclesiasticism, the death of the ages-old power and privileges of a class of men over their fellows; such privileges as are materialized in Sunday laws, tax-exemptions to church property, half-fares on public conveyances, chaplaincies, first places of honor at all social functions and—by no means least, the revenues that attach to the office of making an otherwise vile and sensual act pure and holy, and making "legitimate" the child which would otherwise go through life stigmatized as "bastard!"

It will require many years, if not ages of time, to undo and outgrow the evil work of the clergy in the matter of controlling marriage and preventing divorce, but when the work of social radicals is once taken up in earnest by the leaders of such popular organizations as the Woman's Christian Temperance Union we may hope that the beginning of the end of priestly domination over woman, child and man is in sight. M. HARMAN.

THE SITUATION IN COLORADO.

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 110.

About six weeks ago, at the time of the National Socialist convention in this city, I asked one of its prominent members, an old acquaintance, R. A. Southworth, editor of the "Alliance of the Rockies," to write a brief statement of the Colorado situation for publication in Lucifer. The article was promptly sent, but owing to pressure of other matter was not promptly printed. The first part was given a place in No. 1015, and now as a necessary part of the history of events that led up to the bloody scenes of the past few weeks in that state, the second part of Editor Southworth's graphic description of incidents concerning which he has ample opportunity to know whereof he speaks, will be placed before Lucifer's readers. M. H.

"It was a little after 10:15 last Monday night when I heard a number of men on my porch and around my house. They began pounding on the front door asking that it be opened. My wife had retired, but I was down stairs, having taken off my shoes preparatory to retiring. From the noise made I suspected who was there and made no reply. The pounding on the door continued and the men demanded again that it be opened. At last one of the men broke the glass in the panel of the door. My wife asked who was there, and what was wanted. They answered that they wanted the man in the house, meaning me. She asked them what they wanted me for. The only reply she received was: 'Open this door,' and some one said: 'If he don't open it —— —— —— burn the —— —— —— —— out of his house.' They then forced the lock of the door and I retired to a bed room down stairs and tried to conceal myself behind a trunk. They searched the house, which was guarded on outside, and Walter Kenley, a deputy sheriff, discovered me. He shoved a gun in my face and I said: 'For God's sake, have you come to murder me?' He told me to get up and come out, and I asked him if he had a warrant. He said, 'Yes.' I said: 'Read it to me.' He then said he did not need a warrant. I would have to come, anyway. He then took hold of me and pulled me into the hall, and I asked to be allowed to put on my shoes. He replied by striking me over the head with his gun,' (pointing to a cut on the side of his head about one inch long). He said: 'You don't need any shoes; go without them.' My wife was standing beside me when he struck the blow.

"The man in company with Kenley pulled his hat over his eyes so I am not sure of his identity. I was then forced into the street, my wife following with my shoes and hat, but she was not allowed to give them to me, and I was not allowed to put them on. They marched me through the frozen alley, cutting my feet terribly. At one place there was a puddle of water. I tried to avoid this and some one in the mob said: 'Shove the —— —— —— —— through the water,' which Kenley did. When we had gone nearly two blocks he again struck me on the side of the head with his revolver, without any warning. All the time the fellows in the mob were telling Kenley to shoot me. I was then taken another half block, where a crowd of union men had already been herded together and were surrounded by the mob. All had guns and revolvers. We were held on the sidewalk in the cold until 12 o'clock, when we were marched to a vacant building until we numbered sixty-four and were then taken to the depot where a special train was awaiting us.

"We were taken to Ridgway, guarded by sixteen members of the Citizens' Alliance. When the train left Telluride a salute of 150 shots was fired by the mob. I was bleeding profusely from the wounds and had my head tied up with handkerchiefs and strips of clothing donated by members of the union. As I entered the car somcone in the mob said: 'That fellow with his head tied up will be hung if he comes back.' When Ridgway was reached they told us to flie out, and we did so.

"From there we walked to Ouray, a distance of eleven miles, where we were given our breakfast.

"On account of the non-resisting policy that has been maintained by the union men during the strike, I did not defend my home as I should have done. I could easily have killed Kenley and his companions as they stood in front of the glass door breaking it in, but I want to say right here that the next person who attempts to break into my home in Telluride will die."

Mr. Ficatin (the narrator of the above) was a well to do merchant of Telluride, is well educated, gentlemanly in his language and deportment at all times, is the head of the largest department store, friendly with the unions and was getting a good portion of their trade, was their advisor and always opposed their striking. Yet when they would or did strike counseled non-resistance, sobriety and peaceful methods. This is why he was dangerous to the Citizens' Alliance and the mine operators and why he is still enjoying a forced absence from business, his home and his family, his life openly threatened as a penalty for daring to return.

The leader of the midnight mob was the captain of the militia company when in service, is so now, and the manager of the leading mine near Telluride. This paper does not contain space enough for one-tenth of the outrages to be listed.

The state has had about a million of expense filed on taxpayers for the militia, business has suffered many millions, many merchants have or will fail and thousands of workers are out of employment and their families pinched and many on the verge of starvation because a small coterie of mine operators defeated the will of the people in getting an eight hour day and the governor of the state whom the workers elected has usurped power beyond his constitutional limits given to the first transgressors the use of state troops, has suspended "the right of habeas corpus" in defiance of the constitution and is ripening the people for armed resistance, to the insurrection of a truckling tool in the executive chair.

The conditions in Denver as I write—14th day of May—are alarming. On the 17th the first city and county election, occuring under a new charter and new organization, comes off. The present city officials are Democrats—except the mayor—the new term of office is four years. The Democrats want to retain power and the Republicans want to win it. The fight is intensely bitter and disgusting.

Open war is threatened by both sides. The Democrats have been openly and brazenly corrupt, have stolen election after election by notorious police violence, stuffing ballot boxes without pretense of voters, by voting dead men, repeating and all methods known or dreamed of. Republicans are crying for an honest election—something that this city under their thirty years rule never knew—and claim they will have it if they have to call out the militia. They are busily engaged in circulating petitions to the governor to that end and thousands of people are signing them.

A Democrat sheriff is swearing in deputies and states he will make them 20,000 strong and wipe the militia off the face of the earth if they attempt to interfere.

Amidst all this smoke the union men are blinded and are openly and corruptly with the Democrats, so if blood shed really happens it will be wage earners pitted against wage earners and no matter which side wins wage earners only are slaughtered and wage earners only defeated. Capitalism will ride triumphant.

The class struggle in Colorado is at fierce heat, but the wage earners are largely lined up with the capitalists who have them divided into two contending forces fighting against each other, but both fighting for their enemy, capitalism.

Socialists have counseled peace and forbearance, their counsels have alone been able to keep the peace by the unions, but forbearance will soon become impossible and anything except a virtue. The people are becoming restless. A feeling of revulsion of disgust is taking possession of the masses which if fed much longer by such acts of tyranny and barbarity as have disgraced this state seven or eight months past will break out in "armed resistance to tyrants." R. A. SOUTHWORTH.

Subscribers who receive more than one copy of Lucifer, when not ordered, will please use the extra copy or copies to induce their friends to subscribe, if only for a trial trip of three months for 25 cents. Stamps received in payment. As the paper weighs less than one ounce a copy can sent to a friend in a common 2 cent letter, with an ordinary sized sheet of note paper.

Prostitution does not proceed from woman any more than slavery does from the slave; as the latter must be charged to the oppresser, so the former must be charged to man. "Free love" for women signifies the end of prostitution, just as free self-determination for the slave signified the end of slavery.—Karl Heinzen.

I begin with the declaration that I advocate "free love" completely and decidedly. But the expression is incorrect and ought to be "freedom in love." Indeed, can any other kind of love exist except free love? Can love be commanded or forced? Love and free love are synonymous.—Heinzen.

"Free love" is a word of terror, but free prostitution has become a social institution, which is approved inside and outside of marriage by a legal license. And shall I tell you why men condemn freedom in love? Because it would be the end of freedom in prostitution!—Karl Heinzen.

A man is to carry himself in the presence of all opposition as if everything were titular and ephemeral but he. I am ashamed to think how easily we capitulate to badges and names, to large societies and dead institutions.—R. W. Emerson.

No law can be sacred to me but that of my nature. Good and bad are but names very readily transferable to that or this; the only right is what is after my constitution, the only wrong what is against it.—R. W. Emerson.

When writing on business of any kind, please do not forget to enclose a stamp for catalogue of books and pamphlets on sale at this office.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM.

THE RELATIONSHIP OF EACH TO HUMAN LIBERTY.

BY E. C. WALKER.

The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organization and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. Price 5c.
M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW.

A PRIMER OF SEXUAL RATIONALISM.

BY E. C. WALKER.

"Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes."
Paper covers; 42 large pages. Price 10c.
M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES.

BY E. C. WALKER.

Contents—Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What Is She? What Will She Be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections Upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love and Life." Price 15c.
M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

A CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD.

AN OUTLINE OF PRACTICAL CO-OPERATIVE INDIVIDUALISM.

BY HENRY OLERICH.

Regarded by many persons as a more interesting and consistent economic reform novel than Bellamy's "Looking Backward."
Bound in red silk with gold title. Nearly 450 pages. Paper, 50c; cloth, $1.
M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

WOMAN AND HER RELATION TO THE CHURCH, OR CANON LAW FOR WOMEN.

BY HARRIET M. CLOSZ.

A succinct statement of the position to which women were doomed by the Church Fathers and authorities. Every woman should possess a copy. Price, 10c.
M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

MISCELLANEOUS.

GEORGE FOX, 11½ W. Huerfano st., Colorado Springs, wishes to correspond with lady of liberal mind, with view to forming business and social alliance.

A bargain! $1,000 cash buys desirable equipped Texas farm; growing crops and furnished house. Address "Texas," this office.

Ask for a free sample copy of the Adept. Devoted to Astrology; Free Thought; Occultism, Monism. Published by Frederick White, Markville, Minn.

FREE SOCIETY— A weekly periodical of Anarchist work and thought. Send for free sample copy. Address Free Society, 230 E. 4th St., New York.

Honest, sober man, age 30; industrious, reliable, handy with tools; highest references; wants a job; anywhere. Wont. Wm. A. Flight, General Delivery, New York City.

WANTED—100 women to study medicine or midwifery. Next term begins January 1, 1904. College of Medicine and Surgery, 245 Ashland Blvd., Chicago, Ill. DR. FLORENCE DRESSLER, Secretary. (Dept. A.)

Send 10 cents stamps or silver for three sample copies of Human Nature, a live Phrenological Magazine; 50 cents per year. Prof. Allen Haddock, Phrenologist, is the editor and publisher, 1020 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

WANTED—To correspond with people desiring to join a Nature Colony in Southern California. Perfect climate; magnificent view; located at foot of Mt. Lowe. No users of liquor, tobacco, meat or corsets need apply. Address
